1. The connection of this to the former, Gader to Ephrath, they were both sad places to Jacob by reason of the events there, yet so God orders him from trouble to trouble, it was well that he was at Bethel first to be prepared for these occurrences by God.

2. The journey itself, wherein is mentioned.

1. His motion, Israel journeyed or went forward.

1. The traveller is Israel, so Moses stileth him here first, though called him so before. He doubtless with all his family.

2. The motion it self, he went forward according to the state of his family, and as they were able to hold out.

2. His pitching, He spread his tent beyond the tower of Edar, This place was a very short journey, from Ephrath, some say a mile, others at most two German miles from Bethlehem; and four miles distant it is judged from Jerusalem. What might be the occasion of his pitching here, is not mentioned by Moses; it is enough that providence pitched him here. This was the place near to Bethlehem, where the shepherds were feeding their flocks, when the Angels told them the glad tidings of the birth of Jesus the saviour at Bethlehem. The name significeth, the tower of the flock, & so the vulgar Latin reads it: but it is a proper name, by reason of some eminent tower built in those plains for the defence of shepherds and watching their flocks; neither is it the place where the Temple was built, as some have mistaken, that being in Jerusalem some miles distant from this place; however Sion be called the tower of Geder, or of the flock in another sense. Micah 4. 8. Here a little beyond Bethlehem Jacob for present pitched. V. 21.

Ver. 22.

3. The event which befel Jacob here, which was a sad one, And it was when Israel dwelt in that land that Reuben went and lay with Bilhah his fathers concubine; and Israel heard it, Cald. same. — Slept with, &c. Sept. and it was evil in his sight. — In this sad history we have.

1. The season of the event, It was while Jacob dwelt or sojourned in that land, It was no long while after the death of Rachel, and Deborah; and therefore close it came upon other precedent afflictions.

2. The sad event itself, Reuben went and slept with or lay with Bilhah his fathers concubine.

1. The persons by whom this affliction came, doth aggravate it. Reuben his first born of Leah, and Bilhah, who was given into Jacobs bed by Rachel, in a mariner his wife, of whom two heads of the tribes were born, Dan and Naphtali.

2. The fact committed willfully by both in Jacobs family and the Church of God was no less than abominable incest, such as Paul saith was not heard of among the heathen, for a son to discover the nakedness of his fathers wife. 1 Cor. 5. It was sad to have Dinah ravished by a stranger, yet that might be with her innocency; but to have his eldest son a companion of his own bed, commit such filthiness, is a piercing grief to Jacob! The Hebrews make fictions, that Reuben did not defile her, but throw out her bed, which was removed to Rachels tent by Jacob; but this text, and Jacobs abdication of him from the birthright upon this account (Gen. 49.) shew fully the contrary.

3. Jacobs reception of this sad tidings, And Israel heard it. This is all that is related of his repentment of this fact here. The Sept. adde, it was evil or grievous in his sight. There is more doubtless insinuated in this that Israel heard it than is expressed; for there is a pause hereupon, and great gap, left with this mark. O! pointing out some thing of Jacobs inexpressible grief, and burden, and indignation upon this account. As the painter, that could not full enough express a father mourning for a son, drew him with his face covered: So Moses saith no more of Jacob, but that he heard it, and so leaveth a pause.

Quest. Why did not Jacob punish such a sin?

Ans. 1. Questionless it was a sin punishable by death. 2. Surely Jacobs heart was full of grief and indignation at it. 3. He doth at last abdicate him from his birthright for it. 4. The season of omitting further judicial proceedings seemeth to be the overruling providence of God, who yet had appointed one tribe of his Church to come from him, and it is presumed that Reuben repented, and was not rejected by God.

4. The catalogue of Jacobs sons, wherein.

1. The preface to it, Now or and, the sons of Jacob were twelve. Sept. & Cald. same.

These heads of twelve tribes. And written on the Priests breast, &c. Exod. 28. 24. Revcl. 21. This onely leads to the naming of them. Ver. 21.

2. The orderly relation of them as followeth.

1. Leahs sons six. 1. Reuben Jacobs first born, So he was by nature, but spoiled himself of it by sin, and it was divided between Judah and Joseph, as afterward it appeareth. Gen. 49. 2. Simeon. 3. Levi. 4. Judah. 5. Issachar. 6. Zebulun. V. 23.

2. Rachels sons two. Joseph and Benjamin. Ver. 24.

Bilhahs sons, Rachels handmaid, Dan and

Ver. 25.

and Naphthali; this was the unfaithful woman with Reuben. Ver. 25.

Ver. 26.

4. Zilpahs sons, two, who was Leahs handmaid, Gad and Ascher. 3. The conclusion of this genealogy. These are the sonnes of Jacob which were born to him in Padan-Aram. Cald. same. Mesopotamia of Syria. Sept. Two differences arise here.

1. That the sonnes of Jacob plural should be joynt which a verb singular. Yet this is common in the Hebrew, without a mystere.

2. That these are said to be born in Padan-Aram, when Benjamin was but a little since born in Canaan. This speech is synecdochically express when the most part is put for the whole.

Quest. Why is this genealogie recorded here?

Ans. Nothing certainly can be said, but the will of the author, who is free to doe what he please, and place what he writes where he will; but conjecturally it may be said. 1. To let us see that all the Patriarchs were born before Isaac died. 2. To set it before and distinguish it from the line of Esau. 3. To prepare for the following history of Jacobs children, which proceeds, Chap. 37. Ver. 26.

Learn from it.

D. 1. God carrieth his Jacobs somtimes, from Ephrath to Gader, from one affliction to a worse.

D. 2. The Churches journeyes and stages are appointed and ordered by God.

D. 3. Israel is willing to pitch his tents, where God allot's him.

D. 4. The Church and its pastor sit down by the tower of the flock's Shepherds and sheep have their tower. Ver. 21.

D. 5. The Churches habitation is not free from infection and affliction in the land of its sojournings.

D. 6. Providence ordereth the permission of the foulest crimes somtimes in his own Church.

D. 7. The chiefest in outward privilege in the Church may fall into greatest sin. Gods wisdom orders it.

D. 8. God will not suffer the blots in his Church to be wholly covered, or silenced. Others may learn by them.

D. 9. Great is the fascination of lust which makes a son and wife conspire to pollute the fathers bed.

D. 10. Deep impressions the tidings of such wickedness in the Church make's upon gracious men, to consarnation.

D. 11. Providence distinctly note's the genealogy and number of the Churches beginnings, to observe Gods making good his promises. Now Jacob was come to twelve. Ver. 22.

D. 12. God doth not alwayes cast out of his visible Church for greatest wickedness. Reuben is numbered.

D. 13. The twelve first Patriarchs were ordained of Gods grace not for their worth.

D. 14. Scripture useth figurative speeches, warily to be opened by Gods ministers. V. 23. 24. 25. 26.

4. The last general of the Chap. is the history of Jacobs fourth journey from Eder to Hebron. Herein.

1. The access of Jacob to his father is recorded, And Jacob came to Isaac his Father unto the city of Arbah, (this is Hebron,) where Abraham and Isaac sojourned. Cald. same. — City of the field, which is Hebron in the land of Canaan, &c. Sept. Where occur.

1. The traveller, Jacob doubtless with his family.

2. The end of his motion, set forth. 1. By the person to whom he came, Isaac his Father.

2. by the place whether he journeyed, expressed.

1. By a general name Mamre, noting the whole plain.

2. By a special name, the city of Arbah, and that the same as Hebron.

3. By the former inhabitants, here Abraham and Isaac sojourned; here Abraham intertained God and his Angels, Gen 18. but here they work but sojourners, however pitched here of a long time.

Quest. Was not Jacob with his father before now?

Ans. It is to be presumed he was, having bin in Canaan so many years, though it be not written. Natural affliction could not abtain so long. But now he commeth with his family there to settle and succeed Isaac. Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 2. The number of Isaacs years is related, And the days of Isaac were an hundred and eighty years. — Cald. fime.

Ver. 29. 3. The death of Isaac is reported.
1. As to the death itself, it is expressed under three notions.

1. And he expired or breathed out his spirit, — exspiravit Sept.
2. And he died, in the dissolution of body and soul.

3. And he was added or gathered to his people. That is, to the Spirits of just men made perfect, as Abraham was.

2. As to Isaac, he thus died, full of days, and old. So had he the blessing with Abraham; and attained to five years older, so that his life was to the 26th year of Joseph, near the time, when he stood before Pharaoh; therefore his death is reported here by way of anticipation, and he saw all providences related about Jacobs family to the 4th Chapter of this book. He died then, in the 120th years of Jacob, after the flood, 632; and in the year of the world, 2288. No mention is made of Rebekah here, but afterward we read of her burial with Isaac. Chap. 49.

4. Isaacs burial is here recorded, And his sons Esau and Jacob buried him. — Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The parties here acting their last duty, are brethren, twins of the same womb, yet divided by Gods election of one, and passing by the other and opposite in many passages of life, yet these two are joyned in this work, nature and grace agree in paying duty though to dead parents.

2. Their work was of piety towards their old Father, and the last of all, in burial of him, according to his will. This they jointly performed. All this is here reported to finish the history of Isaac; and then to carry on the narration of Church-affaires as it was in the family of Jacob, from Chap. 37. and onward; the 36. Ch. being put in by way of parenthesis to dispatch the history of Esau and his family, who became bitter enemies unto the Church, and therefore so mentioned briefly together with it, Ver. 29.

It learneth us.

D. 1. God brings at last his Jacob and Church to their desired place in their pilgrimage.

D. 2. God makes good his Word in making Jacob successor to Abraham and Isaac in their sojourning, Ver. 27.

D. 3. The blessing of long life God grants to his Servants, when and where it may be beneficial to his Church. Ver. 28.

D. 4. Expiration and dissolution are the appointed conditions of Saints in order unto glory.

D. 5. Saints in dissolution go out of the World unto their own People.

D. 6. Old age or fulness of days is given here sometimes to Gods Saints; i. e. Days full of work, as well as many.

D. 7. Nature and grace agree to evince and performe the duty of burial.

D. 8. Its piety to Parents deceased, so to order their burial and interment that it may be comely and honorable.

D. 9. The death as well as the life of Saints, God records, for his Churches instruction, and to point out assist periods, Ver. 29.

CHAP. XXXVI.

THIS Chapter seemeth to be inserted as a parenthesis, wherein is delivered the genealogie of Esau, and that being dispatched out of the way, the Spirit goeth on Chap. 37. in the history of the Church.

The reason of this description of Esaus line here, is not curiously to be demanded by us, seeing it is the will of God thus to insert it; onely from the event we may judge God so ordered it.

1. For distinctions sake as to his Church.
2. To let us understand how God made good his word concerning Esau, which Isaac pronounced on him.
3. To help us to understand other passages of Moises and the Prophets writings of the children of Esau under divers titles, whereof we have here some account.
4. To shew Gods providence in allowing the wicked fairer portions as to the World than unto his own Church.

Three general Heads take up this Chapter.

1. The line of Esaus posterity natural, V. 1. to 19.
2. The

2. The line of his affinity, Ver. 20. 30.
3. The record of their state of government, Ver. 31. 43.

1. In the line of Esaus posterity natural we have these particulars included.

1. A register of his immediat seed born of his three wives in the Land of Canaan, Ver. 1. 5.
2. A note of his removal from Canaan, Ver. 6. 7. 8.
3. A record of his grand-children in mount Seir reckoned under their several grandmothers, of whom we have to consider,
 1. Their Titles,
 2. Their Names, Ver. 9. 14.
 3. Their Dignities which they assumed, Ver. 15. 19.

1. In the register of this immediat seed born of his three wives in the land of Canaan, we have to observe.

1. The title of this work, And these are the generations of Esau, he is Edom. No difficulty lieth in this, it is the genealogy of Esau in those that descended from him, here the Spirit also brands him, this is Edom. The name of reproach given him for his profane appetite, Gen. 25. So afterwards ver. 8. 43. So that this line is not drawn for his honor.

2. The register of his wives which were three as recorded, ver. 2. 3. about whom, one question would be answered.

Quest. How come they to have other names than those before mentioned? Gen. 26. 34. and 27. 46.

Ans. In short they had two names, as also had their fathers, mentioned there and here; therefore Esau had not six wives as some say, but onely three who had their double names. So Hittites and Hivites noted the same people, the one included in the other.

3. The record of his children by them.

1. Of Adah he had one son, Eliphaz.
2. Of Bathsheath one son, Revel.
3. Of Aholibamah three, Jeush, Jahlath and Korah, these were born to him in the Land of Canaan before he went to mount Seir.

2. A note of his removal from Canaan. In which we have the particulars considerable.

1. Esaus removal in the freenes and in the fulnes of it from Jacob, ver. 6. And Esau took his wives, &c.
2. The reason of this removal, Because their substance was more, &c. It is branched into these two particulars.

1. Their possessious and families were great.
2. The land of their sojourning was freight.

3. The pitching place of Esau, And Esau dwelt in the mount of Seir, Esau, he is Edom. The Sept. adde, and Jacob dwelt in the land where his fathers sojourned in the land of Canaan. Thus we see providence ordering the heart of Esau to leave the inheritance to Jacob.

Quest. It is queried hereon, whether this was the first time that Esau went to Seir?

Ans. Surely no; for he was there when Jacob came out of Padan-Aram, and he invited his brother thither, therefore he had left Canaan before, upon what occasion it is not expressed, but probably upon the discontents which his wives gave to Isaac and Rebekah; and now being come to Hebron with his family for the burial of his father, God moveth him freely to depart again to Seir, and leave Jacob in the promised land, but here the Spirit brands him again. He is Edom, ver. 28.

3. We have a register of his grand children born to him from his sons in Seir, wherein note.

1. The title again repeated, And these are the generations of Esau, the father of Edom, in mount Seir. Sept. same. Of Edomites or Idumeans. Cald. Here he is branded as the father of Edom, a seed that should be Edom, profane men as he was, Ver. 9. Ver. 10.
2. The names of his sons by his wives Adah and Bathsheath, Ver. 10.

1. The names of the sons of Eliphaz.

1. Legitimat, Teman, &c. Ver. 11.
2. Illegitimat by a concubine given likely to Eliphaz by Adah, she bare Amalek; he is therefore reckoned to Adah, ver. 12. This bastard seed God commanded to be rooted out, Exod. 17.

2. The names of the sons of Revel, Nahath, &c. these are reckoned of Bathsheath their grandmother, Ver. 13.

3. The names of the immediat sons of Aholibamah, the daughter of Anah, the daughter of Zibeon Esaus wife, Jeush, &c. as they were named before, Ver. 5. Thus far are the names of his grand children directly descendent from him, Ver. 14. It is queried here.

Quest. How Amalek comes to be reckoned here to Esau and Adah?

Ans. 1. It is usual in Scripture account for grand fathers to be set out by fathers.

2. Concubines children were accounted to the chief wife, as Sarah claimed it.
3. Some were made children of them by adoption, so was Ephraim and Manasse by Jacob as followeth, Genes. 48.

3. The dignities unto which they arrived, These were the Dukes of the sons of Esau. They were now assuming to themselves. A Duke was conceived to be the Commander of a 1000 men.

1. The sons of Eliphaz, Dukes ascribed to him and his grand mother, Ver. 15. 16.

Quest.

Quest. How comes Korah to be registred here who was not spoken of before? Answ. Surely it is redundant here, or els defective, in the former mention made of his sonnes, and must be different from Korah, the son of Aholibamah.

Ver. 17. 2. The sons of Revel, Dukes, Duke Nahath, &c. These are named by father and grandmother, Ver. 17.

Ver. 18. 3. The sons of Aholibamah, Duke Jeshu, &c. as they were named before; of these Esau was the immediat father. v. 17.

Ver. 12. 4. The close of all after this nomenclature of them, These the sons of Esau, and these their Dukes, He is Edom, Here is the finger of the Spirit pointing him out what he was, in the midst of this dignified feed. He was Edom still, for all these honours; four times is this name fastned on him thus faire.

The whole teacheth us.

D. 1. The genealogie of the wicked God records for his own ends in his Church.

D. 2. Gods record of the wicked line is but to brand them to those who read it, Ver. 1.

D. 3. Godless hearts take strange wives, Hittites, Hivites, Ishmaelites, what ever God say against it, Ver. 2, 3.

D. 4. Providence doth vouchsafe progeny to wicked and multiplied matches. though he like them not. Ver. 4. 5.

D. 5. In Gods own time he moveth the hearts of wicked enemies, to turn aside from fretting his Church, Ver. 6.

D. 6. Outward portions to the wicked satisfy them in and for their departing from Gods Church. Ver. 7.

D. 7. Mount Seir pleaseth Esau better than the land of promise, because he is Edom, Ver. 8.

D. 8. The reproach of a profane Esau God maketh to rest upon his posterity, Ver. 9.

D. 9. Multitudes of wives and children and offspring God may grant unto the wicked.

D. 10. God hath recorded the wicked and their progeny to distinguish them from his Church, V. 10, 14.

D. 11. Dukedomes and dignities in the World is the only ambition of the wicked. The Saints is of another Kind, 2 Cor. 5. 9.

D. 12. Dignities can never blot out the stain of sin from Gods presence. The Dukes are Edomites still. Ver. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19.

2. General, Esaus line by affinity is here drawn out, ver. 20. to 30. Wherein we have to note both the names and dignities of his feed.

1. By name they are described, and that in this order.

1. Their grand-father is recorded as the first inhabitant of the Land. These are the sons of Seir the Horite, who inhabited the land.

1. His name was Seir, which was also Esaus, given him for his harrines.

2. His nation a Chorite, which was the same with the Hittite and Hivite, Gen. 14. 6.

3. His place of possession mount Seir, that land which Esau afterwards possessed.

2. The immediate sons are named, which are seven, Lotan, Shobal, Zibeon, Anah, Dishon, Ezer and Dishan; together with their first dignities, parentage & possession of that land, which afterwards was called Edom, V. 20. 21. These Esaus seed drove out, Deut. 2. 12.

3. The immediat feed or grand children of this Seir are reckoned up, who possessed after their fathers.

1. Lothans children, Hori and Heman together with his sister Timnah, daughter to Seir who was concubine to Eliphaz Esaus son, Ver. 12. Heman, in 1. Chron. 1. v. 39. is called Homam. This sheweth the kindred made between the house of Esau and these Horites, by which they had opportunity to thrust them out of mount Seir not long after, Ver. 22.

2. Shobals children, five sons, Alvan called Alan, 1. Chron. 1. 40. Shepho called Shephi, 1. Chron. 1. 40. &c. Ver. 23.

3. Sibeons children were two sons, Ajah and Anah, which Anah, to distinguish him, is described by an unnatural invention of his, that he found out mules in the wilderness, as he fed the asses of Zibeon his father; that is, he first invented the coupling of divers kinds, asses and horses, which was against the Law of nature and the positive Law of God, Levit. 19. v. 19. the word is never used but in this place. מִלֵּךְ the common word for mules is מִלֵּךְ thus hath made some difference about the translation; but the current of best interpreters read it mules, a creature of divers kinds which never brings forth its own. Therefore not created at first nor blessed by God. In this character we may see the Genius of this people given to such sin & unnatural inventions, Ver. 24.

Ver. 25. 4. Anahs children, who was uncle to the foregoing Anah; were two, one son named Dishon, as the fifth son of Seir, which followeth, & one daughter, called Aholibamah, not that which was Esaus wife but his neece by marriage.

Ver. 26. 5. Dishons children four sons, Hemdan called Amram, 1. Chro. 1. 41. &c.

Ver. 27. 6. Eters sons are three, Bilhan, Zaavan, and Achan, called Jakan, 1. Chr. 1. v. 42. Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 7. Dishans children are two sons, Uz and Aran, Ver. 28. So we have of Seir seven sons and one daughter.

Ver. 29. 2. By their dignities they are described, These are the Dukes of the Chorites, Duke Lotan, Duke Shobal, &c. These were the Dukes of the Chorites, for their Dukes in the Land of Seir. So many Dukedoms there were standing together in that land at the first; and were not successive one to the other; and these are here recorded for Esaus sake, that we may understand how his posterity drove them out, and possessed their Land, Ver. 30.

Ver. 30. 2. By their dignities they are described, These are the Dukes of the Chorites, Duke Lotan, Duke Shobal, &c. These were the Dukes of the Chorites, for their Dukes in the Land of Seir. So many Dukedoms there were standing together in that land at the first; and were not successive one to the other; and these are here recorded for Esaus sake, that we may understand how his posterity drove them out, and possessed their Land, Ver. 30.

All which informeth us, that,

D. 1. The name and line of the wicked are mentioned by Gods Spirit for distinction, not for honor to them.

D. 2. Horites, Hittites, and Hivites are the national titles of the same sort of sinful people.

D. 3. Uncleannes and unnaturalnes are recorded in the wicked line to make them stink.

D. 4. A numerous progeny with dignity may be the portion of the wicked here below.

D. 5. Affinity with persons that are wicked, usually brings souls to affinity with their sins.

D. 6. God suffer's and order's the wicked to join so in affinity, in order to the destroying of each other. So it was with Seir and Edom, Ver. 20. 30.

3. The last general is the history of the state and government of the sons of Esau after they had expelled the Chorites, and called the name Edom; and that was twofold.

1. Kingly, for from Dukedomes to a Kingdom it seemeth the sons of Esau changed that state, when they had gotten the land, in the description whereof we may observe.

1. The title of the history; And these are the Kings who reigned in the Land of Edom, before there reigned any King over the Children of Israel, Sept. and Cald. same. In this title we may note.

1. A demonstration of that which followeth, These, &c. That is, such as follow named afterwards, which were sons of Esau after they had gotten the land, and named it Edom.

2. An animadversion of the time, these reigned before any King was in Israel, and Saul was the first constituted King in Israel, 1. Sam. 11. 15. In this worldly title Esau outstrips Jacob.

2. The line of these Kings in their succession: concerning whom we may observe.

1. Their names, Bela, Gobab, &c.

2. Their cities, Dinhabah, Bozrah.

3. Their successions, Bela died, and Jobab reigned.

4. Their exploits, nothing of action is recorded of any but of one Hadad, the son of Bedad, he smote Midian in the field of Moab, Ver. 35.

5. The last King hath his wives added, Ver. 39.

6. The succession of them was by election, for we find them all of distinct families.

2. The state of Edom when reduced unto Dukedomes again; and in this history we may note.

1. A general notation of the state, And these the names of the Dukes of Esau, according to their families, after their places, by their names. The Kingdom then was again divided.

2. A special nomination of the Dukes, Duke Timnah, Duke Alva, &c.

3. An emphatical conclusion observing some thing notable.

1. About the sons, These the Dukes of Edom, &c. These were the brave Gallants of those times, when they could not be Kings they would be Dukes.

2. About their father, This Esau is the Father of Edom. That is a profane father of a profane offspring. Thus the Spirit of God brands him still. It is queried here.

Quest. Were these changes of government before the times of Moses, or not?

Answ. It is thought by some not, but that Moses writes prophetically of changes to come; because the Kings of Edom were existing in Jeremiahs time; and if so, the change could not be be before Moses. Yet to speak freely, it is much more probable that this is a history rather than a Prophecy, declaring things already done; these considerations may persuade it.

1. Moses nameth persons and places with their circumstances known at that time, that cannot be proved to be after.

2. There was space of time enough, wherein these changes might be made, before the time of Moses, as computed from Isaac's death, when Esau removed unto the call of Moses, amount unto 236 years, in which space how many changes might not be made? Seeing we our selves have had various administrations of government in the space of ten years.

3. In the times of Moses both Dukes and Kings of Edom are mentioned, Exod. 15. 15. Num. 20. 14. therefore the change might well be then. To confound Kings and Dukes into one general notion of Government is not so safe, because the Spirit doth distinguish them.

4. Other changes might, and God did make among them, after the time of Moses, which are not meant here; so we read of their subduing, and rising again several times, some think Hadad the last King was him to whom Moses sent for leave to pass by his country, and upon his unnatural refusing, God then divided the Kingdom; but this is onely conjectural. It seem's the best way to conclude that these changes were before Moses did write this; and yet God made others among them afterwards.

The titles of Timnah and Aholibamah, Ver. 40. 41. are not names of men or women, but places.

The whole learneth us.

D. 1. Worldly men are ambitious of the highest titles of honor. Kings and Dukes.

D. 2. Earthly Kingdoms God may order to the wicked (a seiled government) before his Church, Ver. 31.

D. 3. Stinted are the numbers of Kings and dignities by God in the World.

D. 4. God maketh some notable for exploits above others. Hadad vanquisheth Midian.

D. 5. Kings and Queens are sometimes recorded for their shame by Gods Spirit.

D. 6. God overturneth and changeth states and government at his pleasure.

D. 7. Profane fathers and profane children are branded by Gods Spirit together, where mention is made of them.

CHAP. XXXVII.

IN this Chapter Moses returneth to the history of the Church in Jacobs family, having dispatched, and marked out of the family of Esau. And the line of the history mainly, is drawn from Jacob to Joseph, by whom God carried on his Church-work in preserving it upon earth; onely in the 38. Chapter is inserted some remarkable events about Iudan, which could not be but grievous unto Jacob. In the present chapter is recorded some special providences of God concerning Joseph, & that as in relation to Jacob, pointing out also the condition of the Church. Three great providential works about Joseph take up the three general parts of this Chapter.

1. The state and condition of him in his fathers house. Ver. 1. 11.

2. The treacherous sale of him from his fathers house. V. 12. 28.

3. The sad resentment of this by some relations.

1. Reuben. V. 29. 30.

2. Jacob, with a transition unto the further history. V. 31. 36.

Here also is to be noted the beginning of the Nin'th section of the Law; according to the Jewish division marked with three Samecks noting Seder, order.

In the first general, will be considerable these particulars.

1. Jacobs mansion, or place of abode, noted in contradistinction unto Esau's mountaine, And Jacob dwelt in the land of the sojournings of his father, in the land of Canaan. In the Land where his father sojourned. Sept. This they adde to the former chapter. In the land of the habitation of his father. Cald. In this we have onely a record of Jacobs habitation, wherein may we note.

1. The term of connection, which is read by some copulative, and by others illative, And, or therefore, &c. But it seems best adversative, to answer Esau's mansion place, Esau went to mount Seir, but Jacob sat downe in the place of his father, dwelling in tents, the whole action of Jacob is set in opposition unto Esau's removal.

2. The matter connected is Jacobs residence in his place, wherein.

1. The subject Jacob, who had the birth-right, and the blessing.

2. The residence, which he makes, he sat downe, or dwelt, or inhabited.

3. The

3. The place described two ways.

1. By his fathers mansion, In the land of his fathers sojournings, that is, where his father as well as Abraham professed himselfe a sojourner; and the same course of life did Jacob now intend in that place.

2. By the name of it, the land of Canaan, which though now a place defiled by the inhabitants, yet thereupon God sets his mind, to make it the place of his Churches sojourning in the world.

4. The principle, which moved him to sit downe here, and that was his faith, as the Apostle witnesseth for him, as well as for Abraham, and Isaac. Hebr. 11. 9. Sense drew Esau, as he thought, to the better habitation, more stable than for sojourning. Ver. 1.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Opposite and adverse are the habitations and mansions chosen by wicked and righteous ones; the one please themselves in it, the other God. So Jacob and Esau.

D. 2. Gracious souls pitch in this world onely for sojourning, not for settled dwelling.

D. 3. Fathers, accepted of God, are good patterns to be followed by their children for abode.

D. 4. Canaan when God calleth to it; and promiseth to prepare, is fittest for his Church.

D. 5. Faith alone, maketh Saints choose sojourning here below, upon Gods promise. Ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

2. Jacobs generation downward, These are the generations of Jacob, Sept. joine this with the former Chapter also: concerning which title it is doubted, what it should mean, seeing none are immediately mentioned here but Joseph. Some therefore seeke to solve it by making the word (generation) here to note not onely the progeny of children, but all sorts of events, which were as so many births, befalling Jacob; but this is unusual. Others labour to clear it in the pronoun, which they make of various kinds.

1. Sometime it is as a relative, and so referre it to the line of Jacob mentioned before Esau. Gen. 35. 23. 26. Which is not irrational; others make it demonstrative, and so noting the line of Jacob afterwards following in the history, though but one here immediately named, which is not to be deified: for in the sequel we shall finde his line more fully named, and because it is the purpose of Gods Spirit to mention Jacobs sons not barely by name, but with their conditions, therefore he speaketh of them alunder, and not together: and so here beginneth with Joseph; about whom, while he was in his fathers house, these things are eminently pointed out.

1. His condition, Ver. 2. 3. 4.

2. His relation, Ver. 5. 11.

1. His condition is set out by three characters.

1. Of his age, Joseph being the son of seventeen years; seventeen years old. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. His age is not noted in vain with respect unto his condition, and indowment now at this time, he is but a stripling, or a youth. The mention of his age is made (as probably conjectured) for two reasons.

1. Moral, to shew such age is not too early for virtuous indowments.

2. Historical, to perfect the chronology respecting this age.

2. Of his trade of life, He was feeding the flocks with his brethren, and he being a lad, or youth, was with the sons of Bilhah, and the sons of Zilpah his fathers wives, Sept. same. Was nourished with the sons of Bilhah, &c. The Hebrew expression is clear, and noeth.

1. His trade, he was a shepherd.

2. His company, the sons of both the handmaids who were given to Jacob by Rachel & Leah as wives, even Dan, & Naphtali, & Gad & Asher. It is questioned, why he should be with these rather than the other? And it needeth not much for answer. It is conceived the two handmaids lived in one tent; and Joseph perhaps frequenting Bilhahs tent, because she was his mothers maid, and likely had been helpful to him in his minority, mult needs also accompany with the sons of both; yet no necessity is thereto think, that he was confined to their company: for it is evident he conversed with the rest of his brethren.

3. Of his honest and upright disposition, And Joseph brought their evil report to their father, &c. Evil reproach to Israel his father, Sep. Their evil accusation, &c. Cald. Herein is discoursed the upright heart of Joseph, that he could not indure sin upon his brethren.

1. The subject here is Joseph, who feared God from his youth.

2. His action, he brought to his fathers knowledge things dishonourable to the Church of God, and a shame to his family.

3. The matter was the evil report of his brethren, that is, that sinful carriage, which caused the evil report to come upon them, and their family; this is stiled a grievous crime. Vulg. Doubtles it was no small fault, but sin of a deeper die.

4. The manner of doing this was in love to them, and with desire to amend them: and therefore no wicked talebearing. By one copy of the seaventy urg'd by Musculus it is. καὶ ἡμεῖς οὕτως ἀποφασίζομεν But altogether erring from the original. Ver. 2.

M m m 2 one

Learn hence.

D. 1. The Churches line is drawne by Gods Spirit eminently opposit to the wicked.

D. 2. The Churches generations are best made out from the best of her children...

D. 3. Youth is eminently memorable, when it is sanctified, and gracious.

D. 4. Gracious parents are careful, though never so rich, to bring up their children in honest callings. See Jacob did Joseph, &c.

D. 5. God can preserve some pure, though conversing with wicked bretheren, and relations.

D. 6. There may be some still of evil Spirit in the family of the Church.

D. 7. Gracious dispositions cannot bear or favour the sins of nearest relations.

D. 8. Souls grieved with sins of other relations bring the discovery to such as can amend them. Ver. 2.

4. Josephs condition is expressed by the tender respect, which he had from his father, And Israel loved Joseph before all his sons, because the son of old ages was he to him, and he made for him a coat of peeces, — A coat of many colours. Sept. — because he was a wife son, &c. Cald.

Ver. 3. Herein we may observe Jacobs respect to Joseph two wayes discovered.

1. In his surpassing love to him above the rest of his sons, where-about is recorded.

1. The action with its degrees, Israel loved Joseph more then all his sons, his heart went out more to him.

2. The reason of it, because he was the son of his old age, so is it in the letter, the Caldee reads a wife son: See doubtles he was, but the letter doth not expresse it.

Quest. Did Jacob well to shew more affection to one then to another child?

Ans. 1. To do so unto children under all equall and like considerations, were partiality. 2. Yet where God, by grace, makes a difference, the image of God is more lovely, then the image of man; and upon this account, Jacob lets out his heart, however it may become naturall reason might worke with it.

Quest. How is Joseph called the son of his old age, seeing he was borne in Padan-Aram, not above seaven, or eight yeares after Reuben? Gen. 30.

Ans. 1. He was the last that Jacob had in Padan-Aram, Benjamin was borne but a little before this. 2. It may be a phrase to note the more tendernes, which parents use to shew to the last and least of children.

2. Jacobs respect to Joseph appears in outward action; that was the difference he maketh between him and the rest in his habite, and vesture, he made for him a coat of silks, some read a coat of peeces, or parts, as the word note's, that is, severall sorts of threads interwoven; as we say an imbroidered coat; some read a coat to the ankles wrought with needle worke: & some take it as a Priestly robe, but such it was not, we read Princes children were wont to wear such garments for distinctions sake from inferior people. 2 Sam. 1. 13. 18. By this is set out the ornament of the Church. Psalm. 45. 14. 15. So we have the truth in the letter.

Learn from it.

D. 1. It is not unbecoming gracious parents to love best their gracious children.

D. 2. The children of age, the last and least are really the greatest care to parents, especially when good.

D. 3. Distinction of habits among several persons is not unsuitable to the Church of God.

D. 4. Habiting of children, as it ariseth from affection, so it should be ordered by grace. Ver. 3.

5. Josephs condition in his fathers house is further set out by the carriage of his bretheren to him, noted.

1. By their inward affection, And his bretheren saw, that their father loved him before all his bretheren, and they hated him. Cald. the same. — Loved him of all his bretheren, &c. Sept. Here,

1. The occasion of their inward distast, they saw by their fathers carriage, and expressions, that he affected Joseph best of all, and hereupon their hearts are disturbed, and they meditate evil within.

2. Their affection, they hated him, that is, their hearts did rise against him, they could not indure him to have a place in their desires.

2. By their outward actions: and they could could not speake to him in peace. — Speake nothing peaceable, — They would not speake peaceably. Cald. In this expression the affirmative is carried; they could not indure to give him a good word, or look, as they did one to another, but spake doggedly, churlishly, scornfully, and disdainfully to him, and all this both because his fathers love was on him, and Gods love on him also, even for his goodness sake.

Observe we.

D. 1. Choice respects to any, from parents, above all others, usually make such favorites to be envied.

D. 2. Flesh and blood usually hate that, which grace affects and loves.

D. 3. Sin, and envy specially, put men out of a capacity of doing duty to relations.

D. 4. Where hearts are full of hatred, mouths speake not peace, but bitterness, and scornful. Ver. 4.

Thus farre is the history of Joseph in the line of Jacob according to his condition in his fathers house.

2. Now followeth the revelation, which God was pleased to make to him of those days of youth, whereof.

1. The manner of making it is observable, by dreams.

2. The matter declared by dreames, and that was Gods future providence toward Joseph, as his instrument to save his Church in time to come. Ver. 5. 11. In the whole passage, we have these particulars to consider.

1. The author of these dreams, God himself and his Spirit: For they were propheticall.

Ver. 5. 6. 2. The subject of these dreams, Joseph now seaventeen yeares old, addicted to the study of God, and hatred of sin. V. 5. 9.

3. The narration of these dreams: He told them to his bretheren, and that with an emphasis, calling for their attention, not out of vaine glory, but instinct of God, to shew, that Josephs future state was pre-ordained of God. Ver. 5. 6. 9. 10.

Ver. 7. 4. The dreams themselves, of which we may note.

1. The matter; the one was of sheaves worshipping his sheafe, this standing, and those bowing; the other of the sun, and moon, and eleven stars doing obeisance to him. Ver. 7. 9.

2. The number of them, they were two under various expressions, doubled, to note the certainty of the event.

5. The interpretation of the dreams, Ver. 8. which was made.

1. By his bretheren in contempt & scorn. Shalt thou indeed reigne over us, &c? This they disdaind, and yet submitted to it at their first going into Egypt, when the event fell out. Ver. 8.

2. By his father, and that in way of rebuke. His father rebuked him, and said, what is this dream, which thou hast dreamed, shall I, and thy mother, and thy bretheren, coming come to bow low our selves to thee to the earth? Thus Jacob also applyeth the dream with some kinde of regret, that his son should be set up of God above him, yet so it was, Jacob did him honour in his place, when he went downe to Egypt.

6. The use made of these dreams; which is twofold.

1. By Josephs bretheren, they hated Ver. 11, him still the more for his dreams. V. 5. 8. They envied him. Ver. 11.

2. By Josephs father.

1. He rebuketh him, but mildly, and probably to keep of some envy from him by his bretheren.

2. He kept or observed the saying, and laid it up in his heart, as Mary the word of Christ, her son, typified here by Joseph, as is conceived by some. Jacob was acquainted with such revelations of God by dreams, therefore he slighted not this to Joseph, but ponders it seriously. Ver. 11.

Quest. How could this interpretation be true of Josephs father and mother, by the sun and Moon seeing Rachel was already dead?

Ans. 1. Some apply it therefore not to Joseph, but to Iosuah, at his word the sun and moon stood still understanding it of the sun, that cannot be the meaning of it, for the moon and stars are here added, and Joseph speaketh expressly of honor to himself to come. 2. Jacob giveth the right interpretation, therefore most properly is it meant of Jacob the father, and his wife, who was mistress in the family, viz. Leah, and his other eleven sons. Now she is called his mother by a good right, as her sons are called his bretheren, which was from his fathers, whose wife she, and whose sons they were.

Quest. 2. How did Jacob and his wife bow themselves to Joseph, or where doth it appeare?

Ans. 1. It is certain that Jacob and his family came under Josephs Government, and protection in Egypt.

2. It is safely presumed, that he, and Leah, with all his family gave him the respect of his place.

3. It is expressly noted, that by his message sent, his sons declare, thy servant our father, &c. Which was humbling enough to make good this prophecy, but

M m m 3 Jacob

Jacobs carriage, when he saw his son in his honour, is not declared. Chrylloftom maketh his bowing on the top of his staffe to be unto Joseph, but that was worshipping of God.

2. The next general head of this Chapter, containeth the history of Josephs separation from his fathers house by the treacherous conspiracy of his brethren. Ver. 12. 28. Wherein we have to consider the especial ordering of providence about this event.

1. As to the occasion of it. Ver. 12. 13. 14.
2. As to the consequent events. Ver. 15. 16, &c.

1. In the relating the occasion we have these particulars.

1. His brethrens going forth with their fathers flocks to feed them in Shechem. And his brethren went to feed their fathers flock in Shechem, the same. Thus providence ordered this first step of the occasion of Josephs separation, viz. his brethrens distance from their father; for it is probable no such thing would they have attempted in his eye or under his hearing. Ver. 12.

2. His fathers call of him to send him unto them, wherein.

1. Israels conference with Joseph, And Israel said unto Joseph, do not thy brethren feed in Shechem? Are they not feeding? Sept. the same. Behold thy brethren feed, &c. Cald. This onely prepares him for his mission, as a foregoing discourse.

2. Israels resolution to send Joseph to visit them, Come I will find thee unto them, Sept. and. Cald. the same. Here is his preface to Joseph to put him in readines for his mission.

3. Josephs answer, And he said to him behold me, or, loe I, that is, am here ready to obey thy will in all that thou shalt say. Ver. 13.

4. Israels mission & commission unto Joseph, And he said unto him go I pray thee, see the peace of thy brethren, and the peace of the flocks, and returne me word. If thy brethren be well, &c. Cald. as Hebrew.

Here you have his call by his father, and his commission for his worke, it was to visit his brethren, and informe his father of the state of them, and the flocks; little did Jacob thinke, that he was now sending Joseph into Egypt; yet so it fell out.

5. Josephs obedience, And he sent him from the vale of Hebron, and he came to Shechem. Sept. and Cald. the same.

1. The fathers mission.

2. The sons obedience, without disputing length or danger of the way. So providence ordereth the mind of Jacob, and Joseph to bring about his owne purposes. It is conceived by some, that Shechem was distant from Hebron sixteen German miles.

60 English miles.

les. Thus farre the first occasion of Josephs separation from his fathers house. Ver. 14.

D. 1. Providence in ordering the wicked purposes of men to his owne praise, giveth them time, and place to do them. Ver. 12.

D. 2. Good fathers of families are sollicitous about their children, and charge, when absent from them.

D. 3. Gracious fathers sticke not to send the best of children to looke after the welfare of the worst.

D. 4. Good children are ready, and at hand to go at their fathers command, and do their will. Ver. 13.

D. 5. Commands and commissions are in parents power to give to children under God.

D. 6. Submission and obedience, are the duties of children unto parents just commands.

D. 7. Innocent soules seeke their peace, who plot trouble to them.

D. 8. God orders parents commands, and childrens obedience unto other ends, then they intend sometimes. Ver. 14.

2. The events are recorded, which here-upon befel Joseph, which were various, and sad for present.

1. The frustration of his expectation at Shechem, and his wandring, as a disappointed man; set out.

1. By a providential meeting with a man, And a man found him, and behold he wandered in the field, Sept. and Cald. the same. So providence ordered his brethren not to be there: for it was not the place, where the means of carrying him into Egypt should appear; yet here God orders one to finde him in his travells up and downe, and to give him tidings of his brethren.

The Jewes have phansied this man to be the Angel Gabriel, called the man Gabriel Dan. 9. 21. But no such character is here of him; and the letter notes a man, which might be a neer inhabitant therabout.

2. By providential discourse.

1. The man begins with him, And the man asked him, saying, what seekest thou? Sept. and Cald. the same. This quere was friendly, & with desire to help him in his streight, as appears by the issue. Ver. 15.

2. Joseph answers.

1. By resolution, I seeke my brethren.

2. By request unto him, tell me, I pray thee where they feed, Sept. and Cald.

The same. Here is nothing of difficulty, onely such parley as might help him to his intended business. Ver. 16.

3. The mans reply by way of direction, And the man said they are departed hence, for I heard them saying, let us goe to Dothan.

This place is conceived to be eight miles distant from Shechem; and in the rode it was of those merchants, who went to carry him into Egypt. The second event.

2. His attainment of his end at last, And Joseph went after his brethren, and found them in Dothan, Sept. and Cald. the same. Thus far under providence he hath travelled, seeking his brethrens peace, and hastening his own banishment from his fathers house, though he knew it not. Ver. 17.

D. 4. Intelligence is a cordial to wandring strangers.

D. 5. God appoints time and place of finding out our desires below.

D. 6. Under Gods ordering, in the place where his servants find peace to others, they may find trouble to themselves. Ver. 17.

3. The next event is his entertainment with his brethren, which accomplisheth his separation from his fathers house. Ver. 18. 28. Wherein we have to note.

1. Their consultations about him, upon his approach, ordered sweetly by providence, and those twofold.

1. Some are for his death. V. 18. 19. 20.

2. Others stirred by God were to punish him, but spare his life. Ver. 21. 22.

1. In the counsells taken about his death observe.

1. The occasion of it, And they saw him from a farre, even before he came neer unto them.

brethren, and they of him, at a pretty distance, so farre as they could ken.

2. The worke, about which Ioseph was even travelling, to seeke the peace of his brethren, and now joyfully approaching to salute them and inform them of his fathers love and care over them.

3. The discovery made by them, they saw him, and upon first sight of his person, and the opportunity given them to work their wills on him; they thinke to dispatch him; all these give occasion to the enterprize.

2. The conspiracy made, And they craftily conspired, or plotted against him to kill him. Num. 25. 18. immensely. They malignantly plotted. Sept. — They devised or thought, &c. Cald. We have here to note.

1. Their malice.
2. Their subtilty.
3. Their combination.

Ver. 20.

2. About his death and burial, And now come ye let us kill him, and cast him into one of the pits, Sept. and Cald. same. Bloody resolutions are these against an innocent lamb; thus false providence lets them thinke, speake, and resolve.

3. About the hiding of his blood afterward, And we will say an evil wild beast hath devoured him. — Sept. Cald. same. See here.

1. The horror of blood shed, they will not own it.

2. The falshood of murderers, to hide it under lies.

3. The vaine hope this way to escape.

4. The end of this wicked counsel, And we shall see, what his dreams will be, Sept. the same. — What will be the end of his dreams. Cald. Here.

1. They feared his dreams, least he should be their Lord.

2. They upon this account maligne him bitterly.

3. They here resolve to make an end of his dreams, and him together: and therefore mocke at this revelation of God to him; we shall see what a Lord he will be, when he is dead. And indeed pernicious had this counsell been, if God had not prevented it; however he was able to raise him from the dead. Ver. 20.

1. The person was the elder brother Reuben, who likely had the greatest stroke among them.

2. His cognisance of the bloody designe, he heard it, doubtless he was there, and tooke notice of the general vote for Iosephs death, and him God useth to prevent it.

2. His rescue of Ioseph from death by way of counsel to defeat the former, where we have recorded.

1. The issue, And he delivered him out of their hand, Sept. Cald. same. This was the issue of his counsel, that they did not kill him.

2. The

2. The meanes he useth, earnest advice to them against shedding blood; four times expressed.

3. His end is here recorded, which was twofold.

1. Iosephs deliverance from death intended, That he might deliver him out of their hands, Sept. and Cald. — So God overruled one to perfwade the rest. Spirits are in his hand.

2. His fathers comfort was the other end, To return him to his father. Cald. the same. — That he might restore him, &c. Herein not only regarding Iosephs life, but his fathers life, and comfort also, So God makes nature to worke for purchasing his owne ends. Ver. 22.

Quest. Was Reubens counsel good, and to be approved?

Answ. 1. In pretense it was bad, for it pretended to kill him by famine in a pit, which was worse, then to kill him with the sword.

2. In the intent of it, the counsel was good, for it was to keep them from blood, and to render him safe to his father: & God wrought together with it to bind the hands of his brethren from killing him.

3. As he speaks Gen. 42. 22. His minde was that no hurt should be done unto him, spake not I, saying, sin not against the child. So that in the scope of it sin cannot be charged on it.

D. 7. Fratricide is made horrid to evil men by God, for saving him downe.

D. 8. Respect to paternal honour may sway with men of bad resolutions, to abstaine from evil, and offering violence to a brother. Ver. 21. 22.

2. Now follow their actions, after counsells, toward Ioseph, whereabout are recorded.

1. His full access unto them, which gave them full occasion of executing their wicked conceits, And it was, as Ioseph came to his brethren, or when Ioseph came to his brethren, Sept. and Cald. Here the prey Ver. 23; valleth into their hands.

1. A poor innocent lamb, Ioseph, who sought nothing but his brethrens good, he maketh himselfe a prey.

2. Bloody conspirators under the name of brethren, they have him delivered to their wills.

3. He comes freely as a lamb to the slaughter: so providence ordereth to his dearest, even to his own son.

2. The execution of their counsel in a four fold action.

1. In stripping him, And, that, or then they stripped Ioseph out of his coat, the coat of many pieces, or colours, which was on him they put off from Ioseph the party-coloured coat, that was about him, Sept. Here is their unnatural dealing at first, the spoiling of their brother, wherein.

1. The spoilers are his brethren.

2. Their act of spoil, they strip him; pluckt of his cloaths.

3. The matter of the spoil, his coat, his embroidered, or party coloured coat; that which was the token of his fathers love, & the marke of their envy, & that with which they intended to make a cloake to cover their villany to their father. Greater unnaturalnes in this kinde could not be shewn, then to take away the garment of a brother, yet this is the least of their evil.

Ver. 23.

2. In burying him alive, by putting him in a pit to dye by famine, for such was the in-

Nan ten-ention of them all, except Reuben, hereabout we read.

Ver. 24.

1. Their apprehension of him, And, or then they took him, that is, laid violent hands on him, Sept. and Cald. same.

2. Their disposal of him, And cast him into a pit, and the pit was empty, there was no water in it, Sept. Cald. same. Herein note.

1. Their act, horrid cruelty, they cast him away, as desirous to bury him alive: for there they purposed (for the most part of them) that he should perish.

2. The place described.

1. A pit, a deep hole, such as our tin pits, out of which was no coming without help.

2. The specification of this pit, it was dry, or empty, no water was in it; providence so ordered by Reuben, that he might not presently be drowned. Under all these cruel dealings here is no mention of Joseph's carriage, but we shall find, in their owne confession afterwards, that Joseph's cries were not small, we saw the anguish of his soul, when he besought us, and we would not hear: Gen. 42. 21. Notwithstanding all these cruel men spare not, but in their intent bury him alive. So they dealt with Jeremy. Jer. 38. 6. So the affliction of the Church is set out by a pit without water, where they shall not be drowned, but delivered out from it. Zech. 9. 11.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Under providence innocent souls come in their integrity into the hands of spoilers.

D. 2. Simple, honest hearts, may thinke of committing to brethren, when it is to cruel destroyers.

D. 3. Vnnatural treacherous dealers stick not to take a garment from a brother.

D. 4. Garments of pleasure may expose men to envy and spoil by wicked hands. Ver. 23.

D. 5. Violent hands are soon layd even upon an innocent brother by envious, and enraged spirits.

D. 6. Brethren, degenerate into spoilers, stick not at it to bury an innocent brother alive.

D. 7. God emptieth the pits of water, where he will not have his innocents perish.

D. 8. Dry pits of trouble are in Gods use tokens of deliverance Joseph shall come out. Ver. 24.

3. In rejoycing over their owne cruelty: they eat and drinke, and remember not the afflictions of Joseph. It is shortly thus reported, And they sat downe to eat bread, Ver. 25; Sept. and Cald. same. Herein observe.

1. The term of connection, rendered either copulatively, And, so knitting it to their former cruelty in burying Joseph alive, or adversatively, but, which sets it in opposition to Joseph's misery. He was either now howling, or sadly bemoaning himselfe in the pit, but they were eating and drinking, or it may be read as a note of order and consequence, then, that is after they had thus afflicted poor Joseph, then they got to eating, &c.

2. The posture of them, they sat downe, it notes their security, they were now at quiet, while they had the dreamer in the pit, they lay themselves at ease; not suspecting that God might rouse them with his terrors.

3. The worke, which was the end of this posture, to eat bread. This was no unlawful thing, in itselfe, but as the phrase imports, this was a kinde of feasting, eating, and drinking without fear, or care, not remembering the tears, and anguish of poor Joseph. It seems to be the ground of the Prophets threatening expreſſion, woe to them that are at ease, &c. But they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph. Amos. 6. 16. This is the high pitch of sin, to oppress poor souls, and then glut mens selves with meat and drinke, and be regardless of their miseries.

It instruct's us.

D. 1. Saints affliction, and persecutors exaltation are usually concomitant.

D. 2. It is the genius of cruel men, to glut themselves with pleasure, when they oppress Gods servants.

D. 3. Sin makes sinners secure in their persecutions, as if no account would be required.

D. 4. It is grievous sinning to acquiesce in, and rejoyce over the evil done unto Gods Saints. Ver. 25.

4. The last act of these cruel brethren is the selling of Joseph as a slave into Egypt. Whereabout we read.

1. The occasion offered, which was the discovery of some merchants, whom God sent at this time in this way, for the accomplishing of his own counsells concerning ning Joseph, And they lifted up their eyes and saw, and behold a company of Ishmaelites coming from Gilead, and their camels bearing spicery, & balm, and myrrhe, going to carry it down to Egypt. — Ishmaelites travellers, &c. And their camells were full, that is, fully laden with perfumes, &c. Sept. — A company of Arabians, &c. and they went to go down to Egypt. Cald. Herein we may note providence working.

1. Upon Joseph's brethren as to their eyes, setting them upon the travellers, and thereby afterward changing their minds concerning Joseph. While they were eating, so many of them as were together (for Reuben was not now with them) they saw a company travelling that way.

2. Upon these strangers, a troop or travelling company of Ishmaelites, in that God should order them to come in this point of time; about whom is recorded.

1. Their nation, they were Ishmaelites, all strangers, and unknown to Jacobs sons, which made them more secure of being concealed.

2. Their occupation, they carried on camels merchandize of spicery, &c. It is likely some precious things for perfumes, or medicine; the things particularly are not knowne in their proper nature by us.

3. Their journey, they were bound for Egypt; little did any of them thinke, that at this time God was making a way to send Israel into Egypt, or that he was now accomplishing Joseph's dreams, as to his presentment; yet upon this occasion it was. Ver. 25.

2. The motion made by Judah to the rest upon the sight of those travellers, which carrieth in it.

1. A debate with them about Joseph's death, which they had determined by fashining him in the pit, And Judah said unto these brethren, what profit is it, if we kill our brother, and conceal his blood? Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The party reasoning, Judah, moved doubtles by God upon the former occasion, he bespeaks the rest a little by way of abating their fury.

2. The debate itselfe, about the profit or commodity, that might accrue by killing him, and concealing his blood interrogatively expreſſed: What profit is it, or can it be?

1. To murder, and.

2. To labour to hide from our father, surely no profit at all to kill any, much lesse our brother, neither can we hide it, blood will cry, and God will hear it, and finde it out; let us therefore bethinke our selves, it will not be for our benefit at all, to destroy him in the pit. Ver. 26.

2. A motion of advice, wherein.

1. A call to them, and convocation of them to yeild, come ye, let us deferre no longer, come, let us do something else with him.

2. The advice is twofold.

1. Positive to sell him, this was wicked enough also: the selling of a brother as a slave, Let us sell him to the Ishmaelites, he may yeild us something that way. Sept. the same. To these Arabians, Cald. The selling of a man is a sin dammed to death, much more of a brother to be a slave; yet this counsel is subservient to Gods, to bring about his purposes to Joseph, and Israel.

2. Negative, where.

1. The advice, And let not our hand be upon him. — Hands, Sept. and Cald. same. that is let us not slay him, as their former counsel was.

2. The reason of it, For he is our brother, he is our flesh. Sept. Cald. same. Nature now begins a little to recover itself in these brethren; because Joseph was their brother, and flesh, they would not now kill him, nor shed his blood.

3. The issue or successe of this motion is twofold.

1. Consent of all the brethren present, to this motion, And his brethren hearkend, Sept. the same. — Obeyed him, Cald. God doubtles making their hearts to yeild also; they all agree to save his life. V. 27.

2. Contract for sale of Joseph, whereabout note.

1. The approach of the merchants, And there passed by men Medianites Merchants. — Sept. Cald. same. — That is, they now came home to the place, where these brethren were, and where, as passing by only, they were stoppt on a new bargain.

2. The exposing of their brother to sale, And they drew, and lifted up Joseph out of the pit, or made him ascend or come up. Sept. Cald. same. so God overpowered their wicked purposes.

3. The actual sale of him, And they sold Joseph to the Ishmaelites for twenty of silver. Some read twenty pieces, some Shels; It is not certainly knowne of what weight, or worth this money was, but at no great price they valued him; act of sale is now made: he is a slave, bought by the Ishmaelites, To the Arabians for twenty Shels, Cald. — Twenty of gold. Sept.

4. The disposal of Joseph by these merchants, And they brought Joseph into Egypt. — So they do, to make gain of him; it was the best merchandize, that ever came into Egypt. But Providence orders all this for ends of his own, not yet known to Joseph, or any else.

Quest. How was Joseph sold to Ishmaelites, and Midianites both, these being distinct people?

Ans. To this textual doubt is variously answered. 1. That the names were promiscuously used to note both sorts of people, they dwelling much together; So the Kings of Midian were called Ishmaelites. Judg. 8. 24. 26.

2. That they were joined together in trade, as partners for merchandizing, as English, and french or others may be, so that, what one buyeth the other buyeth, & soe may it be spoken of people different in nation, and joint in trade. 3. The Calde Paraphrase terms them Arabians, because they were a mixt people, and so might be filled one for another. The doubt is cleared from the former interpretation in both particulars. The glosse of his threefold selling is a fable. Ver. 28.

N n n 2 trade,

3. The last general head of this Chapter is the resentment of Iosephs affliction by his relations, his brother Reuben, and his father, the one mourning over him as lost, the other as dead.

1. The brothers affection is related. Ver. 29. 30. Here note.

1. Reubens returne to the pit. And Reuben returned to the pit, Sept. & Cald. same, in which note.

1. The connection, and order is to be observed, and, which noteth Reubens coming after that his brethren had been there before him, when they had taken him up, and sold him, then cometh he; whence it is apparent, that Reuben was not with them at the feast, nor at first conscious to his sale, however afterward consenting with the rest to cover the fact from his father, and to deceive him in this matter.

D. 6. Passion may make men judge that not to be, which is, and so may make mourners.

D. 7. Natural affection may put men to their wits end upon disappointments, and feares of worse events. Ver. 30.

In all this wee read not of any reply from his brethren, but doubtles they satisfied him, because in the after part he contents to them.

2. The history of the fathers resentment is recorded, whereabout we have to consider these things.

1. The representing of Iosephs case by his brethren to Iacob as dead, wherein all conspired, here note.

1. Their artifice, And they tooke Iosephs coat, and killed a kid of the goats, and dipped the coat in the blood. Cald. the same. Sept. Noe difficulty is in the words; onely here may we see wickednes working to conceal itselfe. Iosephs coat, & the kids blood are made the cloake to cover their great wickednes. Ver. 31.

2. Their sending and bringing this bloody garment to their father, And they sent the coat of many colours, and they brought it to their father. Cald. the same. Sept. omits that, and say, They brought it into their father. Here.

1. If the word (sent) be by other hands, as some conceive, then it may be, they dispatched some messenger before with it, but it is to be suspected, that they would trust none with it, for fear of bewraying.

2. I should thinke, that the first word might signifie, that they struck through the coat, to tear that, and rend it, and make it so more plausibly to appear to

2. The action or motion connected, he returned to the pit.

1. The subject Reuben, who had saved him from killing by his counsel, to put him into the pit.

2. The motion, he returned, doubtles another way, then his brethren knew.

3. The term of motion, the pit, into which Ioseph was cast, with an intent to have taken him out, and conveyed him to father; no other designe can probably be conceived of him.

2. The event, And behold Ioseph was not in the pit. And he found not Ioseph, &c. Sept. Cald. as Hebr.

1. The note of observation, behold, although Reuben thought to be too hard for his brethren, yet providence ordered, that they were before him; Reubens disappointment therefore is here noted.

2. The event itselfe, Ioseph was not there; he was gone now out of his hands, whom he purposed to deliver to his father.

3. His deportment hereupon, in these particulars.

1. His gesture, And he rent his clothes, Sept. Cald. same, an exprestion of great grief to his unexpected disappointment. Such gestures we read. Ver. 34. Job. 2. 12. Gen. 44. 13. Num. 14. 6. Ver. 29.

2. In his speedy address to his brethren, And he returned to his brethren, Sept. Cald. same. He halted to them suspecting some mischief, which they had done unto him.

3. In his sad complaint, And he said the child, or the lad is not in the pit, Sept. ap. peareth not. Cald. His meaning was, that he was dead and that they had killed him, as he suspected: so the phrase noteth. Ier. 31. 15. As if in his passions he had said, Ioseph is dead, ye have killed him, he is not.

4. In his distressed expostulation, And I, whither shall I go? Cald. the same. And whither shall I yet go? It is an exprestion of over pressing grief: which way shall I turn? How shall I looke my father in the face? Wo is me, what shall I do?

Quest. Where was Reuben, when Ioseph was sold?

Answ. 1. It is variously conjectured by some, but all in vaine: God hath not revealed where. 2. He was absent, that is certaine, and that by divine disposition, (that he should not hinder Iosephs sale into Egypt) and with a purpose to get him out of the pit, and deliver him to his father, unknowne to his brethren.

Quest. How cometh Reuben so much to bewail Ioseph?

Answ. 1. Not out of genuine love to him, for he hated him as the rest did. 2. Respect unto his father might move him herunto. 3. His bowels might be tenderer, then his brethrens. 4. God doubtles did overpower his soul, at this time, and awed him. Ver. 30.

4. Their mocking of good old Jacob, Know now whither it be thy sons coat, or no, Sept. and Cald. same. See in this impiety their boldness and craftiness.

1. In mocking their father, putting him to discover the matter, as if they had known nothing.

2. In styling thy son, not their brother

3. In twisting him with the coat, such as thou gavest not to us.

In his judgement thereupon made, according to their information, and apparent symptoms of the same, An evil beast hath devoured him, Joseph is torn in pieces. A wild beast hath torn him, Sept. With a slaughter Joseph is slain, Cald. How could poor Jacob think otherwise? Upon such an information of his death; that they might keep him from sending after him. They might have said the Ishmaelites came with strength, and stole him; but that was not so false, therefore they stick to the first. Ver. 33.

Ver. 34.

3. In his lamentation, set forth in many particulars.

1. By renting cloaths, as Reuben did before.

2. By putting on sackcloth upon his loines.

3. By his grief, and mourning many days. Ver. 35.

Ver. 35.

4. By refusing to be comforted by sons, or daughters.

5. By his desire of death also, I will go down into the grave to my son weeping, Psal. 16. 10.

6. By the doubled emphatical expression, And, or thus his father wept for him, Sept. and Cald. same, Ver. 35. Or, as the relative here by some translated, Jacobs father, who was Isaac then living, he bewailed this son, as well as his father, so grand father and father were mourners: none of those savage brethren, whose consciences told them of all their wickedness against them, are seen to lament.

Quest. Why did Jacob make no more inquisition after this blood, as might have been?

Ans. 1. His credulity towards his sons blinded him. 2. The providence of God doubtless ordered, that Joseph should not be discovered before his appointed time.

The close of this Chapter is but a transition to the 39 Chapter, where this history is continued: I shall therefore referre the opening of it thither.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

IN the entrance of this Chapter the history of Joseph is interrupted, unto the beginning of the next; and herein is contained the compleat history of Judah the fourth son of Jacob by Leah, with his offspring, until the going downe of Jacob, and his family into Egypt. The reason of inserting this history is not declared expressly, but may be guessed at probably.

1. To hold forth the line of the Messiah.

2. To be a memorial to the Jewes of their corrupt original from such wicked ancestors, that their mouths might be stopped, when they boast, that they were no children of fornication. Iohn. 8. 46. Whatever it be, we find this here added to perfect the history of the Church for this age. The whole matter here reported may be digested into three general heads.

1. The marriage of Judah with his issue, and the disposal of them. Ver. 1. 11.

2. The incest of Judah with his daughter in law, and the consequents of it. Ver. 12. 26.

3. The incestuous birth of twins. Ver. 27. 30.

In the first general we have these particulars to note.

1. The strange way of Judahs marriage. Ver. 1. 2.

2. The issue, which he had, three sons. Ver. 3. 4. 5.

3. The disposal of these sons in marriage. Ver. 6. 10.

4. The ordering of the relict widow of two sons. Ver. 11

1. In the history of his marriage we have to consider.

1. The time, as it is here expressed, and connected to the precedent, And it was, or came to passe in that time, Sept. and Cald. same. This seemeth to be annexed to the former history of Josephs selling and so to concerne that time, but that cannot be in whole, for many inconveniences.

Quest. What time then was this, when Judah was married?

Ans. 1. This is certaine, from Josephs selling unto Jacobs going downe to Egypt was not above three and twenty yeares: Joseph being seventeen when he was sold, thirty when he stood before Pharaoh, and nine and thirty before Jacob came unto him.

2. This is certaine, that Pharez one of the incestuous twins, had two sons born, when Isaac went down to Egypt, Gen. 46. 12.

3. That Er, and Onan were married, & dead and Judahs wife dead, some competent space before, he committed the act with Tamar, it cannot be questioned.

4. This must be granted that Pharez was of competent yeares before he could get two sons: & all these things must be done before Jacobs going down to Egypt: and that all should be within the space of three and twenty yeares is not credible.

5. Necessarily then must part of this history be accomplished before Joseph was sold, & part after; so that to clear this doubt we must conclude.

1. That the marriage of Judah was at least seven yeares before Josephs selling; and therefore that there must be here several things. The arbitrary method of Gods Spirit, recording some things in a time much after their being acted, this was when Judah was about fourteen yeares of age, in three yeares three sons were born to him.

2. That seven yeares after Joseph was sold, Judah gave Tamar for wife to his son Er, being about fourteen yeares old, and he being slain the same year, afterwards to Onan, & about three yeares after, Tamar seeing herselfe deluded by her father, yielded to him, and brought forth Pharez.

3. That Pharez the year before Jacobs going to Egypt begat Hezron, being about fourteen yeares old also: and the year following, wherein they went down to Egypt he begat Hamul. In this way all things may conveniently accord in this history.

2. The act preparatory to his marriage which was his departing from his brethren, and fathers house, That Judah went downe from his brethren, and turned into a certaine Adullamite, and his name was Hirah, Sept. Cald. same. whose name, &c.

1. The

1. The subject here acting was Judah, at this time about fourteen years of age, a wanton youth; and forward as it seemeth by his actions.

2. His motion is twofold,

1. He went from his brethren, that is, not to a total departure, for he was with them, when they sold Joseph: and herein also from his father, and without his command or leave, which he ought to have had.

2. Returned in, &c. It is likely he had got familiarity with the neighbours of the country: And some friendship with this man, whose name was Hirah, and his place of abode Adullam (afterwards given to the tribe of Judah) not far from Hebron, it seems by this mans acquaintance, he was induced to marry, Ver. 1.

Ver. 2. 3. The occasion of his marriage, And Judah saw there a daughter of a man a Canaanite, and his name was Shua. — her name Shua. Sep. — of a merchant man, &c. Cald. But in the original the name was the fathers, not the daughters: And however Canaan signifieth a Merchant, yet here it seems to be a proper national name.

1. Judah being here out of his place is exposed to a temptation.

2. His sight helps on.

3. The daughter of the Canaanite is the bait: such things God permits to let men see their folly.

4. The marriage (such as it was) is here related, And he took her, and went in unto her, Sept. and Cald. fame. Here is a copy of a sad marriage.

1. He himself without his father.

2. He took her, neither given of God, nor desired by him.

3. He went in unto her, that is the completing of it to enjoy his lust, not to honour God: So he that is joined to a harlot is one flesh, 1 Cor. 6. from this part of the history we may observe.

D. 1. Arbitrary is the Spirit of God in recording times of events: therefore careful should we be to search them.

D. 2. Wanton forward youths are apt to leave their station, brethren, and fathers, where they should be ruled.

D. 3. Such aversnes from duty inclines foolish hearts to loose acquaintance. So it was here.

D. 4. Wanton youths choose to be familiar with worldly companions in lust, rather than to be with a good father.

D. 5. Names of men, & places of mis- carriage by the sons of the Church, are noted for instruction, Ver. 1.

D. 6. In bad company, and out of mens places usually are offered baits of temptation.

D. 7. Wanton hearts have wanton eyes, by which they are carried out to evil.

D. 8. Daughters of the Canaanites may please the eyes of the sons of Jacob to misguide them.

D. 9. Violence of lust drives men to take their delights, never desiring leave of God, or man.

D. 10. Lust desires no better marriage, then a carnal injoiment of its pleasure.

D. 11. Lust fears no Law of God, that forbids Jacobs seed to marry with Canaanites, Ver. 2.

2. The next thing recorded after Judahs marriage, is his issue, which were three sons.

1. Of the first born we read, And she conceived, &c. Septuag. and Cald. fame. Wherein note.

1. Conception, God afforded that blessing to this marriage, She conceived.

2. The birth, She bare a son. this good also is granted to them.

3. The naming of this son, And he called his name Er. The imposor is the father here, for the verb is masculine. The name imposed is Er, which notes one active; and Watchful; upon what account it was given is uncertain. This the first, Ver. 3.

2. The next birth is recorded, And she conceived further, or again, &c. Where we have the second conception, and birth vouchsafed, and the naming of the child by his mother, And called his name Onan. Upon what account she gave this name, is not mentioned, it signifieth grief, and it may be, it was an heavy birth unto her, Sept. and Cald. fame, Ver. 4.

3. The next birth is mentioned after the same manner, And she added yet, &c. Cald. the same, — she was in Chasbi, &c. Sept. Here.

1. Distinction of these issues, She added, that is, to conceive, these were all distinct conceptions, no twins, and within three years, as the ordinary time of bearing will admit.

2. The birth, She bare a son, that is the third.

3. The naming, She also called this son Shelah, which noteth peace, or quietnes; it may be, she found more ease in this birth.

4. The

4. The place where Judah was, when this, and the rest were borne, He was in Chesib when she bare him. That is, the last. The Septuagint say, She was there when she bare them. It is likely all might be borne there. Some would have Chesib a common noun, and to note a lye, as if the meaning was in bearing this son, it was as in a lye, that she did bear no more. So vulgarly. But it notes a place neer to Adullam, called sometimes Achzib. Mic. 1. v. 14. Here Judah had his sons, Ver. 5.

D. 1. The worst of marriages may be blessed by God with the fruit of the womb.

D. 2. Multiplied conceptions, and births God may vouchsafe sinful matches.

D. 3. Number of births, and places for them, are determined by God.

D. 4. Sinful places best suit sinful dispositions; such was Chesib, or Achzib, Mich, 1. Ver. 3, 4, 5.

3. The next particular in the first general is the disposing of these sons, which was as followeth.

1. As to the first born Er, we read.

1. His marriage, And Judah took a wife for Er, his first born, and her name was Tamar. Herein note.

1. He that orders, and giveth in marriage, is Judah, the father; now about eight and twenty years old.

2. The party, to whom the wife is given, Er Judahs first-borne, at this time about fourteen years of age.

3. The party given, it was Tamar for a wife. Her name is onely mentioned, not her place, or kindred but it is likely she was a Canaanit, of that place, thereabout, where Judah now lived. Ver. 6.

2. His life and conversation, And Er Judahs first born, was evil in the eyes of Iehovah. — Before the Lord. Sep. Cald. fame.

1. The subject spoken of is set out.

1. By his name, Er.

2. By his privilege, the first born of Judah; he in whom the father usually delights.

2. The matter spoken of him, he was evil in the eyes of Iehovah.

1. His condition, and conversation was sinful, and wicked, what this wickednes was, is not exprest for kind. Some Hebreus thought to be Sodomy, in leaving the natural use of his wife; but that is not exprest; some eminent wickednes it seems to be, by the punishment.

2. The aggravation, It was evil in the eyes of Iehovah, that is openly and impudently discovered in the face of God, to the contempt of him. Such he was and much by his fathers bad example.

3. His death is here recorded, And Iehovah slew him. — God killed him. Sept.

1. The executioner, God himself, whose pure eyes were provoked.

2. The execution, slaughter, death, and that exemplary to all about them; this is all of his first born. Ver. 7.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Such as have been disobedient to parents, are not willing their children should be such to them.

D. 2. It is the fathers right to provide, and give wives to their sons.

D. 3. It is natural for fathers to care mainly for the first born son.

D. 4. Providence orders wives from strangers, to be registred in his Church for his own ends. Ver. 6.

D. 5. The first borne of mens hopes may prove most wicked, and greatest crosses.

D. 6. It is height of wickednes to dare the Lord to his face.

D. 7. God himselfe turneth executioner to avenge himselfe upon daring sinners.

D. 8. Premature death is determined sometimes and executed, upon obstinate wicked sinners. Ver. 7.

2. The state of Onan the second son is here recorded, about whom we have to observe.

1. The fathers disposal of him, by special injunction, And Judah said unto Onan, go in unto thy brothers wife, and marry her, and raise up seed to thy brother, Sept. and Cald. fame, note.

1. The power commanding, is paternal, the father to his son giveth this command.

2. The injunction is threefold.

1. To go in unto his brothers wife, a preparation unto marriage.

2. To doe the part of a brother, that is, to marry her.

3. To raise seed unto his brother departed. No difficulty is in all these, the words are plain. Ver. 8.

2. The sons answer, very cross to his fathers mind, whereabout we have also to note.

1. The reason of the fact exprest, And Onan knew, that the seed should not be his.

Ooo

Sept.

Sept. the same. — That the seed should not be called by his name. Cald. hereupon his corruption worketh.

2. The fact itself, And it was, he went in unto his brothers wife, that he spilled it on the earth. — He shed. Sept. corrupted his way on the earth. Cald. Herein note many evils.

1. Uncleannes.
2. Selfe-pollution.
3. Destruction of future seed, which God ordered to be produced.

3. The end of the fact, That he might not give seed unto his brother. Sept. Cald. same. Herein is the greater sin, it was aimed in envy to his brother. Ver. 9.

3. Gods resentment of this fact, in two expressions.

Ver. 10.

1. And that which he did was evil in the eyes of Jehovah. — And it appeared wicked before God. Sept. It was displeasing before the Lord. Cald. In summe; it was in Gods account a fowl sinful fact, such as Gods pure eyes could not endure.

2. And he slew him also. Sept. and Cald. same. So we see, God entertaines it with displeasure, and he recompenceth it with death himself, to make such wickednes dreadful. Ver. 10.

Quest. Was Judahs command lawful in making an incestuous marriage Lev. 18. 16. Mat. 14. 4.

Ans. 1. That law against marrying the brothers wife was general. 2. This custom, and law afterward was special, and by way of exception. Deut. 25. 5. 3. This was onely in case of want of children. 4. This was national, and onely with respect to the tribes of Israel, upon which account, God made it lawful for them; he that made the Law, makes the exception: Something of this was known now in the Church by Judah, and therefore so practised.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Vaine parents take little knowledge of Gods judgments, in the death of one child, when they have others.

D. 2. Special law for the marriage of the deceased brothers wife by the brother, was given of God for special ends.

D. 3. Seed was much desirable, and is so in the Church of God: For which such lawes were made. V. 8.

D. 4. Wicked creatures are selfish in duty, therefore unwilling to seek any good, but their owne.

D. 5. Selfe-pollution, destruction of the seed of man, envy to brethren, are Onans horrid crimes, Ver. 9.

D. 6. Onans may be in the visible Church.

D. 7. Such uncleannes is very grievous in Gods sight.

D. 8. Exemplary death may be expected from God by such transgressors. Ver. 10.

4. The disposall of the relict widow of both his sons. And Judah said unto Thamar his daughter in law, remaine a widow in thy fathers house, untill Shelah my son be grown great; for he said least he dye also as his brethren; and Thamar went, and remained, or dwelt in her fathers house. Sept. Cald. same. In these we have these particulars observable.

1. Judahs injunction upon Thamar, wherein.

1. The connection is observable, And or then Judah said, that is immediately upon the death of his second son; providence striking them in their wickednes, and crossing him, he presently vents himselfe upon her.

2. The injunction layd on her, which is very hard, as may appear upon several considerations.

1. From the imposer, a father in law upon a daughter, after such sad afflictions; hard dealings from others are sad, but worse from relations, when better is expected.

2. From the charge imposed, Remaine a widow, he binds her from marriage, and so insnares her grievously, as much as to say, marry not.

3. From the place of her abode, her fathers house, he turneth her out of doois, from his owne house, where he should have kept and comforted her, & sent her home to her father.

4. From the reason pretended, Untill Shelah my son be grown great; so he makes shew to her, that then he would give her to him, & he was but a year younger then his last brother, which was slayne by the Lord; but he intended no such thing, as from the next circumstance may appear.

5. From his jealous charge of the death of his sons upon her, For he said least he also dye as his brethren. This is the reason pretended for not giving her to him in present; but in plain terms, he intended not to give her to him at all, suspecting that she should be the death of him, as he conceived, she was of the others; though wickedly so imagin'd by him: for they perished by their own sin. Thus he murther'd with himself.

self, she hath been the death of two already, and she will kill the third, if she stay; I will therefore rid her out of the house. Such sayings he had in his heart; and his dealings with her afterward proveth the same.

2. Thamar's submission to those hard terms, she went; and remained so in her fathers house, waiting for the third son, who wanted not much of that maturity, unto which his other brethren attained, when they were married. Ver. 11.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Sinful hearts when they suffer from Gods hand, are apt to vent it upon creatures.

D. 2. Carnal relations grow quickly weary of shewing kindness, when their aims are crossed by God.

D. 3. Hard fathers in law for their own ends, spare not to lay the hardest terms upon allies.

D. 4. Such oppressors deal subtilly, though cruelly: they pretend fair at least.

D. 5. Wicked hearts are apt to be jealous, and transference faults, and ill successes to others, that be innocent.

D. 6. Sinful fathers are willing to save children from death, but take bad ways to do it.

D. 7. Widowhood is a solitary condition, that binds souls to sit at home.

D. 8. God over-ruling, natural hearts may be content to submit to hard injunctions from others, when they cannot help it. So it was with Thamar, when Judah layeth hard injunctions on her. Ver. 11.

2. The next general of the Chapter is the history of Judahs incest, with its consequences. Ver. 12. 26. In the whole passage note.

1. Some antecedent events occasional. Ver. 12. 15.

2. The contrivance of the fact. Ver. 16. 17. 18.

3. The consequences of this fact, various. Ver. 19. 26.

To the first, the antecedent events occasional, these particulars are observable.

1 The death of Judahs wife, And the dayes were multiplied and the daughter of Shuah Judahs wife dyed. Cald. the same. — Sava the wife of Judah dyed, Sept. mistaking it the point in Ver. 12.

1. The time is noted indefinitely, many dayes were past, or the dayes were multiplied, not yeares, it is likely in the fourteenth year of Shelah; some moneths, and dayes were passed over.

2. The event, Judahs wife dyed, that is, in a natural way, providence ordered her dissolution. This giveth an occasion of more liberty unto Judah to expresse unruly lust.

3. The connection of this to the former injurious dealing with Thamar, may be observed as a just returne from God; not long after his wife is taken away.

2. Judahs comfort, and sheep-shearing not long after his wifes death, And Judah was comforted, and went up into his sheep-sheavers, &c. Wherein we read.

1. Judahs condition, it was joyous, and cheerful, as one comforted after his wifes death: he was no long mourner.

2. Judahs imployment, he went up to his sheep-sheavers: of it selfe honest enough, but the end was to feast and make merry; as was the custome of those times, and places.

3. Judahs company, Hirah his friend. Cald. the same. His shepherd. Sept. the word is something like. What a companion he was, may well be suspected, by what afterward he doth, being intrusted by Judah; a loose, unclean fellow.

4. The place, Timmah; afterward it was a citie of the Philistines, and it fell to Judah, Josh. 15. 57. Not farre it seemeth from Chezib. Ver. 12.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Injuries to daughters in law God may repay upon mens wives.

D. 2. Dayes may seem many before God visit, but visitation will come for sin.

D. 3. God may make death to be a just recompence of mens hard dealings.

D. 4. Vain and sinful hearts are soon comforted after the death of wives.

D. 5. Comforts carnal hearts do seeke by fleshly feasting, and imployments.

D. 6. Bad companions, and opportune places, bad hearts delight in, to enjoy their lusts. Ver. 12.

3. The next antecedent event to this incest cess is Thamar's carriage, about which note.

1. Her demeanour.

Ver. 13.

1. The tidings told her, And it was told Thamar, saying, behold thy father in law is going up to Timmath, to shear his sheep. Cald. same. — The Sept. adds daughter in law to Thamar. There is nothing of difficulty here, onely, what is observable is, that this is an occasional event under providence to bring on the foul fact. V. 13.

Ver. 14.

2. Her attire, And she removed the garments of her widowhood from her, and covered her with a veil, and wrapped herself. Cald. same. — Sept. operis se pallio, & ornavit se. Cald. Here we have.

1. Her putting off the signals of widowhood.

2. Her putting on garments of light women, for so they rendered her suspected.

3. Her posture, And she sat in the opening of Enaim, in an open place, the door of eyes, which is by the way to Timmath. — She sat at the gates of Enau. Sept. In a place of two ways. Cald.

1. Her posture is sitting and waiting.

2. The place convenient to meet with Judah in his passage. Some make it a proper name, others a common: the door of two fountains or eyes; that is, an open place; such, it seemeth, it was by Hirah's question afterward, or a proper name, as some.

2. The reason of all her carriage, Because she saw, that Shelah was grown great, and she was not given to him to wife. Sept. Cald. same.

1. Her own observation, she saw that Shelah was come to the maturity of his brethren.

2. Her frustration; Judah had not made good his pretended promise to give her him for a wife; therefore she casts about to bring her purpose to passe upon her father in law; wickednes layeth wait for wickednes to meet with it. V. 14.

Learn we.

D. 1. Tidings of opportunities to sin stirre up naughty hearts to it, and are soon made use of. V. 13.

D. 2. Sin is subtil to put away any signals, that may discover or prevent its designs.

D. 3. Lustful hearts habits themselves so as may best deceive others, and help them to their enjoyments.

D. 4. Unclean persons wait in places to meet their peers, and enjoy their pleasure.

D. 5. High ways are no terror to lust, to have its pleasure. Jer. 3, 2. Ezek. 16. 23.

D. 6. Disappointments in just things make evill hearts study them in unjust ways. V. 14.

4. The next antecedent event occasional, is Judah's action, about whom we read.

Ver. 15.

1. His sight of her, And Judah saw her. Sept. Cald. same. Here was the more immediate occasion of this foul act, a cast of an unclean eye; that answers her posture, and desire.

2. His conceit of her, And he conceived her for an harlot. — He thought her to be an harlot. Sept. Cald. same. Heie is the wickednes of his heart, at which she aimed to lay this bait for him; she knew him to be of such an unclean spirit.

3. The reason of this his thought of her, Because she covered her face. Cald. the same. and he did not know her. Sept. It seemeth she was in such a garb, as the loose women of that time, and place used; because hereupon he conceived her to be one, that prostrated her selfe to common use. V. 15.

Observe hence.

D. 1. Under providence ordering, sinful batis meet with sinful hearts.

D. 2. Unclean eyes are apt to pitch upon objects, that are suited for them.

D. 3. Filthy hearts are apt to take up foul thoughts of any object they desire.

D. 4. Habits, and postures of harlots, may cause them to be thought such, who use them. Ver. 15.

2. Now followeth the contrivance of the fact, V. 16. 17. 18. Wherein we have to note.

Ver. 16.

1. Judah's digression, And he turned unto her by the way. Sept. Cald. same. It is to be observed, that he first inclin'd and leaveth his course to Timmath, and turneth toward her, she doth not, as common harlots follow him.

2. Judah's solicitation of her to the sin, And he said, go to, or, grant I pray thee, that I may come in unto thee, (for he knew not that she was his daughter in law, Sept. Cald. same. Herein note.

1. His motion to unclean enjoyment of her, grant I pray thee, and I will come in unto thee. Adulterous charms, and intreaties.

2. The reason of his solicitation, he knew her not to be his daughter in law, but he esteemed her a strange woman; an harlot; therefore his purpose was bad enough; perhaps haps his lust would have been curb'd, if he had known her, as to the fact with her.

3. Thamar's capitulation with him, And she said, what wilt thou give me, that thou mayst come in unto me? Sept. Cald. same. Herein she acts like an harlot, that is, in desiring the hire for her body, which she thought, she might deserve; so some say: Metricis à merendo. V. 16.

Ver. 17.

4. Judah's proffer, And he said I will send a kid of the goats from the flocke. In this price offered for his enjoyment; providence surely overruled, to give the occasion of requiring the pawn; for he might have offered her money, or somewhat else. But thus he is willing to pay for his lust.

5. Thamar's exaction of a pledge, And she said, if thou wilt, or wilt thou give me a pledge, till thou send it? Sept. Cald. same. Wherein.

1. She supposeth Judah not to be trusted upon his word.

2. She provided for her own security, in keeping evidences by her of the fact, when she might be questioned. Ver. 17.

Ver. 18.

6. Judah's stipulation with her, And he said, what is the pledge, that I shall give thee? Sept. Cald. same. wherein he puts her to her choice, to aske what pawn or pledge she would have; being ready to part with any to her, though an unknown woman to him, to enjoy his lust.

7. Thamar's proposition to him, And she said, thy signet, and thy bracelet, and thy staff, which is in thy hand. — Ring for signet, Sept. Handkerchief, for bracelet, Cald. Herein providence overrulth her in her asking!

1. Things most proper to him for his use.

2. Things of most honorable cognizance.

3. Things that were most known to them, that knew him, that they might be to clear her.

8. Judah's concession, And he gave to her, Sept. Cald. same. Aske and have from his lust; that it may be satisfied.

9. Judah's act with her consent, And he went in unto her, Sept. Cald. same. — He enjoyed her, and his pleasure in her wickedly.

10. The fruit of this act, And she conceived to him, by him. Cald. the same. — She conceived in her womb of him; or by him. Sept.

1. The issue of this incestuous act was conception; that which she attained not by her husbands; yet so providence ordereth here.

2. The propriety of it, for him, so in the letter, as well as it was by him. It was Judah's seed, that was conceived; not his sons. So providence ordered it, for his own ends; and that extraordinarily, not to be drawn into example by wicked men.

Quest. 1. Was Thamar's act excusable? Answer. Surely no; for whatever may be pretended of injury offered, yet

1. No selfe revenge is to be taken.

2. Much lesse sinfull revenge.

3. Judges were, who might have righted her; therefore inexcusable utterly is her sin.

Quest. 1. Was Judah's sin the lesse, because he knew not, that it was his daughter in law?

Answer. No. 1. He might have knowne, who she was. 2. He was not ignorant, that she was an harlot, and that adultery, and uncleannes was forbidden in all estates of men. 3. The heat of lust would not suffer him to inquire or debate upon one or other, but brutishly rusheth upon wickednes; therefore great was his sin. This was done about his thirtieth year. As to the pretence made, that he and she are reckoned in the genealogie of Christ, therefore that this could not be such sin. It is truly replied. This was from Gods free grace accepting, and not any lessening to their sin. V. 18.

Learn hence.

D. 1. A lustful eye will quickly turne the foot out of the way to sin. Connection. V. 15.

D. 2. Men of lustful hearts turne of their owne accord to evil with others, without invitation.

D. 3. Digression from mens lawful way tend's to transgression against God and man.

D. 4. Lust is an hard solicitor for its unclean enjoyments.

D. 5. Lust runs blindfold even to defile neer relations, and inquiteth not.

D. 6. Sometimes lust is put to it to pay a price for its pleasure. The whorish custom. Ver. 16.

D. 7. Unclean persons sticke not to lessen their stock for increase of lust, so of sinners.

D. 8. Adulterous spirits are not credible with their own parameters; a price or pledge must be given. Ver. 17.

D. 9. Wicked hearts sticke not at pledge or price unto whorish women for enjoying lust.

D. 10. Unclean creatures are subtil to have a great pledge for a small price.

D. 11. Bee it never so great, lust will give it to the whorish woman for its pleasure.

D. 12. Blind lust doth not enely solicit, but violate neereſt relations, when it can.

D. 13. Providence denieth not conception ſometimes to the moſt inceſtuous mixtures of men and women.

D. 14. It is the order of providence, that conception ſhould be for Judah, as well as by him. Ver. 18.

3. The conſequents of this fact from V. 19. to 26. are theſe following.

1. Thamar's eſcape with her pledge, Ver. 19.

2. Judah's fruſtration of his pawn. Ver. 20. 23.

3. The diſcovery of all this evil by Thamar appearing to be with child. Ver. 24. 26.

Ver. 19: In Thamar ſhifting away we may obſerve,

1. Her ſpeedy preparation for it. — And ſhe aroſe, Sept. Cald. ſame. That is immediately as the fact was done, and Judah had turned his back for Timnath to go to his flock, up ſhe gets to give him the ſlip.

2. Her motion, And ſhe went, Sept. Cald. ſame. That is, ſhe betook herſelf preſently to her father's houſe, whence ſhe came, and ſo left Judah to looke for his pledge.

3. Her attiring herſelf in two acts.

1. Of putting off her looſe attire, And ſhe put away her vail from upon her, Sept. Cald. — to the ſame purpoſe, that is, ſhe layd aſide her harlots garb, by which ſhe deceived Judah.

2. Of putting on her own, And ſhe put on the garments of her widowhood, Sept. Cald. ſame. That is, ſhe reſumed the habit of an honeſt widow, and ſo continued ſome ſpace in her father's houſe.

Queſt. Doth this eſcape of Thamar excuſe her fact, becauſe ſhe married not for the reward, but onely did it with deſire of ſeed? Ambroſ. l. 3. in Luc. 3.

Anſw. Surely no; for. 1. She had better then the kid in her hand before the fact committed, therefore ſhe was not without her reward, which ſhe likewiſe deſired. 2. Had it been ſimply for deſire of ſeed, it is wickednes to deſire it in an unlawful way.

3. It is certaine ſhe layd a ſnare for her father in law, which was greatly ſinful. This therefore is not juſtly excuſed by ſome antients. Ver. 19.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Sinful luſt when its turn is ſerved, makes out of ſight ſpeedily.

D. 2. Guilt, and deceit are uſual adjuncts to luſt of uncleannes.

D. 3. Guiltful harlots ſlay not long in common places, where they may be diſcovered.

D. 4. Luſt teacheth ſouls to put off, and to put on any ſignals, which may either diſcover, or conceal them. Ver. 19.

2. In the fruſtration of Judah we have to note.

1. Judah's attempt for performance of promiſe unto the pretended harlot, And Judah ſent the kid of the goats by the hand of his friend the Adullamite, Cald. the ſame.

By the hand of his ſhepherd, &c. Sept. Herein.

1. The party paying, Judah who had promiſed.

2. The price, a kid of the goats, as before bargained.

3. The act of payment, he ſent it to her.

4. The Inſtrument by which, Hirah, his friend the Adullamite, a man, it ſeemeth, fit for ſuch an employment.

5. The end of ſending, to receive the pledge from the hand of the woman, that is, his ſignet, bracelets, and ſtaffe.

2. Judah's fruſtration, And he found her not, Sept. and Cald. ſame. She had given him the ſlip, and left the kid to himſelf, taking with her the pledge for further diſcovery. Ver. 20.

3. Hirah's inquiry, And, or then, he asked the men of that place, or her place, ſaying, where is the harlot, ſhe that was in Enaim, or in the open place by the ways, or wayes ſide? Sept. in Enan. —

Which was in the parting of the way. Cald. Herein.

1. His faithfulneſs to his friend.

2. His diligence in his buſineſs for inquiry.

3. His impudency in ſeeking for an whore, one of ſuch an infamous name; it ſeemeth, he was not aſhamed of it.

4. The men's answer, And they ſaid, there was no harlot in this place, Sept. and Cald. ſame. In plain terms they tell him, there was no ſuch as haunted that place, who prostituted themſelves to paſſengers they knew none, therefore he was not a jot the wiſer for them. Ver. 21.

5. Hirah's return of his meſſage and buſineſs to Judah. Ver. 22.

1. His acceſſe to him, And he returned to Judah, Sept. Cald. ſame. Having no hopes of finding what he went for, beſt it was to returne, and ſo he doth to his friend, who ſent him,

2. His account of the buſineſs.

1. From

1. From himſelfe, And he ſaid, I have not found her, Sept. Cald. ſame. That is, I have been where you appointed me, and looked about, but no ſuch perſon can be found there, to whome you ſent me.

2. From the men of the place, of whome he had inquired, and was informed, that no ſuch party was there. So he giveth his account to Judah. Ver. 22.

6. Judah's reſolution upon the whole, wherein note.

Ver. 24. 1. The matter of it, And Judah ſaid, let her take it to her. — Let her have them, Sept. — Let her take to her ſelfe the pledge, &c. Cald. ſeing ſhe hath ſo deſcended me, let her take what ſhe hath, I will trouble my ſelfe no more to inquire after it.

2. The reaſon of it.

1. His fear of publiſh ſhame, Leaſt we be for a contempt, or ſhame. — Leaſt we be derided. Sept. — Calde as Hebrew for a deriſion. That which moveth him to ſurceaſe, is the baſeneſs of the fact, and reproach, which uſually among the heathen followed it, though they were given up to it. The countrey will laugh at me ſaith Judah, if I ſhould further inquire, & therefore let it alone.

2. His paſt attempt to ſatisfy her, and fruſtration of it, Behold I ſent this kid, and thou haſt not found her. Sept. 3. The diſcovery of all this wickedneſs now followeth by Thamar's growing bigg, wherein are to be noted.

Ver. 24.

1. The time of diſcovery, And it was as the thirding of months, that is, about three moneths after. Cald. the ſame. — after three moneths, Sept. herein occurre.

1. The connection, after the fact committed, and Judah's labour to ſatisfy for his pleaſure, and hide his fault; next to this, providence order's to bring all to light.

2. The ſpace of time was ordinary, wherein conceptions began to become viſible to others; however whoriſh women ſometimes conceal it. After three moneths, now it begins to appear, that Thamar in her widowhood, had done naughtily.

2. The means of diſcovery, which was the ſame, or report, that came to Judah about his daughter, And it was told Judah ſaying, Thamar thy daughter in law hath play'd the harlot, and alſo beheld ſhe is with child by fornications, or whoredoms. Sept. Cald. ſame. — Nothing is difficult here, but theſe things are noted.

1. That this day Thamar was a widow.

2. That in her widowhood ſhe had knowledge of a man.

3. That now the fruit of it appeared by her growing.

4. That all this muſt be by whoredom.

5. All this was related to Judah.

3. Judah's ſentence on her hereupon.

And Judah ſaid bring her forth, and let her be burnt, Sept. and Cald. ſame.

1. The

1. The judge here is Judah not called to be a judge, but one that was willing to be rid of his daughter in law.

2. The judgement hasty.

1. To apprehend, and produce her.

2. To burn her without any further hearing of her cause, Ver. 24.

Quest. 1. By what right doth Judah give sentence, or was he a Judge?

Answer. 1. It is groundlessly conceived by some, that he was a Prince in that country, where Jacob was a sojourner. 2. More probable is it, that he pronounceth this judgement as an accuser; as it is common with us to say of murderers, let them be hanged, though we are not in the place of judges: so Judah speaketh to his servants, judging (as he thought) what she deserved, and so as a party injured (as he conceived) he commands her to be brought forth, unto the judge of the place, and to suffer according to the custom of the country in that sin.

Quest. 2. Was the sentence equal?

Answer. Surely no, for, 1. It was hasty and rash, without consideration of the fact, which afterward Judah saw.

2. It was cruel presently to destroy the woman, with the fruit of the womb. 3. It is to be much suspected that Judah had murderous thoughts against her, willing to be rid of his daughter in law, that Shelah his son might not have her.

Quest. 3. Why would he have her burnt?

Answer. 1. Not because she was Melchizedek's daughter as some Hebrews foolishly conjecture, for he (if Shem) died ten years before Jacob was borne, now he was a hundred years of age; if Thamar had been so old, she had been past children; & irrational is it to thinke, that she should be given to a husband of fourteen years old. This they conjecture from the law of punishing the Priests daughter, Lev. 21. 9. 2. It is more reasonably conceived to be the custome of the country, so to punish adultery.

Ver. 25.

4. Thamar's apologie, whereabout we may observe.

1. The time and occasion of it, She was brought forth. Cald. the same. She being brought forth, Sept. or after she was brought forth, viz. so be proceeded against by the Judges of the place; now and not before she makes her defence, though she might have made it known long before.

2. Her message to Judah.

1. By way of confession, And she sent unto her father in law, saying, by the man, whose these are, am I with child, Sept. and Cald. same. Where she telleth.

1. The crime, that she was with child in her widowhood.

2. The man by whom, characterized by signalls.

2. By way of detection to himselfe, And she said acknowledge, or discern, I pray thee, whose are these, the signet, the bracelets, and the staffe? Sept. the same.

Handkerchiefe for bracelets. Cald. Herein she detect's him, as formerly she confessed herselfe guilty.

1. She produceth testimony by his pledge left her.

2. She appealeth to his ingenuity to discern, and tell whether they were not his own. Ver. 25.

5. Judah's repeal of his rash sentence upon this detection made, wherein we have.

Ver. 26.

1. His ingenuous acknowledgement of his pledge, and therein of his fact, And Judah acknowledged, Sept. Cald. same. We adde them, that is the pledges, but that is not in the text; It is better, to the letter, he acknowledged, that is, all the truth, the fact, and the pledge; he did not deny it, as some might have done.

2. His justification of her, And he said, she is righteous before me, that is, more righteous then I, because that I gave her not to Shelah my son. Thamar is justified more then I, Sept. She is justified, she hath conceived by me. Cald. Here.

1. Sentence justifying, she is more righteous, not positively in respect of the fact, that was evil, but comparatively with respect to him, she was more to be justified then he.

2. The reason of the sentence, which was because Judah had not dealt justly with her, to give her to his son, and so was the first occasion of all this evil. So it falleth out rash Judges condemne themselves.

3. His restitution of his own repentance, And he added not any more to know her, Sept. Cald. same. Now he knew his fault, although he sinned ignorantly before, he addes not to the same the sin of knowledge. He brake off from this sin which was a note of repentance.

Quest. Did Judah give her to Shelah afterward?

Answer. 1. The Scripture is silent of it.

2. It is more probable, that Judah, and she both lived in widowhood.

3. It is certain Shelah, had a seed called Shelanites, which is thought he had by an other wife. Num. 26. 20.

Ver. 27.

1. The burthen with which she travelled is discovered, And it was in the time of her bearing or of her travel, or child birth: and behold twins were in her womb. Cald. the same. וילד וילד, הן זכר הן נקבה. &c. Sept. Herein. 1. The season noted, the time of bearing.

1. According to the set time, and course of women, at the nine months end, when she now came to the hour of her travel.

2. The burden or fruit discovered, wherewith she travelled, And behold twins were in her womb; a double birth, and that two sons at once, this may be considered.

1. With respect to Thamar, and it notes she was not barren, neither did the want of sons by her husbands lye upon her.

2. With respect to Judah and her; it shewed a double pledge of their sin & shame.

3. With respect to providence, it notes Gods free goodnes, to vouchsafe such fruit to creatures in their sinful ways. Ver. 27.

2. The danger of her travel discovered in the strangeness of the birth. Herein also are given.

1. The season of it, And it was in her bearing or travel, Sept. Cald. same. Now when pain came upon her, and throws to send forth the fruit of the womb; in her bearing paines.

Ver. 28.

2. The events, which are three, importing no small danger of the mothers life, as well as children.

1. The appearance of one to birth by putting out an hand.

1. The childs natural motion for its birth under providence, he gave out his hand; which is none of the safest way of coming into the world.

2. The midwives action, And the midwife took and bound upon his hand, a scarlet thread, saying, this came out first.

This will come out, Sept. Tooke a scarlet, and bound. &c. Cald. Here.

1. Her action, She took and bound a scarlet thread; a little difference is about the word וילד some reading a double thread, because it cometh from that, which signifieth two or double. Others from the double dye, read a scarlet thread; this generally is agreed unto.

2. Her end was doubtles to know the first borne the better. Some thinke the colour was a note of dignity belonging unto the first borne, but that is a little curious. Ver. 28.

11. The retreat of this, and breaking forth of the other, wherein.

1. The retreat of one, And it was as he turned his hand. Cald. the same.

Ver. 29.

As he gathered up his hand, Sept. So providence ordered the former to goe back; and give place, which must be more dangerous.

2. The birth of the other first, And behold his brother came out, or that, &c. And immediately his brother came out, Sept. Cald. the same.

1. The note of demonstration, to marke such a rare passage of providence.

2. The matter pointed, which is his birth. His brother came forth. God gave him the birthright.

3. The midwives observation heretupon And she said why, or how hast thou broken forth? upon thee the breach.

Why is the partition divided for thee? Sept. What great strength was in thee, that thou hast prevailed? Cald. Some difference there is about the pointing of this clause: some make it but one sentence, wherefore hast thou made this breach against thee? English Margin, how hast thou broken forth upon thee the breach? Answer, thou.

PPP Musen.

Museu. But most make two clauses.

1. Why, or how hast thou broken forth?
2. The breach be on thee, or is on thee, that is, is thine. In the former she admits the event, how could this be? This is a strange event, how couldst thou make such a breach, to come before thy brother? In the latter she either asserts some thing as sure, thine is the breach, or she wisheth some thing on the child; thine be the breach. That is, seeing thou hast got the precedency in breaking forth of the womb, thine be it.

4. The naming of the child hereupon, And his name was called Pharez, or he called, &c.

1. Judah, or every one called him by that name, Sept. Cald. same.
1. The imposer seemeth to be Judah upon the midwives speech.

2. The subject of imposition, the child.
3. The name imposed, noting his birth. Pharez, that is, a breach. So he is a memorial of that providence. Ver. 29.

3. The last event, which is the birth of that son, who first appeared, this adds further to the pains of the mother. Herein.

Ver. 30.

1. The order is noted, And afterward, Sept. Cald. same. So God ordered, that the first should be last.

2. The birth, His brother came out, who had the scarlet thread upon his hand, Sept. Cald. same.

1. His description of him by the midwives make.

2. His birth in safety, he came forth into the world.

3. His naming, And his name was called Pharez, or he called, Sept. Cald. same

1. The imposer of the name, Judah.

2. The subject of imposition, the child.

3. The name imposed, that which signifieth rising: as being risen, and should have first come forth. This is the plain relation of the history according to the letter. As for those that delight in the mysteries, and allegories, which some ancients have made of these two sons, I leave them to enjoy their own phantasies: I account it enough to finde the true meaning of the letter, which giveth us the minde of God in these matters. CHAP. XXXIX.

He had history of Judah, and his line being dispatched, Moses returneth to the narrative of the Churches affaires in Joseph, and the events befalling him. About which in this Chapter.

1. His condition in Egypt is related. Ver. 1. 6.

2. His temptation, that after sometime meets him there. Ver. 7. 20.

3. The ill use under providence. Ver. 21. &c.

In the first of these are these particulars observable.

1. His sale to be a servant. V. 1.

2. His respect with God in this condition. Ver. 2. 3.

3. His acceptance with his master. Ver. 4. 5. 6.

1. As to his buying and selling we have it recorded. Ver. 1. Which is to be referred to the last verse of the 37. Chapter, for continuance of the history in order. The whole 38 Chapter is inserted in a parenthesis. Now in the last of the 37. chapter, and the first of this we have to note.

1. His

1. His arrival into Egypt. And Joseph was made to goe downe or brought downe to Egypt, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The term of connection closeth this with the last verse of the 37. Chapter, and so note the series of the history with that time, and not the time of Judahs incestuous births, which was some yeares after Josephs selling by his brethren.

2. The matter connected, is the forcible carrying of Joseph into Egypt by such as bought him, he was brought downe to Egypt by them, as in the end of this 37 Chapter. Ver. 36.

2. The merchants selling are expressed by three names.

1. Ishmaelits, as here, and Chapter 37. 25.

2. Midianits Chapt. 37. 28.

3. Medanits, Chapt. 37. 36. All these were of a kindred out of Abrahams loines, and joined in trade, and therefore names are used promiscuously among them. The Calde calleth them Arabians, as being a mixed people.

2. The buyer of Joseph set forth.

1. By his name Potiphar.

2. By his nation, an Egyptian.

3. By his place and office.

1. An Eunuch, a courtier, or officer in general.

2. Chief of the slaughter men, or provost marshall. This man bought him of the hands of the Ishmaelits.

3. The merchandize bought and sold, was Joseph, a poor innocent youth, whom God had designed for great use in his Church. The price is not mentioned, therefore we need not stick upon that to inquire into it further.

4. The translating of him into anothers right, he was sold, and bought: and so his condition seemeth now at first to be slavish. He was the price of Potiphars money. Ver. 1.

2. His respect with God in his servile estate is observable. Ver. 2. 3. Wherein we may note,

Ver. 2.

1. The primitive, and principal argument of Gods respect to him in his low condition, which is his presence with him: so it is read, And Jehovah was with Joseph.

The Lord, Sept. Cald. the word of the Lord was for the help of Joseph. Now this prefatice was not onely of common providence, as he is in all the world, but of special indulgence unto Joseph in his low estate. The presence of his grace is that here intended, by which he discovereth,

1. His relation unto him now, that he was his God.

2. His acceptance of him, though now a slave.

3. His assistance of him in all his needs.

4. His ordering and ruling of him in the present state unto future good. Thus the Lord was with him, not disdaining his servile condition: So the Calde read's well, the word of the Lord, even his son, was for Josephs help.

2. The effect of this, the next evidence of Gods regard of him, and that is twofold here expressed.

1. His prosperous successe in his place, And he was a man prospering.

A fortunate man. Ver. 2. 21. Sep. Cald. the same. He is here called a man, though but a youth, and this is opened, wherein he was a man, as to his wife, and successful carriage in his place; he handled all that was committed to him dexterously, in wisdom, and to good successe. This was the immediate effect of Gods presence with him.

2. His fidelity in abiding with his master, as well as acting successfully for him. And he was in the house of his master the Egyptian. Cald. the same. In the house of his Lord the Egyptian, Sept.

1. The subject spoken of, is Joseph, now a slave.

2. The correlate is the Egyptian his Lord: from whom he might pretend lawfulness of escape.

3. The habitude of this servant to his master in respect of his relation, he was in the house, that is, he kept constantly with his master, in the household employments appointed to him. House here is understood by some in opposition to employments without doors, in the fields, &c. So that the same is, as he was fitted, for more ingenious business; so he continued in the same with his Lord, though an Egyptian. Ver. 2.

3. The evidence of this Gods regard unto him, as made out to Potiphar, is also added. Ver. 3. Herein we have also to observe.

Ver. 3.

1. The cognisance taken of it, And his Lord saw. Cald. the same. Knew. Sept. 1. The partie taking knowledge, Potiphar now Lord, or master to Joseph.

2. The discovery taken, it was knowledge, he saw, that is by many visible, and evident arguments, he could not, but be convinced of Gods respect to Joseph.

2. The object of this discovery is twofold.

1. Gods presence with Joseph.
2. Gods prospering of him, and all that was in his hand, and that he managed for his master, Potiphar saw eminently, such a servant had a special blessing from God.

Quest. 1. May not slaves bought, and sold make escape from masters?

Ans. The case may admit distinction.

1. Of such as are forced to serve.
2. Of such as willingly also subject themselves, and promise fealty to their masters; in the former case it is as if they were taken in war, and they may follow providence, making offer of escape unto them; not so in the latter.

Quest. 2. Did Potiphar know the Lord? How could he know els, that he respected Joseph?

Ans. 1. Knowledge of a God doubtless he had by the light of nature. 2. He might learn something of the true God by Joseph. 3. All outward happiness men usually ascribe to God, and so doth he. Ver. 3.

Learn from it.

D. 1. The greatness of God disdaines not to be with the lowly of his servants. God and Joseph are together.

D. 7. Gracious servants make house, and all affaires prosper unto ungracious masters.

D. 8. God maketh wicked men to see, that they prosper by reason of his servants. Ver. 3.

3. The last thing recorded in the first general is Josephs acceptance with his master, about which we have to consider.

1. The arguments of his masters respect, these.

1. Potiphar's countenance to him, And Ver. 4. Joseph found grace in his eyes. — Before his Lord. Sept. — Found mercy, &c. Cald.

1. The favourite, Joseph, a poor bought servant.

2. The favourer, Potiphar, a mighty man in Egypt.

3. The favour, was outward respect, and admission to some nearer converse with him. The phrase is proper to the Hebrews, to note acceptance into some more then ordinary favour.

2. Potiphar's admission of him nearer to himself, And he ministered to him. Cald. the same. — He pleased him. Sept.

Quest. Did not he serve Potiphar before?

Ans. Yea surely, but at a more remote distance, and inferior employments about the house; but now he takes him more near to attend his person onely, as one of his chamber, or chief attendants. Thus was his first step to preferment.

3. Potiphar's exalting of him in his house, And he made him visitor, or overseer over his house, and he had all, he gave it into his hand, or all that he gave into his hand. Sept. and Cald. same. In these we have to observe about preferment.

1. The place unto which he was advanced, it seemeth to be steward over his house. The word note's, he made him visit over his house, that is, to oversee, and guide the several inferior servants, and affaires thereof, which, with us, is the Stewards work. — And he gave it into his hand. Sept.

2. The charge he committed to him, All that he had, all as to his household-affaires, and charge, he gave it into the hand of Joseph to be ordered, and managed naged by him, though he were an Hebrew, a stranger, a servant, a prisoner; yet thus God orders Potiphar to pitch on him before any of his kin, or nation, to trust all with him. Ver. 4.

2. The issue and consequents of this respect are discovered in the relation, whereof.

Ver. 5.

1. The time premised, And it was from then, that he made him overseer in his house, and over all that he had. Cald. to the same. — And he gave it into his hand. Sept. After he was let or constituted. From this very time the Spirit noteth the prosperous events to Potiphar: this then is notable.

2. The issue related.

1. Blessing on his.

1. Generally, And Jehovah blessed the house of the Egyptian for Josephs sake, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The blesser, Jehovah.

2. The blessed, Potiphar, an Egyptian, far enough from God.

3. The blessing, all outward prosperity.

4. The means of blessing, Joseph, for his sake God did it.

2. Specially, expressed two wayes, And the blessing of Jehovah was upon all that he had in the house and in the field, Sept. and Cald. same. See that the blessing was two wayes eminent to him.

1. In all his household affairs within doors, all went well and prospered, peace was upon his house.

2. In all that he had in the field, all his herd, and flocks, &c. All thrived, and multiplied eminently to special observation, Ver. 5.

Ver. 6.

2. The issue further was security and quietnes to Potiphar. And he left all that he had in the hand of Joseph, and he knew not with him any thing, but the bread, which he was eating. Sept. and Cald. to the same. And he was eating. Sept. Two things are here remarkable.

1. Potiphar's full resignation of all to Josephs care, which notes his confidence.

2. Potiphar's cognisance of nothing, but of his bread, which he did eat, that is, as to trouble or distract himself, which noteth his security in the fidelity of Joseph. There is some variety in rendering that, he knew nothing but the bread. Some Hebrews foolishly note the bread to be a metaphor, signifying his wife, but it is groundles; others more rationally thinke, it may mean, Potiphar's leaving all to Joseph, but the care of his bread, that is, as to matter of eating, and drinking, of which other care was taken, as is thought, because Egyptians eat not with the Hebrews. But that, which seemeth to be plainest is, that Potiphar tooke care for nothing but to eat and drinke, all things were so well managed by Joseph; and so it noteth his security.

3. The character of Josephs person is here added as the occasion of his following temptation, And Joseph was fair in forme, and fair in countenance. — καλὸς τὸ εἶδος, ἀγαθὸν τὸ εὖ εὐφραδὲς fair in face and sight, that is in short, proper for his person, and beautiful for his countenance. The temptation herein recorded befalling Joseph was twofold.

1. A temptation to sin. Ver. 7. 12.

2. A temptation by affliction. 13. 20.

In the first of these we have to consider, three eminent assaults, and repulses. The first is declared. Ver. 7. 8. 9. Wherein note.

1. The onset of the temptation, Ver. 7. whereabout.

Ver. 7.

1. The time is noted, And it was after these things. After these words, So the Seventy, and Cald; and so Hebrew also, but that the term is used for things as well as words, all sorts of events. The time then is pointed out in the event; that is, after Joseph was thus advanced, had so much favour, made the Egyptians house to prosper; was steward of his masters house, or as a second master: not when he was first bought, and sold for a slave; some time intervening, and when he was now chiefe in the house, next to Potiphar, this temptation is ordered at this time.

2. The cause of the temptation in the party tempting, And, or that his Lords wife lifted up her eyes unto or upon Joseph. — Cald, the same. — His Lords wife cast her eyes, &c. Sept.

1. The sex noted, a woman.

2. The relation, a wife, even his Masters wife.

3. The principle of action, an unclean heart.

4. The action itselfe, she lifted up her eyes upon Joseph, adulterous eyes they were: No doubt but that at several times she had seen him before, but this was a violent lustful sight, sent out from an adulterous heart, to ingage him to wickednes.

3. The temptation itself, And she said, lye with me, Cald, the same. — Sleep with me, Sept. Wherein are obvious.

1. Her allurements as a woman.

2. Her power, as a mistress.

3. Her impudencie in venting her unclean desires to an innocent man. No question, but other inticements went before, Ver. 7.

Note we thence.

D. 1. Times of advance in the World may prove times of most dangerous assaults of temptation to Saints.

D. 2. Gods blessings at home and abroad, prove occasions of sin unto naughty hearts.

D. 3. Unclean hearts have their times to set their eyes on wicked works.

D. 4. Treacherous lust may turn a wife from a husband to a servant.

D. 5. Unclean hearts and eyes, will easily make unclean tongues.

D. 6. Lust in whorish Spirits is impudent, inviting chaste hearts to vilest uncleannes. Ver. 7.

2. The repulse now followeth, V. 8. 9. Wherein we have to observe.

1. His refusal of the motion from the unchaste woman, And, or, but he refused, but he would not, Septuag. and Cald. same. The term connective here is best read adversatively, which carrieth in it more disdain, and abhorrency of such a solicitation; she allured him to sleep with her, but he rejects her wicked motion: It noteth his Spirit set opposit to hers; he abhors it.

2. The reasons of his refusal offered to his mistress, very forcible to make her with shame desist, but that lust was brutish, & would hear no reason: these are four following.

1. He reasons from the trust which his master put in him, and confidence, which he had of him; and should I be perfidious to my master, and abuse my trust. And he said unto his Lords wife, behold my Lord knoweth not what is with me in his house, and all that he hath, he hath given into my hand.

If my Lord know not any thing in his house for my sake, Sept. — Any of those things, which are in his house. Cald. In the rendering of this reason we may note.

1. His return to the tempter, He said unto his Lords wife, for her unclean solicitation, he returneth pure and wholesome words to abate her unruly lust.

2. The matter propoed to her, which was the confidence and security, which her husband, and his Lord had now in him: he hath trusted me with all, and committed his whole house, and family into my hand, to be in my power, and at my disposal; and now his heart rests on me, that I will not injure him; should I then be so perfidious, as for all this trust to deal so wickedly as to defile his bed? Ver. 8.

3. He reasons from his power delegated unto him, Not he is great in this house before me, neither hath he kept back any thing from me, but thee. — And there is not in this house, neither doth he take from me any thing, but thee. Sept. Cald. as the Hebr. There is a little difference about the pronoun noun, he, some read it relative, denoting Potiphar his Lord, not he himselfe, as greater in this house, as to the rule of it, then I, he had given all his lordly power over the family to me; others read it indefinite, there is not he, that is, not any one in the family greater then I, &c. In this reason he supposeth a twofold power in his Lord. 1. Herilem. 2. Martalem; and thence he thus reasons.

1. From the largenes of his power delegated as to command over the family, my Lord himselfe hath given me so much, as that he hath not more himselfe, then I have.

2. From his limitation, his marital power he hath reserved to himselfe, and reserved nothing from me but thee, and should I so abuse my Lord?

3. He reasons from his relation, Because thou art his wife. Septuag. Cald. same.

This is the reason suggested, why Potiphar gave Joseph no power over her, neither justly could he, because she was his wife by Covenant, and therefore incommuniicable to another: so he urgeth it unto her. Thou art my Lords wife by the Covenant of God given into his right onely, and shouldst thou do so treacherously, and I so wickedly to sin against thee, and against my Lord?

4. He reasons from the greatnes of the sin, against her temptation, And how shall I do this great evil, or wickedness? Cald. the same. — How shall I do this evil word, or work? Sept. inigo.

1. He considers his own person, I, how can I dare yeeld, so much ingaged to my Lord?

2. The thing thou movest is great sin, Adultery, against Gods command, and Covenant of marriage, against my own body and thine, against the family of my Lord, and threatnings of God: I would not do the least sin, and should I commit this great one?

3. The injury, & therefore the impossibility of fact, How shall I do this? I cannot, I dare not; thus he repells temptation.

4. His last reason is his religion, and respect unto God, And how shall I sin against God? — Before God? Sept. and Cald. In this is the weightiest reason as to men that know God, though perhaps of no worth with a lascivious woman; but upon Josephs own heart it is a bearing argument: This thing to which thou dost solicit me, is against the command of my God, and dare I sin against God, he that hath cared for me from my mothers breasts, he that is holy & pure, for whom I must keep my body a pure temple; should I defile my self, and sin against him? Now though this were a sin immediately against the neighbour, yet it is transgression against God in his law; yea, and such as this was, to have dealt so treacherously, were an high provocation against the Lord, as David crieth, against thee, thee, &c. Pl. 51. 4. Thus for present he puts of the first assault. Ver. 9.

D. 1. Grace kept to worke refuseth with disdain the strongest temptations to uncleannes.

D. 2. Gracious hearts are ready to return saving instruction for unclean suggestion to the tempter.

D. 3. It is rational as well as Christian to all unclean tempters to consider reason. Behold.

D. 4. Confidence, and trust of Lords in their servants should make them more faithful, and unwilling to injure them. Ver. 8.

D. 5. Power delegated to largest bounds should be improved to the greatest good of superiors.

D. 6. Power deposital may be delegated to others, but martial, or husband power to none.

D. 7. Conjugal Covenant maketh the power of man and wife reciprocal.

D. 8. Breach of marriage Covenant by adultery is most grievous wickednes.

D. 9. Treacherous adultery carrieth a special malignity against God, and is observed by him.

D. 10. True religion towards God, makes men fear to sin, and provoke the eyes of his glory. Ver. 9.

2. The next assault, and repulse follow. Ver. 10. Herein.

1. The pertinacious continuance of the whorish woman is eminent, And it was as she spake to Joseph day by day to lye by her, to bewitch her. Cald. the same. — To sleep with her, or to be together with her, Sept.

1. The tempters solicitations, notwithstanding so rational, and just repulse, she still speak's and solicits Joseph to sin.

2. The instance and perpetuity of her incitation, day by day.

3. The matter of solicitation, that which he denied, to lye by her, or be with her.

2. Josephs repulse againe, But he answered not unto her. — He obeyed her not, not, Sept. — He rested not in her. Cald. That is, he gave no way to this soule suggestion, no nor to be in her company, least he might increase the temptation. V. 10.

"D. 1. Lustful hearts are pertinacious in the pursuit of their unclean desires. Tempt every day."

"D. 2. Grace is too hard for seconds in solicitation to uncleannes."

"D. 3. Gracious hearts refuse not only the greatest sin, but the occasions to it. Ver. 10."

3. The last assault of lust, and repulse of grace followeth. Ver. 11. 12. Wherein we may note.

1. The attempt of lust, and therein observable.

1. The opportunity, set forth in two particulars.

Ver. 11.

1. And it was in such a day as this, that he went into the house to do his work. — Sept. the same. — To seek writings or bills of accounts. Cald. This was the season of Joseph's necessary employment at home; which she well knew, and therefore watcheth her opportunity.

2. That which maketh the opportunity more advantageous to her wicked designe, was the absence of the people of the house; And there was not a man of the men of the house there in the house. — Cald. the same. — None of the house were within, Sept. This absence gave fairer advantage, there being no witnesses by. It is said by Josephus, that it was a great festival of the Egyptians, and thereupon Potiphar, and his men were absent, his wife making excuse to stay at home, upon pretence of sickness: but nothing of this is written by Moses; therefore no stress is to be laid upon it; only it is certaine such a time was ordered by providence, that she had a fair occasion to discover her wicked heart more freely. Ver. 11.

2. The assault made by her upon Joseph, two ways.

Ver. 12.

1. By deed, And she caught him by his garment. — She drew him by his garments, Sept. — She caught his garments. Cald. Here is the violence of lust in a wicked woman, to force a man if she could: it was a signe of an imperious whores woman grown shameles.

2. By word againe, Saying, lye with me. Cald. the same. — Sleep with me, Sept. It was her former solicitation, but now aggravated by impudencie, and multiplying of the same. See the violence, and shamelesnes of lust.

2. The repulse now againe made by Io-seph, And he left his garment in her hands, and fled, and went forth, or got him out, Sept. and Cald. same. In this last repulse are to be observed.

1. Joseph's relinquishing his garments, rather then to indanger his grace.

2. His escape, he flyeth out of the snare of an whorish woman.

3. His breaking out of doors, not induring wickednes in the house. In all which the power, and victory of grace is eminent, Ver. 12.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. The times of mens exercise about their honest employments, may prove their seasons of temptation to them."

D. 2. Absence of witnesses, and such as may hinder lust, is a fair opportunity for it."

D. 3. Providence ordereth both these together sometimes, to try his own, and discry wicked hearts. Ver. 11."

D. 4. Lustful hearts upon such occasions grow impudent to tempt by word and deed."

D. 5. Whorish lust catcheth garments, holds routes, and insnares soules with its temptations."

D. 6. Gracious soules rather loose their garments, then indanger their graces."

D. 7. Grace flyeth from temptation, when it cannot cease it, and make it still."

D. 8. Grace chooseth to be out of doors with innocency rather then in the house with sin. Ver. 12."

2. Joseph being by grace delivered from the temptation to sin, and kept innocent; now providence ordereth a temptation for him by affliction, something harder then what he suffered from his brethren. Hereabout we have to consider.

1. The occasion of it, which was his flight from sin, being insinuated by a whorish woman. Ver. 13.

2. The cause of it, the most false, and unjust crimination of him by his mistres.

1. To the family, such as were in the house. Ver. 14. 15.

2. To her husband. Ver. 16. 17. 18.

3. The trial of affliction itself. V. 19. 20. To the first, the occasion of this trouble was Joseph's flight from sin, and care to to keep himselfe spotles toward God and man, by rejecting the enticements of an adulterous woman. Whereabout note.

1. The adulteresses sense of her frustration, And it was when she saw, Sept. Cald. same. — In summe, after all her solicitations, and at last her violent assault, she saw she availed nothing upon Joseph's heart to yield to her motion, this was evident by two things, which she saw.

1. That he had left his garment in her hand, Sept. and Cald. same. That is, she had now experiences, that Joseph was inexorable, and would loose his coat rather then his chastity.

2. And that he was fled forth. — Cald. the same. — Was fled and gon forth, Sept. She perceived now, that he was escaped, and had scorned her filthy motions, and threw her behinde his backe; her unclean love hereupon stops and takes occasion hence to turn into the bitterest hatred of him even unto death; and Satan is not wanting to assist the wit, and lust of such an unclean soul, now to attempt his life, when she could not draw him to sin; she hereupon resolves to be the first accuser.

D. 1. Disappointments of lust occasion it to rage, and turns it into madness."

D. 2. Innocencies flight from sin may occasion his misery."

D. 3. Sight of lusts defeat by chastity, stirr's up the wicked to accuse the righteous. Ver. 13."

2. The cause of Joseph's trouble is the harlots crimination of him, and that was two ways.

1. To the houshold, & in her address to them note.

1. Her outcry to call them in, And she called, or then she cryed to the men of her house, and spake to them saying, Cald. the same. — She called those who were in the house, Sept. Herein occur.

1. The season, immediately upon Joseph's escape, she is first in accusing, who was all in sinning.

2. The act, she crieth out as a woman assaulted.

3. The persons called, the men of her house, or the servants generally, to come to her rescue, such as were left.

2. Her charge upon her husband, See he hath brought in to us an Hebrew man to mock us, Sep. & Cal. same. Herein we have.

1. The scope of her outcry to them, come, see, consider, and justifie me, she would make all fair to them, and therefore sets before them to see.

2. The matter presented in several things about the present fact.

1. Her husbands oversight, or worse, He, that is, Potiphar, hath brought into us, that is, taken into his house, an Hebrew man, spoken by contempt, a bafe captive Hebrew, whom she wooed, now she brands, and this is the issue, he is brought in to mock us: not that Potiphar intended it; but that proved the issue of it, as she pretends. The plural (us) seemeth to ingage them in her quarrel, he is set over you, and hath abused me.

3. Her charge on Joseph, He came in unto me to lye with mee, Cald. the same. — Saying, I will sleep with thee, Sept. Here.

1. The accuser is the very woman, who solicited him to sin.

2. The accused Joseph; whose heart abhorred this evil, and flew from it.

3. The crime charged, a rape, or violent attempt of his mistres bed. In which act we may perceive in her.

1. Subtily in accusing another better then herselfe.

2. Malice, her pretended love being turned into hatred.

3. Impudency, in that she chargeth him with that sin so boldly, whereof she alone was guilty. But what more shameles then the whores forehead? Shame should confound her for unclean solicitations, and she brands poor Joseph, who denied her, as guilty of a rape.

4. Her justification of herselfe, And I cried with a great voyce, &c, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein she periwades her people.

1. Of her loyalty, she cryed vehemently, when she was attempted; a foul lye. Ver. 14.

2. Of Joseph's treachery, And it was, Ver. 15, as he heard, that I lifted up my voyce and cried, that he left his garment with me, and fled & got him out, Sept. and Cald. same.

Here is a fair tale, but an abominable untruth. She cried indeed but after was gon, and he left his garment to avoyd her unclean violence, & not upon her clamors; but so the adulteresse wipes her mouth, and faith, she hath not sinned, nor done wickednes. Ver. 15. This no doubt made the ignorant servants exclaime with full mouth upon Joseph, as a most vile, and sinful wretch to make such an attempt.

2. Her accusation of him in like manner unto her husband, maketh up the cause of his trouble; her artifice herein is visible,

1. In laying up his garment, which was the token of his innocency, to make it a testimony of violence against him, And she kept, or layd up his garment by her, until his Lord came to his house, Sept. and Cald. same. Thus Satan instructs her to maintaine her wickednes, and doubtles she prepares crocodile teares enough to present it to her husband at his returne. Ver. 16.

2. In laying home her charge, wherein.
1. The form of words, the same as to the servants before, And she spake unto him according to these words, saying, Sept. Cald. same. She telleth the same tale.

2. In the matter, the same things.
1. She criminales Joseph, The Hebrew servant, which thou broughtest unto us, came in unto me to mock me. Sept. Cald. same. wherein we read.

1. Her vilifying of Joseph, under the style of an Hebrew servant, or slave.

2. Her reflection on her husband for his respect unto him, thou broughtest him into the house.

3. Her charge of violence to ravish her, he came in to mock me, that is, by such wickedness, to make me, and you a reproach, as being corrupted by such filthiness, And said, I will sleep with thee, Sept. Ver. 7.

2. She justifieth herself.

1. That she cried out as being oppressed, And it was as lifted up my voice, and cried, And as he heard. Sept. herein she must be judged innocent, by crying.

2. That Joseph gave these testimonies of his guilt,

1. He left his garment with me,

2. That he fled out; and by these, which were done to save his innocency, must he now be accused as guilty; So God orders it to him; so the Devil instructs her. Ver. 18.

3. Now followeth the trial itself in his masters dealing with him, after this tale was told him, and it is declared in two things.

Ver. 19. 1. In his wrath that did arise, And it was when his Lord heard the words of his wife, which she spake unto him, saying, according to these words, or after this manner, did thy servant unto me, then his anger was kindled. Cald. the same. He was wroth with anger. Sept.

1. His audience.

2. His credence of his wives charge.

3. His indignation thereupon burning, are the contents of this verse; this was one sad tryall upon Joseph, his masters burning wrath, who had so much favoured him before. Ver. 19.

2. In his prosecution of him as a malefactor. And Josephs Lord took him, and committed him into the tower-house, a place where the Kings prisoners were bound; and he was there in the tower-house. Cald. the same.

1. His apprehension, his Lord took him, by some ministers of justice, as licitors, or the like.

2. His commitment; he was put into a sad prison, safe, and grievous enough, where the King punished offenders against him.

3. His durance, there he was kept in hardship a while, being put into the stocks, and shackles about his heels, Pf. 105. 18. 19. as the Psalmist expresseth, though not mentioned here, Whose feet they hurt with fetters, he was laid in iron. Thus poor Joseph suffers for his innocency, until God appeare. Ver. 20.

Quest. 1. Did Joseph say nothing in his own defence?

Answ. 1. Nothing is here recorded, the Spirit minding the more to set out his suffering like a lamb. 2. Yet it is to be presumed, that he did deny the charge, and plead his innocency, as he might, so he speaks afterward to Pharaohs butler. Here I have done nothing, that they should put me into the dungeon. Chap. 40. 15. But the first try of a wife, with fair pretences, cuts off all defence from Joseph to any purpose.

Quest. 2. Why was not Joseph put to death for such a charge as this?

Answ. 1. Surely this was the mark, which the wicked woman aimed, 2. The hand of God was that alone, which put that restraint upon Potiphar, and ordered his imprisonment to his preferment; where God will save, men shall not destroy.

D. 1. The first at stuning will be first at accusing, though most falsely, so the Devil prompts her.

D. 2. Lust shuns witness to its in-joyments, but calleth it in to justify upon disappointments.

D. 3. Lust makes souls impudent, and of brazen forehead, justifying themselves.

D. 4. Lust when it cannot get its delight by woeing, labours to make it odious by branding.

D. 5. Wicked souls stick not to charge nearest relations, for making their own cause fairer.

D. 6. It is the property of guile to make others of their party, for more security. So doth she the servants.

D. 7. Lust is a shameless liar, and chargeth the innocent to the highest for its own justifying.

D. 8. Whorish spirits may pretend to cry for honesty, when they cry for shame. Ver. 14.

D. 9. The garment left to avoid sin sin, may be turned against the innocent to prove guilt. God yet seeth it unposited.

D. 10. Flight from evil may be charged as a flight for it, by ungodly wretches. Ver. 15.

D. 11. Guilty souls are apt to keep false evidences by them to condemn the righteous.

D. 12. Subtily and malice the Devil supplie's unto wicked hearts to persecute Gods Saints. Ver. 16.

D. 13. The same lyes over and over, will whorish spirits tell to destroy the innocent.

D. 14. Double reproaches doth lust cast upon honest souls, who do not obey it. Hebrew slave.

D. 15. Uncleanes maketh souls vile, and a scorn in the judgement of barlots themselves.

D. 16. Hardened lust is impudent, in justifying itself, and charging the innocent. Ver. 17. 18.

D. 17. Hearing one party without another, is apt to pervert men in judgement. So Potiphar.

D. 18. Foolish husbands are apt to be too credulous towards treacherous wives.

D. 19. Upon such partial hearing, men are apt to be angry, where no cause is given.

D. 20. Burning wrath usually turns away the ear from its best friends, wrongfully accused. Ubi ira ob-tinet, præsertim in hac causa, ibi natus est, non auri, furor, non ratio. Musc.

D. 21. Favours of wicked men may be soon turned to frowns, upon groundless charges. Ver. 19.

D. 22. The purest innocency may be apprehended and imprisoned by men, as guilty upon false accusation.

D. 23. The worst of prisons is thought fit for the best of men by sinners.

D. 24. Such humblings God orders to his saints before exalting. V. 24.

3. The last general of the Chapter followeth: which is the issue of these temptations, whereunto God order's them, while Joseph was in prison, which was the mitigation of his sorrow by some mixture of favour, and respect with it. This issue is evident.

1. In the principal and primitive favour exprest to him at this time, from God, in two things.

1. In his presence with him, so it is written, And Jehovah was with Joseph. The Lord, Sept. The word of the Lord was for an help to Joseph. Cald. In which passage are considerable.

1. The connection of it to the precedent history, he was there in the prison, and, or, but the Lord was with him.

2. The matter immediately connected, Jehovah was with him, which noteth Gods presence: of which here may be observed.

1. The nature of it, which is the manifestation of his union with him through grace. So Ver. 2.

2. The fruit of it, and that is to share in the same lot with Joseph, to suffer, what he suffers with him.

3. The duration of it.

1. From Canaan to Egypt in sale.

2. In Potiphars house, when he was a captive.

3. In the prison, where his soul enters into irons. God is with him still, sold with him, inflaved with him, accused with him, imprisoned with him, God will be in the same condition with his Joseph, Isaiah. 63. 9.

2. In Gods influence upon Joseph, And extended mercy to him, or, bent his kindness, or grace unto him. And he poured out his mercy, Sept. He dealt mercy with him. Cald.

1. The connective term shews that Gods presence was not in vain, but it did work this effect here mentioned.

2. The effect itself, Gods extending grace or mercy, whereof.

1. The nature of it is the fruit of Gods Spirit in inward grace, faith, patience, contentation, joy of the Holy ghost, &c. This was good indeed.

2. The intention of it, God bent, and inclined this grace to him.

3. The extension or measure, he enlarged all this grace abundantly in Joseph.

2. The mitigation of Josephs trial appears in the secondary favour, which God worketh for him with man, exprest in three steps or degrees.

1. In the countenance of the keeper, And gave him favour, or, grace in the eyes of the chief keeper of the tower-house, or rather, he gave him grace in the eyes, &c. He gave him favour before the chief gaoler, Sept. Bowells before the master of the prison. Cald. Some difference is in the grammatical reading of a pronoun inclitic.

Q992 — 111

Which is read, to his favour, that is, to Joseph; but it is conceived, that (to), were more proper for the relative, or if the inclytick had been to the verb, then it were to be read, he gave him. But it being an affixe to grace; it seems just to read it (he) that is, God gave his own grace, or favour in the eyes of the keeper, whereby he was moved in bowells to Joseph; and so the affixe is a Pronoun possessive. The issue is the same. And the first effect of Gods presence with, and grace in Joseph, is, that the heart and eyes of the chief keeper were turned for good to Joseph. It may possibly be also, that after some time Joseph did declare his innocency unto him, whereupon God moveth him to bowells towards him. Ver. 21.

Ver. 22.

2. In the trust, which the chief Gailer puts to Joseph. And the chief keeper of the tower-house committed to Josephs hand, all the prisoners that were in the tower-house, and all that they did there he was the doer of it. Cald. the same. — He gave the prison, and all that were brought into prison, &c. Sept. Herein also observe.

1. The order from favour to trust given in the connection.
2. The person trusting, the chief gailer, who upon Potiphars charge had dealt rigorously with Joseph.
3. The parties trusted. Joseph, a poor prisoner.
4. The trust itself, all the charge of the prisoners.
5. The discharge of it, he did and ordered all things. Ver. 22.
3. In his security, no less then Potiphar had in Joseph formerly, Neither did the chief keeper of the tower-house look to anything as all in his hand: because Jehovah was with him, and that which he did, Jehovah made it to prosper. — He knew nothing for his sake. — Prospered in his hands. Sept. — Saw no fault in his hand, because the word of the Lord was his help, and what he did the Lord directed. Cald. herein note.

1. A large expression of favour to Joseph from the keeper, that his heart rested in him, he looked after nothing, that is, with a suspicious eye, all was left about the prison into Josephs hand securely.

2. A strong reason for it.

1. From Gods presence with Joseph, of which before.

2. From Gods blessing of him; he made all his works in his charge to prosper, all went well with the chief keeper. Ver. 23.

We conclude.

D. 1. Gods help is not farre behind mens oppression of his saints.

D. 2. Gods presence in grace by union with his Saints is certainly vouchsafed in their lowest estates.

D. 3. By his gracious presence God himselfe afflicted, accused, and imprisoned with his Saints.

D. 4. God is not weary to abide with his Saints in the whole course of their affliction.

D. 5. Gods gracious presence is not without his gracious influence upon his people.

D. 8. God affords, not onely intended, but extended grace, according to the measure of affliction.

D. 9. Not onely inward grace, but outward, doth God worke from men to his Saints in their distresses.

D. 10. It is all Gods grace, and bowells, which men shew to oppressed Saints. God giveth it.

D. 11. God can make churlish gaolers become courteous favourers of his innocent prisoners. V. 21.

D. 12. When God favours his oppressed, Enemies do not onely favour them, but trust them.

D. 13. God can make his innocent prisoners become keepers; and give them liberty in prison.

D. 14. A gracious hand is fit for any trust committed to it.

D. 15. God makes his prisoners sometimes the best instruments to order the affairs of keepers. Ver. 22.

D. 16. God maketh mens hearts favour in his Saints, when they favour, and trust them.

D. 17. Gods presence with his in prison, makes them so much honoured by their oppressors.

D. 18. There is prosperity in prison, which the Lord giveth to his, and to others by them.

D. 19.

D. 19. Such prosperity maketh Gods Saints desirable, when they are prisoners.

D. 20. Gods Josephs are no losers by being in prison. They are blessed and give blessing also. Ver. 23. A precious example is this to all young men as well as others to study holines, and keep innocency, no prisons can do hurt to such.

Thus farre of the issue of Josephs temptation, while he was in prison, 1. In respect of God. 2. In respect of the chief keeper.

CHAP. XL.

3. A further Issue of this tryal is ordered by providence unto Joseph while he was in durance, and that was Gods gift to him for understanding secret events, which the Lord revealed by dreames, and interpreting them.

It is no great losse to be a prisoner, and a Prophet together, as God made Joseph. The declaration of this issue containeth in this chapter these heads.

1. The occasion of declaring this gift in Joseph, which as recorded is twofold.

1. More remote, the imprisonment of some. Ver. 1. 4.

2. More immediate, the prisoners dreams. Ver. 5. 16.

2. The exercise of this gift. Ver. 12. 15. 18. 19.

3. The event of all related. V. 20. 23.

1. In the occasion more remote, we have to note.

Ver. 1.

1. The order of the history, And it was after these things, words, Heb. Sept. Cald. Which in all these languages signify matters, or events: that is, after Joseph was sold to Potiphar, preferred by him, accused by his wife, and cast into prison, after God was with him, and gave him favour in the eyes of the chief keeper, and made things to prosper in his hands. Next to these events, providence orders the following matters, to be for Josephs good. God keeps his own methods.

2. The matter of the history, which containeth first the things, that follow, and herein are.

1. The report of the fall of two officers of Pharaoh, The butler of the King of Egypt, and the Baker sinned against their Lord the King of Egypt. Cald. the same. Αρτοποιος, Septuag. Chief wine skin.

ker, chief bread-maker. Herein that, which giveth the first occasion is the offence of these here mentioned, where we have.

1. The parties noted by their offices, butler, and Baker, read by the Seventy, chiefs, probably such as overlook others in these services, for they have an higher title. Ver. 2.

2. Their fact, they sinned, or offended.

3. The parties against whom, Pharaoh himselfe, King of Egypt, their Lord. What their offence was is not named; the Levites, some of them, childishly tell us ked the one lett a fly be in Pharaohs cup, the other gave him bread with gravel: but these are fables; the offence doubtles was capital, or at least so suspected, by Pharaohs dealing with them; it matters not to know the particular. Ver. 1.

2. The anger of Pharaoh hereupon is related, And Pharaoh was wroth against two of his eunuchs, against the chiefs of the butlers, and against the chief of the Bakers. Sept. the same as before: — Two Princes, &c. Cald. Wherein we have.

1. The subject of this passion, Pharaoh king of Egypt, and a kings wrath is as the roaring of a lion. Pro. 19: 12.

2. The passion itselfe, he was angry, or wrathfully displeased.

3. The object, these two great officers forenamed. This helps on the occasion of the discovery of Gods power, and wisdom given to Joseph. Ver. 2.

3. The next thing giving occasion, is Ver. 3.

their imprisonment, where Joseph now was, And he committed them into ward, in the house of the chiefs of the slaughter men. Provost marshal or Captaine of the guard into the tower house, the place where Joseph was bound. — Put them, &c. the place where Joseph lay Sept. — House of prisoners, &c. Cald, where are observable.

1. The authority committing, the king in his own territories,

2. The parties committed, the offenders fore named.

3. The commitment, they were put in ward, to be safely kept unto tryall and judgement.

4. The place, it was the tower-house the strong prison, and there where Joseph was bound with them. V. 3.

4. The last thing making up this occasion of discovery of Josephs grace, and wisdom given him, was their special commitment to his charge, And the Provost marshal charged Joseph with them, and he ministered to them, and they were in ward dayes, or some dayes. Sept. the same. — Put Joseph with them, &c. Cald. Here note

1. Power delegating, the chief marshal, which some think to be Potiphar, and therefore that he was now somewhat pacified to Joseph, but it seemed not so clear.

Q 99 3 was

2. The delegating of power to Joseph, he charged Joseph with them for fit usage, and safe custody.
3. The discharge of Joseph to them, he ministered to them, according to his order.
4. The time of durance, some dayes they were in this ward, when Joseph conversed with them, and was knowne to them. All this makes the more remote occasion, Ver. 4.

Whence we may learn.

- D. 1. Providence keep's its method in multiplying mercy to his Saints in misery.
- D. 2. The sinnes of others God sometimes maketh an occasion of refreshing his own servants.
- D. 3. Court officers are very prone to sin, and abuse favours.
- D. 4. Kings themselves are not secured from offences by their nearest servants. Ver. 1.
- D. 5. Kings offended are apt to swell in wrath & displeasure.
- D. 6. Greatest wrath of Kings is apt to rise against greatest officers. V. 2.
- D. 7. The wrath of Kings, usually causeth the restraint, and imprisonment of their criminnall subjects.
- D. 8. God order's place, where the wrath of man imprison's, and that for his owne ends.
- D. 9. Innocents and malefactors may lye together in the same prison. Ver. 3.
- D. 10. God inclineth the hearts of chief commanders for imprisonment, more to the innocent then guilty.
- D. 11. Innocent prisoners under providence may have the charge of malefactors.
- D. 12. Good souls trusted in any capacity, do execute it faithfully.
- D. 13. Set times and seasons of restraint God appoints to his own, and others for his own ends.

D. 14. All these providence orders to be occasions of glorifying his grace in his Saints. Ver. 4.

2. The more immediate occasion of declaring the gift of wisdom in Joseph, was the dream, that each of the persons had in the prison; concerning which we have.

1. The general report of such an event. Ver. 5. 8. Where.

1. It is recorded, that they had dreamed, wherein.

1. The event is related, And they Ver. 5. dreamed a dream both of them; Cald the same.

— Saw a dream. Sept. This was a way of Gods revealing his will to men at that time, and vouchsafed upon special occasion to wicked men also.

2. The time is noted, A man, or each man his dream in one night. That is three dayes before the event at one season. Sept. and Cald. same.

3. The kinde of the dream is expressed, Each man according to the interpretation of his dream, Cald the same. — Whose were the visions of their dream. Sept. That is, they say something in their dreams. The Hebrew notation teacheth, that they were dreames; significative, and intended to discover some events to them; as by interpretation & the issue it appeared. They were therefore not natural, but divine, sent to shew some providences toward them, and demonstrate the wisdom of God in Joseph.

4. The subjects are clearly noted, by their office, and condition, the butler and baker now bound in prison; of which we heard before. Ver. 5.

2. The impression of these dreams upon their Spirits is here revealed, which came to be knowne.

1. By Josephs visit of them, in the morning. Ver. 6.

1. His access early, And Jo. Ver. 7. sesh came in unto them in the morning, Sept. Cald. same. A good keeper is up early about his charge.

2. His observation of them, And he saw, or looked on them, and observed them, likely more intently he beheld them.

3. The impression of their dreams discovered, And behold they were sad, or troubled, grieved, Sept. and Cald. same. This frame it is likely was not usual with them, their hearts put off sadness, but now when Gods power troubleth them with dreams, they cannot bear up, behold they were very sad. Ver. 6.

2. By Josephs expostulation with them, And he asked Pharaohs Eunuchs, or Princes, which were with him in the ward of his Lords house, saying, wherefore are your faces evil to day? Why are your faces sad to day? Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The

1. The expostulator Joseph, a compassion-keeper, who knew the burden of a prison.

2. The parties questioned, those noble officers of Pharaoh, now under custody, and in misery.

3. The expostulation, about their sadness, with a purpose to comfort them, why are ye sad? A good example of a faithful and pitiful keeper.

Ver. 8.

3. By their answer to Joseph, And they said, we have dreamed a dream, and there is no interpreter of it. Cald. the same. — We have seen a dream, and there is none to conjecture of it, Sept. expostulation. The cause of sadness rendered is twofold.

1. The impression of their dreams, we have dreamed a dream, and it is more then ordinary, which seem's to portend some evil to us, hereupon are we so sad.

2. The want of an interpreter, they meant one of the magicians, with whom Egypt did swarm; and being in doubt, and not knowing the issue of such impulsive dreams thus are we sad, and troubled. So whether dreams portend good or bad, while unknown, the dreamers are equally disquieted.

4. By Josephs reply unto their complaint, wherein note.

1. A gentle correction of their folly, with instruction unto the true way of knowing such secrets, And Joseph said unto them, &c. Wherein.

1. His expostulatory institution, Do not interpretations belong to God, or are not interpretations Gods? — Is not the manifestation of it by God? Sept.

— Surely from the face of God is the interpretation of a dream. Cald. Wherein.

1. He denyeth any power to wizards, &c. of the interpretation of these secrets.

2. He claims it, to God as his prerogative.

3. He sheweth that by God alone man is enabled thereunto.

2. His friendly invitation of them to impart their dreams to him, Declare to me, I pray you. Cald. the same. — Therefore declare, Sept. Wherein we may note.

1. His aim, it was doubtles to comfort them.

2. His acknowledgement, that God had given him that gift of interpretation.

3. His readiness according to his gift to ease their mindes, and shew what God revealed by their dreams, which afterwards he performs. Ver. 8.

Quest. 1. Why did not God give the dreams rather to Joseph then to them?

Ans. 1. It might be suspected from him by them. 2. It was his work to be an interpreter, not a dreamer. 3. God would have it so, more to affect the persons concerned in it.

Quest. 2. Why did not God reveal dream and interpretation too, as he did to Daniel. Chap. 2?

Ans. 1. Measures of gifts are made out by God as he pleaseth. 2. Thus much God thought fit now, more at another time. All must be given to Gods will.

Which teacheth us:

- D. 1. Prisons and dreams are sometimes the joint effects of providence. Connection.
- D. 2. In the same season dreams may be sent in by God on diverse persons to diverse issues.
- D. 3. Dreames have been given of Gods significative, and teaching events to come.
- D. 4. God may give malefactors dreames to shew his purpose of them. Ver. 5.
- D. 5. Faithfulness makes men early and diligent in their places.
- D. 6. It is a point of faithfulness in keepers, and overseers, to observe the state of men committed to them.
- D. 7. By prison-afflictions stout Spirits may be made heavy and sad. Ver. 6.
- D. 8. It is the praise of keepers to be pitiful to sad and dejected prisoners.
- D. 9. Pity is well expressed by inquiring into the cause of sadness to the afflicted.
- D. 10. Communion in sufferings is most meet to worke compassion towards others. Ver. 7.
- D. 11. Dreames sent from God make impressions of sadness upon poor creatures.
- D. 12. Dreams of good events unknown, perplex Spirits, no lesse then those of the worst.
- D. 13. Superstitious foolish Spirits, would know the meaning of Gods dreams by their interpreters.
- D. 14. Want of such wizards, and magicians is apt to trouble sinners more.

D. 15.

D. 15. Gods servants labour to turn foolish hearts from such vain ways.

D. 16. Gods Saints challenge that prerogative of opening secrets to God himself.

D. 17. Gods servants by grace obtaine the power from him of opening such secrets.

D. 18. Gracious souls as they have received, are ready to impart discoveries from God to men.

D. 19. In several measures hath God given out the revealing of these secrets. Tell me.

D. 20. The troublesome dreams to the wicked, are made occasions of glorifying Gods grace in his Saints. Ver. 8.

2. The special report of the dreams now followeth, together with the discovery of that propheticall Spirit given to Ioseph, occasioned thereby: this is twofold, according to the persons.

1. The butlers dream revealed, and answered. Ver. 9. 15.

2. The bakers dream reported, and interpreted. Ver. 16. 19.

In the former of these we have two general heads.

1. The dream declared. Ver. 9. 10. 11.

2. Interpreted. Ver. 12. 15.

In the declaration of the dreame we have to note.

1. The relator of it, the chiefe butler himself, to whom it was sent of God, for it was revelatum, a divine revelation, though he understood it not, And the chiefe of the butlers declared his dream to Ioseph, Sept. & Cald. same. no difficultie is in these.

3. The manner of his relating, it was by word. And he said unto him, Sept. and Cald. same. That is by word of mouth made knowne to him.

3. The matter declared, which was his dream, wherein we have to consider.

1. Something of vision, which he seemed to see, In my dream, behold a vine was before me, &c. Wherein these particulars.

1. A vine tree appearing. Ver. 9.

2. Three branches in the vine.

3. The budding of the vine, And it was surely budding. (2) here is assertive more properly, though ours read it (As though it budded)

4. The blossoming, The blossom thereof shot up.

5. The fruit, The clusters thereof brought forth ripe grapes, All this hee seemed to see in his dream, and all this coming up at once. Ver. 10.

2. Something of action appeared to him, threefold.

1. That he tooke Pharaohs cup, And the cup of Pharaoh was in my hand as formerly. Ver. 11.

2. That he pressed the grapes into it, & I tooke the grapes and pressed them into Pharaohs cup.

3. That he ministred to Pharaoh: And I gave the cup into Pharaohs hand; that is, that he served him as he was wont to do; so far is the dream. Ver. 11.

2. The interpretation followeth, wherein we have.

1. The demonstration of Gods wisdom given to Ioseph.

1. The person declared, And Ioseph said unto him, A prisoner, and a keeper.

2. The gift asserted, This is the interpretation of it. Sept. and Cald. same.

ovvnyon. Wherein he implieth, what he had said before, that interpretations belong to God, and that it was now given to him and from God he was now bold peremptorily to affirm without doubt, that this was the meaning of his dream, which now he is about to tell him.

2. The interpretation itselfe, which he giveth.

1. About part of the vision, of three branches, that they did determinately signify three dayes. The three branches, these are three dayes. Ver. 12.

2. About that of action, he prophesieth by his dream the certaine restoring of him to his office wherein he expresseth.

1. The time, In the end of three dayes, as some. Or yet within three dayes, as others, Sept.

2. The restoring, Pharaoh shall lift up thy head. Shall remember thy principality, Sept. Thee, Cald.

In summe, Pharaoh should set him at liberty.

3. The ministry or service whereunto, expressed, And shall restore thee to thy place, and thou shalt give Pharaohs cup into his hand, after the former order, when thou wast his Butler. Sept. Same.

Restore to thy ministry. Cald. In all Ioseph giveth him an answer of peace by his dream.

3. An Addition to all of something concerning Ioseph himselfe, wherein we have to note.

1. His intreatie for himselfe, which containeth these things.

1. To be remembered by the butler, when he was at liberty, But remember mee with thee, when it shall be well with thee, Sept. Cald. same.

2. To have kindnes from him, And doe mercy with mee, I pray thee, Sept. Cald. same.

3. To be commended by him unto Pharaoh, And make mention of me unto Pharaoh, Sept. Cald. same.

4. To

4. To get his freedom, And bring me forth out of this house. Strong hold, Sept. Prison. Cald.

2. His apbologie made from the injuries done him.

1. By his brethren. Because by stealth I was stolen out of the land of the Hebrews: Cald. same.

1. The injury complained of was man stealing, it is expressed by a double word of the same nature, either to note the certainty, or the hainousness of the fact. The thieves were his brethren, who kept him from returning to his father, together with the Ishmaelites, to whom they sold him; himselfe was the goods of his father stolen, the place whence the land of the Hebrews; This was Canaan, not yet in Iacobs possession, nor any of the Hebrews, but as sojournours in it; yet he called it their land, by faith, as it was by promise. So he pleads to the chiefe butler, consider my case, as one so violently taken from my fathers house.

2. By Potiphar in Egypt, wherein he urgeth.

1. His innocency, And there also I have not done any thing, Sept. Cald. same. That is, no evil thing deserving bonds; however I have been accused by a wicked woman, from whose allurements I fled.

2. His calamity notwithstanding, yet am I in this dungeon, But nothing have I done, that they should put me into the dungeon, yet you see I am here as a malefactor; remember me therefore, I pray, when God shall do you good, and use means to get me out of this sad place.

Quest. 1. Did this gift of prophecy inable Ioseph to shew the events of good to every one, as to this Butler?

Ans. Surely no, for though he could tell certainly of the Butlers freedom within three dayes, yet knew he not the time of his own. This gift was therefore vouchsafed by God upon those special occasions, wherein he would glorify himself.

Quest. 2. Did Ioseph well in seeking liberty by the Butler?

Ans. 1. Some Hebrews judge it an act of mistrusting God, and therefore God kept him bound two years after; but it is a groundles phansie. 2. The thing might well stand with faith in God. 3. It is a duty to use lawful means for liberty, as this was. V. 18.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Sad and seduced souls may be brought to open their troubles to such as may truly answer them from God.

D. 2. Things seen in dreams sent by God may signify matters of another nature. So the vine, &c.

Ver. 10.

D. 3. Actions are presented in some dreams by God to preface the like really to come. Ver. 11.

D. 4. Gods gift of interpretation of dreams is a sure oracle.

D. 5. God alone determines the truth to every signe. Three branches, three dayes. Ver. 12.

D. 6. Under symbols God may infallibly teach restitution, and advancement to imprisoned creatures.

D. 7. Gods Prophets may declare that to others, which they cannot to themselves for good.

D. 8. Restitution of evil doers to favour must carry orderly ministration therein. Ver. 13.

D. 9. Gods goodness to sufferers by his Prophets, requiteth good to them. Remember me. Ver. 14.

D. 10. It is not unbecoming Gods Prophets to desire their own good.

D. 11. It is reasonable to desire to be knowne to them, who can help them.

D. 12. Liberty is desirable by saints in their restraints.

D. 13. It is just for Gods innocents to complain of wrongs.

D. 14. It is equal for Gods afflicted ones to plead their own innocency.

D. 15. It is fit for saints to desire freedom from dungeon-calamities.

Ver. 15:

2. Now followeth the other special discovery of Gods gift to Ioseph, by occasion of the second dream, declared by the baker, wherein we have.

1. The narration of the dream, and there in note.

1. The reporter, the chiefe of the bakers.

2. The encouragement taken to declare Ver. 16:

it, Hee saw that he interpreted good. That he had rightly conjectured, Sept. and Cald. that is, happily. Upon good tidings to his fellow prisoner, he hopeth for the like, and therefore halseth to tell his dream. But poor man he findeth a sadder doom.

3. The order, the best went first, to bring on the worst more easily to be discovered.

4. The narration of his dream, wherein he tells.

Rrr

g. His

1. His vision, what he seemed to see,
And behold three white baskets on my head.

I seemed to take three baskets of finebread, or bakemeats, Sept. Full of the best bread. Cald. But in this rather the baskets are described made of white reed, or rods, fit to carry such things, some read baskets full of holes, as net worke. Ver. 16.

Ver. 17.

2. More which he seemed to see was, And in the uppermost basket of all meat for Pharaoh, the work of the baker or cook. — Of all kinds which Pharaoh did eat by the worke of the bread-maker, Sept. Which was made by the Bakers art. Cald. or Pasterer. Of these we need not to speake more, but to understand them of such special bakemeats belonging to the bakers office, which were provided for Pharaoh.

2. His passion or what hee seemed to suffer, And the fowles did eat them out of the basket upon my head. — Out of the basket of my head, Sept. Those things which were in the basket on my head, Cald. In all this he seeth not any thing of action, or ministring to Pharaoh, but of suffering from the fowles of heaven. Such is the dream. Ver. 17.

2. The interpretation now followeth, wherein.

Ver. 18.

1. Joseph asserts the truth of what he now revealeth to him, And Joseph answered, and said, this is interpretation thereof, Sept. and Cald. same. He speaketh not doubtfully here, but pronounceth what he saith to be the very minde of God in his dream.

2. He opens the matter of the dream.

1. As to the vision in part, The three baskets are three dayes, Sept. and Cald. same. That is, they signify three dayes, as before. Ver. 18.

Ver. 19.

2. As to the passion, what the meaning was of the birds devouring; Yet within three dayes Pharaoh shall take of thy head from thee, and shall hang thee upon a tree, and the fowl shall eat thy flesh from off thee, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein he foretells.

1. The time, three dayes.

2. The event, his suffering of death, set out.

1. By taking away his head, that is his life.

2. By hanging of him upon a gallows.

3. By making his flesh meat for the fowl of the heaven; which was a cursed suffering. Now by this various event declared by Joseph unto these two, God honoured him, and prepareth him for an honorable deliverance from his prison-condition in his owne time, though it might seem long. Ver. 19.

Quest. Did Joseph say no more, but give him this hard sentence of death by his dream?

Ans. No more is here related; but the nature of the event, and the tenderness of Josephs heart may make us presume, that he bespake suitably to the sadness of his condition, and gave him counsel that might better prepare him to dye; though not here expressed.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Good tidings to companions in misery, is apt to make others also hope for the like.

D. 2. Good hopes may encourage men to open their minaes more freely, though a sad returne be made unto them.

D. 3. Dreams of different kinds God hath given men to different ends: some for evil, others for good.

D. 4. Men usually desire Gods revelation in hope of good.

D. 5. God may use the common things of a mans calling to shew him sad events; as the bakers basket, &c.

D. 6. God hath given sufferings in dreams to discover sufferings indeed. Ver. 16. 17.

D. 7. Gods resolution of dreams sent, is infallible.

D. 8. Gods Servants must deliver saddest returns faithfully.

D. 9. A short time doth God set to the lives of malefactors, when they hope for longer.

D. 10. Powers of the world are apt to lay the most ignominious death upon such whom they reject.

D. 11. God orders all these sentences from men to the magnifying of his name and gifts to his saints. Ver. 19.

3. The last general of the chapter now followeth, which relateth the issue or event of all, wherein we may see providence working with, and ordering all the motions of creatures to his owne best ends. More especially in this part we have to note.

1. The event to Pharaohs servants, wherein,

1. The time foretold, punctually observed, And it was in the third day. Sept. and Cald. same, that is, the third day after

Ver. 20.

ter Joseph had opened their dreams.

2. The occasion turning this time, to fulfil the events foretold, It was Pharaohs birth day, and he made a feast for all his servants. Sept. and Cald. same. herein we may note.

1. The conjunction of Gods time with Pharaohs

2. The solemnization of Pharaohs birthday; he according to great mens custome would have Egypt thinke they were better for his being borne to them, and therefore feasts his nearest servants. A practise not recorded of Abraham, nor in Gods Church.

Quest. Is it lawful to keep birth dayes leasts.

Ans. 1. As to the matter there is no command from God for it. 2. It is not apparent, that ever the Church of God owned it in sacred history.

3. To remember our beginnings and blesse God is our daily worke, and may be annually, without superstition or impiety. 4. To keep them as Pharaoh, is wicked and cursed. From all it is apparent, men tooke up this custom for, and from themselves; but for men to keep other birth dayes is more rare; onely since the time of the Romish Apostasie; and for men to set up a natalitial feast for the son of God (unless they can shew his owne institution) is presumptuous superstition.

3. The event, which is here reported two wayes.

1. Generally, And he lifted up the head of the chiefe of the butlers, and the head of the chiefe of the bakers among his servants.

And he remembered the chiefe butler, and the principality of the chiefe baker, &c. Sept. and Cald. This noteth no more then a general summons of them to appear before the assembly of other princes, so he sent for them from prison.

2. Specially is the event here related, & that two wayes.

1. Concerning the butler, of whome two things are said.

Ver. 21.

1. His restitution to his place, And he restored the chiefe of the butlers to his butler-ship. — To his principality. Septuag. — to his ministry, Cald. This Joseph foretold him by his dream.

2. His ministracion, And he gave the cup into the hand of Pharaoh. Septuag. and Cald. same. This also was prophesied by Joseph. Ver. 21.

Ver. 22.

2. concerning the Baker, But the chiefe of the Bakers he hanged, as Joseph had interpreted to them. — Cald. the same. — Conjectured. Sept.

1. The issue was the death of the malefactor, that day Pharaoh executed him, and caused him to be hanged; whether justly upon demerit, or for his owne pleasure tyrannically, is not here expressed; but the day of execution it was unto him.

2. The manner of this reported, according to the interpretation of the dreames, even as Joseph had interpreted unto them; that is, it fell out to both of them in that third day just as it was foretold from their dreames by Joseph. Ver. 22.

2. The event as to Josephs little good as yet came to him by it; set out in the butlers unthankfulness.

1. Yet did not the chiefe of the Butlers remember Joseph, Sept. Cald. same.

2. But he forgot him. Sept. Cald. same.

Both these discover that Gods time was not yet come for Josephs liberty, and therefore he suffers men to be unmindfull, and orders it for his servants good, as the sequel of the history will declare. Ver. 23:

Learn hence.

D. 1. God keeps time punctually in making good his word for good and evil unto creatures.

D. 2. Mans day and Gods may meet together for fulfilling Gods will revealed.

D. 3. The birth dayes celebration is a heathnish practise, and invention. Ver. 20.

D. 4. Such times worldly powers use to give but favours, or frowns, to kill and keep alive.

D. 5. Where God hath spoken of restitution to liberty, and honour, there it is done. Ver. 21.

D. 6. Where God hath foretold of death and destruction, there it surely comes to passe. Ver. 22.

D. 7. Men restored to liberty and prosperity are apt to forget adverse conditions.

D. 8. Carnal men usually prove unthankful for, and unmindful of good done to them in misery.

D. 9. God useth the forgetfulness of creatures to bring about his gracious ends to his Saints.

D. 10. Unkindnesses from creatures are but to make his Saints learn more patience toward God. Ver. 23.

Thus

Thus farre we have seen providence ordering the prison-condition to Joseph, and supporting, and honouring him in it; the next chapter will shew the comfortable issue of it unthought of, and unexpected by Joseph; the explication of which followeth.

CHAP. XLI.

Section
10th Hebrew Mik-
keth.

This Chapter contains the history of the last event to Joseph (from providence) in his prison-state, which is the happy catastrophe of his slavery & sorrows under false accusations, and his entrance into that state of liberty, and honour, wherein he ended his days. The general heads are these.

1. The time and occasion of this happy event. Ver. 1. 13.
 2. The cause of his liberty, and preferment. Ver. 14, 36.
 3. The actual deliverance, and exaltation of Joseph. Ver. 37-45.
 4. The administration of all affairs by Joseph. Ver. 46. 17.
- In the first general these particulars are observable.

Ver. 1.

1. The point of time exactly noted, And it was from the end of two yeares of dayes. — Cald. the same. — After two yeares of dayes, Sept. That is, two full yeares. So ours do well read the Hebrew phrase to our language, other mathematical curiosities passed by, the words are plaine, two full yeares.

Quest. But whence begin these yeares? Ans. 1. Not from Josephs first imprisonment, for it seemeth, that he was in prison about three yeares, but, Secondly the beginning of them is from the interpretation of the dreams to the butler and baker; so long after, God tryed the faith and patience of Joseph in prison.

2. The occasion of Josephs deliverance, made up of several concurrent passages.

1. His dream occasioned this good event to Joseph, which is here recorded by Moses two wayes.

1. Generally, And Pharaoh dreamed, and behold he stood by the river. Cald. the same. — He thought he stood by the river, Sept.

1. The subject, Pharaoh King of Egypt; which with some men seemed as an oracle. De statu publico credendum est regio somnio. Kings dreams seemed to portend great things, and much to be rested on.

2. The effect upon him, was a dream, he dreamed, and this not naturall, but divine, as the sequel proveth.

3. The place and posture, he stood by the river, or as the Seventy, he seemed to himselfe in his dream to stand there, set in a posture to observe some strange thing. The river was Nilus, as is determined by a general vote. Ver. 1.

2. Specially is his dream here reported, and that twofold.

1. Of two sorts of Kine, presented to him.

1. Good, And behold there were coming up out of the river, &c. Wherein appear.

1. The creatures in kind, they were Kine, bearing creatures, not oxen, which make no increase,

2. The number, seven fitted to note what God intends:

3. The condition of them, they were fair in sight, and fat in flesh. — Choice in flesh. Sept.

4. The action of them. they fled to a meadow, so the Cald. — The Seventy read as a proper name, but it notes a place full of grasse, fit to fatten cattel.

5. Their rise, from the river. Ver. 2.

2. Bad are presented also, about which againe.

1. The kind, And behold seventy oxen — Ver. 3. there, and these were kine also.

2. Their rise, they came from the same river. Nilus overflowing sixteen foot made fruitfull, but if onely eight foot, or thereabout, barrennes ensued; barrennes and fruitfulness from the same second causes as ordered by God.

3. Their number, the same seven.

4. Their condition, ill in sight, and lean in flesh.

5. Their posture, And they stood by the kine upon the brink of the river. — Or lip, Cald. the same. — sted, Sept. Ver. 3.

6. Their actions, And the kine ill in sight, and lean in flesh did eat up the seven kine fair in sight, and fat. Sept. and Cald. same. These did not eat grasse, but the very flesh of kine.

7. The issue of this, it startled Pharaoh, And he awoke. Ver. 4.

2. Of two sorts of eares of corne is the next dream, in the report of which, wee have to note.

1. Pharaohs repose, and therein his second dream, And he slept, and dreamed the second time. — Cald. the same.

Sept. onely, he dreamed. It seemeth the man was willing to sleep away the first, but then God doubleth his trouble by another dreame.

2. The second dream it self of eares of corne, twofold.

1. Of good, And behold, &c. Where.

1. The kind of creatures, eares of corne, Sept. Cald. same.

2. The number, seven, as the former.

3. The quality of them, fat, and good. — Choice, and good.

4. The subject bearing them, one stem, or stalke. Ver. 5.

2. Of

Ver. 6.

2. Of bad, whereof we have here related.

1. The kinde of creature, the same. And behold eares, &c.

2. The number, seven, as before in the good eares.

3. The quality of them, thin and blasted with the east-winde; that which is observed to be the blasting winde. anaphroes, rusted. Cald.

4. The order of being, they sprung up after the good eares. Ver. 6.

5. The action of them, And the thin eares devoured, or swallowed up the seven fat, and full eares. These came from single stalks, and prevailed against all the rest; one thin ear devours seven full ones.

6. The issue of this also, And Pharaoh awoke, and behold it was a dream, Sept. and Cald. same. It was a dream with a witness, by a note of demonstration held out; Behold the dream! Ver. 7.

Ver. 7.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Some yeares of dayes may God keep his dearest Saints under causeless imprisonment, and affliction.

D. 2. Yeares and dayes are determined of God for ending the sufferings of his servants.

D. 3. At the term appointed God striketh up the meanes for their deliverance.

D. 4. God will disturb the sleep of Princes to bring about deliverance for his servants.

D. 5. Divine dreams may be given of God to wicked men for the benefit of his servants. Ver. 2.

D. 6. Second causes may be presented in dreams, successfull, or hurtfull. So the river.

D. 7. Where single impulses move not effectually mens spirits, God doubles them. So the dream.

D. 8. Cattle and corne hath God variously shapen in dreams to note various effects of his providence.

D. 9. It is a prodigious discovery of evil, for cattle to eat cattle, and corn, corne.

D. 10. Dreams of Gods sending are dreams with a witness, and seriously to be weighed. V. 2. to 7.

2. The next thing occasioning the deliverance of Joseph, is the imprisonment, which came by these dreams upon Pharaohs spirit, which is thus exprest, And it was in the morning, that his spirit was shaken, smitten, or amazed, and he sent and called for all the Magicians of Egypt, and all the wise men thereof, and Pharaoh told to them his dream. — Spirit troubled, &c. all the interpreters, &c. they were Sept. all the masters. Cald.

Ver. 8.

1. His passion is here declared, he was smitten with sad apprehensions about these dreams. He could have no rest, for God troubled him.

2. His disquisition, and calling about for an interpreter, all the Magicians, Astrologers, & Wizards of Egypt in whom he superstitiously confided.

3. The next thing occasioning this good event to Joseph is the dissatisfaction, that he received from all those pretended interpreters; neither they, nor the Devil by them, could shew Pharaoh the meaning of his dream, And there was no interpreter of them to Pharaoh. — Or none interpreting, &c. Sept. and Cald. same.

The troubles of Pharaohs spirit are not eased, therefore he must seek further. Ver. 8.

Learn hence.

D. 1. God not onely sends dreams, but hammer's, or strike's the spirits of Kings with them to amaze ment.

D. 2. In such troubles wicked spirits make use of the Devils instruments for their satisfaction.

D. 3. Neither Sathan, nor his instruments can resolve Gods riddles, or interpret his dreams, Ver. 8.

4. The last thing concurring to the occasion of Josephs deliverance is the chief butlers mention of him to Pharaoh, wherein note,

1. His recognition of his fault in not minding Joseph as he ought, And, or then the chief of the butlers spake unto Pharaoh, saying, I do remember my sin this day. Sept. and Cald. same. In this passage note.

Ver. 9.

1. The order, after no Magicians could satisfy Pharaoh.

2. The effect upon the butler, his memory is rubbed up to consider former events.

3. The matter remembred, his sin, or fault, viz. against Pharaoh, rather then Ioseph, Ver. 9.

2. His declaration of his fault and punishment.

Ver. 10. 1. The cause of punishment is touched, Pharaoh was wroth with his servants. Sept. and Cald. fame. What his fault was he tells not, but that it was such as provokes Pharaohs anger, and this causes the following punishment.

2. The penaltie itself, And committed me into ward in the house of the chiefe of the slaughter-men (Provost Marshal, or Captaine of the guard) me and the chiefe of the bakers. So he seem's to acknowledge his suffering just, together with his fellow prisoners, Ver. 10.

Ver. 11. 3. His relation about his dream, And we dreamed a dream in one night, I and he we dreamed each man according to the interpretation of his dream. Cald. — Each according to his dream we saw. Sept. This he sutes to the present case of Pharaoh who was now troubled about a dream. As to the particulars, they were declared in the former Chapter, but here he thinks it enough to make a general mention of them. Ver. 11.

4. His report about the interpretation, wherein,

1. He declares the interpreter.

Ver. 12. 1. And there a youngman was with us, So he sets him out by his age; so he called him being in his thirtieth year.

2. By his nation, an Hebrew: One contemptible enough to the Egyptians.

3. By his relation and condition, A servant to the Provost-marshal, and a prisoner. All this tended not much to his advance.

2. He sheweth their addresse to him, And we declared to him, that is, told him our dreams.

3. He asserts his power to interpret, And he interpreted to us our dreams so each man according to his dream did he interpret. Cald. the same. — he conjectured, Sept. Thus he asserts the truth of Ioseph. Ver. 12.

Ver. 13. 4. He tells Pharaoh the event, And it was as he interpreted to us, so it was; me he restored to my place, and him he hanged. — To my principality, Sept. — Ministry. Cald. Thus far by the report of the butler concerning Ioseph, occasion was given to Pharaoh of knowing him and delivering him.

Quest. Why did not the butler minde him sooner, or before the magicians were consulted?

Ans. 1. Partly his un mindfullnes of Ioseph, and unthankfulness to him was the cause. 2. Providence did overrule, that he should mention him in Gods time unto the King. 3. God suffers the magicians to be consulted first to befool them, and glorify his owne wisdom in his servant Ioseph.

It Learneth us.

D. 1. God hath his set time to make ungrateful men speake for his servants. Then.

D. 2. When Satan, and his instruments cannot ease the minds of their worshippers, God appeares to open his own mind to them.

D. 3. The troubles of others may make some to minde their owne faults. Ver. 9.

D. 4. Malefactors may be forced sometimes to acknowledge the justice of their sufferings. Ver. 10.

D. 5. Providence in dreams God maketh to be remembred, to his praise. Ver. 11.

D. 6. Gods Prophets though young and mean, and in a prison-condition, are made honourable by grace.

D. 7. God giveth to his suffering Prophets to foretel, and open secrets (as God) to men. Ver. 12.

D. 8. The truth of event doth justify God, and his Prophets, against, and above all forcers. Ver. 13.

2. The next general of the Chapter now follow's, which is the declaration of the cause of Iosephs liberty and preferment from verse 14. to 36. where several things concur under the highest providence to make up this cause.

1. Pharaohs million for Ioseph, and his access. Ver. 14.

2. Pharaohs treaty with him about his ability, in disclofing dreams, and his reply. Ver. 15. 16.

3. Pharaohs declaration of his dream, and Iosephs interpretation of the same. Ver. 17. 32.

4. Iosephs advice to Pharaoh upon the whole. Ver. 33. 36.

To the first. In this we have more especially to note.

1. Pharaohs call, And Pharaoh sent and called Ioseph. Septuagint. Cald. fame, wherein.

1. The connection; which notes the order, and, or, then: that is upon the report of the Butler, now Gods time was come, immediately Pharaohs spirit is moved too, when Gods words came, or his power upon him. Ps. 105. 19. 20.

2. The

2. The action of Pharaoh, he sent messengers, and by them called him out of prison. The King sent and loosed him; the King God useth as to this, when God bids him, he sends, and calls for Ioseph. This must be an overpowering worke of God, for a King to communicate his secrets to a young man; an Hebrew, a servant, a prisoner, when his own Sages might seem more fit to consult withal; yet where God maketh impulse on spirits; they stick not at such objections.

2. The dispatch of Pharaohs messengers, And they made him run out of the dungeon. — They brought him out of the strong hold. Sept. — They hastened him out of the prison. Cald. Dan. 2. 25. Providence speeds him out of trouble, when the time appointed was come, and that by such, who had imprisoned him, or at least had no regard of him in his dungeon condition.

3. Iosephs access, wherein note.

1. His preparation, And he shaved himselfe and changed his garments. — And they shaved him, and changed his coat, Sept.

— He was shaved, &c. Cald. Some say Potiphar did thus prepare him for the Kings presence, but it matters not by whom it was done. It is evident, that there was a prison garb, and habit, which Ioseph kept while he was a prisoner, and now he calls off all, being called to liberty; various estates changed his visage and habit.

2. His addresse to the King, And he came into Pharaoh, Sept. and Cald. fame. that is, he answered Pharaohs call, and presented himselfe unto him. Ver. 14.

Observe we.

D. 1. Gods time of deliverance to his being come, no delays shall restraine them.

D. 2. Providence makes Kings his instruments to deliver his innocents, and call them out of prison.

D. 3. No objections can hinder powers from calling out of dungeons those, whom God will deliver.

D. 4. God can make his innocents run out of prison, who were wrongfully haled in.

D. 5. Change of conditions from prison to stand before Princes, requires change of visage, and habit.

D. 6. Piety and decency consist well together. Religion mak'es none frowns.

D. 7. It is meet for Gods innocents, being called, to come out of prison, and stand before Kings. V. 14.

To the Second.

1. Pharaohs treaty with Ioseph when now he was come, carrieth two things in it.

1. His owne case declared, which was now troubled, upon two accounts.

1. Upon what he suffered in a dream, And Pharaoh said unto Ioseph I have dreamed a dream. — Cald the same. —

I have seen a dream. Sept. His meaning is, that by what appeared to him in his sleep he was much disquieted.

2. Upon want of an interpreter, And there is none interpreting it. — Cald. the same. — None conjecturing it.

Sept. that is, among his magicians and wizards.

2. The report which Pharaoh had heard of him, And I have heard of thee, saying, thou wilt bear a dream to interpret it. — I have heard some say of thee, that hearing dreams, thou dost conjecture them, Septuagint. — That thou hearest, and dost interpret. This report he had from the butler; therefore he so bespeaketh Ioseph that he would hear, and give him the meaning of his dream. Ver. 15.

2. Iosephs reply upon this first motion of Pharaoh about the cause of his sending for him.

1. By way of selfedenyall, And Ioseph answered Pharaoh, saying, it is without mee, or not in mee, besides mee, to doe such a thing. — Without God salvation shall not be answered to Pharaoh, Sept. — Not from my wisdom, Cald. Herein he sheweth his humilitie not to arrogate such power to himselfe. So Daniel also. Dan. 2.

2. By way of glorifying God, God shall answer the peace of Pharaoh. — From the face of the Lord peace shall be answered to Pharaoh, Cald.

1. He ascribes to God this power.

2. He prophesieth peace, or,

3. He prayeth or wisheth so the success of the dream to Pharaoh. Ver. 16.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Secret impressions from God without interpretations trouble the spirits of Kings.

D. 2. Kings in troubles are content to seeke ease from Gods prisoners, only under notion of Magicians.

D. 3. God makes the same of his owne wisdom given to his Prophets, render them desirable. Ver. 15.

D. 4. Gods true Prophets deny themselves in the greatest gifts, which he bestoweth on them.

D. 5. All glory of revealing secrets is to be given to God. D. 6.

D. 6. God may speake peace to men and powers of the world, even when he troubleth them. Ver. 16.

To the third. In this portion wee have two generalls.

V. 17. to 25.

1. Pharaohs declaration of the dreams which he had: In which report for matter there is no change, but for explication some things are added, as.

1. In description of the lean kine, is added, Such as I never saw in the Land of Egypt for badnes. — I have not seen as those. — Not worse. Sept. Ver. 19.

2. In reporting their devouring, And they came not into their inward parts. — And it was not knowne that they were come into their inward parts, and their sight was as will as at the beginning. — Into their bellies, and they were not manifest, that they went into their bellies. Sept. and Cald. fame. Other differences there are none; onely he tells Joseph with all, that the Magicians could not interpret. Ver. 24.

2. Josephs interpretation, wherein we may note,

Ver. 25.

1. His assertion about these dreams twofold,

1. That both were one, that is; sent to signifie one and the same thing: otherwise the dreams were two.

2. That they portended some future providence of God, viz. That God by these shewed to Pharaoh what he was doing or about to do.

2. His interpretation, wherein he makes knowne.

Ver. 26.

1. The number expressed in all, seven, to note seven yeares, in the severall places.

V. 26. 27.

2. The quality, the good kine and eares, note yeares of plenty; the bad kine, & ears, yeares of famine.

Ver. 28.

3. The event from above noted by these, as he mentioned before, that God was now bringing plenty, and famine, Ver. 28.

4. The order of this providence observable.

Ver. 29.

1. In the yeares of plenty immediately given by God after the dream declared, Ver. 29.

2. In the yeares of famine immediately arising after those forenamed, whereof he relates.

Ver. 30.

1. The event, famine seven yeares.

2. The effect of it, all plenty forgotten: and a full consumption of the land, Ver. 30.

Ver. 31.

3. The extremity of it, The plenty shall not be knowne &c. for it shall be very grievous, or heavy. Ver. 31.

Ver. 32.

5. The certainty and speed from the doubling of the dream, as the reasons of a double impression of this matter on Pharaohs spirit, Ver. 32.

1. The thing is established.
2. God will shortly bring it to passe.

Quest. 1. What kinde of dreams were these?

Answer. Surely divine, for by these wayes in those times God made known his will to men; of this naturalists were ignorant; and therefore deny Gods power in sending dreams.

Quest. 2. Why were these given to a Pagan; not to Jacob?

Answer. 1. It was for earthly good. 2. It was to one who had power to free Joseph. 3. It was to him not for his own, but Gods Churches sake, that this was sent him. 4. Gods purpose was to bring Jacob to Egypt, and fulfill his prophecies there.

Quest. 3. Why was not the dream sooner?

Answer. Now God made all concurrent providences to meet together, to free Joseph, to bring his Church into Egypt: now God was resolved to give the plenty, and after that, famine; so that now was to be the time suitable to all.

Quest. 4. Is there any trust to be given to dreams at this time?

Answer. 1. Natural dreams may discover some natural event in the body, as in sicke men. 2. As to divine, none are to be expected, neither doth God speak that way now, having spoken all his mind to salvation by his owne son.

Quest. 5. Why is the dream repeated three times by Moses, Pharaoh, and Joseph?

Answer. 1. Rationally Moses as the historian speaks it, Pharaoh as the subject, Joseph as the interpreter. 2. All mention it for greater evidence of Gods worke.

And teach us.

D. 1. God may make Pharaoh dream for the sake of Jacob and Joseph.

D. 2. God causeth the wicked to feel Dreams, and declare them, but his Saints to understand them.

D. 3. God maketh the wicked confesse that none of their wise ones can help them to understand them.

Ver. 17. 24.

D. 4. True Prophets labour to bring such as consult them unto God. So Joseph.

D. 5. One and the same truth God is pleased pleased to shew several wayes. Dreames were one.

D. 6. God usually foretelleth his providences of good and evil to make men fear him.

D. 7. Plenty and famine are both the issues of Gods providence.

D. 8. Teares are numbred both of good and evil unto men.

D. 9. Providence sends good unto creatures before evil, that they might prevent evil.

D. 10. Famine is cruel, and insatiable, where God giveth it commission.

D. 11. Events doubly revealed are certainly prepared of God, and established.

D. 12. Repeating Gods revelations sometimes teacheth a speedy execution. Ver. 25. 32.

4. The last thing concurring as the cause of Josephs enlargement, and advancement is the counsel, which upon the interpretation of the dreams he giveth unto Pharaoh, which followeth, Ver. 33. 36. Herein he adviseth him about three maine matters.

1. About such instruments, whom Pharaoh might use to serve him for preventing the universal evil, which God had foretold him was shortly coming, & these were of two sorts.

Ver. 33.

1. Chiefe, as head to order affaires, And now let Pharaoh provide a man discrete and wise, & set him over the land of Egypt. — Cald. the same. — Now therefore consider thou of a man wise, and understanding, &c. οὐδὲν ἀδύνατον φησὶν αὐτῷ. Sept.

1. The object of advice to whome it was given, is Pharaoh King of Egypt, whose right it was to do it.

2. The advice it selfe, first to see, consider, and provide, then to constitute and authorize one man of special understanding to know matters trusted to him, about preserving food, and of special wisdom, to cast about under God, to bring to passe his gracious purpose for supplying wants in straits; such a one let Pharaoh make chief over all the land of Egypt to give orders, and direct. Ver. 33.

Ver. 34.

2. Subordinate, as ministers to execute orders, and instructions given unto them about so great affaires, as the preserving of the lives of nations, Let Pharaoh do this, & let him appoint overseers over the land. — Cald. the same. — παραστάς, Sept.

These were as needful to the former as hands and feet to the head, who might expedite the counsells, which the wise, and prudent governour should give unto them, and follow his instructions: so he adviseth for instruments.

2. He adviseth about the worke, which these were to do, and this was about preserving corne. Herein note.

1. He states the measure, And sith the land of Egypt, in the seven yeares of plenty. — All the fruits of the land, &c. Sept. — And fortifie the land, &c. Cald. Herein he giveth solid advice, when there would be such over-abundance, to take the fifth part of every yeares increase, in all the seven plenteous yeares, as a due portion for future provision.

Quest. Was not this advice to raise an unjust tax upon the people?

Answer. No. 1. It was upon special revelation from God. 2. It was easie to be spared in such abundance. 3. It was provided to the peoples good for preserving life in famine; just, and good therefore it was. Ver. 34. 4. It is conceived that the King bought it up, for Joseph sold it.

2. He adviseth to make granaries, And let them gather all food of those good yeares that come, and let them lay up corne under the hand of Pharaoh, and let them keep food in the cities. Sept. same. — Under the power of Pharaohs overseers, &c. Cald.

Ver. 34.

1. He adviseth for gathering corne, and that for money, not by violence.

2. He adviseth the laying of it up under the Kings hand or power.

3. He directeth that in the cities scattered through the land respectively granaries should be provided, and places to keep corne, and that in sheaf, as is conceived to be most fit, for preserving the graine, and keeping straw also for cattel. The idle conceits of some Jewes about the way of Josephs preserving corne are not worth the naming. Ver. 35.

3. He adviseth about the end, which was the safety of the Republick, And the food shall be for store to the land against the seven yeares of famine, which shall be in the land of Egypt, that the land be not cut off by the famine. — The land shall not be worn out, &c. Sept. — The people of the land shall not be consumed. Cald. The end aimed at is twofold.

Ver. 36.

1. To make plenty in want.

2. To preserve people from perishing; that the famine might not cut off poor creatures from the land of the living: for of itselfe it is a cutting, and destroying evil. In all this it is observable betweene the oracles of God, and the delusions of Devils a vast difference: sometimes perhaps magicians may hit upon the evil; but they can give no counsel to prevent: God so permits it; but God sheweth the way of his salvation, Ver. 36.

And Learneth us.

- D. 1. Gods predictions carry counsell with them to the salvation of those that receive them.
- D. 2. Instruments doth God use to serve providence in saving whom he pleaseth. Ver. 32. 33.
- D. 3. Wisdom and prudence must qualify to cooperate with God in such a work.
- D. 4. Gods wisdom points out portion, time, and place to save whom he designeth.
- D. 5. Plenty foregoing teacheth to provide for famine following it.
- D. 6. Providence for food under hand for their people is the charge of Kings. Ver. 34.
- D. 7. Store in plenty reserved is the preventing cure off famine. Ver. 35.
- D. 8. Famine is a cutting evil unto nations, where it comes.
- D. 9. Gods Prophets in foretelling dearth, desire to save those threatened from famine. Ver. 36.

3. The next general of the Chapter hath the history of Josephs liberty and preferment. Ver. 37. 45. Where we have to observe these particulars.

1. The resentment of Josephs interpretation, &c. Ver. 37.

2. Pharaohs proposition thereupon to his servants. Ver. 38.

3. Pharaohs preferring Joseph, whereof we have.

1. The reason rendred. Ver. 39.

2. The preferment bestowed, whereof is related.

1. The place of honour. V. 40. 41.

2. The ceremonies of inauguration. Ver. 42. 43.

3. The confirmation of his power. Ver. 44.

1. By asserting his power againe.

2. By changing his name, or naturalizing him.

3. By giving him a wife, or marrying him. Ver. 45.

Ver. 37. 1. The resentment is thus expressed, And the word or thing was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of all his servants. And the words were pleasing, &c. Sept. and Cald. Wherein observe.

1. The matter of this resentment, is the word, both of interpretation, and counsel, which Joseph gave.

2. The resentment it selfe, it was good, it pleased, which carrieth in it their assent, consent, liking of it, together with their subscription to it.

3. The subjects of this complacencie, Pharaoh, and his servants, whose hearts doublelesse God bowed to receive Josephs word, as he inspired him to reveal this secret to them, God softens this Pharaoh, though he hardens another. Ver. 37.

2. The proposition, which Pharaoh made to his servants hereupon is this, And Pharaoh said unto his servants, Shall we finde such a one as this man, who hath the spirit of God in him? — Sept. the same.

In whom the spirit of Prophecie from God is. Cald. This proposall being in hand, it is conceived by some, that Joseph was commanded to withdraw, and after determination by council, called in againe. The proposall by way of expostulation affirmative, carrieth a negative, we cannot finde any such in Egypt. Which being expressed by Pharaoh, his servants were of the same mind; that not a man like Joseph could be found. None is like him who hath the Spirit of God, but this man hath the Spirit of God, therefore none like him. The Spirit of God in this place, is not meant the Spirit of holines, for Pharaoh was not moved with that, nor his servants; neither indeed is every holy man fit for such employment: but by the Spirit of God here, he meaneth the Spirit of wisdom, and revelation, and prophecie, and providence, which can tell how to prevent evils foretold; such a Spirit onely was desirable by Pharaoh: he calleth it the Spirit of God by a Metonymie of the cause for the effect, the Spirit of God for the Spirit of wisdom which God giveth. In all

1. It was concluded, that not such a man there was in Egypt fit for this worke as Joseph.

2. The reason suggested, because he alone there had that Spirit of God.

It is wonderful that none objected against a poor Hebrew, and a prisoner, to stop the Kings thoughts; that no Magicians gainlaid it as sometimes they did to Moses; that Potiphar should not now require justice against his prisoner. But not a word: God cleared his innocency and glorified his grace in him, and now nothing can hinder Gods purpose; all agree, that there is not a man like him, therefore he must be the man. Ver. 38.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods word is good to men, when God by it work's good unto them.

D. 2. The vilest hearts approve Gods revelation, when he over-powereth them.

D. 3.

D. 3. Carnal reason shall not object, where God will have his word prevaille. Ver. 37.

D. 4. The Spirit of wisdom, and revelation from God make's souls honourable with men.

D. 5. Infidells will preserve the Spirit of God before Satans, when it speaks good to them.

D. 6. Gods Saints are not onely justified against accusers, but glorified among enemies at his pleasure. Ver. 38.

3. The next particular, is Pharaohs actual deliverance, and preferment of him; in which worke note.

Ver. 39. 1. The reason moving Pharaoh to do this, rendred now by himselfe, And Pharaoh said, after that God (or) forasmuch as God hath made thee to know all this, there is none understanding, and wise as thou. — Cald. the same. There is not a man wiser, &c. Sept. here note.

1. Pharaoh bespeaks Joseph, as it is conceived, after he was called in againe before Pharaoh and his servants.

2. He glorifieth God, ascribing it to him, that he had made Joseph to understand these secrets.

3. He acknowledgeth Joseph by the gift of God to have transcended all Egypt; not a man there was to be compared with him; none discrete and wise, as thou. All this God forceth him to.

Ver. 40. 2. Pharaohs act of investiture, or installment of Joseph, Thou shalt be over my house and at thy mouth shall all my people kisse, onely in the throne, I will be great before thee. — My people shall obey thee. Sept. — At thy word all my people shall be governed; onely in the kingly throne I will be more honourable then thou. Cald. Ver. 40. And Pharaoh said into Joseph, see, I have given thee to be over all the Land of Egypt. Behold I set thee this day over all the Land of Egypt. Sept. — Cald the same. In all this observe

1. The place of advance is twofold as expressed.

1. To be over his house, that is, as steward to order affaires for preventing famine therein. Pf. 105. 21.

2. To be over his kingdom, which he expresseth.

1. With a large donation, All my people shall kisse at thy mouth. Which is the usual signification of the word: someread, My people shall be armed at thy command. A word from this root signifieth arms. Others read, My people shall be fed at thy mouth. That is, at thy word and command; which is proper to the case, and Josephs charge, but cannot be the meaning of the word, un-lesse, by a trope. The Seventy read, My people shall obey, &c. Which is likewise signified by kissing. Pf. 2. 12. Surely, Josephs mouth is his command, metonymically as the mouth of the Lord, &c. And this kissing, was to note homage, and subjection of all Pharaohs people to Josephs charge, and command in his place.

2. With a limitation, Onely in the throne I will be great above thee. In short he maketh him Vice-roy, and excepts onely his own supremacy from him. Ver. 41.

3. With a reduplication of his grant, Ver. 41. And Pharaoh said, againe to Joseph, see, &c. that no obscurity might be in his former grant, he doubleth it, See, what I do. I give, or set, or constitute thee this day, over all the Land of Egypt. So the Royal edict is passed as to Josephs principality. Ver. 41.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Kings hearts are bowed by God to speake kindly to his Prisoners.

D. 2. Paganish powers are made to acknowledge Gods wisdom in shewing them secrets.

D. 3. Enemies to God, and Saints are forced sometimes to acknowledge, that the poorest Saints are the best of men.

D. 4. Gods wisdom surpasseth all creatures, enemies themselves being judges. Ver. 39.

D. 5. Stateldest Kings may be perswaded to put houses, and all into the hands of Gods Saints to save them.

D. 6. Worldly wise and sage counsellors may be perswaded to subject theirs to poor saints for their safety.

D. 7. A despicable prisoner for God may be made Lord by him over all oppressors.

D. 8. Limited is the power given unto Saints for good, so God orders Pharaoh, Ver. 40.

D. 9. Where God hath set it, men must confirme works of favour unto his Servants. 't Was so with Joseph and Daniel.

D. 10. Large dominion doth God order and men bestow upon his Servants, appointed for large salvation, Ver. 41.

§§§ 2.

2. The

2. The next thing observable in this prefement of Joseph, is the ceremonies used for his investiture, or installing, which were these.

Ver. 42.

1. The putting on of a Ring, And Pharaoh moved his Ring off from his owne hand, and gave it; or put it on the hand of Joseph: Cald the same. — Taking off, &c. put it on. Sept. This did note obnoxious power, which Pharaoh translated to him by his power, to binde, and to absolve, and to confirme his commands.

2. The arraying of him; And made him put on vestures of silke, or fine linnen. A robe of bysse, or fine linnen. Septuagint. and Cald. Such was brought from India to Egypt, as some say, or a fine sort of silke made in Egypt, as others; doubtles it was the garb of Nobles: So he takes him from his prison-state, and sets him among Princes.

3. The bestowing a noble ensigne of honour upon him, And put a chaine of gold about his neck. Sept. and Cald. same. This hath been used as an insigne honoris, both for military and civil dignities, and (as we may see) of long use, to distinguish, as a note of honour, powers from such as are inferior. Ver. 42.

Ver. 43.

4. The manifesting of him to the people, And he made him to ride in the second Chariot, which he had, Cald. the same. ἀνίσταται ἐν ἑκτοῦ ὑποφωτιστῆς αὐτοῦ. This also noteth his second place in the Kingdom, and Government of the same, it was the chariot that did second the man, that is, shew him to be second.

5. The acclamation by the Herald, And they cried before him Abrech, — The Cryer cried before him. Sept. — And he made them cry before him, This is the Father of the King. Cald. No difficulty here, but about the word (אבריך) which some make a Hebrew. A tender Father. Others, a Syriacke, A Father King, or of the King; others note it from a word which signifieth to bowe the knee. So ours yeild to it. If the word be Egyptian it is hard to guesse at the sense; but this is sure, that it was a blazoning of his honour, and to make known his place, unto which Pharaoh had now advanced him.

6. The close of all these ceremonies. And he set him over all the Land of Egypt Sept. and Cald. same. Some read, For he had set him; It may, I suppose, as the close of all, be rendered, Thus he gave him or set him over all the Land of Egypt. Ver. 43.

Thus the ceremony was finished.

Quest. Were these lawfully done, or accepted by Joseph?

Ans. 1. Such things in their own natures are not evil. 2. Nothing in this matter was acted but under the ordering and approbation of God. 3. Such external rites used without superstition, and vain ends may be innocent now; God makes use of them in setting forth his Kingdom.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Honours from Pagans under Providence may be accepted by the Saints. So Joseph received them.

D. 2. Ceremonies abstracted from superstition may be used in conferring honour on Gods Servants.

D. 3. Difference of habit is lawful between Powers and Inferiours.

D. 4. Honourable ensignes may be given & worn by honourable persons, Ver. 42.

D. 5. God can advance his poor prisoners to be second to Kings.

D. 6. Under Gods command Princes, and their People are made to honour his Saints.

D. 7. God may order his to be exalted by Paganish Edicts and Ceremonies, Ver. 43.

3. The confirmation of all this followeth.

1. By new asserting his dignity bestowed, And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I Pharaoh, and without thee shall not a man lift up his hand or his foot in all the Land of Egypt. — His hand only. Septua.

And without thy word shall not a man lift up his hand to hold weapons, nor his foot to ride upon an horse; &c. Cald.

I. The ground of confirmation. Pharaohs owne power, I am Pharaoh, and if I be Pharaoh, so it shall be with thee: Some note it a forme of swearing. As I am Pharaoh.

2. The confirmation of his state by this, Not a man shall lift up hand or foot; a phrase used to a moral sense, not natural, that is, none shall do any acts of power, but under thy conduct, and command. — The Calde paraphrase is good to this. Ver. 44.

II. By changing his name, And Pharaoh called Josephs name Zaphnath-paaneah, Ver. 45: φωφνηπαανια. Septuagint. A man to whome secrets are revealed, &c. Cald. fruitles are contentions about this and other names, because they are mostly unknown, and expositions can be but conjectural.

1. The imposer is Pharaoh, he that had power to honour him in his Kingdome.

2. The name imposed is Egyptian, fit to confirm him in that state and as it were naturalize him.

3. The

3. The reason of it, confirmation of his honour by names or titles, as hath been, and is accustomed with men.

III. By giving him a wife. And he gave unto him, Asenath daughter of Potipherah Priest, or Prince of On to wife, — Of Heliopolis. Sept. — Kaba Deon; — Prince of On. Cald. Herein is another pledge vouchsafed Joseph for sealing him in his dignity, & that was by making him of Princely alliance.

1. He that giveth in marriage is Pharaoh, not by overruling force, but by Royal dignation dealing between both parties.

2. The partie given is a Princes daughter, some read Priest. — כהן signifieth both, but it is most probably here used for Prince. This was not Potiphar his Master, for it is another name, and another place and dignity, which he had. Her name, her parentage, and her dignity are here noted; It is questioned.

Quest. Was this marriage lawful?

Ans. 1. It was by Gods ordering. 2. He is supposed to profelyte her. 3. Hereby the Church is increased.

4. By Josephs possession of his new place, and dignity, And Joseph went over the Land of Egypt, — Deficient in the Septuagint. — Went out ruling through all the Land of Egypt. Cald. In these observe.

1. The connection and order; And, then, or thus, that is, with his new honours, new name, and in his new condition, after all these conferred.

2. The possession noted, He went forth over the Land of Egypt, that is, set over it; not that he presently made such a progresse, but went out as Ruler; so the Calde well.

4. The last general of the Chapter followeth, which is the history of Josephs administration in his place, and that is visible in two points of time:

1. In the years of plenty. V. 46. 52.

2. In the years of famine. V. 53. 57.

In the former we have these particulars to observe.

1. Josephs survey of Egypt. Ver. 46.

2. Gods performance of promise. Ver. 47.

3. Josephs providence under God. Ver. 48. 49.

4. Josephs progeny in this time. Ver. 50. 51. 52.

To the first, herein we have recorded these things.

1. Josephs age, And Joseph was a Ver. 46: son of thirty yeares; when he stood before Pharaoh King of Egypt. Sept. and Cald. same.

Quest. Why are yeares named?

Ans. 1. For help of sacred history in other things. 2. To set out time of life, and affliction. 3. To note Gods marvelous providence to exalt one of such yeares to such a place, and make the aged submit.

2. Josephs power, And Joseph went out from before Pharaoh, — Sept. and Cald. same: that is, with power, commission and authority from him.

3. Josephs execution of his commission, And he passed through all the Land of Egypt. Sept. same. — Passed through as Lord, &c. Cald. In order to the precedent this must needs note his motion for execution of his commission, he passed through, ordering affaires, and preparing storehouses in all the parts and cities. V. 46.

Learn we.

D. 1. young sufferers for God, are sometimes timely exalted by him.

D. 2. Grace makes young yeares fit to guide and rule the aged.

D. 3. Men commission such to office, whom grace hath designed thereunto.

D. 4. Grace sets souls to execute to the uttermost the works unto which it calleth them. Ver. 46.

To the second, God makes good his promise, and Joseph is so far proved a true Prophet, in the interpretation of that part of the dream of seven fat kine, and seven full yeares upon one stalk; for now it is said, And the earth yielded in the seven years of plenty to handfulls. — Or made, Sept. — The inhabitants of the Land gathered corn into their barns, Cald. In this passage.

S s s 3 said

Ver. 47.

1. The subordinate cause, The Land made, That is, being commanded by God who made it soft.

2. The season noted, Seven years of plenty promised; Now that term so appointed by God, all inferior causes worke together.

3. The effect and issue, Handfulls, in great abundance, suitable to seven ears on a stalk. Ver. 47.

Learn thence.

D. 1. God having promised, the earth hath power to bring forth, or make increase.

D. 2. Number and measure of mercies are according to Gods word: what he calls plenty, is so.

D. 3. Gods command causeth handfulls to spring up at his pleasure. Ver. 47.

To the third: This declareth Josephs providence under God according to the counsel, which he gave for laying up in the yeares of plenty: Herein note.

Ver. 48.

1. The worke of his providence, And he gathered up: This is twice expressed. Sept. and Cald. same. The worke as to him was to give order and command that this gathering of food now in the yeares of plenty should be done according to former direction; this he is careful to do or see done according to the rule, which God shewed him of the fifth part.

2. The duration, The food of the seven yeares, which were in the land of Egypt, that is, of the seven yeares of plenty. Cald. the same. — עֲשֵׂה לְךָ מִצְוָה &c. Wherein was plenty, Sept. These were signified by the seven fat kine, and seven full ears. The worke thereunto applied notes.

1. That it was done within this time.

2. That he continued gathering to the end of this term: sense perhaps would have perswaded, why do you labour so the last year, when so much was laid up before, yet he knew, the seven yeares following would soone make an end of all, and not one jot of that measure, which God suggested to him, could be spared; faith made him worke to the last.

3. The order, and disposition of this worke as to place.

1. Generally noted, And he gave, or put food in the cities, Sept. and Cald. same.

Those were the safest places for garners to be in for preservation of food.

2. Specially, The food of the field, which was about every citie put he in the midst of it, Sept. and Cald. same. — Prudence here teacheth him so to dispose it for the convenience of the inhabitants, that they might not be forced to go far for food; this order he kept in his worke wisely. Ver. 48.

4. The measure of Josephs worke, And Joseph gathered come, as the sand of the sea, very much until he left numbering. — For there was not a number of it. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein God sheweth Joseph to do his worke throughly, where.

1. The worke is repeated, he gathered.

2. The measure added, Come as the sand until he ceased to number.

3. The reason of his cessation, there was no number, that is, it went beyond their arithmeticke to compass it.

Learn hence.

D. 1. God giving plenty, rulers are taught to gather it for publick sustentation, not cast it away.

D. 2. Wise hearts upon Gods intimation, will gather fruit as long as God giveth it.

D. 3. Prudence guideth rulers to lay up publicke store, in safe and convenient places. Ver. 48.

D. 4. Wisdom from God teacheth men to provide abundantly against the devouring of famine.

D. 5. Providence may, and doth out-reach mens capacities in number of mercies.

D. 6. Faithfulness and diligence are required to gather up the overflowing mercies of God. Ver. 49.

To the fourth thing observed, Josephs progeny, which God gave him after all this, whereabouts note.

1. The kinde and number of his seed; And to Joseph were borne two sons. Sept. and Cald. same, note here.

1. Their sexe or kind, they were sons, such as God meant to make special pillars in his Church.

2. Their number, they were two, set for two tribes.

2. The time of it, Before there came a yeare of the famine. Cald. the same.

Before the seven yeares of famine came. Sept. It was doubtless in those yeares of plenty, before the famine entered.

3. The mother noted, Whom Asenath the

Ver. 49.

Ver. 50.

the daughter of the Priest of On bare unto him. This was the wife, which Pharaoh gave him, and by her God giveth him seed. Ver. 50.

4. The naming of these sons, and that twofold.

1. Of the first borne, where we have,

Ver. 51. 1. The name imposed, And Joseph called the name of the first born Manasseh. Sept. and Cald. same. The name signifieth forgetting.

2. The reason of the name, For God hath made me forget all my toyle, and all my fathers house. Cald. the same. — All of my fathers house. Sept. By this imposition therefore of the name, Joseph makes a living monument of Gods providence.

1. In ordering of his trouble.

2. In continuing it, which are supposed.

3. In removing all that evil, into which his brethren of his fathers house had sold him. The refreshings vouchsafed make me forget my former bitter paines; I will remember this mercie of God in this my first borne. Ver. 51.

2. Of the son next following, wherein we may note.

Ver. 52.

1. The imposition of the name, And the name of the second called he Ephraim. Sep, and Cald. same. This name signifieth fruitfull, Multiplicationes ducit, אֶפְרַיִם.

2. The reason of giving this name, for God hath made me grow, or increase in the land of my affliction. Wherein he maketh another monument to providence, which had not onely made him to forget his sorrows, but increased him with offspring, riches and honours; all which be perpetuates to Gods praise in the name of this child. Ver. 52.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. God can give his owne not onely royalty, but progeny also to comfort them among strangers.

D. 2. Sexes and numbers of children are ordered by God as to increase his Church.

D. 3. God may give children before famine, yet not to be destroyed.

D. 4. God hath taken women from infidels to bear the seed of his Church. Ver. 50.

D. 5. Good fathers have care to name their children for perpetuating Gods providence.

D. 6. Gods making sorrows to be forgotten should be remembered by us and ours. Ver. 51.

D. 7. Second birth unto Gods Saints have moved them to second remembrances of God.

D. 8. God can make poor saints abound with riches, and progeny in the place of their affliction.

D. 9. Such fruitfulness is to be returned by us to perpetuate Gods name. Ver. 52.

To the second part of this last generall, which is Josephs administration in the yeares of famine; the history whereof is given from this 53 verse unto the 26 verse of the seven and fortieth chapter, wherein are reported.

1. His initial government. V. 53. to the end of this Chapter.

2. His carriage towards his brethren, &c.

3. His modelling the Land of Egypt for Pharaohs advantage. Ch. 47. V. 13. 26.

4. His converse with his father and his fathers house until his death, from verse 27. To the end of the booke. Chapters. 48. 49. 50.

1. His initial government upon the coming of the famine in Egypt, we have shortly pointed at in the latter part of this chapter, wherein.

1. The end of plenty, and the rise of famine are noted. V. 53. 54.

2. The cry of the people hereupon made to Pharaoh.

3. Pharaohs dismissal of them to Joseph. V. 55.

4. Josephs execution of his office. V. 56.

5. The access of other countreys to Joseph. V. 57.

In the first are reported two events of providence.

1. The period which God put to the seven yeares of plenty promised, and represented in the seven fat kine, &c. And the seven yeares of plenty were ended, which was in the land of Egypt. Cald. the same: — וַיֵּשְׁבֶר. Sept. referring to 7^m. yeares. In this is declared the truth of Josephs interpretation of the disappearing of the full ears at such a time.

1. The term of connection is here to be considered, which immediately brings in the famine upon plenty, And, or then plenty was finished.

2. The matter connected, and that is, the end of Egypts abundance.

1. The plenty is named.

2. The specification, by place, it was peculiar to Egypt.

3. The end is expressed, which was as to the ruine of it; no more came immediately after it. V. 53.

2. The entrance of famine, which declared the truth of Josephs interpretation also, of the seven ill-favoured kine, which devoured the fat; in which narration are.

1. The appearance of famine, And the seven Ver. 54.

seven years of famine begun to come. Sept. and Cald. same. That is, now at the appointed time the earth denied its wonted increase; and now want, hunger, and destroying famine began to appear.

2. The rule of this providence, which was revelation by Joseph, As Joseph had said. Sept. and Cald. same. Here the Egyptians are convinced, that he was a true Prophet. All things came to pass according to his word.

3. The sad issue of this cessation, And the famine was in all lands. But this must here be meant of the Countreys round about Egypt; for the hand of God was gone out against all, and that justly, who had abused plenty.

4. The exception of Egypt from the sad condition of other places; And in all the land of Egypt there was bread. This was a signal providence, which must be known to the nations round about, when themselves were in miserable want.

1. The seasonableness of the comfort.

2. The sufficiency of it in such a time is here noted; It was not onely in a part but in all the land of Egypt. Ver. 54.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Providence puts an end to plenty at his will, however sensuall men thinke not of it.

D. 2. The fruitfulest land becometh barren, if God speake the word. even Egypt.

D. 3. Periods of full conditions are observable by men; Gods Spirit notes them. Ver. 54.

D. 4. In the designe of providence, wants succeed plenty at the heels.

D. 5. Entrance of dearth, though grievous, yet may make but small impression on souls.

D. 6. Not a word of God falleth to the ground, but as he saith, so it is.

D. 7. Providence orders Lands for scarcity as well as plenty.

D. 8. God can give bread to Egypt, when he denieth it to other nations for his owne ends. Ver. 54.

Ver. 55. 2. The cry of the people commeth next, And all the land of Egypt was famished, or hungry, and the people cryed to Pharaoh for bread. Sept. and Cald. same. Where we have to note.

1. The prevalence of famine in Egypt, it was now groaning generally under hunger which is conceived to be towards the second year, they were hungry, and hunger pinched them.

2. The effect of this, it made the people go and cry to Pharaoh, wherein we may see.

1. Providence overruling, that the people did not breake the granaries, and take food.

2. Their pain, that makes them cry for themselves and children, as being ready to perish.

3. Their refuge, they go to their King, as a father, for bread. Such should they be.

3. Pharaohs designation of them, he turns them over to Joseph, And Pharaoh said to all the Egyptians, go to Joseph, what he saith unto you do. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein note.

1. Pharaohs amandation, he turns them from himselfe to his steward, not in regardlesnes of them, but in respect, to satisfy their wants.

2. His direction to them.

1. Go to Joseph.

2. What he saith, do. It may be the storehouses were not yet opened, and therefore they came to the King, he according to his former commission sends them to be answered by Joseph, without whom he promised, none should move hand or foot, and chargeth them to be obedient to him.

Observe we.

D. 1. Extremities are ordered by providence, where lesser evils move not a people.

D. 2. Extreme wants make soules cry out for help unto their rulers. Help o King. 2. Kings. 6.

D. 3. Rulers should have in readiness meanes to answer the wants of their people.

D. 4. Obedience to overseers is needful, when soules would have wants supplied. Ver. 55.

4. Josephs administration or execution of his office followeth; in the description whereof note.

1. The universal spreading of the famine. And the famine was over all the face of the earth. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein is noted the occasion and ground of Josephs administration; when the hand of God pressed every place, and now they were sensible of hunger, now he works.

2. Josephs administration, And Joseph opened opened all, which (had) in them, that is the storehouses, And sold to the Egyptians, or brake. All the garners, Sept. wherein was corne. Cald. Herein note.

1. Prudence and goodnes in opening the storehouses, when there was need for the people.

2. Justice, in breaking out to every man their due portion, or allowing so much as to breake their hunger, so Joseph is said to sell corne to them; such an act, carrieth a blessing on it. Proverbs. 11. 26.

3. The growth of the famine in Egypt, And the famine waxed strong in the land of Egypt. Cald. the same. The seaventy wants it. This adds to the cause of Josephs circumspection in administering to the necessities of Egypt. The heavier the judgement, the greater his care; but so God made his word good, which was foretold by him. Ver. 56.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Spreading judgements God makes to occasion the sweeter acts of providence.

D. 2. In midst of pressing wants, it is seasonable to open wayes of supply, which God giveth.

D. 3. Proportionable breaking, or selling out to people in wants, is the duty of rulers.

D. 4. In the midst of supplies God can make wants to get strength over poor creatures. Ver. 56.

5. The last thing in this Chapter setting forth Josephs administration, is the access of other neighbouring countreys, which had been carelesse of making provision for times of want, those now come to Egypt; & this prepares to the following history; for upon the same reason came his brethren to Egypt also to buy food. Herein note.

Ver. 57.

לשבר

1. The access of other countreys, And all the earth, or ever, land came to Joseph in to Egypt, to break, as the word in one conjugation (Piel) signifieth: in Kal it noteth to buy. So the Septuagint, and Cald. to buy corn of Joseph. So providence ordered others to be in want.

2. The reason of their access, Because the famine prevailed in every land. Or was strong. So Septuagint and Cald. Here is asserted.

1. The fore stroke of God, which was great famine.

2. The extent of it; in every land round about Egypt, Canaan, Syria, Arabia, which were bordering. So God orders universal plagues to bring about his special purpose of grace.

Learn from it.

D. 1. Providence orders some countreys to depend on others for their sustenance.

D. 2. Wants make nations stoop, and seeke about for the support of life.

D. 3. Grace can make poor captives become preservers of nations.

D. 4. Sore plagues may be in order to make men inquire after, and prize abused mercies.

D. 5. General judgements are sent to manifest Gods special ends of grace to his. Ver. 57.

CHAP. XLII.

2. IN this chapter begins the history of Josephs carriage in his government toward his brethren, and this generally observed is three fold.

1. In their first coming into Egypt. Chap. 42.

2. In their second advent for food. Chap. 43. Chap. 44. 3.

3. In their returne, being arrested. Chap. 44. 4, &c. to Chap. 47. 12.

In the first of these related in this Chapter 42. we have these generalls.

1. The descent of Jacobs sons to Egypt. Ver. 1. 5.

2. Their entertainment by Joseph there. Ver. 6. 28

3. Their returne to their father. Ver. 29. 38.

1. About the descent of Jacobs sons we may note.

1. The occasion and cause of their going into Egypt. Ver. 1. 2.

2. Their descent it selfe. Ver. 3. 4. 5.

In the former we have also to observe. 1. The occasion of their going thither, And Jacob saw, that there was corne in Egypt. Sept. וַיֵּרָא יַעֲקֹב Sept. That corne was sold. Cald. Note.

1. The observer here, Jacob, the father of them.

2. The observation which he tooke, here it is given to his eye, he saw, afterward to his ear; If question be, how he could see it? Likely by the corne bought, and brought home by his neighbours, the Canaanites; or sight may be put for understanding, he understood and perceived this.

3. The matter of his observation, that while famine was in Canaan, there was corne to be sold in Egypt. The word לשבר signisignifieth breaking, and sometimes buying and selling, and metonymically it notes that which is bought, and sold; and in this place it must needs be come, which was that, which they wanted, and desired to buy. This observation of Jacobs, was the occasion of his sons going downe to Egypt.

2. The cause of their descent, twofold.
1. In Jacobs motion made unto them, which is several ways.

1. By way of expostulatory reproof, And Jacob said to his sons, why look ye upon your selves, or one upon another? in aū jāpūnū. Why dispond ye, or are ye idle, or slow, Sept. — Why neglect ye? Cald. Herein.

1. The partic reprehending, a provident father.

2. The matter of reprehension; his sons negligence, dispondency, or idlegazing one upon another, without any sollicitation to provide bread for themselves and families: they were as stupified, looking upon one another, but doing nothing.

3. The reason of it implied, that other Canaanites had been seeking food in Egypt, and they sit still, meaneas God had afforded, and they fought not after it, Ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

2. By way of declaration to them, And he said unto them, behold I have heard, that there is selling of corne in Egypt. — Cald. the same. — That there is corne in Egypt, Sept. Where note.

1. He that reproveth, sheweth them how to mend, there is help in such a place.

2. He giveth them the benefit of his owne ears, I your father have heard, and you may heare too by them that come from Egypt, that there is a market of corn there, and there you may buy as others do of them who sell.

3. By way of command, Go downe thither, and buy corn for us from thence. — Cald. same. — A little food, Sept. Herein he commands.

1. Their motion, goye downe thither, as others.

2. Their worke, buy us corn from thence.

3. The end of Jacobs motion to them, And we shall live and not dye, Sept. and Cald. same. This end is set out.

1. Positively, to maintaine life in our families.

2. Negatively, that we may not all be killed with famine. Acts. 7. 11. 12. Ver. 2.

D. 10. Fatherly authority may injoyne sons to go, and fetch food, where it may be had.

D. 11. Just buying and selling is the way of God to preserve community in the world.

D. 12. The preservation of life, and preventing of death in families must put fathers upon that care. V. 2.

2. Their descent now followeth; where in occurre.

1. The onset of them who were commanded to go. Ver. 3.

2. The exception of one, who went not. Ver. 4.

3. The arrival of them, who went to Egypt. Ver. 5.

To the first: wee have herein to observe,

1. The parties set out by their relation, The brethren of Joseph, Sept. and Cald. same. — All of the same father, not of the same mother.

2. Their number, they were ten; all those who hated Ioseph, and had an hand in selling him into Egypt: this number now was ordered of God to go to that place, whither they had sold their brother to be a slave.

3. Their attempt to their journey, they descended.

4. Their end — to buy corne from Egypt. Septuag. and Cald same. little did these

Ver. 3.

these thinke, that they were going to Egypt, to bow to Ioseph, or accomplish the truth of his dreames; they aime at nothing but to get food, and that from the hand of strangers, not from their brothers, whom they thought to be low enough, or out of the world: Their end was good to get food, but they are sent to do something else. Ver. 3.

D. 3. Need of corn, and food may provoke those to seeke it from such, as they have hated.

D. 4. To the same place God may send those to be afflicted who have afflicted others in the same. V. 3.

2. The exception which Jacob made in sending his sons.

Ver. 4.

1. The person excepted. But Benjamin, Josephs brother, Jacob sent not with his brethren. Sept. and Cald. same. Where note.

1. The Fathers tendernes to his Benjamin.

2. Josephs nearest relation are remembered, in the reserving him from going.

2. The reason added. For he said, least mischief befall him. — Mischief, Sept. — death. Calde. deadly mischief is meant.

Quest. Why is Jacob more tender to this then the others?

Ans. 1. His age, he was but young.

2. His mother, it was Rachels son, Josephs brother.

3. Gods hand overruled in this first journey, that the ten who had dealt hardly with Joseph should go by themselves.

D. 3. Loss of one child may make Fathers fear mischief to another. Ver. 4.

3. The arrivall of the ten sons of Jacob in Egypt followeth, verse 5th, wherein are recorded,

1. Their advent, And the sons of Israel came to buy corne in the midst of them, who came. — To Egypt with them, who came. Sept. and Cald. the same.

1. The persons are noted, who were the sons of Jacob, even those ten spoken of before.

2. Their advent, they came, or were come into Egypt at this time.

3. Their end, it was to buy, the same word as before is used, that notes cometh the Seaventy is full, to buy wheat.

4. Their company, together with their neighbours, and other strangers, who came thither to buy food. The Church as well as others are put to straits, and therefore need, among others, to looke out for maintaining life in the world.

2. The reason of this coming againe repeated, For the famine was in the land of Canaan. Sept. and Cald. same. The land of promise to Jacob, yea and his owne family therein, are not exempted from publicke judgements, which may presse them as others to seeke for food.

Learn we.

D. 1. Providence carrieth persons safely to the place where God purposeth to try or refresh them.

D. 2. Israels sons are put to hard travells for their lives, as well as others.

D. 3. Bread or food will draw hungry souls unto paines to get it.

D. 4. Church-separation from the world keeps not from civil society with them of the world.

D. 5. The land of promise and Jacobs family may smart in publicke plagues.

D. 6. It is meet for Israels sons, as to bear Gods hand, so to follow providence to ease it. Ver. 5.

2. The next head in the first general is the entertainment, which they finde from Joseph at this first advent, set out from verse 6. to 28. Wherein note.

1. His pretended austeritie to them. Ver. 6. 17.

2. His capitulation with them. Ver. 18. 19. 20.

3. The impression of these dealings on them. Ver. 21. 23.

4. Josephs naturall affection, and care of them. Ver. 24. 28.

In the first of these many particulars occurre,

1. The occasion of Israels sons appearing before

Ver. 6.

before him, which was his place and power of selling, And Joseph hee was the ruler over the land, he it was, that sold corne to all the people of the land. Sold; Sept. Sold corne. Calde. Herein are noted.

1. Josephs dignity, hee was Ruler, a word whence Sultan an Arabian word cometh, as some say, which was a title of chief Rulers in Egypt, and Babylon; such was Joseph.

2. Josephs duty or worke in this place, which was to see the felling out of the corne, and spending of the store himselfe. These two necessitated their comming into his presence; for had publick markets been elsewhere, probably they might have been provided without seeing him: But so God ordered it to fulfill other prophetesies.

2. Their addresse and carriage in Josephs presence, And Josephs brethren came and bowed down themselves unto him, faces to the ground. Sept. and Cald. same, here we have.

1. Their admittance.

2. Their obeisance. — See here the accomplishment of Gods will, which men do, who were resolved never to do it. Here Joseph sheate stands upright, and his brethren sheaves bow to it, which to prevent they sold him into Egypt and by selling him, brought the thing to passe, as is here now apparent.

Note hence.

D. 1. Dignity and duty are well joyned, when put out together for publicke good.

D. 2. Providence makes Joseph great at that time when his brethren are low. So God sets up, and plucks down as he pleaseth.

D. 3. It is good when rulers looke to their duties themselves, and not too much trust servants.

D. 4. Such good and diligent rulers God honours before their brethren.

D. 5. Men accomplish the decrees of God when they little thinke of it.

D. 6. Gods word must stand whatever men do to frustrate it. So it doth in this bowing. Ver. 6.

Ver. 7.

3. Josephs cognizance of his brethren, and carriage in generall.

1. His demeanor in generall, And Joseph saw his brethren, and knew them, but he made himselfe strange, and spake with, or to them hard things. Sept. the same. — And hee thought what to speake with them, or to them, and he spake hard things. Calde. Here providence offers Joseph a tryall, to see what he would do with them, that had dealt so ill with him, and we shall see the issue; Herein note.

1. Josephs brethren are offered to his sight humbling themselves, and bowing before him.

2. They are taken into knowledge, He knew them, who they were, and their relations.

3. They are seemingly distastd by him. 1. He estranged himselfe from them, or demeaned himselfe as a stranger. It is the sam eword that is used before to signifie his knowledge of them, but in another conjugation, and imports, that after knowledge, yet he carrieth himselfe as a stranger or an Egyptian.

2. His speech is hard and rough, and threatning, as afterward in special appears.

2. His demeanor in particular.

1. In word. V. 7. 16.

2. In deed. Ver. 17. Wherein many things occur. In the first, which is his treaty with them by word, it is threefold.

1. By way of examination. Ver. 7.

2. By way of charge. Ver. 8. 13.

3. By way of proof. Ver. 14. 15. 16.

1. That which is by examination, is in the close of the seventeenth verse, wherein we have.

1. His sharp expostulation, And he said to them, whence come ye?

1. He dissembles his knowledge, he knew whence they were, but hides it.

2. He sharply question's them; for those were hard words, whence come ye? what are ye? what make ye here?

2. Their humble reply: wherein they shew.

1. Their place, And they said out of the Land of Canaan, Sept. and Cald. same. The words are plaine.

2. Their busines, to buy food, so far they speak humbly, and truly; for this cause, upon their fathers command, they were come thither. Ver. 7.

Observe we.

D. 1. In the time appointed God makes his Saints see, that effected, which he gave in dreams.

D. 2. God causeth his servants to know them who fulfill his prophetesies, though themselves know it not.

D. 3. God sometimes gives enemies into the hands of his people to try them.

D. 4. Concealment of relation, and the the guise of a stranger is not unlawful for Saints to act.

D. 5. Hard words, and carriage to such as have been injurious, may be used by Saints without sin.

D. 6. Rulers may question men about their place, though they know it.

D. 7. Misery makes men humbly reply, who formerly scorn'd to stoop.

D. 8. It is but reasonable, men should declare their place and busines being in a strange land. Ver. 7.

2. He speaketh to them by way of charge in the six following verses, wherein are two heads of discourse. (1.) Ver. 8. 9. 10. 11. (2.) ver. 12. 13.

1. In the former we have to note Josephs first charge and therein.

1. The occasion of it, which was twofold.

Ver. 8. 1. His knowledge of them, and their ignorance of him, And Joseph knew his brethren, but they knew not him. Sept. and Cald. same. — This gave him the first advantage thus to deal with them he was concealed from them, and they knowne to him. Ver. 8.

Ver. 9. 2. His recognition of his former dreames, And Joseph remembered the dreames, which he dreamed of them, or he remembered for them, that is, now to make use of them. Cald. the same. Which he saw. Sept. herein we may consider.

1. Something supposed, that Joseph might have forgotten those dreames, by being in affliction and prison, which he did now fully understand.

2. His act exprest, he remembered his dreames, that is, now they appear to him with their effect, and accomplishment, while he seeth his brethren bowing before him, so he comes to a full knowledge of those Prophetically discoveries, which he knew not before.

3. The use he makes of his memory, he remembereth his dreames for them, that is, to deal with them by way of tryall, as afterward appears: So the dative (לָהֶם) is best added to the verb remembered: for to read it annexed to his dreaming, (which he dreamed of them) as is read, there wants a preposition to make that sense. He remembered his dreames for them, is plaine Grammatically reading, that is, to make use of these toward them.

2. The charge laid on them, And he said unto them, ye are spies, ye are footing men, to see the nakednes of the land are ye come. — To consider the footsteps of the land, &c. Sept. To see the weak parts of the land, &c. Cald. Here they are charged with two evils capital.

1. In their condition, that they were

Spies, as the Seventy, or footers as the Hebrew seems to intimate, such as go up and down to spy.

2. In their worke or designe, to finde out the nakednes of the land, and take advantage against the state; of this they are accused. Ver. 9.

3. Their reply unto this charge layd on them.

1. By denyall, And they said unto him, Nay my Lord. Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein they plead, and that truly, not guilty. Ver. 10.

2. By declaring their designe, But thy servants are come to buy food, Sept. and Cald. same. This was the truth, they came to supply their hunger in an honest way of buying. Ver. 10.

3. By assering.

1. Their common parent, We all are sons of one man. Ver. 11.

2. Their truth and uprightness, we are right, or true. Cald. the same. — We are peaceable. Sept. thy servants are not spies; our words and deeds agree; therefore wee are upright, and no spies. Ver. 11.

2. In the latter head of discourse we have also.

1. Josephs instance in repeating his charge. And he said unto them, nay, but ye are come to see the nakednes of the land. — Sept. Infirmitate Terrae. Calde. Here see his persisterie in charging them of treacherous designs: So he carrieth on yet his act toward them. Ver. 12.

2. Their apologetical reply repeated. Ver. 13. And they said, we thy servants were twelve brethren, the sons of one man, in the land of Canaan, and behold the younger is with our father this day, and one is not. We twelve brethren, &c. Sept. — One doth not appear. Cald. This argument for their vindication is partly true, and partly false.

1. It is true that there were twelve brethren, and that ten of one mans sons should be sent together to be spies, was altogether improbable, to adventure all their lives at once upon such a designe.

2. It is true, that the youngest was now with his father left at home as the comfort of his age.

3. It was false, that they said, one was not, for he was at that time with them, though they knew it not; they knew well enough what they had done with him, but now tell the old tale, that he was dead, though himselfe was alive, and heard it; upon this account Josephs assering is not to be condemned, so far as it tends to bring them to a sight of their sin. Thus farre the charge.

3. He bespeake's them by way of proof, to try them further. Ver. 14. 15. 16. wherein note,

1. The resumption of his charge. V. 14. And Joseph said, &c. which is to say, for Ver. 14. Tit 3. this this purpose I charge you as spies, try whether you say truth in all things.

2. The probation whereupon he puts them, of which

1. The matter of it, whether they had a younger brother, if so, they would appear true, if not, false. To make this proof he requirerh exactly.

Ver. 15.

1. That one of them be sent home to fetch him.

2. That in the interim the rest be prisoners.

3. That the youngest brother must come unto him.

4. That unless this be performed they shall be accounted spies, and not true men.

Ver. 16.

2. The forme of this proposall by way of attention or oath, Pharaoh liveth or By the life of Pharaoh: It is doubtles a strong asseveration among the Egyptians to confirme any thing spoken, by the life of the King. All this is austerly in speech. — Health of Pharaoh. Sept.

Ver. 17.

2. His pretended austerly was in action, And he put them, or gathered them in-ward three dayes, Sept and Cald. same.

No difficulty in the words: he imprisoned them three dayes, Onely some queries would be answered.

Quest. 1. How could Joseph be concealed from his father so long?

Ans. 1. His father lookes not after him, supposing him to be dead as his brethren said. 2. In Iosephs affliction, hee could not make himselfe knowne, being kept close. 3. In all estates the great cause was Gods providence, who had appointed the time of manifestation to his father.

Quest. 2. Dost Joseph wel to dissemble himselfe?

Ans. 1. The end of this action (as the event sheweth) was not to hurt them, but try them. 2. His concealment of himselfe was no dissimulation at all, being not asked about his relation.

3. The like action was done by Christ himselfe, when he made as if hee would go further being desired to stay at Emmaus. Luke. 24. In this Ioseph cannot justly be condemned.

Quest. 3. Was it not alye to call them spies, when he knew they were not?

Ans. 1. His charge is not absolute, but conditional, as he expounds himselfe, if their words were not true, and did not bring their brother.

2. It is not sin for rulers to charge by way of trial. 3. Probably yet some passion in Ioseph might worke irregularly herein.

Quest. 4. Was it not iniquity to imprison innocents?

Ans. 1. In all things they were not innocent, though their proper crime were not alleged. 2. The imprisonment was no intended oppression to them, but mannaged with good purposes. 3. In the issue they suffer no evil by it, therefore it cannot be justly charged with iniquity.

Quest. 5. Was it not a part of ungodlines to lwear by the life of Pharaoh?

Ans. 1. The forme of speech is judged sometimes not to be an oath, as in Anna to Eli. 1. Sam. 1. 26. 2. granting that it is an oath, nothing can be said for excuse, but that it was Iosephs infirmity to comply with Courts oaths.

Quest. 6. But did he not forswear himselfe, in swearing they were spies?

Ans. 1. He did not positively swear they were spies, but upon condition they proved not their words, and brought not their brother; no perjury therefore can be charged on him.

D. 3. The fear of God keeps rulers from oppressing their brethren. Ver. 18.

2. As to this special capitulation with them.

1. For tryal of their truth, he requirerh onely one of them to be left hostage, If ye be true men, let one of your brethren be bound in the house of your ward. — Cald. the same. If ye be peaceable, &c. Sept. Wherein observe.

1. The thing to be proved is their truth.

2. The way of proving, to leave one as hostage, until they make good their word.

2. He dismisseth all the rest, wherein note.

1. Their discharge, Go ye, take ye your way home.

2. Their accommodation made by Ioseph, Carry ye corne for the famine of your houses. — The portion of corne buy, Sept. — Corne that failed in your house.

Cald. So that here we see natural affection working in Ioseph, not to send them empty, but full of provision for the sustentance of their families. To the letter, Carry the breaking of hunger to your houses; the phrase used by the Hebrewes for corne. Ver. 19.

3. The injunction laid upon them, And ye shall bring your youngest brother unto me, and your words shall be verified, and ye shall not dye. — Cald. the same. — if not, ye shall dye, Sept. Herein observe.

1. The worke enjoined, and that peremptorily, You shall bring your youngest brother to me. He capitulates not, if your father will suffer him, but this I will have done. — The scope of this injunction was.

1. Proof of them to be men of truth, their words shall then have credit, as the Sept. reads.

2. Security to themselves, ye shall not die as spies, nor your hostage brother suffer.

1. Their submission to it, And they did so, Sept. Cald. same. That is, they agreed fully to his motion; it was more easie for Jacob

Jacob, that nine of his Sons returne, rather then one; and those might carry supply to their families, one could not; and most likely it was that many might prevail with Jacob to send Benjamin, sooner then one; but the proposall carrying in it so much advantage, therefore they yeild unto it. 3. Now followeth the history of the impression, which these hard dealings by Gods hand wrought upon them. Ver. 21. 22. 23. Wherein the impression general is a conscience of their cruel dealings against their brother Joseph, and their selfe-judging for it, about the whole we have.

1. The mutual charge one of another, wherein.

Ver. 21.

1. The parties are noted, And they said, a man to his brother. Every one to his brother. Sept. and Cald. The whole number of them are here intended, all their hearts were smitten, and as every mans conscience lieth in his own face, so one brother helps to accuse another among themselves.

2. The charge which they mutually lay one upon another, Verily we are guilty concerning our brother, because we saw the distress of his soul in his beseeching us for grace, and we heard him not. We are in sinnes, because we despised the affliction, Sept. We yeilded not to him. Cald. Note here.

1. They take home sin upon themselves concerning Joseph their brother. We have sinned against our brother, and are guilty in our owne consciences, we cannot put off this sinne, we are still in sins, as the Seventy.

2. The particular grounds of this selfe judging.

1. That they put his soul to distress and anguish, as by stripping him, putting him into the pit, selling him to strangers.

2. That he wept and cried, and besought them for favour, when he was in their hands, which should have moved the bowels of brethren.

3. That they saw his anguish, and yet would not hear him, but sell him to be used, or destroyed at the pleasure of infidels.

3. The judgement they passe upon the whole, Therefore is this distress come upon us, Sept. Cald. same. Wherein they note.

1. The relation, anguish is upon us, as we layd it upon him; we threw him into a pit, and we are cast into prison, we used him roughly, and so we are used our selves, we would not hear his intercessions, and now ours are rejected.

2. The justice of it, Therefore is this straight come upon us, as we have done, so hath the Lord requited us. Thus Adonibezek. 1. Judges. Ver. 21.

2. The personal charge layd upon them by Reuben, and this is by way of aggravation of the others sin, here.

1. The accuser Reuben, the eldest, who advised his putting in the pit, that he might deliver him. Gen. 37. 21. 22. And Reuben answered, &c.

2. The charge he layeth on them, in these two things.

1. That he admonished them as to this, Spake not I unto you, saying, do not sin against the child. Cald. the same. Do not injure the child. Sept. His expostulation imports their concession, that they could not deny it, but that he had advised them to do him no wrong.

2. That notwithstanding they would not hearken, nor be perswaded by him, but tooke him and sold him in his absence. Gen. 37. 29.

3. The judgement, which he passeth thereupon, And also behold, his blood is required. Sept. and Cald. the same. So he agreeth with their sentence, onely in other terms, they said, therefore this distress is come, and he saith, his blood is required, that is, by this distress, which now befall them in Egypt, God did require their brothers blood at their hands, by retaliating their cruelties upon themselves. All this they spake alone one to another in the Hebrew language, the interpreter of Joseph being absent. Ver. 22.

3. The reason of their speaking so freely, and aloud one to another before Joseph, And they knew not, that Joseph was hearing, or understanding, for an interpreter was between them. Sept. and Cald. the same. Herein note.

1. The cause of their freeness of speech is is their ignorance of Josephs understanding their language, they thought him to be an Egyptian, not skill'd in their dialect.

2. The ground of this ignorance at least in part, because in all this time of discourse an interpreter was between them, telling Josephs words to them, and theirs to him: So that hereupon, they were confident that hee understood not their conference. Ver. 23.

Quest. 1. Why did this affliction minde them of their sin against Joseph, rather then other sins?

Ans. 1. It is not said; that they were troubled for no more, they had many sins among them. 2. The retaliation of the same distress was upon them, which they saw upon their brother, which seemed to point out that sin in which they had slept three & twenty years. 3. Providence doubtles so ordered it, that Joseph also might be wrought upon with their confessions to use bowels toward them.

Quest. 2. Why doth Reuben charge blood on them, when they shed none?

Ans. 1. True it is, actually they shed not his blood. 2. It is as true, they intended to shed it. 3. They sold him into such hands as might have killed him; yea and thought no lesse but that he was slayne: therefore none stand to excuse, or shake off blood.

- D. 8. Such sinners God usually answers with retaliation. Ver. 21.
- D. 9. Among sinners, the lesse guilty may be moved to charge the rest.

D. 10. Premonition against sinning doth much aggravate sin committed.

D. 11. Deafness to warnings against sin, makes it ten times more sinful.

D. 12. Blood is justly required of them, who intend to spill it, though they do it not.

D. 13. God therefore requirereth sin because men make light of it, and hearken not. Ver. 22.

D. 16. Such mistakes are ordered by God to the greater good of such whome he loveth. Ver. 23.

4. Hereupon followeth the discovery of Josephs affection and care unto them at last. Ver. 24. 25.

1. His brotherly affection is discovered upon hearing them charge one another, and lay home their sin upon themselves. Ver. 24. In the report whereof, note.

1. His real inward affection, And he turned about from them, and wept. Sept. and Cald. the same.

1. The occasion was his brothers confession of their cruelty against him.

2. The principle of it was tender bowels to them, being brought to see their sin.

3. The effect was weeping and compassion.

4. The manner of expressing, not before them, but turning aside to a private place.

2. His austere action consequent notwithstanding, And he returned to them, and spake to them, and tooke from them Simon, and bound him before their eyes. Sept. & Cald. the same.

1. His reverie is here reported, after nature had a little vented itself, magnanimity puts a stop to passion, and in he comes to them againe.

2. His discourse, he spake to them, it is not said what he spake, but likely to the tenor of the former agreement about leaving one behinde, and dispatching the rest away.

3. His action, done doubtles by his command, and that twofold.

V v v

1. He

1. He tooke Simeon from them, whether they agreed on him, or Ioseph onely pitched on him, is not related.

2. He bound him before their eyes, that is, doubtles either by pinniting of him, or putting bolts upon his heels, such courtes as was taken with prisoners under such suspicion; and all their eyes saw to be effected.

Quest. 1. Why was Simeon taken?

Ans. 1. It is probable, that Ioseph pitched on him, and the rather because he was the eldest of them, and the leader of the rest to destroy him, for Reuben delivered him from being slain & was absent, when he was sold; for which cause Ioseph might rather choose to secure him.

2. God yet might see, he had more need of abasing, and therefore ordered, he should be the man.

Quest. 2. But why was he so hardly bound?

Ans. 1. It might be as a terror to the rest, and quicken them to returne with Benjamin for his deliverance.

2. It is not likely that he was kept so bound long, but for the present to bring to a serious humbling.

Ver. 25. 1. His tendernes towards them, expressed in three acts, and issues, And Ioseph commanded, and they filled their vessels with corne, &c. Sept. and Cald. the same; the principal act of Ioseph, is command concerning them, and thus orders his Ministers to three acts of love to them.

1. To give them corne enough; which appears by what they did, they filled their vessels, what ever they were; we read sacks, because we so carry corne, but what ever vessels they brought, they were filled. He is enlarged to them for as much as they could carry with them.

2. To give them grains, and therefore to returne every mans money into his sack, And to make their money of every man to returne into his sack. Sept. and Cald. the same. Here his liberality more appears, he did not so with strangers, which came to buy.

3. To give them provision for their journey over and above, And to give them provision for the way. Sept. and Cald. the same. That is, to keep their store from spending, to give them an overplus for food in their journey. Ioseph did not do so to all.

4. The performance of all, And thus he did to them, not onely did he injoyne it, but thus was it done, And so it was done to them Sept. and Cald. as the Hebrew. They did, that is, his Ministers did as they were commanded: So he did it by them. Ver. 25.

2. Their late dismissal wherein we have.

1. Their preparation, And they tooke Ver. 26.

up their corne upon their asses. Sept. and Cald. the same. That is, as they had leave, and were licenced, they take their facks, as Iosephs men delivered them, and laded their beasts in order to be gone.

2. Their departure, And they went from thence. Sept. and Cald. the same. Under providence thus they are dismissed to go to their homes, after the tryalls, which met with them. Thoughtfull, double, they went, and yet quiet, that they had a passe granted to go home.

3. The event discovered to them in their way, with the impression of it upon them, wherein.

Ver. 37. 1. The event itselfe, And one opened his sack, to give provender to his ass in the inn; and he saw his money, and behold, it was in the mouth of his sack. Cald. the same. Where they lodged, and saw the bundle of his money, &c. Sept. Here note.

1. The occasion was opening his sack to give some provender to his ass, the Seventy read, to the asses, meaning all, and probably one might carry provision for all, because the rest opened not their sacks, until they came home.

2. The event, he saw the bundle of money in his sacks mouth: a strange and unexpected thing to him; he found money, looking for provender. Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 2. His narration of it to his brethren, And he said to his brethren, my money is restored me, and also behold it is in my sack, Sept. and Cald. the same. This strange accident could not be concealed, but he declared it to his brethren.

3. The impression made.

1. Of fainting, And their heart went out. — Was astonished. Sept. — The knowledge of their hearts departed. Cald. It notes a passion transcendent, which tooke away their reason for present, that they were as in a maze.

2. Of fear, And they trembled a man with his brother. — They were troubled. Sept. — They were astonished. Cald. A very great fear fell upon them, and they looked one upon another with trembling at such an unexpected event.

4. The expression of their trouble, saying, what is this that God hath done unto us? or why hath God done this unto us? Sept. and Cald. the same. The letter is plaine. All the question is about the forme of speech, what it may be, and what this expostulation imports. It certainly relates to God, but understood by divers, various ways.

1. Some take it to be a challenging of God, or complaining against him, who ordered this as a new trouble for their old sin, to betray them unto those, that sought their lives.

2. Others take it in a milder way, that they looke to God in this matter, as justly remembreing their guilt, and so might order this, in judgement, to them, which seemeth most likely, as if hereby they should be made obnoxious to the accusations of the Egyptians, so they expresse their thoughts Ch. 43. 18. Ver. 28.

3. Now followeth the last general of the Chapter, which containeth the returne of Jacobs sons unto their father, wherein we have to note.

1. Their advent to him, And they came Ver. 29.

to Jacob their father in the land of Canaan, Sept. and Cald. the same. No difficulty is here, The connection of this to the former notes the order of those providences; after their hard travell and harsh entertainment in Egypt, at last under the good hand of God, they reach to Jacob their father, who was looking hard for them, and likely full of carefull thoughts about them, and at last they arrive safely, though with some sad impressions.

2. Their narration of all events, which befell them in his hearing, And declared to him all that befell them, saying, Sept. and Cald. the same, which narration carrieth these particulars, Ver. 29.

1. The carriage of the Lord Egypt to. Ver. 30.

ward them in word, The Man, the Lord (— אֲדֹנָי — Lords) of the Land (the plural joined with the singular) spake with hard words, or things, and gave us for spies of the Land. — Put us in prison. Sept. thought us spies. Cald. This is no more, then what was before opened, Ver. 30.

2. Their reply unto him, And we said unto him, we are true men, we are not spies. Ver. 31. We are twelve brethren, sons of our father, one is not, and the youngest is this day with our father in the land of Canaan, Sept. and Cald. the same. Ver. 32. All this was spoken before.

Ver. 33. 3. His returne to them, And the Man, the Lord of the land, said unto us, by this shall I know, that ye are true men, leave one of your brethren with mee, for the famin of your houses, and go. — Take the portion of wheat you have bought, &c. Sept. — Corn that failed. Cald. Ver. 23. And bring your youngest brother unto me, and I shall know, that ye are not spies, but that ye are true men; I will give you your brother, and ye shall reside in the land. Peaceable, Sept.

Ver. 34. — Cald. the same. Ver. 34. Thus far is their narration to Jacob their father; all is not repeated exactly here, it may be not to make it more grievous to their father, and to make Benjamins returne with them into Egypt more feasible.

- D. 1. Providence carrieth guilty soules in, through, and out of temporal dangers at his will.
- D. 2. Gracious fathers are gratified sometimes from God by safe returne of sinful children.
- D. 3. Reason will instruct men to declare all events of providence furthering, or hindring in the way. Ver. 29.
- D. 4. In relation of providential events truth must be declared; yet no need of telling all.
- D. 5. In relating providences, evil men are willing to hide sins, which caused them. So these.
- D. 6. It concerns suspected and accused persons to declare what is required for their purgation. Upon this, these sons of Jacob make this narration of themselves and others. Ver. 30. 34.

3. Another discovery of providence with the effects thereof is here made at their returne, wherein.

Ver. 35. 1. The event declared, And it was to them emptying their sacks, even every mans money was in his sack, and they saw the bundles of their money, they and their father, and they feared., Sept. and Cald. the same. Herein accure.

1. Their action, emptying come out of sacks every one.
2. The event discovered, every mans bundle of money there

3. The effect of it, fear upon their father, and themselves.

As to the quere whether all opened their sacks in the inne, as in the next Chapter is related, it was answered before; reason, I conceive, will carry it, that this action was de novo, by all at home, which raised such fear in all; to say, that this fear was most Jacobs and pretended by the sons, who knew it before, carrieth little probability; As to what is said after, of all opening sacks in the inne, may very rationally be, with respect to one doing it, and the rest looking on. Ver. 35.

- D. 1. Providence ordereth to create strange things at home, as well as abroad.
- D. 2. God ordereth good in events to men, which they are apt to thinke bad.
- D. 3. Mistakes of providence may make men fear, where no cause is. Ver. 35.

4. Jacobs resentment of this relation to him, and the events, in the discovery whereof note.

1. His charge upon them, with regret to their motion, And Jacob their father said Ver. 36. unto them, we have ye bereaved of Children; Joseph is not, and Simeon is not, and Benjamin we will take away. Sept. and Cald. the same. Here we have.

1. His charge of them, that they made him childles.

2. His proof,

1. In Joseph.

2. In Simeon; the one he thought dead, and the other no better.

3. In their attempt to take Benjamin from him.

2. His apprehension of these acts, All these things have been, or are against me, upon me. Sept. — But so as a burden, and that which was against him. Ver. 36.

Note here.

- D. 1. Afflictions may cause gracious souls to charge them, that have been authors of them though unknown.
- D. 2. In passionate charging, good souls may overshoot themselves.
- D. 3. Gracious hearts may account providences against them, which be for them. V. 36.

5. Reubens intervention upon his fathers charge, wherein.

1. His

1. His rash offer, And Reuben said unto his father saying, I lay my two sons, if I bring him not unto thee, Sept. and Cald. the same.

1. His earnestness in it, Saying he said it.

2. His rashness and folly, as if this could satisfy Jacob to kill his dear grandchildren.

2. His demand of his father, Give him into my hand, Sept. and Cald. the same. So he requires confidently.

3. His promise, And I will bring him againe unto thee, Sept. and Cald. the same. boldly and sinfully doth he undertake, what was not in his power to performe. Ver. 37.

Quest. Was Reubens undertaking lawfull?

Ans. No by no means, it favours of nothing but flesh, unbelieve, pride, and rashness; he considers not that God himselfe might intercept him, yet he might in halt offer his sons to death, which he supposed would never be occasioned, but it is all irregular.

Observe here.

- D. 1. Sin usually makes men rash and heedles in their offers of things unreasonable.
- D. 2. Sin makes men proud and peremptory in their demands.
- D. 3. Sin makes men presumptuous in their promises to do what they cannot, Ver. 37.

Ver. 38. 6. Jacobs resolution present upon the whole, And he said, my son shall not go downe with you, for his brother is dead, and hee is left himselfe alone, and mischief shall befall him in the way wherein ye shall go, and ye shall bring my gray haire with sorrow to the grave. Cald. the same. — My old age &c. Sept. Herein we have.

1. His resolution as to this present, however afterward he is forced to change it, My son shall not go downe with you. He will not hear of it, notwithstanding Reubens bold undertaking.

2. His reasons.

1. From the losse of one brother (as he thought) before, even Joseph; he apprehends him dead, and therefore will not send the other after him.

2. From Benjamin in two respects.

1. Of his being his onely son (as he thought) left of Rachel.

2. Of the fear of danger in the way, least it should befall him as it did to Joseph.

3. From himselfe, if I let him go, And mischief shall befall him, ye will bring my gray haire with sorrow to the grave. Therefore unless ye mean to kill me, speake no more to me of this matter. Ver. 38. — END here must note the grave, foolish is the Popish conceit of purgatory, or a place under the earth for souls departed, it notes no more but a state of death in the grave.

We conclude.

- D. 1. Affection or passion sometimes may make good men resolve that for a time, which they must change.
- D. 2. The loss of one dear child may make tender parents so much as may be, to prevent it in others.
- D. 3. An onely child of a dear mother useth to be tender to good fathers.
- D. 4. Good fathers are desirous to keep tender children out of dangerous ways.
- D. 5. The life of parents is sometimes bound up in the lives of children.
- D. 6. It is grievous evil for children to bring aged parents with sorrow to the grave. Ver. 38.

CHAP. XLIII.

Herein we have declared, the carriage of Joseph to his brethren at their second coming into Egypt, two generall heads take up the whole Chapter.

1. Jacobs sons second arrivall at Egypt. Ver. 1. to 15.

2. Josephs entertainment of them. Ver. 16. to 34.

In the former three particulars occurre.

1. The occasion of it. Ver. 1.

2. The cause of it. Jacobs motion to them. Ver. 2. to 14.

3. The obedience of his sons. Ver. 15.

1. To the first. The occasion was the pressing famine, or hunger biting them.

Ver. 1. And the famine was grievous in the land. — Prevailed over the land. Sept. and Cald. Herein note.

1. The term of connection is observable; which joineeth this, immediately to Jacobs former resolution, My son shall not go downe, then Jacob had some bread in the house, but shortly that is gone, & God continueth heavily upon them the plague of famine which maketh Jacob more yeelding then he was.

2. The matter connected, there was a grievous famine in the land; or the famine prevailed and grew strong in the land of Canaan,

Canaan, where Jacob lived; so God ordered it for his own ends.

We observe.

D. 1. Saints resolutions when cross to Gods providence, usually continueth pressures to make them yeeld to him.

D. 2. Grievous famine, under Gods wise providence, may prevail in the place and habitation of his Saints. Ver. 2.

To the second. This declare's the cause of their going, Jacobs will for it, wherein are these particulars.

1. Jacobs motion to his sons. Ver. 2.
2. Judahs exception unto it. Ver. 3. 4. 5.
3. Jacobs passionate demurre upon it. Ver. 6.
4. His Sons reply to remove it. Ver. 7.
5. Judahs undertaking with his Father. Ver. 8. 9. 10.
6. Jacobs consent, counsaill, and prayer. Ver. 11. 12. 13. 14.
7. His sons obedience. Ver. 15.

1. Jacobs motion to his sons, is the cause of their second journey: herein note.

Ver. 2.

1. The cause impulsive, And it was when they had finished to eat the corn which they brought out of Egypt. Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein is declared.

1. That the bread corn was now spent.
2. That hunger began to pinch them and old Jacob.
3. That Egypt had corn and must supply them, there was no other place for it.
2. The cause preceptive, Then their Father said unto them returne, buy for us a little food. Cald. same. — Go again, Sept.
2. The commander is the father, he is forced now to speak to them again.
2. His command is to take another journey to Egypt, and buy a little bread for food, this puts them on it.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Eating will empty the barn, the store of bread will consume, so it did here.

D. 2. Renewing the store of bread, as it is Gods blessing, so it should be mans providence.

D. 3. Hunger pinching will egge the best fathers, to move their children to get supply.

D. 4. A little bread is sweet and desirable to hungry soules. A little food.

D. 5. Good soules desire their necessities to be supplied justly. Buy for us. Ver. 2.

Secondly. Judahs exception followeth. Wherein note.

1. His declaration, And Judah spake Ver. 3. unto him, saying, — protelling, the man did protest unto us saying, ye shall not see my face without your brother with you, Cald. same, — With a testimony testified, Your younger brother, &c. Sept. Wherein note.

1. The party declaring, Judah, the fourth Brother. Why he? Surely Reuben had failed before, Simeon was not there, Levi not altogether so accepted of his father; now Judah the fourth Brother, having more grace with his father, undertakes the party with him about going again to Egypt.

2. The time and season of it; now when necessity was urgent, and thereby his father was more inclined to it.

3. The declaration of the matter that was their stop, wherein he sheweth.

1. The solemnity of the Lord of Egypts charge to them, protelling he protested, which is supposed to be the meaning of his oath; that they were spies, unless they brought their brother.

2. The matter protested, ye shall not see my face without your brother. That, is not his face in favour, for they were threatened as spies, and threatened with death if found so, so that the matter is not misreported, for though the same words be not in the former chapter, yet the expressions are equivalent. Ver. 3.

2. His condition proposed for going again to Egypt, If thou wilt send our brother Ver. 4. with us, we will go down, and buy food for thee. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein are.

1. A condition of Jacobs sending Benjamin, which was necessary, both for saving their own lives, and for getting food, for without this, neither could be hoped for.

2. An obligation of duty, then will we go down and buy food for thee; he commanded to buy for us, even all the family: here Judah answers with respect to him; food for thee; father for children, and they for father, expresse mutual care. Ver. 4.

3. His exception, but if thou wilt not send him, we will not go down: for the man said unto us, ye shall not see my face without your brother with you. — Sept. and Cald. same. Herein we have.

1. His supposition, If thou wilt not send him.
2. His exception hereupon, We will not go down.
3. His

3. His reason repeated; The man said unto us, ye shall not see my face, &c. Ver. 5.

Observe we.

D. 1. To bring hard things about, against mans resolution, there needs a Mediator, who is in favour, Judah.

D. 2. Its best pressing displeasing arguments to press, when necessity, back's them.

D. 3. Solemn protestations and oaths, foreboding danger, may well make men feare them.

D. 4. Conditions of saving life and obtaining favour, required by foreign powers, are reasonably to be performed. Ver. 3.

D. 5. In performance of conditions, soules may be, and ought to be ready, to obedience.

D. 6. Children should take care to feed their parents, as they have done for them. Ver. 4.

D. 7. Where conditions cannot be performed, it is unreasonable to adventure life, and just to deny it.

D. 8. It is no disobedience to deny parents commands as to impossibilities.

D. 9. Sufficient reason must be rendered, humbly, though plainly, for denying parents commands. Ver. 5.

Ver. 6.

3. Jacobs passionate demurre, or complaint of his sons, by way of expostulation, And Israel said, wherefore did ye evil to mee to tell the man, whether ye, ye had a brother, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein we have to observe.

1. The plaintiffe, good old Jacob, tender of his Benjamin, and suspicious of his other Son.

2. The parties complained of, his other Sons who were in Egypt, Whom he thought to have as ill will to Benjamin, as they had to Joseph.

3. The complaint, that they had done ill to him, and asked him in revealing their brother, who was left at home, and so giving an occasion of this calling him a way, poor Jacob charged here every one that he suspects, and at present considered not Gods providence in it.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Gracious men when necessitated by providence to affliction, are ready to blame others for it.

D. 2. Good men may complain of bad children sometimes causelessly for afflicting them.

D. 3. Providence sometimes orders the telling of the truth, to be a temptation and affliction unto his. Ver. 6.

4. The reply of Jacobs Sons by way of defence, And they said the man asking asked of us, & of our kindred, saying, is your father yet alive, have ye a brother? and we told him according to the truth. — (or expostition) of these words, did we knowing know — or could we, that he would say, bring your brother down? Sept. and Cald. To the same, what is our answer? Herein we may observe.

Ver. 7.

1. The defendants, Jacobs Sons jointly, at least all consenting to what one said.
2. Their defence itself, which consists in a report.
1. Of the mans strict inquiry of their kindred, father and brothers, asking he asked, that is narrowly and straitly inquired.
2. Of their plain down-right answer according to the truth, that, they had a brother, &c.
3. Of their ignorance of the event that followed, could we know? that is we could not know that hereupon he would require us to bring down our brother to him.

Learn thence.

D. 1. It is just and reasonable to make a true defence against hasty charges.

D. 2. Exactions and inquiries of rulers, as they must be answered, so may they put upon us all the answers.

D. 3. Plain and true answers, however a duty, yet may be an occasion of snares to others.

D. 4. Ignorance of events which are in Gods hand, may well excuse from guilt of any evil following. Ver. 7.

Fifthly, Judahs undertaking with his father followeth, herein we have also to observe.

1. His demand of his father, And Judah

dab said to Israel his father, send the young man with me. Sept. and Cald. same: in executing his fathers desire, he again makes his demand.

2. His promise unto his father, And we will arise and go, that is, to Egypt according to Jacobs desire.

1. Obedience promised.

2. The end of it. Life. That we may live and not dye, both we and thou, and also, our little ones. That is by getting bread for us. Ver. 8. καὶ ἡμεῖς καὶ οἱ υἱοὶ ἡμῶν.

3. His undertaking for Benjamin.

Ver. 9.

1. By suretyship, I will be surety for him. undertake him. Sept. undertake him. Cald. Much doth Judah undertake for him.

2. By ingagement, Of my hand shalt thou require him, Sept. and Cald. same. I will singly take the charge and be accountable.

3. By submission unto a penalty upon default, & that was grievous, If I do not bring him unto thee, and set him before thee, then shall I be a sinner to thee all dayes. Sep. and Cald. same. That is, let me be accounted with thee an offender, and guilty of the loss of thy son, and bear thine indignation due unto it for ever. So ours, Let me bear the blame. Ver. 9.

Ver. 10.

4. His pressing reason; from the benefit which might have bin in a second return, if this stop had not bin made; and the danger of the delay; For except we had longed, Surely now we had returned these two times, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein.

1. He supposeth this denial of Benjamin had delayed them from a double market.

2. He presseth, as implied, therefore was it not good to delay any longer unless they meant to perish, Ver. 10.

Quest. Did Judah well in his undertaking this of Benjamin?

Answer. 1. It was well to offer his trust and fidelity unto his father, as to such a charge. 2. With condition of Gods gracious help, he might become a surety. 3. But if Judah missed in this, his undertaking was rash and sinful, which yet may charitably be conceived, it was not.

Quest. Why is Benjamin called a lad, being now about thirty years of age, and but seven years younger then Joseph?

Answer. 1. He was the youngest. 2. The word doth not bind him to the age of a child, but noteth one in strength of youth; so we may read it here. A young man, so are they of thirty and upward.

Observe we thence.

D. 1. Reasonable demands may be made of children to parents for reasonable duties.

D. 2. Demands being granted, children should be ready to pay obedience to their parents.

D. 3. Life of persons, relations, and families is an effectual motive to bestirre ourselves for food for them. Ver. 8.

D. 4. With dependance upon God in lawfull wayes men may be sureties unto men.

D. 5. Under Gods assurance men may undertake for that which is not in their power.

D. 6. Men may engage themselves under penalties to undertakings, wherein they reasonably hope for the concurrence of God with them.

D. 7. Rash suretyship and ingagements for others is sinfull. Ver. 9.

D. 8. Providence order's delays sometimes to the further tryalls of his.

D. 9. Sense of prejudice by delays, quickens soules up unto a seasonable dispatch of their duty. Ver. 10.

6. Jacobs concurrence after all this followeth, in which note.

1. First, his supposition to them, And Israel their father said unto them, if so now, Sept, if it be so, call it must. Wherein.

1. He supposeth, Gods hand was in the matter to make this necessity. If it be so, and must be so.

2. He sheweth himself hereupon yielding, as if he had said, I cannot resist his will, I must grant when God will have it so.

2. His advice in three things.

1. To carry a present unto the Lord of Egypt, Do this, take of the singing of the land, praiseworthy fruits in your vessels, and carry down the man a mince or pacifying gift, or present, a little balm, & a little hony, spices, and myrrhs, siberinsh, nuts, & almonds, Sep. & Cald. to the same purpose, so he labours to mollify the man, as he did to Esau, V. 11.

2. To carry double money in it.

1. His advice in this, And double money take in your hand, and the money brought back in the mouth of your sacks carry again in your hands, Sept. and Cald. same, here he would have them just in all their dealings where might be a shew of wrong.

2. The reason of his advice, peradventura it was error or mistake. Sept. It was done by an oversight, Cald. so it was with Jacob, he was afraid afraid to gain by other mens mistakes. ver. 12. Thirdly to take their brother Benjamin, and be gone, And take your brother and arise, go again unto the man, Sept. and Cald. same. So he yeelds to providence at last, take Benjamin with you, and go together. Ver. 13.

Ver. 13.

Ver. 14.

3. His prayer wherewith he sends them: And God almighty grant you mercy before the man, and let him send backe with you your other brother and Benjamin, and I as I have bin bereaved of my Children, I am bereaved, or I am, I am, Give you grace or favour before the man, as I have bin made childless, I am, Sept. as I am deprived, I will be, &c. Cald. herein.

1. His petition is full of faith.

1. Commending them to a sure keeper, even almighty God.

2. From him he begs mercies for them by the man.

3. He prayeth their safe return together.

11. His resolution, if it come to the worst, he is resolved patiently to abide Gods will, if he should strip him of all, such is the force of the exprellion in the text. Esther. 4. 16. Ver. 14.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Necessity imposed by providence, makes saints change their wills into Gods.

D. 2. It is not unbecoming saints to pacify the powers they fear, with a present.

D. 3. Little of good things may make a great present in times of famine.

D. 4. Liberal spirits spare a little of a little, Ver. 11.

D. 5. Gracious soules desire to be righteous in all dealings with men and give over-plus.

D. 6. Good hearts are a fraid to gain by the mistakes of others. Ver. 12.

D. 7. When God will have mens darlings, gracious hearts will part with them.

D. 8. Good fathers are ready to dismiss their children into any dangers on Gods call. Ver. 13.

D. 9. Its the care of godly parents to commit children to almighty God to keep them.

D. 10. God almighty hath the hearts of all powers to dispose at his will.

D. 11. God almighty can set free and return all committed to him from danger.

D. 12. Gracious hearts whether God deliver or not, resolve to sit down quiet with his will. Ver. 14.

D. 13. Prayer prosper's all affairs.

D. 14. Affection to Children is a duty.

7. Obedience of Jacobs sons finisheth the first general head of this Chapter.

1. In taking according to their fathers advice, And the men took the present and they took double money in their hand, and Benjamin, Sept. and Cald. same. Here is obedience in taking.

2. In moving and going, And they arose and went down to Egypt. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein they yeeld to their fathers command.

3. In their arrival, And they stood before Joseph, Sept. and Cald. same. That is they presented themselves unto him to appear before him. Ver. 15.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Filial obedience is seen in receiving from parents what they advise.

D. 2. Filial duty must be seen in acting and moving according to command.

D. 3. Under providence children may stand safe, where danger was feared.

D. 4. Where faith is kept, there is no danger to appear before threatening powers. Ver. 15.

2. Now followeth the second general of the Chapter, containing the history of Josephs entertainment of his brethren, wherein.

1. Josephs order to his steward about them with passages concurring. Ver. 16. to 25.

2. Josephs carriage toward them, Ver. 26. to 34.

In the first of these occur these particulars.

1. The occasion of his order, And Joseph saw Benjamin with them. Cald. same. Sep. adde καὶ ἡμεῖς αὐτὸν τὸν ὁμοιωμένον. No difficulty in the words.

Quest. 1. If it be inquired where he saw them.

Answer. It is likely in the market and publicque bligue place where he attended on his office, for he was not now at his house.

Quest. 2. If it be inquired, how he knew Benjamin?

Ans. It is to be presumed not by face, as he knew the rest, because he was so little, when Joseph left his father's house, but seeing him with them, he conceived it was he, because he charged them to bring him with them, and now having sight of him his brother by father and mother, together with the rest, this occasion's the order following.

2. The order itself, And he said to him that was over his house, bring the men to house, or home, and slay a slaughter and prepare, for the men shall eat with me at noon, the men shall eat bread with me at noon. Sept. — At dinner, Cald. Herein.

1. The subject ordering Joseph.

2. The subject ordered, his steward, privately.

3. The order itself in three things.

1. To carry them to his house for entertainment.

2. To kill creatures that were for food, and fitt them for use.

3. To prepare plentifully for such a company, and the rest that were at Joseph's table, and kept by him.

4. The reason of all Joseph's affectionate and brotherly resolution, that they should eat or dine with him at noon: the entertainment is a dinner or feast of fat things: the time at noon, after the mornings work was done, eating after labouring. Ver. 16.

Observe we.

D. 1. Sight of conditions performed, and of things desired move men to greater kindness.

D. 2. Brotherly bowells in good men though sometimes concealed yet break out at last.

D. 3. House, and best provisions are suitable to brotherly entertainment.

D. 4. Good men in power may give order to others for shewing good to brethren, unknown to them.

D. 5. Good rulers are for labours in the morning, and food at noon. Eccle. 10. 16.

D. 6. After duties done it is meet to refresh mens selves with their friends. Ver. 16.

2. The execution of the order followed, where we have declared.

1. The stewards action in general, And the man did as Joseph had said, and the man brought the men to Joseph's house, Sept. and Cald. fame. In these is no difficulty, only in general is that here related which afterward is more punctually expressed, about his dealing with them.

3. In the way of executing this order here is recorded a passage between Joseph's brethren, and his steward, wherein note.

1. Upon their part is declared.

1. Their passion misapprehended, And the men feared because they were brought into Joseph's house. Cald. fame. — The men seeing that they were brought, &c. said, &c. Sept. Fear, left out.

1. The passion that ariseth from the guilt of spirit with misapprehension of the present event, is fear, this is incident to soules suspicious of danger.

The present motive was their being brought to Joseph's house which they looked on as their prison.

2. Their communication among themselves, which discovers their causeless jealousies, though they knew themselves innocent, as to what they feared would be charged on them, wherein.

1. They suspect the cause of being brought to the house, And they said for the matter of the money returned in our bags at the first are we brought in, Sept. and Cald. fame. Here innocency is jealous causelessly, to think that a crime which was none.

2. They suspect the end of their coming thither, To roll himself upon us, & to fall upon us, & to take us for servants & our asses, Sept. & Cald. fame. — That he may be Lord of us, and seek occasions against us and possess us as servants, &c. here they suspect kindness to be their undoing; the phrase of rolling himself on them, is emphatical, to note oppression, as an huge stone rolling down from a mountain that crusheth all, a like phrase Job useth to shew his oppression from them that scorned. Job. 30. 14. So they suspect ruine where safety is intended, Ver. 18.

3. Their exprellion to the steward, wherein observe.

1. Their addresse unto him, And they came near unto the man, which was over Joseph's house, and they spake unto him at the door of the house, Sept. and Cald. fame. All this is plain to be acted before they entered into Joseph's house, that they came to the man and bespoke him to prevent danger, and avoid a suspected charge.

2. Their speech unto him, whereof note.

1. The manner expressed in the person of one for all, And they said, to me my Lord. Ver. 20. — It is elliptical, Attend to me my Lord. — Weintreat thee Sir to hear us. Cald. (1.) It is humble. (2.) It

(2.) It is distracted with fear being a defective speech. Ver. 20.

2. The matter of it, which declares.

1. The end of their first coming to Egypt to buy corn, Ver. 20. at first or only. (2) The event in the way, And it was as we came to the inn and opened our baggs, that behold every mans money was in the mouth of his bagge, Sept. and Cald. to fame. This was opened before, and the scruple answered, how it is said, we opened, when before it is said but one opened his lacke at the inn, the rest at home. In joynt actions, what one doth may be said of all, as here but one speaketh, and yet we read they said. (3) Their uprightneis in bringing it again, And we have brought it again in our hand; or returned again in our hands, Sept. and Cald. V. 21. Their justice also in dealing, because they brought other money with them to buy food. (4.) They plead their ignorance and innocency as to that suit, We know not who put our money in our baggs, Sept. and Cald. fame. All this they speak at the door in their own defence. Ver. 22. (2.) The reply of the steward (upon his part) to them, which was better than they expected.

1. In word, which is full of goodness.

1. He salutes them kindly And he said peace be to you, fear not. Sept. & Cald. fame. he quiet's and secureth their spirits much beyond their thoughts, (2.) He mind's them of the author of that mercy, Your God and the God of your fathers hath given you treasure in your sacks, Sept. and Cald. fame. (1.) This suppliceth Joseph's steward to be instructed in the true God, and conformed to the faith of him. In question he how he could speak that of God which he did, it is clear God was the first mover, Joseph and he but instruments.

3. He acknowledgeth himself to have had their money, and the disposal of it, Your money came to me. Cald. fame: your silver I had well approved. Sept. so that you need not trouble yourselves about it. There is no danger unto you in this.

2. Indeed he returneth kindly to them, 1. In bringing Simeon to them, And he brought forth Simeon unto them. V. 23. Sept. and Cald. fame. This was a token of grace in delivering up their imprisoned brother. Ver. 23.

2. In leading them into Joseph's house, And he brought, &c. Cald. fame. Sept. 3. By giving them water, And he gave them water, and they washed their feet. Cald. fame. — And he brought them water to wash their feet, Sept. This was the first piece of good entertainment, where men travelled almost bare-footed, it was for cleansing and refreshing.

4. By feeding their beasts, And he gave provender to their asses, Sept. and Cald. fame. by all which they might now be secured against their fears, that no hurt was intended to them but kindness from his Lord.

4. The preparation of the present by Jacob's sons. Ver. 24. And they prepared the present against Joseph came home at noon, for they heard that they should eat bread there. Cald. fame. — That they should dine there; Sept.

1. Their work, making ready the present of balm, &c. to offer to Joseph.

3. The reasons the good new's they heard that they were to dine with him; and therefore had now encouragement to bring their present cheerfully. Ver. 25.

It Learneth us:

D. 1. Just orders are readily entertained by honest servants from their masters. Ver. 17.

D. 2. The house of kindness may sometimes terrify soules as the house of dangers.

D. 3. Innocency itself may be suspicious of wrong charges, to raise up fear.

D. 4. Groundless jealousies, pretend dangers where none are. Ver. 18.

D. 5. Wisdom suggests unto innocency a fair defence to prevent danger. Ver. 19.

D. 6. Innocencies plain acknowledgment of its designs, is its best apologet. Ver. 20.

D. 7. Declaration of events of providence as they are, tends to justify the innocent.

D. 8. Where providence orders good, soules may make question of receiving or keeping it. Ver. 21.

D. 9. Just soules will deal justly in dealing with others about buying & c.

D. 10. Innocency may plead ignorance of the fact of sin plainly, being not guilty. Ver. 22.

D. 11. Upright hearts in power will speak peace and encouragement to fearful spirits.

D. 12. Good hearts teach to ascribe all good providences unto God in Covenant.

D. 13. Just men will own their acts XXX 2 to to discharge the innocent. So the steward.

D. 14. Conditions being performed hostages must be in justice returned. Ver. 23.

D. 15. Good hospitality will labour to afford roome and all convenient refreshings to its guests.

D. 16. Hospitality in truth, provided for beasts as well as men. Ver. 24.

D. 17. Trudence will put men upon care to prepare a present for rulers in time of danger.

D. 18. Courtesy from hosts gives opportunity for guests to expresse their returns.

D. 19. Noone refreshments are suitable to mornings labours.

D. 20. Good rulers are careful first to work and then to eat. Ver. 25.

2. After the stewards kindness shewed them, by order, now followeth Josephs department toward them in his own person, whereabout are declared.

1. Their addressse to him at his return. Ver. 26.

2. His salutation of them and inquiry. 1. Of their own welfare.

2. Of their father with their reply. Ver. 27, 28.

3. Of their youngest brother. Ver. 29. His tender compassion toward them. Ver. 30.

4. His entertainment of them. Ver. 31. to 34.

5. His dismissal of them. Chap. 44. 1. About their addressse unto him, we have to note.

Ver. 26. 1. Josephs coming home at noone, And Joseph came home. Entred into his house. Sept. and Cald. That is at noon, his morning affairs being dispatched. (2.) Their addressse with the manner of it twofold. (1) With the present, And they brought to him the present, which was in their hand into the house, Sept. and Cald. fame. of that we read before. 2. with humble prostration, And bowed themselves unto him to the earth, Sept. and Cald. fame, it notes humble addressse and homage, herein the dream of the eleven stars bowing to him was fulfilled. Gen. 37. 9.

Note we thence

D. 1. After labours times of resting and refreshing are requisite as allowed.

D. 2. Presents and prostration ci-will, may be used to gain the rulers favour in some cases.

D. 3. Providence ordereth, those men to fulfill his purpose, who are most against it. Ver. 26.

2. His salutation followeth, wherein he inquires.

1. Of their own condition, And he asked them of their peace. He asked them how do ye? Sept. And he saluted them, Cald. some read the word, — Auverbially, he asked them peaceably, in opposition to his former carriage, then he inake roughly to them, the scope is the same, he first salutes them with words of peace, inquiring of their peace or welfare.

2. Of their fathers health, wherein we read, (first) his question, And he said, is it peace to your father, the old man of whom ye spake? is he yet alive? Cald. fame. — Is your father well, &c. Sept. herein he kindly treats them about their father desiring to hear of his life and peace, all which speaks good to them. Ver. 27.

2. Their answer, whereof we have noted.

1. The matter of it, And they said peace is to thy servants our father, he is yet alive. Cald. fame. — Thy servants our father is in health, Sept. They add more over a reply from Joseph not in the original, Blessed be that man with good. In their answer they reply punctually to his question about their father, wherein is no difficulty, but by them the sin, boweth to Joseph.

2. The manner, with all humility as before, And they bowed the head, and bowed themselves down. — Bowing down they worshipped, Sept. & Cald. Herein still is the accomplishment of Josephs dreams though they little thought so. Ver. 28.

3. Of their younger brother he inquires, wherein note.

1. His observance of him, And he lifted up his eyes, and saw Benjamin his brother, his mothers son. Cald. fame. — admiratio in Joseph. Sept. Herein the words are plain, having inquired of their father, now he take's notice of his brother who was with them.

2. His inquiry about him, And he said, is this your younger brother, of whom ye spake unto me? Cald. fame. — Whom ye said, ye would bring unto me? Sept. These words are plain, to which also doubtless they gave an answer, that it was he, however not here related.

3. His blessing on him, Elohim; &c. And he said God be gracious to thee my son. Be merciful, Sept. and Cald. In all this passage Joseph doubtless spake by an interpreter to conceal himself, in this last, ye have.

1. His compellation, my Son, as became a ruler though he were a brother.

2. His

2. His benediction, God be gracious to thee, a greater blessing could he not desire, then the free grace and favour of God unto him.

Observe we.

D. 1. Gracious hearts, however sometime they may deal severely, yet they desire their peace.

D. 2. Providence sometimes orders peaceable entertainment, where worse is feared.

D. 3. Nature itself much more grace inquires of and desire's the peace of parents. He asked of their father; and meaneth his own, V. 27.

D. 4. It is equal that peaceable inquiries should have due answers.

D. 5. In answering for others, providence orders the accomplishment of his will, The sun bows, &c.

D. 6. All humility becomes their answers who are in fear of foreign powers. Ver. 28.

D. 7. Signs of neer relations, moveth to inquire of their condition.

D. 8. Natural affection desire's to know its neer relations for good.

D. 9. Grace puts souls upon blessing relations as well as knowing them.

D. 10. The best blessing is the grace of God procured upon souls.

D. 11. Brethren may be fathers in blessing the fruit of the same womb. Ver. 29.

3. After this salutation followeth the expression of his bowels, and compassion toward them, And Joseph hastened for his bowels did yearn upon his brother, and he sought to weep, and he entered into a chamber, and wept there. Joseph was troubled, for his inwards were turned upon his brother, &c. Sept. — Bowels were mooved, Cald. burned, Heb.

1. His speed to be gone.

2. The reason, the burning of his bowels.

3. The end it was to weep, and unburden nature.

4. The work, he went privately to his chamber, and wept there.

Quest. 1. Was this onely toward Benjamin?

Answer. Especially his bowels might be moved about him, he being of the same womb with him. 2. Yet his bowels wrought toward the rest as we find afterward, he wept upon them.

Quest. 2. Was this the fruit of nature; or grace?

Answer. 1. Nature doubtless yeilded the matter of these tears. 2. Grace might form and regulate them.

We Learn from it.

D. 1. Natural affection may speed to vent itself, after gracious benediction.

D. 2. Natural bowels may burn in gracious souls to their relations.

D. 3. Gracious wisdom teacheth to seek time, place, and measure of expressing affection to relations.

D. 4. Secret venting of affections is best at some opportunities. V. 30.

4. The last thing is Josephs entertainment, in relating whereof we have to note.

1. His casting of his pallion, And he washed his face, and went out, and reprimed himself, violently, bld himself; Sept. and Cald. fame.

1. He washeth away tears.

2. He goeth forth as before.

3. He command's his pallion.

2. His command to furnish the tables, And he said set on bread, Sept. and Cald. fame. This is a Synecdochical expression, bread, for all provisions, as being chief of all, Ver. 31.

3. The obedience given to his command, whereof. (1) the matter, And they set on, Sept. and Cald. fame. that is, bread and provisions made. (2) The order of setting down dinner. (1) before him by himself as his place was. (2) Before his brethren by themselves on a table. 3. Before the Egyptians, who were invited & entertained by him, by themselves.

3. The reason of the order, because the Egyptians might not eat bread with the Hebrews, For that is an abomination to the Egyptian. Sept. fame. Because the cattle which the Egyptians worship, the Hebrews eat. Cald. Herein note (1) The pride, (2) The superstition of a supercilious people which were the true causes of this distance, therefore Moses required liberty to go to the wilderness, that they might not offer that which was an abomination to the Egyptians; yet was it pleasing to God, V. 32.

4. The sitting down of his brethren, wherein.

1. their action, And they sat before him. Ver. 33.

Sept. and Cald fame. that is according as they were invited, and meat set before them they sat down to eat.

X x x 3

2. Their

2. Their order, the first born according to his birthright, and the youngest according to his youth, Sept. and Cald. same. According to their age every brother took his place.

Quest. Were the handmaids sons now equal.

Answer 1. They were not so formerly with Sarah. 2. So God made now twelve sons Jacobs heirs. 3. This seems to be their course at home and not Josephs ordering, as some.

3. The issue was a mutual kind of wonder.

1. Theirs, happily at Josephs state an entertainment.

2. The Egyptians might wonder at them, but the strange entertainment works extasie among them, Ver. 33.

Ver. 34. 5. The distribution he makes to his guests.

(1) Generally. And he took up messes from before him, unto them, And they took portions, &c. Sept. That is Josephs servants at his command, and fet them before his brethren. — Portions were given to them, &c. Cald. Herein is related his respect unto them all, to send meat from his own table to them, Such was their use, (2) Specially unto Benjamin, And he multiplied the messe of Benjamin above the messes of them all five hands. That is five times more then to any one of them, Benjamins part was greatned five fold, &c. Sept and Cald. Herein natural affection sheweth itself to an whole brother.

6. The acceptance of all, and chearful commerce, And they drank, and largely drank with him. Sept. and Cald. to the same. In summe, they chearfully eat and drunk with him, not to drunkenness, as sometimes the word imports, but to a liberal enjoyment of Gods blessings in comfortable communion, Ver. 34.

Quest. Why did he not now reveal himself?

Ans. 1. Gods time was not yet come. 2. His brethren needed some further triall. (3) The issue sheweth it was to no evil end in Joseph.

It instructs us.

D. 1. Grace commands nature from its passions, untill Gods time be come.

D. 2. Nature obeyeth grace, and keeps in itself from dishonoring God.

D. 3. It is the rulers duty to command the table to be spread, and the provisions to be set on. Ver. 31.

D. 4. It is duty for servants to obey their masters at meals, as well as at work.

D. 5. It is comely for Gods servants, to keep that place of honor among men, unto which they are called.

D. 6. Orderly disposition of guests as to their state and quality is commendable.

D. 7. Wicked men lay lawes upon themselves to separate from such as are their betters.

D. 8. That which is good in Gods sight is an abomination to superstitious soules. Ver. 32.

D. 9. Strangers invited to a princely table, may justly accept to sit down to eat.

D. 10. In the Church of God civill order is not destroyed by speciall priviledge.

D. 11. Providence ordereth men sometimes to wonder at events, which at present they do not understand. Ver. 33.

D. 12. Natures bonds tie men to expresse kinnes to natural relations.

D. 13. Nature admits degrees in expression of love according to its neernes, more to some. A Benjamins portion.

D. 14. Plentiful participation of creatures and chearfulness is not unbecoming Gods people. Ver. 34.

(5) The last thing in Josephs carriage to his brethren at this second coming of theirs, is his courteous dismissal of them, with full provisions, and this is reported in the three former verses of the following Chapter.

CHAP. XLIV.

Herein, after the last act of Joseph toward his brethren in a loving discharge of them, we have reported, his demeanor to them upon their arrest, which was the third general head noted. Chap. 42.

To dispatch the fifth particular noted, which was his dismissal of them, herein note.

1. Josephs order or command unto his steward, And he commanded him that was over his house. — Joseph commanded,

CHAP. XLIV.

GENESIS.

CHAP. XLIV.

ded, Sept. — The Reward of his house. Cald. Wherein note.

1. The authority ordering, Joseph.

2. The minister ordered, the Steward.

3. The manner of ordering by word of mouth.

4. The matter ordered, in three particulars.

1. Fill the mens baggs with food according to what they can carry, Sept. — Fill ye with corn. — Cald. As much as they can bear.

2. And put the money of every one in the mouth of his sack. — Cald. same. In both these, liberality and brotherly kindness are expressed.

Ver. 1. 3. And my cup, the cup of silver, put in the sacks mouth, the youngest and his corn money or silver, Sept. and Cald. to the same.

This was a trying command, as it came from Josephs breast; the Steward might not know at present his Lords mind, whether it were to give it Benjamin or not; but so it was ordered.

2. The Stewards obedience, And he did according to the word of Joseph, which he had spoken, Cald. same. It was done, &c. Sept. Herein the punctuall observation of orders from superiors is eminently set forth; he performs every thing as Joseph spake it, Ver. 2.

3. The dismissal of Jacobs sons, the morning was light, and the men were sent away, they and their asses, Sept. and Cald. to same.

1. The time noted, at break of day, so soon as day appeared.

2. The dismissal, the men were sent away.

3. Their full discharge, they and their asses, with all their provisions and now doubtless the hearts of the brethren were light, and they begin their return home together chearfully, not dreaming of further Ray or trouble.

Quest. Was this act of Joseph good, to order the cup to be an evidence against the innocent.

Ans. 1. That some infirmity might appear in this work is probable.

2. The act for trial, especially when perhaps ordered by God, is not simply evil.

3. The issue proves, he intended them nothing but good. Ver. 3.

Note we.

D. 1. It becoms rulers to be expresse in orders to their servants.

D. 2. Grace makes men liberrall in dealing with the needy.

D. 3. Brotherly kindness enlargeth hearts much to brethren. Ver. 1.

D. 4. Good men may put such to trial all whom they would seem to suspect.

D. 5. All slights are not simply unlawful, but with their circumstances.

D. 6. The tenderest brethren may be tried with dangers without hurt.

D. 7. It is becoming faithfull servants to observe orders exactly and do them. Ver. 2.

D. 8. The morning light is for mens addresse unto travels.

D. 9. Kindnes dismisseth relations upon occasion, as well as embraceth them.

D. 10. Innocent men goe on chearfully in their way without fear of evil. Ver. 3.

5 We are now come to the last carriage of Joseph to his brethren upon their arrest, from Chap. 44. to Chap. 47. 12. Wherein.

1. Their arrest, and return to Joseph, Ver. 4. 13.

2. Their humble prostration before him. Ver. 14. 17.

3. Judahs particular intercession. Ver. 18. 34.

4. Josephs manifestation of himself unto them. Chap. 45. 1. 15.

5. Pharaohs invitation of them to Egypt. Ver. 16. 17. 18.

6. Josephs observing Pharaohs orders. Ver. 19. 24.

7. Jacobs sons' return unto him with his resentment. Ver. 25. 28.

8. Jacobs journey into Egypt with all his. Chap. 46. 1. 28.

9. Josephs entertainment of them all. Ver. 29. 34.

1. His salutation.

2. Josephs addresse and presenting them to Pharaoh, Chap. 47. 1. 10.

3. Josephs continued care of his father; Ver. 11. 12.

To the first. In this history of their arrest, we have,

1. Josephs charge unto his steward to pursue. Ver. 4. 5.

2. The stewards execution, of his warrant. Wherein.

1. His speech. Ver. 6.

2. Their answer to him. Ver. 7. 8. 9.

3. His consent to them. Ver. 10.

4. Their submission to a search. Ver. 11. 12.

5. The event seemingly sad. Ver. 13.

1. The charge of Joseph to his steward, where note, (1) the opportunity taken for it, They.

Ver. 4.

They were gon out of the city, they were not gon jarre, Cald. fame. — When they were gon out, they were not far gon. Sept. Here note.

1. The mens orderly departure, (2) their secure posture, they hasted not, but drove on softly.

2. His charge, wherein he injoyneth these things.

1. A present pursuit of them. — Rise up follow after the men, and overtake them, Thou shalt apprehend them. Sept. Cald. fame.

1. Speed, 2. pursuit, 3. arrest are commanded.

2. A challenge of them by expostulation. And thou shalt say unto them, wherefore do ye reward evil for good? Sept. and Cald. fame. This was an heavy charge for all the kindness which the Lord of Egypt shewed them to return nothing but stealth. Ver. 4.

3. The proof of the challenge, that they had taken away Josephs silver cup, wherein.

Ver. 5.

1. The aggravation of the evil that it was Josephs proper cup, which he used to drink in, Is not this it in which my Lord drinketh? Cald. fame. — Why have ye stolen my cup? Sep. add's, what! would nothing content you but this? (2.) The demonstration of it, And divining he would divine about it, — Divination he divineth in it, Sept. — And he seeking hath fought it. Cald. — Much ado is about this passage, as if Joseph were turned magician, and used their customs in divining, it is true that the word read divining, hath other significations, as making trial and experience, so some render, and hath not he learned sure experience by it, what kind of men ye are? but because some supply of words must be made, this is rejected by others, let the word go in the worst sense for divining, that is, finding out secrets; no cogent reason is by these words to inferre that Joseph pretended himself a magician; for if we read divining for prophesying, and give the preposition a fair construction which it may admit; and he, doth he not divining divine upon it, or about it? Not by the cup, nor using the way as fourth saying as the Egyptians.

For great reason may persuade, he abhorred such wayes, that when all the magicians could not help Pharaoh to understand his dream, and Joseph did reveal it from God, yet that he should turn to those vain wayes of divination is incredible; it seemeth therefore more likely to truth; that Joseph had power to discover secrets which is meant by divining, though not in the way of magicians.

Qu. 1. Why then should Joseph give order to his servant to speak so of him?

Answer. 1. The words may bear a better sense. 2. Infirmities might accompany Joseph in this transaction, and so it is not imitable by any. 3. Uprightnes did stir him to seek their good.

3. The charge reiterated, Ye have done evil, what ye have done, Sept. and Cald. to fame. So he accused them home, that they were wicked men, and had done wickedly against him. Ver. 5.

Quest. 2. Doth Joseph well in charging evil on the innocent; is it imitable by us?

Answer. 1. No examples must lead to practice without a command. 2. This was extraordinary. 3. All that is against the law in Joseph was sin, and not to be followed by us.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Providence may order troubles upon the innocent, when they think not of it.

D. 2. Good men may take opportunity under God to try innocent ones, but not to hurt them.

D. 3. Speed, pursuit, and apprehension may be of the innocent in their way.

D. 4. It is grievous sin to return evil for good.

D. 5. God may suffer this to be charged upon them who deserve it not. Ver. 4.

D. 6. Theft is aggravated from the esteem and use of things.

D. 7. Theft is more grievous, when done against such as can discover it.

D. 8. Such wickedness may be charged upon those who deserve it not; and that by order of good men.

D. 9. Such charges cannot be good, but upon special dispensation from God, and for the good of others. Ver. 5.

2. Now followeth the stewards execution of his warrant upon all Jacobs sons, wherein observe.

1. His apprehending of them, And he Ver. 6. apprehended them, — Others, he overtook or reached them or fetched them up, with his company doubtles, which he took with him for that purpose, and finding them, &c. Sep. — And he apprehended, Cald. that is, he came to them, & laid hold on them for malefactors.

2. His bespeaking of them, And he spake unto them these same words, Sept. and Cald. fame. That is according to his warrant and instructions given him by Joseph charging them them with theft, and unworthy demeanor to his Lord, for all his kindness.

Quest. Did the servant do well to obey his Lord in such an unjust command? To charge them with theft, whom he knew to be innocent?

Answer. 1. No sinful commands against holines or righteousness for hurt may be obeyed.

2. This was but for triall, as the steward well knew Josephs mind.

3. This was intended to their good and not their hurt.

4. Yet such examples are not imitable by any, unles in such a case, where God moveth unto triall; as it is to be presumed it was in this matter.

We learn.

D. 1. Executing warrants and arrests from Governors is but meet for inferiors.

D. 2. Innocents may be arrested and hardly charged under the ordering of providence.

D. 3. Affect's herein may be extended, while under God they do it for trial and no hurt to men. V. 6.

2. The answear of Jacobs sons being arrested followeth, wherein they discover.

1. Their wonder at such a charge, And they said to him, why doth my Lord speak according to these words? Sept. and Cald. fame.

It is a question of admiration, they were astonished at such an unexpected change,

1. The form of it is Ecstasical, full of wonder, they were surprised, yet humble, giving due respect to their accuser.

2. The matter of it is the disowning of any of the thing's charged.

11. Their abhorrency of the fact, Far be it to thy servants from doing according to this word, or God forbid, to thy servants, to do such a thing as this. Sept. and Cald. fame. Herein.

1. They deny the fact, or any such thing. 2. They expresse detestation of such wicked and unjust dealings. Ver. 7.

3. Their purgation of themselves by an argument from the less seeming offence to the greater. Wherein we may note.

1. The antecedent, Behold the money which we found in our sacks mouth we brought again unto thee out of the land of Canaan. Cald. fame. — Sept. read conditional in way of argument, if we returned to thee the silver, &c. Herein, when they were not charged, but fearing they might do wrong by mistake, they declare their honest mindes to take away all offence that they would not wrong him of the least mite.

2. The consequent by way of expostulation, And how should we steal out of the house of thy Lord, silver or gold? Sept. fame. Vessels of silver, &c. Cald. This is a consequent of great probability, and a fair presumption of their innocency. Ver. 8.

4. Their self-judgment, in confidence of their innocency. If such an evil should be with them, whosoever of thy servants shall besound with it; I with whomsoever of thy servants it be found, both let him dye, and we also will be to my Lord for servants. The cup be found, &c. Sept. and Cald. Herein.

1. A supposed conviction of the fact; by finding the cup with any of them not cautelously enough exprest, for they might have thought such a thing might be conveyed into one of their sacks, as their money was before, and that without any consciousness of theirs.

2. A voluntary subjection to a penalty of their own making, which stood in two parts:

1. That the man with whom the cup was found must dye, though theft made him not liable.

2. That to boot, all the rest should be judged to be slaves, and servants to his Lord. Ver. 9.

Quest. Was this sentence well managed by them?

Answer. No surely, though out of their simplicity, and hatred of the fact and confidence of their own innocency, they durst pronounce it.

1. It was rash and hasty, 2. It was irregular and illegal, as to God.

3. It was unlimited as to any accidental event, that such a thing might be put upon them by others.

It instruct's us.

D. 1. Innocency may be startled with false accusations to its astonishment.

D. 2. Innocents demean themselves humbly in denying false charges.

D. 3. Harmles soules abhorre any such evils of which they are accused. Ver. 7.

D. 4. Guiltles soules may plead and demonstrate their own innocency to men.

D. 5. Confidence of doing the least evil is a good argument, that men would not do greater. Ver. 8.

D. 6. Confidence of self-innocency may make men over-lash in self-judging. Yyy D. 7.

D. 7. Rash and Inconsiderat are such judgments.

D. 8. Haste in such judgment may bring innocent soules into great snares. Ver. 9.

3. The stewards consent to their own sentence, with his mitigation of it, wherein

1. He accepts their offer.

1. In general, And he said, now also according to your words, so let it be, Sept. and Cald. to same. So he yeelds to their vote.

2. In particular, but with limitation, though they forgat it.

1. To the party with whom it might be found, Whoever shall be found with it, he shall be a servant to me. With whom the cup is found, &c. Sept. Cald. same. So that, he judged him not to death, but to slavery.

2. To the rest, he offers them a dismissal, And ye shall be blameles. Pure. Sept. Innocent. Cald. that is, as afterward Joseph saith, ye shall be at liberty to return.

Learn we thence.

D. 1. Innocent men in rash proffers may be taken at their word.

D. 2. Justice will not lay more then equal upon any that may be found guilty.

D. 3. Just men will clear the innocent though they charge themselves. Ver. 10.

4. The search hereupon made, whereabout note.

Ver. 11. 1. Their submission voluntary to it, or they hastened, and took down every man his sacke to the ground, and they opened every man his sacke, Sept. and Cald. the same. Here we have.

1. Their readines to be searched.

2. Their unloading of the beasts.

3. Their openness, in opening their sacks, to suffer any to view. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12. 2. The inquisition or search itself, And he searched, and he began with the eldest, and ended with the youngest, Sep. & Cald. to same.

1. The action, scrutiny.

2. The order, from eldest to youngest keeping the worst for last; all that while they were in good hope.

5. The event and issue of all, which is twofold.

1. The discovery of the cup, And the cup was found in Benjamin's sacke, Sept. and Cald. same. Herein, was seeming conviction made, that the youngest was the thief. Ver. 12.

2. The resentment of it by all of them, in their.

1. Passionat exprellion of their sorrow, And they rent their garments, Sept. and Cald. same. This was the greatest exprellion of sorrow in those countries. The fabulous Rabbins talk, that all the brethren railed on Benjamin, And called him thief, &c. But the Spirit of God mentions nothing but a sympathy in all.

2. Hasty loading of their beasts again, And every man laded his asse, or put their sacks upon their asse, Sept. Cald. same, there was no standing there.

3. Speedy return unto the city. And they returned to the city, Sept. and Cald. same. They left not Benjamin to go alone, but all return with purpose to suffer with him. Ver. 13.

Quest. Why is no mention made of their money found?

Ans. 1. That was not the matter fought for. 2. That was given them freely. 3. The greater sin, that any should seem to take away the cup of him, who dealt so kindly with them.

Observe we hence.

D. 1. Innocent soules are speedy to lay open themselves to a Search.

Ver. 11.

D. 2. Order in executing warrants for search is decent.

D. 3. Such order pleaseth best which furthers the inquisitors designe.

D. 4. Providence orders men to hide and find the matters of suspicion, upon the dearest child. Ver. 12.

D. 5. Sympathy in bowels and troubles, becometh brethren in distress.

D. 6. Vnexpected arrests and evidences of danger cause extasies of sorrow.

D. 7. Load and unload, do and undo, innocent soules are sometimes forced unto.

D. 8. A little time may make innocent men return sadly thither whence they came forth gladly. Ver. 13.

2. The next thing reported is their approach and humble prostration before Joseph, Ver. 14. 15. 16. 17. Wherein we have to note.

1. The action of Jacobs sons, twofold.

1. Their access into Josephs presence, And Judah came and his brethren to the house of of Joseph, and he was yet there, Entered into, &c. unto Joseph. Sept. and Cald.

1. The parties, Jacobs sons arrested and brought backe, but among them Judah lead's, as also followeth; he had more ability it seem's, or was more concerned then the rest, therefore is named only among them.

2. Their motion, they came.

3. The place, Josephs house.

4. The reason, there he was. Likely expecting a return of his warrant.

2. Their prostration, And they fell before him on the ground, Sept. and Cald. same, here is another influence of the dream fulfilling, it is a posture which carrieth in it, consternation of mind, they say nothing but prostrate themselves upon the ground, in a sad dejected manner. Ver. 14.

2. The return of Joseph in a double, (or twofold) question.

Ver. 15. 1. And Joseph said unto them, what deed is this, which ye have done? Cald. same.

Why did you this deed? Sept. Herein he seem's to charge on them iniquity with an aggravation; what kind of sin is this which you have done against so much kindnes?

2. Knew ye not that such a man as I can search search diligently, or divining divine? Cald. and Sept. to same.

Here he chargeth their inadvertency, as not to consider, that in Egypt there were men could divine, and find out such secret theeves; where he assumeth not the Magicians practice, but speaketh of himself conjecturally, as others, yet the word admit's another sense, and better beseeching Joseph, herein he taxeth their boldnes to attempt such a thing against such a man as he was. Ver. 15.

Ver. 16. 3. The reply of them by Judah is threefold.

1. By acknowledging their insufficiency to answer in three expostulations.

1. What shall we say? Cald. same.

What shall we say again, אמרנו. Sept.

2. What shall we speak? Sept. and Cald. same. We have not a word to say.

3. And how shall we justify ourselves? Sept. and Cald. same. All is to be rendred negatively, we have nothing to say or speak or plead for our selves.

2. By ascribing to God this discovery, God hath found out the iniquity of thy servants. Sept. same. before God is found out the sin of thy servants, Cald.

1. Guilt makes them acknowledge God, though not in matter charged.

2. They lye down at Gods foot under his inquisition, that was now made.

3. By self-judging, Behold we are thy Lords servants, both we and he in whose hand the cup is found; Sept. and Cald. same. So they yeild themselves to slavery to suffer all alike at Josephs hand.

Quest. Did they well to accuse themselves being every one innocent?

Ans. 1. Consternation upon such an arrest might make them do they knew not what. 2. No man of them knew the innocency of another. 3. They charge not this iniquity as if God found it in them, but some other sin. 4. None are bound to accuse themselves falsely.

4. Josephs answer to this self-judgement

1. By abhorring to punish the innocent, And he said, farre be it from me to do this, Sept. and Cald. same. He abhor's to punish all for one.

2. By pitching upon the pretended offender, The man in whose hand the cup is found, he shall be my servant, Sept. and Cald. same. One onely is set apart for punishment, pretended to be guilty, herein was justice; neither saith he that he stole it, the penalty also was servitude to have nothing of their own.

3. By discharging the rest; And you, get ye up in peace to your father, Cald. same.

Go ye up in safety, &c. Sept. Herein note.

1. The parties dismissed, all with whom the cup was not found.

2. Their dismissal, go ye in peace to your father; this sheweth the rule of equity, however the carriage of all the matter be but in a figure, or personated act. Ver. 17.

It learneth us,

D. 1. Innocent men arrested yeild themselves unto their judge though unjustly terrified.

D. 2. Providence orders time, place, and persons, whereby innocents are charged and tried,

D. 3. Sudden apprehension of innocents may stupify them, and make them fall down dumb.

D. 4. In those passages God hath ordered the fulfilling of his Prophecies so to them. Ver. 14.

D. 5. Good men in power may charge foul things upon the innocent for trial, and aggravate them.

D. 6. Innocency may be charged with inadvertency in offending others.

D. 7. Under providence, and for good, powers have pretended to know of others what they know not. Ver. 15.

D. 8. Innocency being overcharged by powers, whence it cannot appeal, may plead guilty.

D. 9. God order's such charges to the discovery of other sins for his own glory.

D. 10. Innocents may under consideration yield themselves to more penalty than is just. Ver. 16.

D. 11. Just powers abhorre to punish the innocent with the guilty.

D. 12. Servitude is a just penalty for thieves, let them own nothings, who steal other mens goods.

D. 13. Justice is ready to dismiss the innocent, as to punish the guilty. Ver. 17.

3. The next matter observable upon their arrest, and Josephs sentence on them, is Judahs special address to him, and here begins the eleventh section of the law marked with three great letters. And it continueth unto Chap. 47. ver. 28. The title of this parasha is, Vaygoth the first word of all. Now in the history of Judahs address to Joseph, we have these particulars.

1. His appeal for audience. Ver. 18.
2. His narration of past matters.

1. Between Joseph and them, Ver. 19, to 23.

2. Between them and their father. Ver. 24. to 29.

3. His arguments to move Joseph.

1. The danger imminent on his father. Ver. 30. 31.

2. The suretyship undertaken by him, Ver. 32.

4. His supplication & passionat conclusion, Ver. 33-34.

To the first, we have herein to note.

Ver. 18. 1. His access, And Judah came near unto him. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The party, Judah, who was for this imploiment, more honorable than his brethren, and the only undertaker for Benjamin unto his father.

2. The motion, he drew something nearer to Joseph from among his brethren.

2. His humble request is twofold.
1. For liberty to speak. On me, or to me my Lord, let thy servant, I pray thee, speak a word in the ears of my Lord. — A word before my Lord.

1. His humility, filling Joseph his Lord, twice, and himself his servant.

2. His desire, that in the present case he might have leave to speak, though not to defence, yet to petition grace.

2. Against any displeasure that might arise in Joseph, And let not thine anger be kindled against thy servant. Cald. to same. Be not angry with thy servant, Sept. Herein, 1. His stile is humble.

2. His petition is by deprecating all displeasure in Joseph toward a poor client.

3. His reason of both, For thou art as Pharaoh, or Pharaoh as thou. It may be read both wayes; wherein he acknowledgeth his dignity, and magnificence, unto which he now humbly prostrates himself, thou art as Pharaoh, in his place and majesty: — Thou art after Pharaoh, Sept. — As Pharaoh is thou art, Cald. Ver. 18.

Note we.

D. 1. Hard sentence from a judge presseth souls grieved to draw nearer to him.

D. 2. It concern's persons of wisdom and respect to undertake the reversing of sentence.

D. 3. Humble petitions are more prevalent than stout apologies with forraign powers.

D. 4. Liberty of speech for clients, and averſion of displeasure in a judge are requisit to repeal hard judgement.

D. 5. Majesty in Princes requir's humility and reverence from poor petitioners.

D. 6. It is not unlawful to procure the Princes favour by due appeals and humble addresses. Ver. 18.

To the second. 1. The narration of the passages between them and Joseph in 5 particulars.

1. Josephs question to them, My Lord Ver. 19. asked his servants, saying, have ye a father or brother? Cald. same. — Thou askedst us, &c. Sept. Ver. 19.

2. Their answer to this, And we said unto my Lord, &c. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. Their acknowledgement of their father and his age.

2. Of their brother.

1. As to his youth, a child of his old age the youngest.

2. As to his brother, he was dead.

3. As to his mother, he alone was left of the same mother.

4. As to his fathers affection, And his father loveth him. Ver. 20.

3. Josephs reply, And thou saidst unto thy servants, &c.

1. He declare's Josephs command, Bring him down unto me, Sept. & Cald. same.

2. The end of it, and I will set mine eyes upon him, or thou I may, Cald. same. Sept. read, and I will care for him, the setting of the eyes may note.

1. Cog-

1. Cognisance, to take knowledge of one.

2. Favour and respect to him.

3. Indignation: but here the two former serve's fit. Ver. 21.

Ver. 22. 4. Their return again, And we said unto my Lord, &c. Where.

1. They declare the difficulty of bringing him, the young man cannot leave his father, Sept. and Cald. same.

2. The reason, And if he leave his father he will dye, Sept. and Cald. same. Therefore they could not bring him without danger of their fathers death. Ver. 22.

3. Josephs peremptory resolution declared, And thou saidst, &c. Wherein.

Ver. 23. 1. An indispensable command for his coming, If your youngest brother come not down with you, He must come, without any excuse, Sept. and Cald. same.

2. The argument enforcing, Ye shall not add to see my face, or ye shall see my face no more. Sept. and Cald. same. All this Judah declares to open the cause of their bringing Benjamin upon Josephs command. Ver. 23.

Quest. Did Judah make a true narration of all passages between them and Joseph, seeing some things mentioned here, were not written before?

Answer. 1. Some fable it and say, Judah said more to Joseph, than he spake, but it is both irrational, and incredible, that he would so speak to his face, what he had not said unto them. 2. It is certain that all things spoken and acted were not in all places recorded. 3. Josephs allowance of his speech, sheweth it to be true.

We learn.

D. 1. A just narrative of carriages in cases of dispute and danger is but requisit to clear things.

D. 2. In declarations, due respects are to be shewd unto powers to whom they are made.

D. 3. Plain answers to plain questions is that which becometh all.

D. 4. In narratives, as truth must be spoken, so such as is advantageous for the innocent. Ver. 20.

D. 5. Powers may require advantages from innocents, not for hurt but good. Ver. 21.

D. 6. Arguments of danger and death are reasonably proposed to the demands of powers. Ver. 22.

D. 7. Under providence powers may deny such argument for good.

D. 8. There is no denial of clients to their judge when they are peremptory, Ver. 22. 23.

2. The narrative followeth of passages between them and their father at their return, wherein we have to note.

1. Their relation of matters to their father, And it was, &c. Wherein.

1. Their arrival is related, when we came up unto thy servant my father. Sept. & Cald. same.

2. Their manifestation of all that was required of them, then we told him the words of my Lord. — Sept. and Cald. same. Our Lord. Sept. they told all that Joseph required of them, if they went again into Egypt. Ver. 24.

2. The report of their fathers demand of them, after some time was spent, And their bread grew scarce, &c. Ver. 25.

1. They relate their fathers command to go again to Egypt.

2. The end of it, to buy a little food. Ver. 25.

3. The discovery of their answer, which was.

1. By way of denial, And we said, we cannot go down. Sept. and Cald. same.

2. By way of grant, If our youngest brother be with us then will we go down, go with us. Sept. and Cald. same.

3. By giving reason for this, For we cannot see the mans face, and our youngest brother not be with us. Sept. and Cald. same. V. 26.

4. The report of their fathers reply to this.

1. In his narration of his issue by Rachel, Ye know, that my wife bare unto me two sons. Sept. and Cald. same. two, Ver. 27.

2. In remembering the loss of one of them as he thought which was Joseph, of whom.

1. His departure, And one went out from me. Sept. and Cald. same.

2. His concealed death, And I said in tearing he is torn in peeces. — And ye said, he was devoured by wild beasts. Sept. — with a slaughter he was slain.

Cald.

3. His reason to make it good, And I sum him not since. — Until now. Sept. and Cald. Ver. 28.

3. In putting a case of danger to them, here.

1. He supposeth two things.

1. And if ye take this also (or ye will) from my face. Sept. and Cald. same.

2. And if mischief befall him. — Malady. Sept. — Death. Cald.

2. He concludeth, Ye shall bring down my gray hairs with evil to the grave. — My old age with sorrow, &c. Thus far he declares the passionat expressions of his old father, which could not but move him to apply himself to Joseph for pity to his old father. Ver. 29.

Note

Note thence.

- D. 1. Faithful discharge of messages intrusted by powers, is a just way to gain favour. Ver. 24.
 D. 2. Paternall commands related may be a just apology for childrens obedience. Ver. 25.
 D. 3. Children however they must be obedient, it is in things feasible.
 D. 4. Powers without, may keep children from doing all comanded of parents. Ver. 16.
 D. 5. Affectionate husbands bear in mind the issue of dearest wives. Ver. 27.
 D. 6. The concealed losse of any dear children hath great impression upon naturall parents Ver. 28.
 D. 7. Supposed dangers to dearest children make's parents loath to part with them.
 D. 8. Tender parents are apt to lay losse of children to deep upon their hearts.
 D. 9. A true narrative of parental bowels may proove good means to deliver children out of snares. Ver. 29.

3. The arguments follow whereby Iudah labour's to move Ioseph. Which are two.

1. The one is taken from his father, and the evil impendent on him. Ver. 30 31. Wherein he supposeth three sad events upon their return, if Benjamin be not with them.

Ver. 30. 1. Upon their father, Wherein
 1. The case, And now when I come to thy servant my father, and the yong-man be not with us, &c. again. Then it will be when he seeth the yong-man is not. And it will be, when he seeth the lad not being with us, Sept. — And the lad return not with us, Cald.

Ver. 31. 2. The event upon this case, He will dye. That is thy servant our father. His life will depart in that very moment.

3. The reason of this event, And his soul is bound up in the soul of him, His soul hang's upon, &c. Sept. — And his soul is beloved to him as his own. Cald. This demonstrates the evil impendent on their father, because his life was as it were but in the life of his son, if this come not again, our father will dye away: he doth not say the life of the child is bound up in the fathers, that is seldom or never so, but the fathers in the child's.

2. Upon themselves, and that is the evil of guilt, And thy servants shall bring down the gray hairs of thy servant our father with sorrow unto the grave. — Sept. & Cald. same. In summe they are sensible of the charge laid upon them before by their father; when he denied Benjamin to go with them, Chap. 42. 38. They say not neither thou wilt, but we shall. ver. 30. 31.

Observe we hence.

- D. 1. It becommeth children not to endanger the life of parents, especially being forewarned.
 D. 2. Just fear of endangering parents lives, is a good argument to powers not to press children there upon.
 D. 3. The want of the sight of desired children may kill a Parent.
 D. 4. Parents lives may be bound up in childrens, scarcely childrens in parents.
 D. 5. Such affections are inordinate, and irregular.
 D. 6. Natural children would not willingly be guilty of hastening parents deaths.
 D. 7. It is an unnatural sin to bring gray hairs with sorrow to the grave.
 D. 8. It is a powerful argument to rulers, to do all just things for preserving gray heads; especially when it is a white head, and a white heart.

2. The next argument is taken from himself because he was the special undertaker for Benjamin to his father. Wherein we may note.

1. His general ingagement, For thy servant became surety for the yong-man; Cald. same. Received the lad or child from my father, Sept. As being answerable for him.

2. His especial undertaking in it, in saying, if I bring him not unto thee. Then will I be a sinner to my father all dayes, Sept. same. — I shall be guilty of sin, Cald. It is the same he spake to his father. Chap. 43. 9.

1. He promised to bring him backe.
 2. If he did not he submits to be guilty, and bear the blame and punishment for ever, even all his dayes.

Herein he discover's the faithfulness of a just man in keeping promise, his scope is, to move Ioseph to consider, what a charge lay lay upon him, and unless he should discharge it, what a blame would be upon him for ever, Ver. 32.

Notewe.

D. 1. It is the part of a just man to remember his promises and undertakings.

D. 2. The conscience of fidelity should be a pressing argument to powers not to hinder it.

D. 3. It is an heavy thing to bear the guilt of breaking faith or trust.

D. 4. Childrens ingagements to fathers are a sacred tie. Ver. 32.

4. In the last place he brings in upon the premises his petition, where we have.

Ver. 33. 1. The things desired, which are two.
 1. That himself being surety, might be judged to be his servant instead of the lad, And now, I pray thee, let thy servant abide instead of the yong-man a servant to my Lord, there is but one word for servant in the Hebrew and Cald. two in Greek, and servant. The one is a voluntary term of humility, the other notes the penalty submitted unto, that is to be a bondman, or his instrument for servitude to go and come at his word.

2. That Benjamin might be enlarged to go unto his father, And let the yong-man goe up with his brethren. Sept. and Cald. same. that is, let the sentence be taken off from him, that he may have liberty to return to his father with his brethren to keep him yet in the land of the living. Ver. 33.

2. The reason urging him to this, which was an inability to bear the event in the losse of his father, this he expresseth passionately.

Ver. 34. 1. By expostulation querulous, For how shall I go up to my father and the yong-man be not with me; Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein he pathetically expressed the impossibility for him to see his fathers face, unless Benjamin were with him; oh how shall I look my father in the face?

2. By conclusion timorous, Least I see the evil that shall find my father. — evils. Sept. Cald. same. As if he had said, wo is me. I shall see my father dye presently, by evils and griefs that will surprise him, and I; what shall I do? I had rather abide a slave in Egypt, than see these calamities upon my father, O therefore dear Sir, accept me for a servant, and set the yong-man free to save his fathers life. Ver. 34.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Faithful men, especially children, will rather choose to suffer, than break their trust.

D. 2. Change of persons as to some punishments as it may be desirable, so is also lawful.

D. 3. Humility will lay men under the lowest servitude, to bring about accomplishment of promise.

D. 4. Dismission of one is but just upon the ingagement of another. Ver. 33.

D. 5. Ingenuous honest Spirits, are impatient to appear without performance.

D. 6. Natural affection cannot endure to see evil finding out Parents, to misery or death.

D. 7. Faithfulness and tender affection are good motives to feed unto reasonable petitions.

D. 8. Passionat arguments must be to press mens hearts, to reverse their sentence. Ver. 34.

CHAP. XLV.

IN this is continued the history of Iosephs further carriage to his brethren at this time, after that Iudah had ended his pathetical speech, where we have to note, the first general of this Chapter.

4. Iosephs manifestation of himself unto his brethren. ver. 1. to 15.

Wherein occur.

1. His acts preparatory to it. ver. 1. 2.
 2. His manifestation itself. ver. 3. 4.
 3. His brotherly support of them in trouble. ver. 5. 6. 7. 8.

4. His charge to them, and message by them to his father. ver. 9. 10.
 11. 12. 13.

5. His tender deportment to them. ver. 14. 15.

To the first. The acts preparatory to his manifestation, are two.

1. His command for clearing the room, And hereabout we have to observe.
 1. The impulsive cause of it, And or then Ioseph could not restrain himself to, or before all them that stood by him, Cald. same. He could not suffer all them that stood by him, Sept.

1. The cōfection is copulative, noting the immediate effect upon Ioseph from Iudahs speech; the case did so affect him, that now he is forced to put off his vail.

2. The

2. The matter so nearly connected, is the violent working of natural bowels, which now put an impossibility upon him of withholding himself from discovery. he had offered violence to himself in concealing his affections so long, and now he can do it no longer.

2. The word of command given by him, And he cried, cause every man to go out from me. Cald. same. but he said, send away all men from me. Sept. In short he command's his servants, whereof no doubt many were attending on such an action to clear the room, and shut the door's, not that he was ashamed of his brethren, but to have opportunity of freer discovery of himself to his brethren; and none might hear of their evils against him.

3. The issue hereupon, And there stood not a man with him, when Joseph made himself known unto his brethren. When he was made known, &c. Sept. and Cald. to same. All observed his orders, and departed the room: And left Joseph alone with his brethren. Ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

2. The next act preparatory is his violent expellion of his passion, And he gave forth his voice with weeping, and the Egyptians heard, and the house of Pharaoh heard. Sept. and Cald. to same. Herein.

1. His passion prevents his speech; he wept aloud, that is the force of the Hebrew phrase; he gave forth his voice; the yearning of his bowels could no longer be restrained, but he breaks out into tears, before he could speak one word; this was no pusillanimity but true natural affection, guided also with prudence; they were tears of compulsion and joy toward his brethren. Joseph was no Roickee.

2. The report spreads of such actions.

1. Among the Egyptians, who were near at hand.

2. By them probably carried to the house of Pharaoh: all these carriages of Joseph were in order to the following manifestation. Ver. 2.

D. 1. Taffionat speeches are usually answered with passionat expressions in hearers.

D. 2. Wise and good men, though for a season they may curb nature, yet not so always.

D. 3. Prudence suggest's the fitting of place, and persons for discoveries to be made.

D. 4. It's suitable for attendents, to go and come at the rulers word. Ver. 1.

D. 5. Stupidity or apathy is incompetent with nature, much more with grace.

D. 6. Affections kept in, break out at last with greater violence.

D. 7. In affectionat good soules tears may prevent their tongues in discoveries.

D. 8. Under providence affections & relations come to ear, though managed with greatest privacy. Ver. 2.

2. The manifestation itself which Joseph makes unto his brethren, which carrieth these particulars.

1. His assertion. וְאֵין יוֹסֵף And Joseph said unto his brethren, I am Joseph, Sept. and Cald. same. Tolling of bowells and tears at last let out this word, which was an amazing one to them.

Now this and his following words he speaks by himself to his brethren, not by an interpreter, and that in their own language, I whom you have thus far sued unto, I am Joseph.

2. His quere of them, Is my father yet living? Sept. and Cald. same. A patheticall question to hear the Lord of Egypt call old Jacob father, which with the former assertion strikes astonishment.

3. The impression hereby made upon them. Wherein note.

1. The frame impressed. And his brethren could not answer him, Sept. and Cald. same. Not a word, Cald. they were struck in the head; when formerly they had told Joseph was dead, and their own guilt accused them that they sold him; And now to hear him say, I am Joseph. This is an astonishing word and strikes them dumb.

2. The reason of this impression, For they were terrified at his presence, Sept. and Cald. same. Such an unexpected discovery of a poor innocent brother sold by them, with a purpose to cross Gods revelation of him, and now become their Lord and judge, such strange events cannot but work perturbation and amazement. Ver. 3.

4. His invitation of them to draw nigh, And Joseph said unto his brethren, come near Ver. 4. to me, I pray you. And they came near, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. His call to them to approach. It is probable he sat in his appointed place, and they stood at a distance. Whereupon he invites them nearer to speak more freely to them.

2. Their approach, And they came near that is, according to his invitation, they made access to him in the place where he was.

3. His confirmation of what he had asserted, I am Joseph your brother, whom ye sold into Egypt, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. Here is the same assertion, I am Joseph.

2. His relation to them is added, I am Joseph your brother.

3. A good token of it by his suffering from from them, me ye sold into Egypt, I am the man, and ye may know it upon this account; where he minds them of that act which might convince them, that it was even he. Ver. 4.

Observe we.

D. 1. The height of passion being over, the month may be open to speak and ease the heart.

D. 2. In fullness of time Joseph will appear to be Joseph; natural bowells cannot be hid always.

D. 3. Greatness cannot hinder grace from owning its relations, fathers and brethren.

D. 4. Nature, much more grace, inquires of the life and well-fare of parents.

D. 5. Sudden discoveries of unexpected events usually astonisheth the soules of men.

D. 6. Perturbations and terrors may strike men dumb that they cannot speak.

D. 7. Joseph's discovery to his brethren is astonishing. Innocents in glory are so guilty soules. Ver. 3.

D. 8. Grace makes greatness stoop to invite offenders unto favour.

D. 9. Guilt may approach unto offended innocents, when invited.

D. 10. Grace will make a soul own brotherhood to such as have sold them.

D. 11. Mens sinnes may be tokens of remembreing those soules whom they have offended.

D. 12. Grace may mention sinnes against it not to reproach, but to melt the sinner. Ver. 4.

3. After this he yeelds brotherly support unto them in their sudden terrors, and troubles. Where.

1. He encourageth them, against too much grief upon their evil deeds to him, And now be not grieved, neither let there be anger in your eyes, that ye sold me hither. Neither let it seem hard to you, &c. Sept. Let it not be displeasing in your eyes &c. Wherein he supports them.

1. Against over much grief, which every one guilty might now possibly feel, let not your soules be over whelmed; thus the offended comforts the offender.

2. Against anger in their eyes, one against another for conspiring to such a thing; or it may note indignation against themselves, every one for his evil.

3. Against greatness of sin, however, ye were men-sellers, yea and betrayed an innocent brother, yet let not this now bring too much grief upon you. Come wipe away your tears; and be quieted in this;

2. He reasons them out of their terror and trouble, from the wise and gracious ordering of that providence by God, both to him and to them, wherein.

1. He asserts God to be the high cause and orderer of his coming into Egypt, For God did send me before you, for preservation of life, visitation. Sept. same. Cald. Sustainment, where he affirm's.

1. Gods causall act, he sent me. That is under your injurious sale of me it was God that sent me, and in that way of a slave, wherein you thought to bind me up, but Gods counsel was that way to bring his word to passe, he sent me in your way.

2. The end, it was to preserve life, even the life of you and yours, &c. ver. 5.

2. He declares the prophesy of God made known by him of the time of famine; for which he provided for them before hand.

1. He tells them the years past of the famine. For these two years, the famine hath bin in the midst of the land. Sept. and Cald. to same. This they knew what was past.

2. He inform's them of time to come. And yet there are five years wherein there shall be no earing or harvest. Sept. and Cald. same. The scope of this declaration is, to shew them Gods great goodness, in sending him before to provide for them in the daies of famine, ver. 6.

3. He inculcates the same cause, And God sent me before you, to put for you a remnant in the earth, and to preserve life unto you for a great escaping, or by. And to nourish you a great remnant. Sept. That he might pur and sustain. Cald.

1. He expresseth the same cause. God sent me.

2. He notes a further end to the Church. 1. To the continuance of its seed on the earth.

2. To keep them alive with great deliverance. ver. 7.

4. He concludes from all, And now ye sent me not hither but God. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Quest. Did not they sell and send him? Answ. Yea to be a slave, and to destroy him, but not to be a saviour to the Church and preserve them, this was Gods work alone; which Joseph so much inculcat's here, and hereby labour's to still their troubled Spirits.

5. He expresseth a further end as to Joseph. Z z z 1. To

1. To make him a father to Pharaoh, And he hath put me for a father to Pharaoh. Cald. same. — He hath made me as a father. Sept.

2. To make him ruler over Egypt, And for a Lord to all his house, and a Ruler in all the land of Egypt. Sept. same. — To all the men of his house. Cald. Thus he sheweth them that God had turned all their thoughts for good not onely for them, but for him, and for the land of strangers, and with these words he stayeth up their hearts. ver. 8.

The words being plain, some queries are needful to be satisfied about Joseph's exprellions.

Quest. 1. How did Joseph know that he was sent by God?

Ans. 1. Joseph knew that all events are guided and ordered by providence, he attributes this to God; and this he might know, by natural light, by supernatural faith upon Gods purpose revealed by the truth of providence, taught in the Church, and by his own experience of the events.

Quest. 2. Doth not Joseph make God the author of his brethrens sin, in saying, not ye, but God sent me? was not the selling of him a sin?

Ans. 1. The selling of him was doubtless a great sin.

2. His brethren though they sold him, sent him not into Egypt, for they knew not what the Midianites would do with him; God pointed out Egypt and his condition there.

3. The concurrence of providence with evil men in sinful actions, may be, and is without any causation of their sin; onely for over-ruling that which men do sin-fully, to higher ends and better, for Gods glory and his creatures good: and so God partake's not of the sin of man: so God took away Iobs possession, by the Sabeans, &c. Job. 1. 15. 17, &c. so of Herod and Pontius Pilate, it is written they did whatever the hand and counsel of God did determine acts. 4. 28. verse. and Gods thoughts and mans are farre different about the same events.

Quest. 3. Doth not Gods sending excuse the selling of him by his brethren?

Ans. No in no sort; they were wicked in their purposes. God did but over-rule them in their sin, he was righteous therein, but they the inventors, and proper actors of their own evil.

Quest. 4. Did not Gods act force their will?

Ans. No, they wrought their works from their own understanding, and will, God inclined them not to evill, onely what they intend for evill, by his sovereignty he turn's to good.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Sinners smitten and astonished at conviction of sin, had need of support.

D. 2. Grace is prone to comfort sad sinners under their burdens, though against ones self.

D. 3. Wife and good soules reason out dejected sinners from their perturbations.

D. 4. God may send in goodness, when men sell in wickednes, their very brother. Ver. 5.

D. 5. Famine's and their durations, are ordered and sent of God, upon saving onely to his Church.

D. 6. Discoveries of such Gods providence tend to ease the burdens of afflicted ones. Ver. 6.

D. 7. Providence useth the sins of men to his own great ends, and contracts nas into God by it.

D. 8. In what men aim at death and destruction, God overrules to life and preservation.

D. 9. Great escapes from death God works for some, that intend greatest ruin's to his. Ver. 7.

D. 10. All these sweet issues of providence are to be ascribed to God, and not to men.

D. 11. Gods instruments in saving Kingdom's are fathers unto Kings.

D. 12. Honour and dignity doth God appoint and effect for them, whom men designe to shame and misery. Ver. 8.

4. Now followeth, his dispatch of Ver. 9. them and message by them unto his father, wherein.

1. Expedition is charged, Haste ye and get up to my father. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. Here is evident piety to his father.
2. Brotherly compliance, my father as yours.

3. Power as in his place commanding.
4. Care to prevent delays, in this time of famine and his fathers trouble in the absence of his sonnes.

2. The message dispatched unto him, with his name annexed, and herein note,
1. His charge to speak in his name, And

And say unto him thus saith thy son Joseph, Sept. and Cald. same. He commands all to be delivered in his own name.

1. Brotherly engagement.

2. Filiall acknowledgment.

3. Authentical advertisement are carried in it.

2. The matter of this message. Wherein are.

1. Gods work acknowledged, God hath put me for a Lord of Egypt. Sept. and Cald. Here is his preface encouraging, shewing his father how God had brought to passe his former dreams in exalting him to this estate; in a strange land, whether he had a purpose to send his Church.

2. Josephs desire commended. —
Come down unto me, stand not still. Tarry not, Sept. and Cald.

1. His request for his father to come down to him, not by way of superior command from himself, but divine advertisement.

2. His instance in it, make no stand about it. All this was of God, who told Abraham that his seed was to be a stranger in a land that was not theirs, Gen. 15. And now by this invitation God brings it about, ver. 9.

3. The motives to worke Iacob to this, which are.

Ver. 10. 1. A settled habitation here for Gods time. And thou shalt dwell in the land of Goshen, Cald. same. Sept. Geseu. Herein are noted.

1. Certainty of habitation, though invited from his own home;

2. Fertility, for such the land of Goshen was, fit for catel; he is called to the water.

3. Facility in removal, for it was nearest unto Canaan.

2. A neighbourhood or propinquity to himself. And thou shalt be neer to me, thou and thy sons, &c. Sept. and Cald. same. This was a great encouragement to him who thought he was as farre from Joseph, as from one out of the land of the Living, ver. 10. — Universality, He and all his.

3. Sustenance and alimony, where-about.

Ver. 11. 1. The matter promised. And I will nourish thee there, Sept. and Cald. same. The summe is, a full allowance promised to him and his household for livelyhood: to be a nursing father to them.

2. The reason of it twofold.

1. The sharpnes of five years providence to come, for yet there are five years of famine. — Sept. and Cald. same. To endure this time, without bread to eat was impossible, but so God did order it, so long the famine was to be.

2. The prevention of ruine to him and his family. Least thou be impoverished, thou and thy house and all that thou hast, Cald. same. in my hand. — That thou be not worn out, &c. Sept. A sweet providence of a son under God to preserve his fathers family in being, Ver. 11.

4. Evidence of all this by eye-witnesses, which he urgeth.

1. Generally. And behold your eyes see, Ver. 12. Sept. and Cald. same. He demonstrates by the eyes of all of them.

2. Specially. And the eyes of my Brother Benjamin, Sept. and Cald. same. Him he urgeth who was nearer; and might evidence to his father more effectually.

3. The matter of evidence, That my mouth speaketh to you. — It is my mouth, &c. Sept. — That in your tongue I speak unto you, Cald. The summe is, that I speak without an interpreter in my own native language, such as yours is; therefore no cause is there of doubting concerning me, nor of what I have said unto you, ver. 12.

5. The present dignity and state of preheminence wherein he was, and therefore able to make good all that he had said, herein we have.

1. His charge of a full declaration of what they had seen of his Glory. And ye shall tell my father of all my glory in Egypt, and of all that ye have seen, Sept. and Cald. same. Ver. 13.

This he orders not in vain glory, but to certify his father, that God had accomplished his promises, and had made him able to do this good for his relations.

2. His injunction on them, as to the first demand. And ye shall haste and bring down my father hither, Sept. and Cald. same. In this is nothing els but the importunity of Joseph to see & save his father & his family; therefore he presseth his brethren once again to haste, and convey his father thither, ver. 13.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Providence may order travsors to be Messengers of better new's than they intended.

D. 2. Gracious children are speedy to take of grief from their parents hearts.

D. 3. God orders those events of mercy to be declared unto his, which they sometimes would not beleave.

D. 4. Josephs spirit owneth his afflicted father in all his own glory.

D. 5. Josephs heart ascrib'e's all his glory unto God onely.

Z z z z

D. 6.

- D. 6. Joseph contents not himself to be in plenty and glory but to have his father with him. So do gracious hearts, ver. 9.
- D. 7. Certain and fertile habitations, are humane motives to draw from barren places.
- D. 8. Neerues to dearest relations may persuade to change habitations, ver. 10.
- D. 9. Alimony is a duty of Children to parents in straits.
- D. 10. Assurance of nourishment may well draw from places where bread is wanting.
- D. 11. Gods continuance of famine should move soules to follow his providence for food.
- D. 12. It is befitting Gods servants to provide under him against impoverishing of their families. So Joseph, ver. 11.
- D. 13. Eye witnesses and they dear ones of Gods gracious events, should persuade good soules, to believe them. ver. 12.
- D. 14. Gracious soules may urge their dignity to help the distressed, but not in vain glory.
- D. 15. Grace makes nature speedy in the execution of its duty.
- D. 16. Gracious Children desire earnestly their parents with them in their fulness, ver. 13.

5. The last particular in Josephs manifestation to his brethren, is his tender deportment to them.

Ver. 14. 1. To Benjamin, where there is mutual passion.

1. Josephs to him, And he fell upon his brother Benjamins necke and wept. Sept. and Cald. fame. Two actions declare his tendernes to him.

1. Falling on his necke, as one upon his desired and Beloved.

2. Weeping in the joyful sense of his injoyment.

2. Benjamins return to him, And Benjamin wept upon his necke. Sept. and Cald. fame. Here brotherly affection is drawn out by affection: tear answearing tear, ver. 14.

Ver. 15. 2. To all his Brethren jointly, And he kissed all his brethren and wept upon them, Sept. and Cald. fame. Two actions.

1. Killing. A sweet expression of brotherly love, tendernes & forgiveness of evils.

2. Weeping. A sweet note of bowels to them, and no doubt the like from them.

3. In their mutual conference, And afterward his brethren spake with him. Sept. and Cald. fame. This is the sweet close of all the seeming sad actions precedent. Mutual agreement in their colloquation, what they spake is not related, but doubtles, each one declaring themselves, someacknowledging their finnes against him, and all contributing to a brotherly unity among them. Ver. 15.

Observe we.

D. 1. Grace forbids not natural working of affection in its measure.

D. 2. Mutual workings of hearts in brethren is but natural. V. 14.

D. 3. Sincere kisses and tears of injured brethren to offenders are remarkable.

D. 4. Brotherly communion may be freely had, when grace had put away all offences, and accepted offenders. Ver. 15.

5. The rumor of Josephs relations made known at Pharaohs court, together with his resentment of it. This is the second general of this chapter. Ver. 16. 20. Wherein we may note.

1. The tidings spread at court of it: And the voice was heard in Pharaohs house saying, Josephs brethren are come, Sept. & Cald. fame. Herein the words are plain, newes came presently to court, of Josephs relations, by whom it is not said; but doubtles by some attendants, who knew the passages between Joseph and his brethren: and in the form of speech they seem to speak it with much affection, that Josephs brethren were come.

2. The resentment of the tidings with Pharaoh, and his courtiers, which is expressed.

1. By their approbation of it, And it was good in the eyes of Pharaoh, and in the eyes of his servants. — Pharaoh rejoiced and his family. Sept. — It was pleasing, &c. Cald. In short, all their hearts were well affected with the newes, and approved the matter. Ver. 16

2. By Pharaohs commision to Joseph about them, expressed in these particulars.

1. For their present provision, And Ver. 17. Pharaoh said unto Joseph, say unto thy brethren, this do ye, lade your beasts, and go, get you into the Land of Canaan, Cald. fame. Fill Fill waggons with wheat. Sept.

1. Humanity is great.

2. Liberality much from a King unto strangers.

2. A commision for their fathers coming.

Ver. 18. 1. His invitation of him, And take your father and your families (or houses) and come unto me. — And your goods, &c. Sept. — The men of your house, &c. Cald. The King by Joseph thus invites down Jacob into Egypt with all his.

2. His encouragement to accept the invitation, And I will give you the good of the Land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the fat of the land. Sept. To fame. — The best land of Egypt, and ye shall eat the good things of the land. Cald. Herein are noted.

1. Pharaohs indulgence by Joseph, I will give, &c. A forcible motive to come to him, the largenes of heart is observable under Gods gracious providence.

2. Jacobs portion with his family to eat and partake of the very fat, the best and choicest provisions of the land. Ver. 18.

3. An injunction for supply of means to bring down all Jacobs family into Egypt, Where.

Ver. 19. 1. Pharaoh gives all power to Joseph, And thou art commanded. And do thou command these things. Sept. and Cald. So some read by changing the points, in the Hebrew, (but as they are, it is a passive expression, and notes that Joseph hath command and power from Pharaoh, as to order his fathers coming.

2. Joseph is to order his brethren.

1. To take with them instruments for conveyance, This do ye, take ye out of the land of Egypt waggons, or chariots, for the little ones and for your wives. Thus Pharaoh furnisheth them for their journey, with convenient means of passage.

2. To bring their father, And ye shall take up your father and come. Septuag. and Cald. fame. In summe Pharaoh would have them under his authority to bring their father down, without any more delay. Ver. 19.

3. He arms them against objections of delay by their goods and stuff: he chargeth.

Ver. 20. 1. And your eye let it not spare your vessels or stuffe, Cald. fame. — Spare not your eyes (or sight) of your stuff, that is let not your eye look so much upon your lumber, and goods ye have, to make a stop.

2. He encourageth to this, For the good of all the land of Egypt is yours, — And the good of Egypt. Sept. — The best things of, &c. Cald. Hereby he silenceth all disputes against comminglet not losse of goods deterre you, come & ye shall have of the best in the land of Egypt. Ver. 20.

6. The observation of Pharaohs order by Joseph and his Brethren followeth, which is the third generall head of this Chapter, this is related.

1. Generally, And the sons of Israel did so, Sept. and Cald. Same, that is all, all the Brethren by Josephs order, which now followeth. Ver. 21.

2. Specially, Josephs giving and ordering things unto them, according to his commision.

1. He appoints them waggons, And Joseph gave to them waggons according to the mouth of Pharaoh, or his command, — things spoken, Sept. — Commands. Cald. these for carriage.

2. He giveth out provision, And he gave them food or provision for the way, Sept. and Cald. ver. 21.

D. 9. Gracious brethren give charge to others against wrath and quarrels.

D. 12. Gracious hearts having pardoned others, desire them to be in love together. Ver. 24.

7. The next event in the history of Josephs carriage to his brethren, which is also the fourth and last general of the Chapter, is the return of the sons of Jacob to their father, together with the issue of it, v. 25. to 28. Herein these particulars occur to be considered.

1. Their ascent unto, and arrival in Canaan, — And they went up out of Egypt, and came into the land of Canaan, to Jacob their father. Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein, the good hand of providence is observable toward them.

1. In their way and motion, they went up safely and freely from Egypt.

2. In bringing them to the end of their journey, they attained their own country and fathers house in safety, which was no doubt mercy to them and their father. Ver. 25.

2. Their report which they make unto Jacob their father, strange tidings unto him, in two particulars.

1. And they told him saying. Joseph is yet alive. Cald. same, — thy son Joseph liveth Sept. This is the first newes of the life of Joseph, whom he gave for dead a long time before.

2. The other tidings was as strange Ver. 26. And that he is ruler over all the land of Egypt. Sept. and Cald. same. Hereabout doubtless they tell his state and honor and command in Egypt, what entertainment they found, and what orders they had from him.

1. It is evident they now condemned themselves for lyars, for they perswaded their father, that he was dead, they are now forced to say Joseph is alive : And not without shame, seeing they had deceived Jacob.

2. They now confesse the events of dreams and prophesies, which they had labored to frustrate, that God now had exalted Joseph, and made him their Lord, which they so much disdained in times past : God is too hard for these poor Creatures.

3. The impression of these tidings upon Jacob. And his heart fainted or was weakened, for he did not believe them. He was astonished in mind, &c. Sept. — the words were shaking in his heart, &c. Cald.

1. The impression of this tidings, so sudden and unexpected, was to the very fainting of Jacobs heart ; as the tidings of his death did at first overwhelm him ; so this strange tidings of him to be alive struck him unto an ecstasy, to the very fainting of his Spirit, pressed with doubts and fears.

2. The reason of this impression, he did not believe his son's.

1. An event just upon them because they had lyed and said that he was dead, therefore they were not worthy to be believed.

2. An event sad upon Jacob, his unbelief casting him into a swoon ; as is incident to men, when doubts and fears work about about sudden, strange and unlooked for tidings, either good or evil, it weakens mans heart, when he is not able to manage them in his understanding and affections, Ver. 26.

4. The confirmation of their report unto Jacob their father, two ways.

1. By word, And they spake to him all the words of Joseph which he had spoken unto them. Sept. and Cald. same. What these words were may be easily conjectured by the former History ; words of discovering himself, of comforting them, of invitation to his father, for coming to him at this time.

2. By deed they make proof of what they had reported, shewing the waggons and provisions which Joseph had now sent by them, to convey their families and fether to him, And he saw the waggons, which Joseph had sent to carry him. Sept. and Cald. same. Here was a real evidence unto sight, although he had reason to suspect their word, Josephs servants and waggons and present was before his eyes ; and this works faith.

5. The comfortable issue of this upon good old Jacob is threefold.

1. His restitution to himself, and better state. And the spirit of Jacob their father revived. — Was stirred as fire under ashes, ἀνίστασθαι Sept. — And the holy spirit rested upon Jacob, &c. Cald. It is evident this was a change upon Jacobs own spirit, it being now recovered to a good state and temper. After his fainting, then he looks about and seeth these tokens from Joseph, and is comforted. Ver. 27.

He now believed and was revived.

Ver. 28. 2. Jacobs contentation expressed, And Israel said it is much, it sufficeth. Joseph my son is yet alive. — This is a great thing unto me, that Joseph my son is yet alive. Sept. — I have great joy. Cald. — This word Rab is referred by some to the precedent tidings of waggons, and present, as if Jacob should mean, this is much which Joseph hath sent : But it seems rather to look to that which followeth ; and it is an expression of contentation, It is much for me. As much as I desire, that Joseph is alive. Therefore it is well read it is enough, he mentions not his honors but his life, it is enough for me, that my dear son Joseph is alive, whom I have so long bemoaned as dead.

3. Jacobs resolution, I will go and see him before I dye. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. It is a resolution of faith, resting on God for leave.

2. It is the resolve of dear affection in his desire to see his son.

3. It is but previous to his dissolution, before I dye, I desire this, and yet not to be supposed without submission unto the will of God. Ver. 28.

Learn we from it.

CHAP. XLVI.

According to the general division of the History of Iosephs carriage to his fathers house after his preferment in Egypt. This is the eighth event, recorded in the beginning of the chapter, even Iacobs journey into Egypt, with all his, V. 1. 27. but in this chapter we have these three generals.

1. Iacobs onset in his journey. Ver. 1. 7.
2. The number of soules that went with him. ver. 8. to Ver. 27.
3. His meeting and entertainment with Ioseph. Ver. 28. &c.

1. In the first of these we have to note.
1. Iacobs first eminent stage where he stops. Ver. 1.

2. Gods appearance to him there. Ver. 2. 3. 4.

3. Iacobs progress here-upon. Ver. 5. 6. 7.
1. The first of these contain these particulars.

1. Israels arrival unto and stopping at Beer-sheba; And Israel journeyed and all that he had, and came to Beer-sheba. Cald. same. Israel departing; &c. Came to the well of the Oath. Sept.

Herein we have to note.
1. The head, and leader in the journey, Israel, so styled by Moses, who though weak with age and needing help to be carried, yet he was head of the family and so chief in the journey, he with all his children and servants.

2. Their motion, he journeyed with them, doubles in those waggons, and means of conveyance sent from Egypt; making on in the way.

3. Their stage was Beersheba, some say six, some eight, German Miles distant from Hebron, whence Jacob now came, above Thirty of our English miles; whether he came thither in one day or more is not mentioned, but this is the main stage first noted.

1. It was so called, from the oath between Abraham and Abimelech, the well of the oath. Genesis 21.

2. It was the place, where Abraham and Isaac long dwelt, the place of his fathers.

3. It was in his way directly for Egypt.

4. It was the place where his fathers had raised an Altar to Jehovah, and worshipped him, thenceunto God directs him.

2. Israels work here before he go further, And he sacrificed sacrifices to the God of his father Isaac. Sept. and Cald. same. In summe, here he sets time apart to give solemn worship to God before he go further.

1. The worshipper, Israel, as the master of the assembly with his also capable of this work.

2. The matter of the worship, sacrifices of the flocks and herd, such as God required.

3. The object of this worship, the true God; so specified the God of his father Isaac, he is called the fear of Isaac, and so God will be known from false Gods, I am the God of Abraham, &c.

4. The scope of this worship or specification of it, according to its ends, and so it was.

1. Eucharistical, by way of thanksgiving to God.

2. Supplicatory, by way of prayer seeking Gods presence.

3. Consultatory, by way of inquiring of God concerning his way, and renewing his covenant, that he might go on with more courage in his way, in all he professeth faith in God, and so endeavor to give glory unto him, Ver. 1.

Note thence.

D. 1. Under providence inviting (Israel) soules interested in God, may move in their way.

D. 2. Israel being called, all his are fit to move with him where God calls.

D. 3. Beersheba, or the place of the Churches abode and Gods appearance, is good to touch at in our way.

D. 4. In hard undertakings and doubti-doubtfull trials it is good to quicken Faith in God.

D. 5. Spiritual sacrifice and worship are sweet means of strengthening faith, in all undertakings.

D. 6. Israel is not ashamed to serve God before infidels.

D. 7. In undertaking journties and difficulties, it is good for Gods Israel to begin with prayer.

D. 8. The God of Isaac, even the true God, alone is to be worshipped.

2. As to Gods appearance unto him after this, it is declared. Ver. 2. 3. 4. which is made out.

1. In Gods call of him, ver. 2. wherein note.

1. The call, and thereof,

1. The manner, And God said to Israel in the visions of the night. Sept. and Cald. same. Where we have to note.

1. The power calling: God himself and that was not dubitable, for his speech was well known.

2. The manner of calling itself, it was in the visions of the night; whether such as were to men waking, or in a dream as upon them sleeping, is not certain, nor of much moment, this is to be held, that it was Gods call and so Jacob knew it, which waysoever it was given.

3. The subject to whom this call cometh, Israel, called by God Jacob in his old name.

2. The matter of the call, wherein occur.

1. Gods speaking to him by name; Jacob, Jacob. Wherein is observable.

1. Gods aim at the person with whom he had to do, it was Jacob in order to the comfort of the whole Church.

2. The name which God useth, which was that by which he was known in the time of his affliction, and low condition.

3. The intention and earnestness of Gods call to him, in doubling his name, Jacob, Jacob, to make him more earnestly look about him, Moses calls him Israel, but God calls him Jacob: He had need of new strength to prevail against some conflicts at this time.

2. Iacobs reply to God; And he said behold me, or to here am I. Cald. same. — 1st. What is the matter? Sept. Herein.

1. It is evident Jacob knew Gods voice, that it was his and his only.

2. Iacobs readiness to hear Gods will and do it, as if he had said Lord, what wilt thou have me to do? Here I am. Ver. 2.

2. In Gods encouragement of him in his present undertaking, and that these two ways.

1. By renewing the Covenant-relation with him; And he said I am God, the God of thy father. — God spake to him saying, I am the God of thy fathers, Sept. — I am the mighty God of thy fathers, Cald. Herein we have to note.

1. Gods asserting of himself in his being, I am God, Iacob. Wisdom and strength are mine. I am almighty to work.

2. His assertion of relation, I am the God of thy father, engaged by Covenant to him, and therein I am thy God, and will likewise mind thee.

2. By driving away fears and doubts from him in his present undertaking; where-in note.

1. His expresse prohibition, Fear not to go down into Egypt, Sept. and Cald. same. It is an encouraging prohibition, driving away fear about his present removal to Egypt.

Quest. Was Iacob afraid to go thither? Answ. It is probable he was, though yet very desirous to see Ioseph; and it might grow upon these considerations.
1. The prophesie of the bondage of the seed of Abraham in a strangenation which he must know.

2. The present exile from the land of promise.

3. The future corruptions that might befall his family in Egypt.

4. His own infirmities spiritual and corporal, rendring him obnoxious to shakings, and troubles, against all these causes of fear, God encourageth him in this place.

2. The arguments for removing fear, which are these.

1. Gods multiplying of his seed there, For I will set thee there for a great nation, Sept. and Cald. same, he might fear the decrease of his seed in a strange land; but God assures him, to increase him to a great nation there; and it was made good, for he went down to Egypt but with seventy soules, and his seed came up six hundred thousand men beside women and children; and this God did in the land of strangers. Ver. 3.

2. Gods presence with him, in moving thither and dwelling in Egypt. I will go down with thee into Egypt, Sept. and Cald. same. Herein his fear of the loss of Gods communion and appearances is removed; God was resolved to go whither he went, and dwell where he dwelt; and all this by the presence of his grace, protecting him, and his; within, and without.

3. Gods certain return of him to the land of promise, And I will also bring thee up, Sept. — And I will return thee at the end. Sept. — Will make thee go up thence, Cald. This is against his fear of rejection out of the land of promise, where note.

Aaaa 1. To

1. To whom God speaketh thus. viz. to Jacob in his seed, for he returned not but as he was carried to be buried.

2. What he promiseth, even to give a sure and full inheritance to his to make them go up again and possess the promised land.

4. His Dissolution in peace under the hand of Joseph, And Joseph shall put his hands upon thine eyes, Sept. and Cald. same. Wherein God promiseth.

1. That he shall see Joseph before he dieth.

2. That Joseph shall do the last office for him to close his eyes: which was the custome of the dearest relations to their dying friends. By all these God strengthens Jacob against his ground of fear. Ver. 4.

Learn thence.

D. 1. God is ready to answer true sacrificers in times of straits, and their addresses.

D. 2. God hath had several wayes of calling his in times past, but all very sure. Gods word.

D. 3. Israel may become Jacob again, prevailing souls with God may be made to again.

1. The Kings favour to the weak Church to help them on in their journey.

2. The Churches thankful acceptance and use of such favours from the Prince. This was to bring them from Canaan to Egypt, to sojourn there a while: but in the great return of the Church, we find the Prophet speaking of the like. That they should bring their children in chariots and litters, &c. Isaiah. 66. 20. Ver. 5.

3. The ordering of their cattell and goods And they took, &c.

4. Their arrival in Egypt, wherein.

1. Their advent, There came into Egypt.

2. The general account of the persons, Jacob and all his seed with him. Ver. 6.

3. The more special account by sexes, his sons, &c. Sep. and Cald. to same, V. 7.

Quest. 1. Did they get all this substance in Canaan?

Answer. 1. Doubtles Jacob brought much out of Syria. 2. Yet he increased it in Canaan under Gods blessing.

3. His Sons got all in Canaan. 4. Canaan is here contradistinct to Egypt, not to Syria, to shew that they came not empty beggars out of Canaan.

Quest. 2. How is it said, Jacobs daughters, when he had but one Dinah?

Answer.

Answer. It is usuall in the Hebrew to use plural for singular. So it is said the sons of Dan Hushim, which was but one, Ver. 23.

Quest. 3. Did no more but these go with Jacob?

Answer. No more were of his seed, but doubtles many Servants he must have to such a family, and it is presumed, that they went with him.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Saints motion to obedience followeth close upon Gods appearance.

D. 2. Beleeving soules stirre up themselves to go with chearfullnes any whither, when God goes with them.

D. 3. Places of habitation and comfort must be left, when God calleth to it.

D. 6. God makes Kings of the earth helpfull to his poor worm Jacob. Ver. 5.

D. 7. It is good providence for men under God, to carry their possessions with them where he call's them.

D. 8. God carrieth his Church safely where he call's it, even to Egypt.

D. 9. The third Generations of the Church God giveth for continuance of it.

D. 10. God makes the Generations of his Church to go into the land of trial. Ver. 6. and 7.

2. The next general of the Chapter is the register of all Jacobs children, who came down with him at this time into Egypt from Ver. 8. to 27. Of which note.

1. The preface, And these are the names, &c.

2. The order of registering, and that is according to the mothers, 4 fold.

1. The children of Jacob by Leah. Ver. 8. 15. the summe of all them 33. Er and Onan excepted who were dead.

2. The children by Zilpah, Leahs hand-maid. Ver. 16. 17. 18. These were sixteen soules.

3. The children by Rachel Jacobs wife properly so called. 14. soules. Ver. 19. 20. 21. 22.

4. The children by Bilha Rachels hand-maid were seven. Ver. 23. 24. 25. All these make seventy.

3. The summe of them which is 2 wayes taken.

1. Excluding Jacob himself, and Joseph with his two sons, who were in Egypt before, so the number of soules which came out of Jacobs loins and came now to Egypt, were sixty. six. Ver. 26.

2. Including them 4. Jacob: Joseph and his sons, Septuagint. Josephs sons were nine, and so the whole 75. And so the whole summe of the Church now in Egypt were 70 soules, the wives of Jacobs loins exempted, for they came not out of Jacobs loins, and it is presumed that Leah & the rest of Jacobs wives were dead. Seeing no mention is here of them, some doubts about this account must be resolved to clear the Scriptures.

Ver. 27. Quest. 1. How can this be reconciled with that of Stephen Acts. 7. 14. where he saith. 75. Soules went down?

Answer. 1. This was at first the error of the 70 in Greek, who report 2 Sons from Manasse, and 3 from Ephraim: when the eldest was not above 7. And the youngest 6 years of age. ver. 20. And so they erre in making Rachels children. 18. Ver. 22. And so they erre in the whole number; but it is to be imputed to some scapes in printing, for Deut. 10. 22. they read 70. and no more.

Answer. 2. It is to be conceived such a scape was in the acts also: and no error in Stephen, for he is supposed to know the number: such scapes do not weaken Scripture. Some say Luke onely reports what Stephen said, yet the Spirit moving him erred not.

Quest. 2. Wherefore is this register made here?

Answer. Mainly to give occasion to Gods people to observe, what eminent performance God made of his promise to Jacob, that he would make of him a great nation. Ver. 3. They were but 70. now and when they came out of Egypt. 600000 fighting men, beside aged, women, and children, they were as the stars in heaven.

Quest. 3. Did the soules come out of Jacobs loins? are soules ex gradine?

Answer. No, that cannot be gathered here. 1. God creates the immortal Spirit. 2. Man brings forth the whole person. 3. Soul is synecdochically used here, and not abstracted: the whole man is born, but the soule is created, when infused.

From all these, general notes may be taken thus.

- D. 1. Genealogies of the Church are lawfull, and useful: and so ordered of God.
- D. 2. In the infancy of the Church God numbers souls by name: in the fulness by groſſe.
- D. 3. The method of genealogies in Scripture by Gods Spirit is arbitrary: not alwayes oneway.
- D. 4. God will have the line of his Church diſtinct from the world where they dwell.
- D. 5. Jacobs thigh by Gods power brought forth the Church in the viſible beginnings of it.
- D. 6. It concern's the Church to obſerve their ſmal beginnings to give glory unto God, from one man the Church ariſeth to an innumerable company, from Ver. 8. to 28.

3 The laſt general of this chapter being the ninth particular in Iosephs carriage to his fathers houſe after his preſerment, is his firſt meeting with and entertainment of his Father, and brethren. About which we have to note.

1. His ſalutation of them in this Chapter. Ver. 28. 34.
2. His preſenting them to Pharaoh. Chap. 47. Ver. 1. 10.
3. His care of proviſion for them. Ver. 11. 12.

1. We have reported their meeting and ſalutation, and herein are conſiderable.

1. Jacobs ſending an harbinge before him unto Ioseph. Ver. 28. And he ſent Judah, &c.

Ver. 28.

1. The party ſending is Jacob.
2. The party ſent Judah, he it ſeems that was more gracious and fitteſt for the buſineſs.
3. The party to whom he is ſent. Ioseph.

4. The diſpatch together with the end of it, he ſent him to direct his ſace to Goſhen, or to ſignify before him to Goſhen. To meet him at Heroopolis in the land of Ramſes. Sept. Cald. as Hebr. That he ſhould appear before him in Goſhen. Syr. To ſhew him the way and prepare him an houſe of habitation in Goſhen. Hieroſol. Ben Uzzi. In ſumme. The end of this meſſage was to let Ioseph underſtand of his fathers comming, and that Judah might have orders from him for diſpoſing their family and ſitting down in Goſhen. The words may be read two wayes.

1. That Judah ſhould prepare by Iosephs order in Goſhen.
2. That he ſhould ſignify Jacobs comming unto Goſhen, that Ioseph might ſet his ſace thitherward to come and meet him, ſo the 70: And this ſeems beſt.
3. Their arrivall. And they came into the land of Goſhen. Cald. ſame. That is Jacob and his company, according as it was formerly appointed: There now expecting Ioseph.

Which teacheth us.

- D. 1. When Gods providence invites his people to a ſtrange land, prudence teacheth them to ſeek advice from its Rulers.
- D. 2. Prudence points out fit perſons for diſpatches unto men in power about its affairs.
- D. 3. It is not unſeemly for fathers to ſend unto ſons for direction in their way, when God ſets them in power.

2. Iosephs return to the meſſenger. Ver. 29. Where.

1. His preparation. And Ioseph bound his Chariot, and went up to meet Iſrael his father to Goſhen. ——— Joined his Chariots, &c. Sep. and Cald. Covered his beaſt, Arab. harnes for chariots. Syr. in which note.

Ver. 29.

1. His princely preparation according to his place, at his command his chariot was provided.

2. his addreſſe, he went up in it to meet Iſrael his father, no doubt having his due attendance with him to accompany him.

2. His acceſſe and apparition to him, for it is ſpoken here of the ſame perſon; & he was ſent unto him. That is Ioseph to Jacob Sept. ſame. ——— When he ſaw him. Cald. And as or when he appeared, Syr. and Ar. he proceeded ſo farre until he came to the ſight of his father, and his father to the ſight of him, Ben-Uzzieth hath a tale here, that Iacob bowed to Ioseph before he knew him, and ſo was obnoxious to have his year's cut ſhort, and that he wept afterward, becauſe he had bowed to him; all is fabulous.

3. His ſalutation, And he ſell on his necke, and wept on his necke continually ſill Cald. ſame. ——— With a great weeping, Sept. This ſuppoſeth.

2. His deſcent from his chariot.
2. His filial obedience though a Prince.
3. His natural affection, tendernes, and joy, it was a melting ſalutation from Ioseph to his father, and no otherwiſe from Iacob unto him doubtles, he wept a good while, over and above, the term noteth ſome continued meltings without ceaſation.

Obſerve

Obſerve we hence.

- D. 1. Tidings of approach of a good father, will move a good child to haſte to him.
- D. 2. Princely attendance and inſtruments are beſeeming ſuch as God promotes.
- D. 3. Higheſt places will not hinder filiall duties to parents in gracious children.
- D. 4. Sight of fathers and children after long abſence, is affecting upon their Spirits, as deſired by them.
- D. 5. Natural affection may ſtand with grace, and ſervett between parents and children.
- D. 6. Joy expreſſeth itſelf in tears, for enjoyment of a deſired father, and ſo of a ſon, Ver. 29.
- D. 7. Tears ſpeak aloud the hearts deſire.

Ver. 30.

3. Jacobs expreſſion after the ſitt of weeping was over, And Iſrael ſaid unto Ioseph, now let me dye, ſince I have ſeen thy face, becauſe thou art yet alive, Sept. ſame.

——— Although I ſhould dye now, I am comforted after that I have ſeen thy face, &c. Cald. Other readings diſter not much from the original.

1. The ſpeaker here is Iſrael to Ioseph; a good father unto a good ſon, who was as dead, but now appeared to be alive.

2. The ſpeech by way of wiſh or deſire, Now let me dye, after I have ſeen thy face. It is not a ruſh deſire of death, but a ſpeech of contentation, that now he had nothing els in the World, that ſhould ſtir his deſires to live, ſeeing he had obtained that one thing to ſee Ioseph alive. Though he ſhould dye now, yet he was fully ſatiſfied with it, as the Calde paraphraſeth.

3. The reaſon of this deſire of contentation, becauſe thou art yet alive, the ſtrength of his reaſon is conſiderable, that it ſhould make Iacob ſo willing to depart.

1. There is much weight in the perſon, Thou liveſt, thou not onely my beloved, but Gods beloved, of whom God hath ſpoken ſo much good as to his Church, and to whom God hath revealed his will ſo far, thou whom God hath made a nurſing father to his Church.

2. There is no leſs in his ſurviving, that thou art alive, it notes not onely his natural being, but his ſtate of life in which God ſet him, wherein he was inabled to do good to the Church of God; and now

Iacob ſeeing ſuch a poſterity remaining for hopeful comfort to his Church, he expreſſeth his greater contentation as to his own diſſolution, as Simeon, Luk. 2. 29.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. After natures oppreſſion is over, grace helps burdened ſoules to ſpeak to each other.
- D. 2. Sight of deſired comforts below, keep not gracious hearts from deſiring death.
- D. 3. Saints deſire of death is of contentation, not of raſhnes, or diſcontent.
- D. 4. Although death be terrible to nature, yet it is deſirable to Saints upon good terms.
- D. 5. The ſurviving helps of Gods Church make old Saints more willing to depart, Ver. 30.

4. Iosephs beſpeaking his Brethren after his ſalutation of his father, wherein he ſheweth.

1. What he will ſpeak for them unto Pharaoh, Ver. 31, 32.

2. What they ſhall ſay to Pharaoh, when he ſhould call them, Ver. 33. 34. In the firſt we have.

1. The ſpeaker with the parties to whom, And Ioseph ſaid unto his brethren, and to his fathers houſe, Sept. and Cald ſame.

2. The ſpeech which is by way of promiſe.

1. Of his going to Pharaoh, I will go up to Pharaoh, Septua. and Cald. ſame. His mind is to go to Pharaoh about their buſines.

2. Of his ſpeaking to Pharaoh in their behalf, And I will ſhew, &c. Wherein he promiſeth.

1. To own his kinned.

2. To declare their advent according to his leave, Ver. 31.

3. To diſcover their trade of life, that they were ſhepherds, And they are men feeding ſheep, for they have bin men of cattel, that is poſſeſſors and maſters of cattel.

4. That they had brought all with them.

3. Of his procuring a fit feat for them, which is implied though not expreſſed, Ver. 32.

In the ſecond, He ſheweth them what they ſhould ſay to Pharaoh, in caſe he might queſtion them about their courſe of life. Where.

1. He ſuppoſeth Pharaohs queſtion, as was likely for a King to a ſojourning ſtranger, within his dominions to inquire of their courſe of life, And it ſhall be, when

A a a a 3

Pharaoh

Pharaoh shall call, &c. If therefore Pharaoh call you, and shall say, What is your work? Sept. and Cald. same, Ver. 33.

2. He suggested their answer, because they were men not used to the Court.

1. That they should acknowledge the honest trade of themselves and their fathers, that they were shepherds, Ye shall say, thy servants trade, &c.

2. The reason of this acknowledgement is twofold.

1. To procure a place fit for their trade of life, and to preserve their flocks, That ye may dwell in the Land of Goshen.

2. To avoid offence unto the natives, For every shepherd is an abomination to the Egyptians, Sept. same. Egyptians do abominate, Cald. And others to the same sense.

Quest. Why did the Egyptians abominate them?

Ans. It is conceived. 1. From pride, that they disdained to poor a calling. 2. From superstition, because shepherds did eat of the flock, which they worshipped, that therefore they might enjoy their religion pure & not be an offence to others. Joseph thus advieth them to speak unto Pharaoh, when they were called, Ver. 34.

It learneth us.

D. 1. After duty to fathers, brethren are likewise to be respected, and well intreated.

D. 2. Gracious men in power will use their interest for the comfort of their brethren in the Church.

D. 3. Good men exalted by God will take care to preserve their fathers house. Ver. 31.

D. 4. Gracious souls set up by God, will not be ashamed of the poor condition of relations.

D. 5. Flocks and herds must be cared for next to man, Ver. 32.

D. 6. It is but rational that Princes and Rulers inquire into the trades of such as sojourn with them, Ver. 33.

D. 7. It is equal for men to satisfy powers concerning their course of life.

D. 8. It is needful to instruct such to give account of themselves who are not acquainted how to do it.

D. 9. No man should be ashamed to profess an honest calling, be it never so low.

D. 10. Places of habitation suitable for callings are desirable.

D. 11. Proud men are apt to despise those of low condition.

D. 12. Superstitious souls abhorre all that walk in the truth.

D. 13. It is honest prudence not to give offence to such persons by mixing with them. Ye may dwell in the Land of Goshen.

CHAP. XLVII.

IN this Chapter is continued the History of Josephs care toward his fathers house they being now come into Egypt; and in the beginning of it, we have two particulars of Josephs entertainment recited, viz. his presenting their case and persons to Pharaoh, and then his constant provision for them. Ver. 11. 12. But reserving that note of historical order. This Chapter containeth three general heads.

1. Josephs presenting his family unto Pharaoh and by his power settling them, Ver. 1. 12.

2. Josephs dealing with the Egyptians upon the sore increase of famine. V. 13. 26.

3. Jacobs state and time in Egypt with a preparation unto his death. Ver. 27. 31.

In the first general we have these particulars.

1. Josephs address to Pharaoh by himself. Ver. 1.

2. Josephs presenting his brethren to Pharaoh. Ver. 2. 6.

3. Josephs presenting his father to Pharaoh. Ver. 7. 10.

4. Josephs settling them in their place and provision for them, Ver. 11. 12.

In the first we have these things more special.

1. Josephs access to Pharaoh for acquainting him with the advent of his fathers family into Egypt, And Joseph came and told Pharaoh, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. His access.

2. The end of it is here noted; both are expressions of duty from Joseph to the supreme Ruler of the land, it was equal he should make his address, and discover that with his leave his father, &c. were come.

2. His narration of their advent which reporteth.

1. The subjects that were come, My father, and my brethren, and their flocks, and their herds, and all that they have, Sept. and Cald. same.

2. Their advent from their own place, They

They are come out of the Land of Canaan, Sept. and Cald. same. And all readings.

3. Their stand, which at present they made until Pharaohs pleasure were more known, And behold they are in the Land of Goshen, Sept. and Cald. same. Behold they lay in the Land of Goshen, Syr. This he declareth that there according to appointment they waited for order from the King where to sit down and sojourn.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Prudence guideth men after instruction for affairs, to come to action. From connection.

D. 2. Providence order's Josephs address to Pharaoh in behalf of his sojourning Church.

D. 3. It is meet for Inferiour Rulers to declare to supreme, the advent of sojourners to the Church.

D. 4. Prudence guides intercessors to declare the whole burden of the Church to procure a fit supply for them.

D. 5. Advent from a Land of Famine may move to pity them that live in fulnes.

D. 6. It is meet to declare to Princes, that sojourners wait in place appointed, to receive their orders, Ver. 1.

In the second we have these particular passages observable.

1. Josephs presenting his brethren to him. Wherein note.

1. The presenter, Joseph a patron full of favour and power.

2. The presented set out,

1. By relation, his brethren.

2. By number, five.

3. By rank or order, in the Hebr. it is from the extreme, that is, as some say, from the eldest & youngest he chose out five.

Cald. as Hebr. Sept. read of his brethren. Sam. He took part of his brethren, Ar. As Sept. And Syr. Others read out of the summe of brethren, and conjecture they were two of Leahs, one of Rachels, Benjamin. One of Zilpahs, and one of Bilhah, but these are conjectural: there is nothing certainly said of them: but five of them they were; probably some of the elder and younger.

3. The party to whom, Pharaoh, under whose protection they were now come to be preserved.

4. The presentation, he made them stand before Pharaoh, Sept. and Cald. same, and so the rest. Ver. 2.

2. Pharaohs expostulation with them, And Pharaoh said to his brethren, what are your works? Sept. and Cald. to same, with the rest. This Joseph informed them before, that Pharaoh would inquire about their course of life, nature taught men then to live in some imployments, and he seems to be morally good in this to inquire after mens labours, and conversations.

3. Their answer to Pharaoh, wherein note.

1. Their satisfaction to his question, Feeders of sheep, or shepherds are thy servants, both we and our fathers, Sept. and Cald. same. Our brethren also and our fathers same; no difficulty in this, they acknowledge their mean condition, as Joseph had advised them. Ver. 3.

2. Their additional reply two ways.

1. By a narration of their state.

1. In the end of their coming, And they said to Pharaoh to sojourn in the land are we come, Sept. same. to dwell. Cald. And so others, but the original is clear, they profess no intent but to sojourn: as to their present exigences.

2. In the reason pressing them, For there is no pasture for the flocks which thy servants have: For the famine is heavy in the Land of Canaan, Cald. same. For our beasts, for the famine hath prevailed, &c. Sept. Nothing difficult herein.

1. By supplication, And now, we pray thee, let thy servants dwell in the Land of Goshen, Cald. same. We will dwell. Sept. Ar. Herein they ask the part of strangers and desire leave to sit down in a strange land.

1. The matter of request is a suitable habitation.

2. The manner is humble, Ver. 4.

4. Pharaohs reply, and that in these ways.

1. By congratulating Joseph for the advent of his relations, And Pharaoh spake to Joseph, saying, thy father and thy brethren are come to thee, Cald. same. Sept. make a great inversion of the words in 4. 5. 6th Verses. Others are to the same with the Hebr. Herein note.

1. Pharaohs turning to Joseph for answere, who was their mediator at this time.

2. His congratulation, as if he should say, it is well, it is pleasing to me that thy father and brethren are come to thee, and thou hast the enjoyment of thy relations, Ver. 5.

1. By licensing Joseph to settle his father with his family. Herein note.

1. The scope he grants him, The Land of Egypt is before thee, Sept. and Cald. same.

And

And so all readings. The summe of this is, that all Egypt was at his choice in any place for his father, &c.

2. The place described two ways.

1. By its quality, in the best of the land make thy father and brethren to dwell. Sept. and Cald. same. — So. Sam. Ar. — In the fairest part. Syr. here the benevolence, and liberality of the King appears. He bari's not the best of the land from the Church; so providence sets the heart of Kings.

2. By its name pointing it out, Let them dwell in the land of Goshen. Cald. same. Septuagint. read this in the fourth verse. All readings agree; he grants their desire to the full.

3. By offering preferment to any of them that were fit, And if thou knowest and there be among them men of strength, or activity, then appoint them rulers of the cattle, over those that I have. Cald. to the same. — Sept. read. Verse. 4. — Make them rulers over those that are set over my heard. Ar. Herein we have.

1. A supposition, if Joseph had knowledge of their worth, not otherwise.

2. A concession thereupon, then make them Princes or chief overseers of my cattle. here is wisdom and great indulgence from the King. Ver. 6.

Learn thence.

D. 1. It is fit with nature and is not uncomely for grace to seek the good of all relations.

D. 2. Providence order's some in favour and power to make his poor distressed Church to stand before Kings.

D. 3. Providence directs to choose such to stand before Kings, as are of Capacity. Ver. 2.

D. 4. Morally wise rulers are inquisitive of the labours and employments of their sojourners.

D. 5. It is a part of truth and modesty to own mens honest though low occupations. Ver. 3.

D. 6. It is seemly for strangers to declare their ends of coming to strange places.

D. 7. Lives of flocks and herds are to be cared for, as well as our own.

D. 8. Famine oppressing may make the Church of God sojourn for its food.

D. 9. It is fit for the sojourning Church to supplicate convenient habitation from Rulers. Ver. 4.

D. 10. God moveth the hearts of Kings to congratulate the access of the distressed Churches to its rest. Ver. 5.

D. 11. Upon Gods providence working, Kings give up all their territories to the Church.

D. 12. Ingenuous Spirits of Princes under Gods motion give the best of their lands to its sojourners.

D. 13. God orders Princes to give suitable habitation, for his straitened people, to their petitions.

D. 14. Men of virtue and activity are fit to be set over Kings affairs.

D. 15. Upon such accounts God hath ordered preferment to his servants in strange Kingdomes. Here to Joseph. So to Daniel, Nehemiah, &c. Ver. 6.

3. Now followeth Josephs presenting of his Father unto Pharaoh, with the circumstances about it, and herein we have.

1. Josephs presentation of Jacob unto Pharaoh, And Joseph brought Jacob his Father, and made him stand before Pharaoh. Sept. and Cald. same. And the rest of readings. Herein.

1. The presenter, Joseph now exalted in Egypt; and in highest favour with his Prince.

2. The presented; Jacob his father, now a Pilgrim, and in distress, yet Joseph owns him.

3. The person to whom he presents him, Pharaoh King of Egypt, now under God, his patron.

4. The presentation, he himself brought him and made him stand before the King.

2. Jacobs salutation, And Jacob blessed Pharaoh. Sept. and Cald. same. — And he saluted him, Ar.

1. The Minister of the blessing Jacob, a Patriarch and Prophet, however at this time a pilgrim in Egypt.

2. The object of it, Pharaoh King of Egypt, yet saluted and blessed by a Father of the Church.

3. The blessing itself, which carrieth in it.

1. Salutation.

2. Acknowledgment and thanks for his royal favour to himself and family.

3. Prayer to God for his special favour to him.

4. Propheticall collation of it in the name of the Lord. Ver. 7.

Ver. 7.

3. Pharaohs expostulation with him, And Pharaoh said unto Jacob, how many are the dayes of the years of thy life. Cald. same. — How many are the years of the dayes, &c. Sept.

1. Here is condescension of the King to converse so kindly with a stranger.

2. His question is about the term of his age; he question's his sons about their works, but the old father onely about his year's and that with reverence of the gray head. Ver. 8.

4. Jacobs answer unto Pharaoh, in three things.

1. In giving an account of his present age, And Jacob said to Pharaoh, the dayes of the years of my pilgrimage, are 130. Years. Cald. same. — The dayes of the years of my life, &c. Sept. Other readings to the same purpose.

This is a standard to measure chronology in severall things. Herein.

1. He sheweth the state of his life in that he terms it a pilgrimage, and indeed, so he was from the first with Abraham and Isaac but eminently in all his motions, to Syria, &c. that which Pharaoh calleth life, he termeth pilgrimage.

2. The term of his life so far as it was spent, he had passed 130. years.

2. In shewing the misery and trouble that attended these dayes, Fear and evil have bin the dayes of the years of my life. Sept. and Cald. same. A little thing my life, and dayes evil.

1. The brevity.

2. The misery of his life in this world is asserted.

3. In declaring comparatively, that his life did fall short as yet of his fathers, And they have not attained the dayes of the years of the life of my fathers in the dayes of their pilgrimages. Sept. and Cald. to the same, and other readings.

1. He speaketh of his life at present, for 17 years more were added to him.

2. He confesseth his fathers to be pilgrims, and strangers on this earth.

3. He acknowledgeth their course to extend beyond his. Ver. 9.

5. Jacobs Valediction, and departure from Pharaoh, wherein.

1. He takes leave with the like salutation, wherewith he entred. And Jacob blessed Pharaoh. Sep. & Cald. same, he prayed for him. Ar. Not onely as a beleever, but as a Prophet also, desiring good for him with effect.

2. He departs, He went out from before Pharaoh. Sep. and Cald. to same. He went out of his sight as some; he withdrew himself to his own place, so reverentially he departs as he came unto him. Ver. 10.

Ver. 9.

Ver. 10.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Gracious sons exalted, have their aged parents in esteem, though afflicted, to honor them. So Joseph.

D. 2. Providence orders his pilgrim servants sometimes to stand before Princes, and be honored by them.

D. 3. God by his sojourners repayeth blessing to those that honor them.

D. 4. It becometh the members of Gods Church to salute such as entertain them with a blessing. Ver. 7.

D. 5. It is natural to men to admire old age; and inquire to the greatness of it. Ver. 8.

D. 6. The Saints of God have allwayes professed their state of life below to be a pilgrimage.

D. 7. Short and smart doth God make the lives of his dearest on earth sometimes.

D. 8. Several terms of life hath God pointed out to his Saints below, some longer, and some shorter. Ver. 9.

D. 9. It seems gracious soules admitted to Princes to depart with due salutations.

D. 10. The best salute from Gods servants, is at coming and going to bless those, whom they conversed with. Ver. 10.

4. The last thing in the first general, is Josephs setting his father and family, and providing for them. Ver. 11, 12. Herein we have to note.

1. His instating of them. Ver. 11. And Joseph placed, &c.

1. The instituter, Joseph as authorized by Pharaoh.

2. The instituted, father and brethren.

3. The institution of them, he made them dwell, as Heb. Sep. He assigned them an habitation, or placed them, as others.

4. The indowment of them, with sufficiency of means, set out.

1. Simply, He gave them a possession in the land of Egypt, Sept. &c. to same. to the rest. — Inheritance: Syr.

2. Comparatively, In the best of the land, in the land of Raameses, Septu. and Cald. same, with others. This land was the region of Goshen. This Raameses, is conceived to be a great town or city therein; but rather I think it a larger continent; it being termed the land.

Bbb

5. The

Ver. 11.

5. The authority by which this was done, as Pharaoh had commanded, Sept. and Cald. same, and so all readings. So that, Joseph only as commissioned from the King, but Pharaoh himself by his royal power, to disposed of the Church in Jacobs family at this time.

Ver. 12. 2. His constant providing for them, And Joseph provided his father & his brethren, & all his fathers house with bread, to the mouth of the little one, according to the little ones. As a little child is nourished. So it is varied. — Measured out wheat, &c. — Wheat according to the body, Sept. — Bread according to every ones family. Cald. — After the manner of little children. — According to the number of the little ones. Ar.

1. The nursing father is Joseph.
2. The nourished, father, brethren, families.

3. The means of nourishment, bread, that was the staff of life.

4. The extent of this provision, as in the letter, To the mouth of the little one. That is from the greatest to the least, he put bread into their mouths, which seems to be most proper to the phrase. Ver. 12.

Learn we thence.

D. 1. Providence make's children sometimes provide houses for desolate parents and relations.

D. 2. God order's possessions, and those the choicest for his Church sometimes in its pilgrimage.

D. 3. The commands of Kings serve the providence of God, for the comfort of his Church. Ver. 11.

D. 4. Gracious sons under providence may be nursing fathers unto parents, &c. in famine.

D. 5. God find's out bread for his Church, in strange places, when they have none at home.

D. 6. God looketh to fill the mouths of little ones in his Church with food, as well as great. Ver. 12.

2. The second general of this Chapter is the history of Josephs dealing with the Egyptians, as to the remaining time of the famine. Ver. 13. to 26. Wherein we have to note.

1. The sad occasion of his transactions with them, which was the grievousness of the famine. Ver. 13.

2. Josephs care in affording them corn for exchange.

1. Of money, which they brought Ver. 14.

2. Of their cattel which they sold, Ver. 15. 16. 17.

3. Of their lands which they ingaged. Ver. 18. 26.

1. In the former it is fit to observe.

1. The connection which seemeth to respect the last verse of the 41 Chapter, where Josephs administration toward Egypt was spoken of, but interrupted by the history of his demeanor toward his fathers house which is continued from Chap. 42. to this place. This passage therefore was noted as the third general of Josephs administration, from that time which is the modelling of Egypt to a new form of subjection unto Pharaoh and therein of government.

2. The matter immediately connected is the sad occasion of all the transactions between them and Joseph. — Herein two things are declared occasional.

1. A sad cause, and the reason of it, And bread was not in all the land, for very grievous was the famine. — Wheat was not, &c. For the famine prevailed mightily, Sept. — Overmuch. Cald. — So Syr. Herein are reported.

1. A nullity of bread, not simply, for there was corn in the store houses, but as to privat families.

2. The reason which was the vehement prevalency of the famine, this seems to be about the third year.

2. A sad effect, And the land of Egypt, and the land of Canaan, rag'd, labour'd or fainted from before the famine, or by reason of it. — Failed, Sept. — The people of the land, &c. Cald. — And the whole land of Egypt was wasted and the land of Canaan, &c. Syr. — The inhabitants were brought to poverty. Ar.

1. The subjects of this evil, the lands of Egypt and Canaan, extended was the subject, the people of these lands, that whence Jacob came and that wherein he and the Church now were.

2. The evil brought on them by famine, rage, madness, fainting, failing, groaning for want of bread; so it was with many families, when in the midst of all God provides for his Church. Ver. 13.

Learn thence.

D. 1. Providence in order to its own ends, puts nations to want, or scarcity of bread.

D. 2. Prevailing famine is a very grievous evil.

D. 3. Grievous famine maketh souls faint and rage and bring sore patients.

D. 4. In midst of all God feeds his Church. Ver. 13.

2. In the next place we have Josephs care in dealing with the Egyptians in this straight, and that in a just exchange with them for bread.

1. For their money, in which narrative we have.

Ver. 14. 1. Josephs receipt, And Joseph gathered up all the money, that was found in the land of Egypt, and in the land of Canaan, for the corn which they bought, Sept. and Cald. to same. With the rest. Herein note.

1. Joseph sold them corn.

2. They bought it, viz. the inhabitants of these lands.

3. Joseph received and collects it. — And he gathered it up, Sept.

2. Josephs return of all into Pharaohs treasury, And Joseph brought the money into Pharaohs house. Sept. and Cald. same. Herein.

1. The treasurer Joseph, a faithful steward and servant.

2. The treasure, all the money the price of the corn.

3. The treasury Pharaohs house: so he makes him the owner and seeks his profit.

Learn we.

D. 1. Exchange of bread for money is just and lawful in all nations.

D. 2. It is equal for sellers to gather up all their price from Buyers.

D. 3. It is just for stewards intrusted to bring the revenue into their Lords possession. Ver. 14.

2. He dealeth with them in exchange for cattel, in the narrative whereof.

1. Their address to Joseph is related with their motion made to him.

1. The occasion of it is the failing of their money, And the money was consumed from the land of Egypt, and from the land of Canaan. Sept. and Cald. to same. — Herein declared the failing of money among the people: and now hunger crieth for bread: hereupon they seek out again.

2. Their access to Joseph hereupon, And all the Egyptians came unto Joseph. Sept. and Cald. same. To him they were first sent by Pharaoh, and to him they come again in their streets.

3. Their cry unto him, They said give us bread, and why shall we dye before thee? For the money faileth, Sept. and Cald. same. Note.

1. Their prayer, give us bread they beg in want, but Real it not.

2. Their argument twofold.

1. Imminent death if they have no bread.

2. The failing of all money to buy the^m any more food. Ver. 15.

2. Josephs reply.

1. By way of demand, And Joseph said, give ye your cattel, Sept. and Cald. to same. Here he proposeth another exchange for bread, And that is their cattel and stocks, &c. Ver. 16.

2. By way of promise, And I will give you for your cattel, if money fail. — Bread and corn. as Sept. and Cald.

1. His prudence.

2. His justice are carried herein: so he orders under Gods guidance for preserving them, and their cattel, which they could not els preserve. Ver. 16.

3. The argument made and executed by them.

1. On the Egyptians part, And they brought their cattel to Joseph, Sept. and Cald. same, &c. That is to make exchange for bread. Ver. 17.

2. On Josephs part, And Joseph gave them bread for horses, &c. Wherein.

1. The price paid by the people of all sorts, and every head of cattel.

2. The retribution of Joseph expressed, two ways.

1. By giving them bread.

2. By leading them gently, and sustaining them with bread, so that it was not only a present refreshing, but a continued sustentation of them.

3. The duration was one whole year. Quest. How could the Egyptians have such cattel, when the shepherds were an abomination to them?

Answ. In short, they abhorred the labour and travel which was laid on others, but not the good or possession of the cattel.

Observe we.

D. 1. Providence by continued wasting famine consumeth wealth for bread, bread is better than money.

D. 2. All treasure being spent, hunger will cry out for bread.

D. 3. Fear of not escaping from death makes some men cry for bread, and others give it. Ver. 15.

D. 4. Exchange of bread for cattel, is not unlawful. Ver. 16.

D. 5. To save life, bread is better than cattel, and these easily parted with for it in famine.

D. 6. Justice must give bread and sustentation to poor men that part with all to save their lives. Ver. 17.

3. He dealeth with them in exchange for lands and liberties to give them bread, wherein.

1. Their motion to Joseph. Ver. 18. 19. And herein.

Ver. 18.

1. The time, And that year was ended and they came to him in the second year, Sept. and Cald. same. The year following. Syr. So that this was not the second of the famine but of the hard pressure, their money was spent in the fifth year, and cattle in the sixth, and now these being gone they come to sell themselves, and lands, and all for bread.

2. Their declaration of their sad condition to Joseph, which is in three particulars expressed.

1. We will not hide from my Lord that the money is spent. Cald. same. Shall we be worn out by my Lord? Sept. If money fail, here they declare, all their money was gone.

2. That all their herds and flocks were in his hand, bought for bread already.

3. That nothing was remaining but their bodies and lands, Sept. and Cald. same. these were the last they had to barter for bread. Ver. 18.

Ver. 19.

3. Their pressing expostulation, Wherefore shall we dye before thine eyes both we and our land? Cald. same. And the land be desolate, Sept. This is a pressing argument, shall we dye, and the land dye also, bereft of its inhabitants?

4. Their petition twofold.

1. Buy us and our land for bread. And we will be, we and our land servants unto Pharaoh. Cald. same. Possess us, Sept. Here is their offer for present bread.

2. And give seed that we may live and not dye, and the land be not desolate. Cald. same. That we may sow, &c. Sept. Here their desire is for seed, this being the last year of famine after which God was purposed to give fruitful seasons again. Ver. 19.

2. Josephs answer to them, made by his actions.

1. His buying it of them.

Ver. 20.

1. His payment, And Joseph bought all the land of Egypt for Pharaoh. Cald. same. Possessed, Sept. That is he gave them bread and seed for it.

2. The reason, for the Egyptians sold every man his field, because the famine prevailed over them, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. Their voluntary act, they sold it.

2. The cause provoking, Gods hand in famine.

3. The issue, And the land became Pharaohs. So it is read, Sept. and Cald, &c. not only by way of government but by purchase and possession. Ver. 20.

Ver. 21.

2. His disposing of them being bought, And the people he made them pass to cities from one end of the border of Egypt to the other end thereof. He subjected them for servants. Sept. He translated them from city to city. Cald. Two ways this is understood.

1. That Joseph changed their habitations, they having sold them, and brought those of one end of Egypt, to dwell at the other, to take them off from their old claim.

2. Some think rather, that he brought them to cities near them, there to publish the decree, and to give their assent, and so return them to their places again, this was easier, and seems more probable. Ver. 21.

3. His exception, Only the land of the Priests bought he not, for the Priests had an appointed part from Pharaoh. And they did eat the assigned portion which Pharaoh gave them, therefore they sold not their land. Sept. and Cald. To the same.

Ver. 22.

1. The exception made, Joseph did not buy the land of the Priests. Some read Princes, but it is generally rendered Priests, to whom several nations gave honorable respect.

2. The reason of the exception of these lands: because the Priests had allowance from Pharaoh in the hardest times, and they did eat upon his finding, therefore they sold not their lands. Ver. 22.

4. His declaration of the agreement unto the people. Wherein we have to observe.

1. The terms recited upon Josephs part, And Joseph said to the people, behold I have bought you this day, and your land for Pharaoh: loe here is seed for you, and ye shall sow the land. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Ver. 23.

1. He asserts his purchase.

2. He giveth them seed as they desire.

3. He alligns their work, ye shall sow the land. Ver. 23.

2. Terms upon their part in two points.

1. In what they were to pay to Pharaoh, And it shall be in the province, that ye shall give the fifth part unto Pharaoh. Sept. and Cald. to same.

Ver. 24.

1. Gods product by providence is supposed.

2. The portion thence reserved to Pharaoh is only the fifth, the same portion which was laid up at the Kings cost in the years of plenty.

2. In what they were to reserve to themselves. And 4 parts shall be for you, (hands or handsut) for seed of the field, and for your food, and for them, who are in your houses, and for your little ones to eat, so the words changed. Sept. and Cald.

To same purpose. Herein he giveth what they asked not: necessity made them willing to part with all, but his prudence and goodness orders better for them. Ver. 24.

5. Their free and full assent to this agreement, wherein note.

1. Their acknowledgment, And they said, thou hast preserved us alive. Cald. same. Thou hast saved us. Sept. This is an acknowledgment of thankfulness ascri-

Ver. 25.

bing

bing the preservation of life to Joseph under God.

2. Their request, Let us find favour in the eyes of my Lord. Cald. same. We have found. Sept. In this an humble desire to deal with them in general.

3. Their engagement, And we will be servants to Pharaoh, Sept. and Cald. same. So they engage themselves to be at Pharaohs command to make good their promise. Ver. 25.

6. The last thing in this History is Josephs legislation, wherein are two parts.

Ver. 26.

1. A positive injunction, And Joseph put it for a statute unto this day over the land of Egypt, for the fifth part unto Pharaoh, To fifth them. Sept. Cald. same. This doubtless he entered among the Lawes of that Kingdom. And it had sanction from the people.

2. An exemption of the Priests portion. Only the land of the Priests of them alone was not Pharaohs. Cald. same. — without, &c. Sept. This portion was exempted by the same statute to be yth free, and not to lye under that tax or tribute. Ver. 26.

Some queries about these transactions must be satisfied to give a right understanding of them.

Quest. 1. Are Josephs actions justifiable, in taking money, cattle, and lands, from the Egyptians for corn?

Ans. 1. These transactions of his are neither complained of by the Egyptians, nor reproved by God, as appears in the history. 2. All the corn that was laid up in the years of plenty, and now sold by him in famine is rationally presumed to be bought with the kings money. It was not evil to sell that which was bought. 3. The matters of exchange are in themselves lawful, by money, cattle, or land, to purchase bread. 4. The necessity of exchanging these was laid on them by God. 5. As to buying and selling it was a voluntary act both in them and him. No injury done to him who will's this. 6. It appears not that he oppressed them in the price. 7. All this transaction was extraordinary.

1. In Gods revealing this to Joseph.

2. In setting him up to provide for the famine, and dispose his provision.

3. In the managing of his office, who could tell how provisions would hold out, but only God, and he to whom God revealed it? what God therefore managed must be just; and such extraordinary cases are not exemplary, to ordinary administration.

Quest. Should not he have given freely? Ans. 1. No law bound him. 2. It was not his own.

Quest. 2. Did Joseph well in exempting the lands of idolatrous Priests?

Ans. 1. He did no way allow their office, nor allot their provision. 2. He was but Pharaohs steward to pay what he allowed, and exempt what he had made free. 3. In that state, and time Joseph did right in administering justice to all according to the becke of superiors.

Quest. 3. How was Jacobs family freed from the fifth, when the Egyptians paid them?

Ans. 1. It was the free indulgence of the Prince. 2. It was at that time the overruling hand of God making Princes indulge his Church. 3. This could not be imputed to Joseph for iniquity. For Egypt fared better for them.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Years and provisions are ended together sometimes, but specially in time of famine.

D. 2. Second pressures of want, will force to second cries for a relief.

D. 3. Pressing miseries will not easily be concealed, especially to such as may help them.

D. 4. It is reasonable for people in distress for life, to shew rulers their sad estate. Ver. 18.

D. 5. Poor creatures are unwilling to dye, though they be in famine.

D. 6. Bodies and lands are soules willing to part with for their food, skin for skin yea all that a man hath will he give for his life. Job. 2. ver. 4.

D. 7. The sweetness of life will make men willing to be bought and sold, for preserving it.

D. 8. Cries for bread and seed to preserve life are strong in famine. Ver. 19.

D. 9. Where providence make's the necessity, lands may be bought for bread.

D. 10. Prevailing famine will make soules to sell all for food.

D. 11. Providence maketh famine enrich some, when it impoverisheth others. Ver. 20.

D. 12. Prudence teacheth rulers to

D. 18. Under providence there may be portions due from subjects to powers ruling them.

D. 19. In all exactness it is just for powers to leave to subjects sufficient for their families. Ver. 24.

D. 20. Acknowledgment of mercies from God by rulers is but equal.

D. 21. After favours acknowledged, more may be lawfully desired.

D. 22. Due service is but equal to be given for royal favours. Ver. 25.

D. 23. Just events of providence may pass into laws.

D. 24. Under God, Princes may give immunity to some, and not to others. Ver. 26.

3. The last general of this Chapter followeth which is the time of Jacobs sojourning in Egypt, and his preparation for his grave. Ver. 27. 31. Herein occur these particulars observable.

1. The state of the Church initial in Egypt. Ver. 27.

2. The term of Jacobs life before and there. Ver. 28.

3. The preparation which he makes for the grave. Ver. 29, &c. In the first of these

4. Things are reported of the state of the Church under the name of Israel.

1. Their habitation, And Israel dwelt in the land of Egypt, in the land of Goshen, Sept. and Cald. to same. &c.

2. Their posture, they dwelt, that is quietly, and in peace without disturbance, God gave them a quiet habitation.

3. The place of it, as large was Egypt, and more strictly the land of Goshen, one of the best portions in Egypt. Ben Uzziel adds And they built themselves schools and palaces; but that is not in the text; only it is said that they had a quiet dwelling in a fruitful place.

4. Their possessions, And they had inheritance or held possessions therein, Sept. and Cald. to same. Herein is declared Gods providence, not only in giving them houses, but possessions, and those large enough for their families; to yield them comfortable subsistence; how these became theirs, cannot be rationally conjectured, but only by royal indulgence under Gods guidance.

5. Their increase of estates, And they grew, or increased, or were fruitful, Sept. and Cald. same. This is properly meant of their herds and flocks and wealth, wherewith God blessed them there.

6. Their increase of seed or children, And they were multiplied exceedingly, Sept. and Cald. the same; &c. That is they grew numerous, though there were but 70 souls at the first, this verse seems to be connected to ver. 12. And it is the eleventh section of the law, as the Hebrew's divide.

Learn thence.

D. 1. God sometimes sets down his Israel or Church, in large, quiet and fruitful habitations.

D. 2. Providence orders possessions to his people sometimes in strange lands.

D. 3. Divine blessing makes his Church rich sometimes, where they have nothing of their own.

D. 4. Under providence the seed of the Church sometimes is multiplied in the pilgrimage of it and according to Gods promise. Gen. 46. 3. Ver. 27.

In the second we have to note about Jacobs life.

1. The term he lived in Egypt, And Jacob lived in the land of Egypt, 17 years, Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Here beginneth the twelfth section of the law according to the Hebrewes, the last of this book styled.

And Jacob lived, from the first words. This is distinguished but by one S. others

Others by three; but not to stand upon useless notions about it: The contents of this are the last acts and death of Jacob, and Joseph, with the state of the Church to that time. In this term of his being in Egypt we have to observe Gods good hand in sweetening the latter part of Jacobs pilgrimage, that for 17. Years he continued in the enjoyment of his son Joseph, and nourished by him. And so many years also are past in his time, as to the being of his seed in a strange land, so providence orders time and place.

2. The term he lived in the world. And the days of Jacob, the years of his life were 7 years & 40 years, & 100 years: So it is read. 147. As we account. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. This number easily appears upon his acknowledgment unto Pharaoh that he was 130. when he came into Egypt, and 17 added make up 147. This serves to help the true Chronologie of the Church among other ages that are reckoned, and therefore here recorded.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Providence sometimes refresheth his pilgrim Saints at the latter end of their way.

D. 2. Years of childrens piety God sometimes proportion's to the years of parents pity over them. Joseph seventeen, when he left his Fathers house.

D. 3. Various have bin the terms of Gods servants lives here upon earth.

D. 4. The Spirit numbers the days of Gods Saints for the Churches instruction. Ver. 28.

In the third, which is Jacobs preparation for his grave, we have to note.

1. The occasion of it, And the days of Israel drew nigh to dye, Sept. and Cald. same. The sense of some fore-running signs of death were now doubles upon Jacob; and he perceived, that his time of life was expiring, whereupon he begins to make his will, wherein.

2. He bequeaths his body to the grave, and that to a special place of burial.

3. The care he takes about it, expressed in some passages between him and Joseph; Here.

1. Jacobs entrance, and herein.

2. Jacobs call for him, And he called to his son, to Joseph, or his son Joseph, Sept. and Cald. same. That is doubts he sent for him to speak with him about this matter, it being in his power to perform his will.

Ver. 29.

2. His proposal to him, whereof note.

1. The form, it is humble and supplicatory, And he said unto him, if now I have found grace in thine eyes, such is the humble address of suppliants; it is not a speech of doubting, but of ingaging, upon the certainty of that favour, which he knew Joseph bore unto him.

2. The matter desired.

1. That he would swear. Put, I pray thee, thy hand under my thigh, Sept. and Cald. same. The rite used in swearing, Gen. 24.

2. The things unto which he would have him swear.

1. Generally. Thou shalt do to me mercy and truth, Sept. and Cald. same.

These two expressions are used to paraphrase that kindness and faithfulness which is desired from any.

Three words Jacob useth in his desire.

1. To have grace or favour from Joseph.

2. To have benevolence.

3. To have fidelity towards him, when he was dead, that is to perform his will, these three must go together.

2. Specially, he intimates to what he would have him swear, and that was about his burial.

1. Negatively, Bury me not, I pray thee, in Egypt, Sept. and Cald. &c. — Here he binds not to bury him in Egypt. Ver. 29.

2. Affirmatively, wherein his will is expressed, But I will sleep or lye with my fathers, and thou shalt carry me out of Egypt, and bury me in their burying place, Sept. and Cald. same. Herein we have.

1. His resolution. I will lye with my fathers.

2. His injunction is twofold.

1. Thou shalt carry me out of Egypt for burial.

2. Thou shalt bury me in their burying place, where Abraham, &c. were buried in the cave of Macpelah.

3. Josephs reply by way of grant, And he said, I will do according to thy word, Sept. and Cald. same. Here is his yeas, or single concession. Ver. 30.

4. Jacobs instance in the matter, which appears in that he rests not contented with his word, but requires his Oath. Herein, Ver. 31.

1. Jacobs demand, And he said, swear unto me, Sept. and Cald. same. This being prophetically done, could not be rash, nor unlawful to require an oath, doubtless it was of God; and to arm him against dissensions.

2. Josephs obedience, And he swore unto him, Sept. and Cald. same. This did but answer the just demand of his father; to quiet his heart in this matter before his death.

3. Jacobs return upon the whole, And Israel bowed himself upon his beds head, Cald. same. Onkel. Hierosol. Uzziel. The 70. read upon the top of his staff; mistaking the vowels, The Apostle reads so also. Heb. 11. 21. Bed and staff might be together: And lying upon the one one with the help of the other, might bow. — The Syr. read, to the top of his Scepter, meaning, Josephs: but not rightly.

1. We read Jacobs piety to God in worshipping for every mercy; & no doubt his thankfulness to Joseph.

2. The manner of it by reason of his weakness, he did it upon his beds head, raising himself as he could.

Quest. 1. Why is Jacob so earnest to be buried in Canaan and not in Egypt?

Ans. 1. Not out of superstitious preferring of places, one above another. 2. Not from natural inclination unto his own place. 3. But the motion of God seems to be in this, for these things were acted by faith. Heb. 11. 21. 4. To teach his sons to look to the promised land by believing.

These considerations are solid.

Quest. 2. Why doth he make Joseph swear to it?

Ans. 1. Not upon mistrust of his fidelity, whereof he had good proof. 2. But to arm Joseph against temptations. 3. To shew the greatness of the matter unto which he requires him to swear, and that his sons might see the moment of it: and act faith more firmly.

D. 1. Approaching death should make men put their houses in order, and prepare for the grave.

D. 2. The best of sons, are best trusted, with the interring of parents.

D. 3. Rites external in swearing have bin various in the Church.

D. 4. Favour, benevolence, and fidelity dying parents may begg of surviving children.

D. 5. Parents may bind children not to bury them in places inconvenient. Ver. 29.

D. 6. The law of nature may appoint burial with Fathers, much more the law of faith.

D. 7. The faith of the Patriarchs did work as to the place of burial to appoint it.

D. 8. The testamental word of parents, though hard, yet should be sacred with good sons. Ver. 30.

D. 9. In matters of weight, parents may justly desire an oath from their children.

D. 10. In such cases good children should confirm their word by oath to parents.

D. 11. Holy Worship of God is meet from dying Saints, for his gracious disposal to the grave.

CHAP. XLVIII.

It was observed at the 27. Verse of the former Chapter, that the last section of the law as to this book began, which is the twelfth; this continueth to the end, Where are declared.

1. Jacobs last will or testament.

1. About disposing of his body to burial. Chap. 47.

2. About his Legacies to Joseph and his sons. Chap. 48.

3. About all his sons by name. Chap. 49. Ver. 1. to Ver. 28.

4. About his burial his repeated charge to all. Ver. 29. 30. 31. 32.

2. Jacobs expiration. Chap. 49. Ver. 33.

3. Jacobs funeral. Chap. 50. Ver. 1. 13.

4. Josephs remaining life and death. Ver. 14. 26.

This Chapter contains the second part of Jacobs Testament, which concern's Joseph and his sons; wherein.

1. Jacobs adoption of Josephs sons, Ver. 1. 7.

2. Jacobs blessing of him and them. V. 8. 20.

3. Jacobs special promise and gift to Joseph. Ver. 21. 22.

In the first we have to observe these particulars.

1. The occasion of this present action made up of two things.

1. The tidings of Jacobs sickness to Joseph, And it was after these things, that one said to Joseph, behold thy father is sick.

Cald. same. — It was told, that thy father was violently sick. וַיֹּאמֶר יִשְׂרָאֵל Sept.

2. The time of tidings, after these words or things past, between Jacob and Joseph in the former chapter about his burial; how long after is not expressed, but long it could not be, for he dyed in that year of his age. 147. It was therefore some short time after.

2. The tidings that came, was the sickness of Jacob his father: wherein.

1. The relator might be a messenger sent from Jacob, but nothing is express, and the same it is probable told Jacob afterward of his coming.

2. The message itself, was of the declining condition of Jacob and his weakness increasing on him; the seventy useth a word, that that noteth a troublesome or violent disease; doubtles now old age and the evils attending did press him neerer to the grave then he was at his former visit.

2. The next thing occasioning this act of Jacob is Josephs visiting of his father in his low condition, And he took his two sons with him Manasseh and Ephraim.

Cald. same. — Taking his 2. Sons he came to Jacob. Sept.

1. Herein his piety is evident to his venerable father, that he commeth to visit him, and express filial respect unto him, now in his weakness and declining estate.

2. His prudence, for himself and sons to get some special blessing ministrified by the hand of a dying friend of God; for without question he brought his sons to have their share in Jacobs Testament, which he bestowed on them. Ver. 1.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Successive decays of life toward the grave is the lot of Gods dearest servants.

D. 2. To give tidings of declining parents, &c. to relations concerned is rational.

D. 3. Piety would persuade good sons in highest place to visit parents in their low estates.

D. 4. Prudence directs the best of children to get a legacy of blessing from holy parents to them and theirs. Ver. 1.

2. The act of Jacob in adopting or declaring his will thereabout, wherein we read,

1. The act preparatory. Ver. 2.

2. Act constitutory. Ver. 3. 4. 5. 6.

3. A rational account of it. Ver. 7.

In the first act which is preparatory, we have to note,

1. The occasion of Jacobs stirring, And one or he declared to Jacob and said, behold thy son Joseph is come unto thee, Sept. Cald, &c. same.

1. The reporter may be the same; that carried tidings to Joseph.

2. The matter declared, was such as was a reviving unto Jacob, behold thy son is come unto thee; his very name was pleasant unto Jacob: and therefore is with an emphasis told him. Behold Joseph is come.

2. The preparation, which old Jacob maketh to his work: And Israel strengthened himself, and sat upon the bed, Sept. and Cald. same. Where note, the Seventy render here the same word a bed, which formerly they read a staff. Chap. 47. ver. 31. — He forced himself as some others.

1. His rousing up of himself.

2. His posture in his place is described all disposing of him unto his future work.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Tidings to the sick of gracious visitor is rational, and commendable.

D. 2. Eminent comforters are eminently to be discovered to declining souls.

D. 3. Access of such comforters may be a reviving to dying souls. Ver. 2.

2. In the act of constitution we have to note,

1. A rehearsal of the first ground or cause of this adoption. Ver. 3. 4.

2. An actual adoption according as it was designed by God. Ver. 5. 6.

In the first, which is the rehearsal of the first cause of this act, Jacob discovers it to be God, of whom he here recites,

1. His appearance to him, And Jacob said unto Joseph, God almighty appeared to me in Luz, in the land of Canaan. Cald same. — My God, &c. Sept. Herein,

1. Jacob bespeaks Joseph, the scope of which is to let him know that the almighty God had laid the ground-work of adoption, which he was now about to act upon his sons.

2. He sheweth the certainty of it in his apparition, that it was no fancy but God almighty himself was seen by him.

3. The place where expressed, in Luz, that which is called Bethel, and this in the land of Canaan; in this place God appeared twice to Jacob.

1. When he fled from Esau, Gen. 28. 13.

2. When he returned to pay his vow. Gen. 35. 9. 12.

2. His blessing (and blessed me) and this was in the change of his name, in renewing the Covenant for all temporal and spiritual good, this was then done in present. Ver. 3.

3. His promise,

1. Of multitude of seed, And he said unto me, behold I will make thee fruitful, and multiply thee, and give thee to be an assembly of peoples. Sept. and Cald. to same, &c. All these expressions do but note the promise of multiplying his seed: the first word of making fruitful is that from whence Ephraim was named; and so he hints, that this promise was to be made good in him partly who had his name answerable to the promise. Cccc 2. Of

2. Of magnitude of possession, And I will give this land to thy seed after thee, and eternal inheritance. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Here he notes the portion unto which he would adopt them. Ver. 4.

1. The portion, was that land, even that of Canaan.

2. The legacies, his seed after him, such as were to come.

3. The term of holding, an everlasting inheritance, that is, it was to their ever; while they should abide keeping the covenant with God.

Observe we.

D. 1. True external adoption into the Church, must be grounded upon God almighty.

D. 2. Gods appearance is a sufficient warrant for any work ordained by him.

D. 3. Former appearances of God may be for future events.

D. 4. Gods blessing upon Jacob and the fathers, was Propheticall as to generations following.

Ver. 3.

D. 5. Gods promise of fruitfulness of his Church to Jacob, was with respect to other persons.

D. 6. Gods promise of his Churches inheritance must be the rule of adopting to it. Ver. 4.

2. The actual adoption of Josephs sons by Jacob, now followeth. Ver. 5. 6. Which is twofold.

1. Immediate of the two sons Ephraim & Manasseh, wherein we have to note.

1. The person adopting, Jacob the father of the Church now authorized by God to this; it is a fathers part onely to adopt.

2. The persons adopted, expressed here.

1. By their natural relation to Joseph, And now thy two sons. Cald. same.

Now therefore, Sept. and so some others; and it seems to be a rational inference; from Gods appearance & promise to him: now therefore since God hath promised thus to make me fruitful, thy two sons are the branches, which must bear some fruit for me, I will therefore adopt them for mine, he acknowledgeth them Josephs as to natural generation, but he was now altering their relation by grace.

2. By name he notes them, Ephraim and Manasseh, So Jacob speaks of them in this order, still putting Ephraim in the first place.

3. By the place of their birth, Which were born unto thee in the land of Egypt Sept. & Cald. same.

4. By the time of their birth, Before I came unto thee into Egypt. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Whether he had any other sons born now after Jacob came into Egypt, is not recorded; by Jacobs distinctive expression it may probably seem that he had or might have.

3. The adoption itself, They are mine, Sept. and Cald. same. As Reuben and Simeon they shall be mine. Sept. and Cald. same. They shall pertain to me as Reuben, Sam.

1. The adoption stands in making his grand children his own, making two tribes of Joseph and giving them inheritance among his own sons; so Joseph had the birth-right and double portion, the reason whereof we may read. 1 Chro. 5. 1. 2. 3.

2. The manner or kind of it as Reuben and Simeon, So they shall be mine, That is as my own immediate children, committing out of my own thigh: this taken generally is the external adoption into the Church, a type of that true adoption which God the father maketh of strangers in Christ unto himself. ver. 5.

2. Mediat adoption of Josephs other sons, wherein these particulars are considerable.

1. Jacobs leaving all other following Ver. 6.

issue of Joseph under his own name, And thy begotten issue which thou shalt beget after them shall be thine. Cald. same. Sept. leave thine out. — So others, Thine they shall be & pertain unto thee. Here is a dispositive act, excluding them from the immediate adoption.

2. Jacobs collateral and mediate adoption of them by their forenamed brethren, By the name of their brethren shall they be called in their inheritance. They shall be after the name of their brethren, shall be called in their lots, Sept. Cald. same. As Hebr. So Syr. and Samar. — They shall be reckoned, Ar. although Jacob makes them not distinct tribes, yet he excludes them not from the inheritance of his Church, but reduceth them all under their brethren to be either of Ephraim or Manasseh, and so to share in their name and inheritance. Ver. 6.

Learn here.

D. 1. In external adoption God useth instruments to effect it, so he did to Jacob.

D. 2. Gods authority giveth its full licence to adopt into his Church.

D. 3. Adoption is properly the act of fathers, both external and internal. So Jacob and God.

D. 4.

Learn we.

D. 4. Such as are born strangers may and must be adopted into the visible Church. So were the Sons of Joseph.

D. 5. Adoption is the placing of strangers in the room of natural children. So these.

D. 6. Adoption is not ordained of God for want of children, but of grace to add to them. Ver. 5.

D. 7. The work of adoption is dispositive between persons and persons.

D. 8. God maketh some fare better by the name, and inheritance of their brethren. Ver. 6.

3. The reason of this adoption followeth though something abruptly connected in his mention of Rachel here made, wherein note.

1. An aposiopesis or abrupt reservation, as it seemeth to be, wherein he implieth, that what did respect him in this adopting, as he had reason enough from God, so as to himself there was reason towards men with respect to Rachel, And I as for me, Sept. and Cald. same. As if he should say, I have reason thus to adopt and dispose the blessing as I do when I remember Rachel, now therefore from her implied and expressed may consist of these particulars.

1. That she was his truest wife, and if Laban had not dealt treacherously with him Joseph had bin his eldest son.

2. That she was now dead and buried, & his hopes of farther seed by her were cut off, therefore seeing these were from Joseph her son; supply this way was to be taken, seeing it was so given of God, the contents of the verse are:

1. The rehearsal of Rachels death.

1. In the time of it, When I came from Padan, Cald. same, Mesopotamia Sept. — Padan Aram, Syr.

2. In the place of it, Rachel died by me in the Land of Canaan, in the way, when yet there was a little space of ground to come to Ephrat a mile. As some. Cald. same. And I buried her there in the way of Ephrat, that is Bethlehem. Cald. same. Immanuel Sept. Syr. same as Hebr. Ar. add's and I had no child of her afterward, so that want of seed by her, (Gods providence directing) caused this adoption here, this seems to be the plain reason of mentioning Rachel here; with respect to the context, and therefore I pass by other vain conjectures, her burial is here mentioned, with respect to the place not in the city, but in the high way to Ephrat, though not far from thence, which also is stiled by the name of Bethlehem.

D. 1. Humane reasons may be subservient to divine, in external adoptions.

D. 2. God takes away some by death to have seed raised to his Church by others.

D. 3. Death and burial may befall Gods own in their wayes of travel.

D. 4. A Rachels death may lie heavy upon a Jacobs spirit.

D. 5. Good souls in their travels may come short of Ephrat, though not of heaven.

D. 6. High way burials in straights, are no prejudice to Gods servants. Ver. 7.

2. The next general of the Chapter, contains Jacobs blessing upon Joseph in his sons. Ver. 8. 20. Wherein consider.

1. Preparatory passages thereunto, Ver. 8. 13.

2. Actual collation of the blessing. Ver. 14. 20.

In the former, we have these foregoing passages unto the blessing.

1. Jacobs inquiry about these sons of Joseph, And Israel saw the sons of Joseph and said who are these? Or whole, Ver. 9.

as some. Cald. same. — Who these with thee? Sept. Syr. as Hebr. — Are those thine? Sam. — Who are these two? Ar. It is likely Jacob hitherto took notice onely of Joseph to whom he spake, not looking about, who were there with him. And now having opened his mind to Joseph he looketh about, here we have,

1. His sight, He saw the sons of Joseph, but knew them not.

2. His quere, Who are these? Doubting of them, or by reason of his dimness not discerning who they were. Ver. 8.

2. Josephs answer. And Joseph said to his Father, they are my sons whom God hath given unto me in this place: Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Where,

1. Joseph satisfie's his Fathers doubt, and owns them to be his sons of whom his Father had bin speaking.

2. He glorifieth God in this sweet acknowledgment, that they were his gift to him in the land of his pilgrimage.

3. Jacobs desire, And he said, take them, I pray thee, unto me. And I will bless them. Cald. same. — That I may bless them. Sept. Herein,

1. His demand for their approach, Bring them, or take them, I pray thee, unto me, let them come nigh unto me.

2. His promise, and I will bless them, that is effectually speak good, and do good.

Cccc 2 for for them in the name of my God from whom all blessing is. Ver. 6.

Ver. 10.

3. The reason of Jacobs demand suggested in the way of parenthesis, as ours, but not so by others. For the eyes of Israel were heavy for age, he could not see. Sept. and Cald. same. Not clearly. Syr. Note.

Eccl. 12.3

1. The infirmity spoken of Jacob, heaviness of sight.

2. The cause of it, old age, whereby Spirits are worn and grow defective.

3. The effect, he could not see: such weakness was noted of his father Isaac before: and it is the usual adjunct of old age, when those that look out of the windows be darkened, that is the visive Spirits.

4. Josephs return to his Fathers desire, And he brought them near unto him. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. He made them to come nigh to himself. Sam.

1. The mover here is Joseph, not Jacob.

2. The moved, were his sons now desired.

3. The motion, he brings them nigh or moveth them near to his Father from the place where they were standing, which was likely to be behind their father, or more remote for reverence sake.

5. Jacobs action hereupon.

1. Toward the sons of Joseph, And he kissed them, and embraced them. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. He had adopted them by his will before, and now he deals with them, not only as Josephs sons, but as his own, by kissing and embracing them, which were Symbols not only of natural affection, but of civil respect; such as were used by the holy Fathers; and in such cases are imitable still. Ver. 10.

2. Toward God, however his speech is directed unto Joseph, and that is his thanksgiving for this unexpected mercy, here,

Ver. 11.

1. He bespeaks Joseph. And Israel said to Joseph. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Taking occasion from his present enjoyment of Josephs sons, while they were between his knees, he turn's his speech to Joseph.

2. He declareth his former hopelessness and dependency, I had not thought to see thy face. Cald. same. Sam. I hoped not for the sight of thy face. Syr. Ar.

Behold I have not bin deprived of thy face. Sept. Herein they differ from all, in these he declareth his former thoughts that Joseph had bin torn in peeces, and he thought him dead long agoe, and never expected to see his face more.

3. He acknowledgeth to his praise, Gods goodness, outreaching his hopes. And behold God hath made me to see thy face also. Sept. same. Sons. Cald. seed. Syr. Sam. Progeny. Ar. Here,

1. The note of demonstration. Lo! how far hath God gone beyond me in this mercy, it carryeth a note of thankful demonstration in it.

2. The cause acknowledged, God himself, who by his providence ordered all conditions for Jacob and Joseph.

3. The effect acknowledged, the sight of thee and thy seed also, this is more than I did ever hope for in the times of my loss of thee; yet this God hath done for me, that I see thee, and thy seed which must propagate the Church of God. Ver. 11.

6. Josephs action in order to the blessing of himself and sons. Which is fourfold.

1. His removing them a little from his Father, And Joseph brought them out from between his knees. Sept. Syr. Sam. From his face Cald. Out of his lap, Ar.

Ver. 12.

these tend to the same purpose; Joseph had brought before near his father even to his knees as he might be sitting upon his bed. And now he set them more conveniently for his father to bless, he brings them out and removeth them to a little distance.

2. His reverential obeisance to his Father with them, And he bowed himself on his face to the earth. Cald. same. They bowed or worshipped.

1. The sons as Sept. Syr. Sam. It is very likely, he with them: though he were a Prince, yet forgets not parental honour. Ver. 12.

3. His ordering them in their posture. And Joseph took them both. Ephraim in his right hand toward Israels left, and Manasseh in his left hand toward Israels right. Sept.

Ver. 13.

and Cald. same, &c. No difficulty is in the letter, the reason of this posture was to have the eldest son to have the right hand blessing, & the youngest the left-hand blessing as afterward Joseph discovers, they were symbols of the greater and less blessing in those times.

4. His approach with them, again unto his father, And he brought them near unto him. Sept. and Cald. same. Syr. Sam. Ar. to same. In this he fits them for his father, that he might more easily perform the rites of blessing toward them, and hitherto all these passages of Jacob and Joseph are preparative for blessing.

D. 15. Hopelesnes of mercy with good soules makes them remember it more sweetly.

D. 16. Gods mercies sometimes overreach hope and expectation of his people.

D. 17. Saints delight to shew their overabounding mercies to his praise. Ver. 11.

D. 18. Suitable motions to dispose for a ministerial blessing is but meet.

D. 19. Filial obedience in honour of parents is a just duty in expectation of a blessing. Ver. 12.

D. 20. There are right-hand, and left-hand blessings, which God giveth by his ministers, greater and less.

D. 21. Good men may aim one to the right, and another to the left hand blessing, whom God changeth.

D. 22. It is needful to come near to the ministers of blessing if men desire to have it. Ver. 13.

2. After these preparatory passages, the actual collation of the blessing now followeth. Ver. 14. 20. Wherein we have to note.

1. Jacobs benediction. Ver. 14. 15. 16.

2. Josephs interruption. Ver. 17. 18.

3. Jacobs satisfaction to him and conclusion. Ver. 19. 20.

In the first of these which is the collation of the blessing, we may observe.

1. The ceremonial act, Ver. 14. Whereabout note.

1. The disposition of his hands and that cross to Josephs posture of the children, as appears in his double action.

1. And Israel set out, or stretched out his right hand & put it upon the head of Ephraim, and he was the younger. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Wherein we may see.

1. The minister of the action, Israel now impowred of God to bless, and guided by him.

2. The action is ritual and symbolical, he stretched out his right hand, which was signal to the bestowing of the right-hand blessing.

3. The subject receiving this action, set out both by his name and age, it was Ephraim the younger son of Joseph, who was placed to Jacobs left hand.

2. And his left hand upon the head of Manasseh, although Manasseh was the first born. Sept. mention not first born. Cald. as Hebr. For or because, or forasmuch, as others read.

1. The minister is the same.

2. The action is placing his left hand a signal of less blessing.

3. The subject, Manasseh Josephs eldest son.

2. The reason of this disposition of his hands in this ceremony, He made his hands to understand. So in the letter it is rendered more plainly to us, He prudently or wisely guided his hands, — changing hands. Cald.

1. Wisdom no less than divine is the principle of this ordering his hands.

2. Jacob being taught of God, thus ordereth his hands.

3. His hands thus ordered are signals of Gods turning the course of nature in his blessing, giving greater and less blessings to whom he pleaseth; not as man order's.

Quest. 1. What need was of this ceremony of imposition of hands in blessing?

Answ. 1. No absolute necessity was of it, but that God could have conveyed blessing without it. 2. Yet a condition.

Cccc 3 onal

onal necessity was seeing God revealed so much to Jacob, and guided him in it.

Quest. 2. What virtue or good was in this ceremony?

Ans. 1. No physical power by way of influence. 2. The virtue was sacramental which stood in relation to that blessing which it did concern. 3. In this way the blessing was applied and conveyed by way of visible collation; & so much virtue hath this ceremony at this day in those ordinances whereunto it is annexed under the New Testament. Mark. 10. 16, &c.

Note we.

D. 1. Ministers of blessing should be ready to dispence it to such as God brings to it. Connect.

D. 2. God made Jacob, Israel to bless others as he was blessed himself.

D. 3. God of old hath conferred blessing by his Ministers with outward rites, as imposition of hands.

D. 4. In Gods blessing creatures, he sometimes maketh the first last, & last first. No respect of persons with him.

D. 5. Right and left-hand ministrations of blessing do but discover Gods disposal of it.

D. 6. Gods wisdom guides hands of Ministers to give blessing according to his will. V. 14.

2. The substantial or true act of blessing. Ver. 15. 16. Wherein we may observe.

Ver. 15. 1. The general proposition of blessing, And he blessed Joseph. Cald. same. He blessed them, Sept. Here,

1. The minister the same. 2. The blessing ministered, the real effect of all the good afterward named.

3. The subject of it, Joseph in his two sons, both they, and he in them is blessed.

2. The special collation of it in three heads.

1. In the various works of God, where-in he had appeared.

1. To Abraham and Isaac, The God before whom my fathers Abraham and Isaac did walk bless the lads. Whom my fathers pleased, &c. Sept. Served. Cald. to these senses others. Where we may note,

1. The form of blessing by way of prayer, God bless them, so ministers onely can bless, but this is not without effect.

2. The matter of the blessing which appear's.

1. In the fountain whence it is fetched, God almighty; God is set out.

1. In his name of power, God almighty blefs to his utmost might.

2. In his Covenant-relation, God who owned Abraham and Isaac my fathers in Covenant with him.

3. In his communion with them, God before whose face, they walked, in the light of his countenance: whom they served; and on whom his face shined; God in the fulness of grace.

2. In the relation to himself, and that declares how he found God to him, and so prayeth to Joseph: this is in two ways.

1. In Gods provision for him, The God that feedeth me from my former time to this day.

From my youth. Sept. From my nativity, Cald. From the time I am, or had being, Sam. Ar.

1. The same God is mentioned,

2. In his providence, as Jacob had experience of him, God never suffered him to want but filled him with all good. This is the spring of blessing. Ver. 15.

2. In Gods defence of him, The Angel Ver. 16. which redeemed me from all evil blest the lads, Sept. and Cald. same, &c. The King. Sam. Herein.

1. The fountain of blessing is described by another name, the Angel which can be no other but God, in whose name he blesteth and God in Christ the Angel of the Covenant.

2. He is specified by redemption work; he hath redeemed me from all evil, bodily and spiritual, the force of all this runn's into the blessing.

2. The issue, is in that expression, Bless the lads, Sept. and Cald. same, &c.

Herein is implied.

1. All that God did for Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, all Covenant and providential good for bodies and soules.

2. The effectual application of all this; in the act of blessing, which was their actual admission into Covenant, &c.

2. The next head in this blessing, is the change of their state in a new name, And let my name be called on them and the name of my fathers Abraham and Isaac. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. herein is the compleating of their adoption.

1. This name relateth to God himself who is called the God of Abraham, &c. so that they come under the name of God.

2. This name notes the pillars of the Church whose honour is to be related unto God.

3. The name of God, and the Churches name is now really bestowed on them; that is all the blessing of gracious adoption visible.

3. The last head of blessing is in their increase, And let them increase as fish into a multitude in the midst of the land or carth. Cald. same. Among sons of men into a great multitude. Sept. Let them be very much fruitful fruitful growand multiply, &c. In this.

1. The matter of the blessing it was multitude and increase of the Church by them. The word signifieth the increase of fish which is unspeakable.

2. The place, in Egypt or in any other land whereunto God should call them.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods ceremonies do not go without realities, Jacob blesteth in laying on hands. Connect.

D. 2. Parents may be blessed in the blessing of their children.

D. 3. Ministerial blessing is conferred on soules by prayer.

D. 4. God is the fountain of blessing to them for whom he is intreated by his Ministers designed for it.

D. 5. God blesteth soules himself, and with himself, as he hath promised.

D. 6. The God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is the God of blessing.

D. 7. God in a way of favourable communion with his is the God of blessing.

D. 8. The walking of ancestor's with God is a good ground to hope for blessing on their seed. Ver. 14.

D. 9. God in the way of sustaining providence, is a blessing God.

D. 10. Good parents having had experience of the blessing of providence, desire it for their children. Ver. 15.

D. 11. Redeeming providences from evil are as remarkable as those for maintaining good.

D. 12. Gods redeeming work is in and by the Angel of the Covenant, Christ Jesus.

D. 13. Redemption blessings from all evil are those, that God bestowes upon his Church.

D. 14. It is a great blessing to have the name of God and of his Church named upon soules.

D. 15. The name of God, and of his Church are naturally carried together.

D. 16. Increase of the Church of God is a great blessing upon earth.

D. 17. The blessing of increase hath bin and will be given to the Church.

D. 18. In lands of strangers as well as enemies God can and will increase his Church. Ver. 16.

2. In the collation of this blessing Josephs interruption of his father is observable, Ver. 17. 18. Wherein we have to note,

1. The occasion of it, And Joseph saw Ver. 17. that his father put his right-hand upon the head of Ephraim, Ver. 14. Sept. and Cald. same &c. The occasion of interrupting his father was the sight of his hand crossing Josephs design: he had placed Ephraim neer to Jacobs left hand, and remote from the right, and yet Jacob stretcheth out his right-hand to Ephraim, so Joseph saw his father crossing his desire: This occasion's that which followeth.

2. The cause of his interruption, And it was evil in his eyes, It appeared grievous to him, Sept. — And it was displeasing in his sight, Cald. — It displeased his eyes, Sam. — He took it heavily, Syr. — That displeased him, Ar. So ours. Hereupon Josephs spirit is grieved. And now it works some discontent and displeasure in him, so that which pleaseth God did not please him at this time, hence his passion worketh a further interruption, as follow's.

3. The interruption itself exprest two ways.

1. By deed, And he held up his fathers hand to remove it from the head of Ephraim upon the head of Manasseh, Sept. and Cald. same. Here his action crosseth the guidance of Jacobs hand by Gods Spirit, God guides the right-hand to Ephraim, but Joseph would turn it to Manasseh, herein is cros working to God. Ver. 17.

2. By word or speech to his father, where-in observe.

1. His denial of his fathers act, And Joseph said unto his father, not so my father. Septuagint. same, so Sa. Syr. This is not comely or convenient. Cald. Ar. In short he expresth his mind cros to God, that it should not be so; and this with much distaste.

2. His reason of denial, for this is the first born. Sept. and Cald. same. &c. This was Josephs reason, that according to custom, and a standing law. The right-hand blessing was for the eldest, but this doth not bind God, who is free in disposing his blessings, he changeth the last to the first. Therefore Josephs reason is nothing against Gods determination.

3. His request. Put thy right-hand upon his head. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. So Josephs desire goeth out against Gods command. Which was discovered by this propheticall dye, & having declared Gods will to them.

2. The legatees, Ioseph in his sons considered.

3. The legacy bequeathed, set out these ways.

Gen. 9.
v. 23.

1. Positively with a numeral restriction, one portion, or part; so it is read, as a noun common; shoulder part, heap or but. It is also the proper name of a place, Shechem which was a city called in the New Testament Sychar. John. 4. 5. Which is said there to be near a parcel of ground which Jacob gave to his son Ioseph. So that this place determines this portion to be of land; and this is noted also to fall unto the children of Ioseph afterward for a possession. Joshua. 24. 32. Of what extent this part was, is not directly expressed, but it became an inheritance to Ioseph, and there they buried his bones.

2. Comparatively it is spoken of a part above his brethren: he gave the whole land to all the tribes to be divided in Gods time: but to Ioseph he gave one special portion eminently, which he expresseth not to any of the rest.

3. Differently to distinguish it from any other portion, by the manner of his achievement of it; Which I took out of the hand of the Amorite, with my sword and with my bow; The reading is generally the same with all translators, except the Cal. — With my prayer and supplication. Neither is there any difficulty in the words; it was a portion more than ordinary taken by sword, and bow, instruments of war; in which we read not, that Jacob was usually exercised; but about the sense and meaning some questions must be satisfied.

Quest. 1. What was that part here bequeathed to Ioseph?

Ans. It is generally concluded that it was a parcel of land, warranted by the Evangelist; and that it was either the portion bought of the sons of Hamor. Gen. 33. Or the city Shechem itself with its territories after it was wasted and subdued by Jacobs sons; whether the part might be so far extended is doubtful. This fell to the children of Ioseph afterward.

Quest. 2. How did Jacob take this with sword, and bow, when we read not of his being in arms at any time?

Ans. This passage hath wrought much trouble to interpreters, who usually go two ways.

1. Some reading it historically, and according to the terms: and these diversify render it.

1. Literally, & so they say Iacob took Shechem by the sword of his sons, which was his sword, but when Jacob to his very death abhorrs that fact of his sons, as Gen. 49. 6. It is not probable that he should own their sword: and as to what is said, that God did transferr the issue of that conquest to Jacob, as being a just recompence upon the Shechemites; it no where appears that God did so transferr it, and therefore hard is it to assert it.

2. Figuratively, and so men use their phrases, onefaying, money was his bow and his sword, for that answers all things. Other, his prayers were those weapons, others say it was God meant by them; but all groundless: for this is a plain history and to be understood in the letter.

3. Others understand it prophetically, that it was that part, which Iosephs children would take from the Amorites in future time; but this is against the plain reading of the words; and beside, this was a portion given now, not to be gotten afterwards; and if this were all, the rest of Jacobs sons had as much as Ioseph, for they got Canaan by the sword, &c. In summe therefore I shall say.

1. The gift is historical.

2. It is safest to take the sense of the letter.

3. It is certain that all the acts of Jacob are not written; therefore it might be such a portion, as Jacob by force did recover, and it may be, when wrongfully it was detained from him by oppressors; doubtless something it was, taken by his sword and bow, though not expressed.

Quest. 3. How is Hamor called an Amorite, when he was an Hivite; or what is here meant by the Amorite? Gen. 34. 2.

Ans. 1. It is rightly observed, that Chamor, and Hamor, are not all one, that being a personal, this a national name. 2. If it be granted taking with sword and bow, be buying with money, then it must be meant of Hamor or his sons. 3. This being a national name, it is more likely to be a name of multitude, and therefore to note the Amorites who might detain his right, out of whose hand God might give it him again by his sword and bow: which is very rational and seems most natural to the words, and removes all the other scruples that do arise from the letter of the text.

We observe.

D. 1. After parental blessings dispatched it is futable for them to think of dying.

D. 2. Gods Favours speak of dying evidently, readily, and hopefully with comfort.

D. 3. It is futable for Gods Saints to let others see they dye cheerfully in the Lord.

D. 4. Saints depart more willingly
from

from present life, when they see God with his people.

D. 5. The gracious presence of God is promised to his Church, though Ministers of comfort dye.

D. 6. The presence and abode of the ever-living God with his Church makes up the loss of dying Saints.

D. 7. God will surely reduce his people to the land of rest in his own time.

D. 8. Gods promise should bear up hearts against discouragements in the loss of Saints. Ver. 21.

D. 9. The Fathers portion as well as blessing, is fit to be given before they dye.

D. 10. Upon Gods determination, good Fathers may give more portion to one than to other.

D. 11. God doth allow his servants to be men at arms in just cases.

D. 12. What spoil God giveth his servants from enemies, he alloweth them to bestow it.

D. 13. The best children carry back the greatest portion from the Prophetical Ministers of Gods blessings. Ver. 22. So doth Ioseph.

CHAP. XLIX.

This Chapter containeth the third and fourth part of Jacobs last will, together with his death.

1. He left his will with Ioseph about his burial. Chap. 47. Ver. 29. &c.

2. He gave special Legacies unto Ioseph and his sonnes: In adoption, blessing, and portion. Chap. 48.

3. He proceeds in this Chapter to declare his will concerning all his sons prophetically, in their order. Ver. 1. 28.

4. He finisheth his will with a repeated charge to all his sons about his burial. Ver. 29. 30. 31. 32. So his Testament is completed; then followeth the second thing noted in the last section, which is Jacobs death. So that this Chapter containeth two general heads.

1. The finishing of Jacobs will.

1. About his sonns. Ver. 1. 28.

2. About his burial. Ver. 29. 32.

2. The finishing of Jacobs life. Ver. 33.

In the first we have to consider these particulars.

1. The preface. Ver. 1. 2.

2. The testament itself, and that,

1. About his sonnes, divided into twelve parts. Ver. 3. 28.

2. About his buriall. Ver. 29.

1. The preface is taken up in the 2 former verses of the Chapter. Wherein we have to observe;

1. The words of Moses the historian, And Jacob called unto his sonnes. Sept. and Cald. &c. to same. These words Moses relateth of Jacob; what he did, wherein notes.

1. The term of connection, which some read, And, others, afterward or furthmore. Notting the continuance and successive passages of the history. Where it will be inquired.

Quest. Was it at the same time, when he blessed the sonnes of Ioseph?

Ans. Whereunto it is reasonably replied, that the conjunction doth not unite moments, but actions, and sheweth that which preceded, and that which followed, it is safely presumed, that it was not at the same instant, all Jacobs sons probably could not come so soon together, being at their several places, and about several employments, but it is likely within a little space after they were convened.

2. The act reported of Jacob, he called to his sons: that is, doubtless by messengers he sent for them to convene and come unto him, this must be the call of sick and dying men.

2. The Words of Iacob heretofore spoken, and now related by Moses to be his own; and he said, &c. In which speech we have to note,

1. His call to them for convention, and that is very earnest, for he doubleth it, gather your selves together, Gather your selves together. Two words are used in the original. אסף יספך — The latter is noted to gather persons or things dispersed. These in the Seventy and Calde are translated by one word, and so by others, Gather, and assemble some read; no difference need be here.

1. The meaning of the speech is plain, that Jacob desired them, one and all, to come together to him when he was now drawing to his dissolution.

2. The instancy of his speech, in doubling his call, and if one word have more force than another, he calleth them to leave employments that might disperse them. And now come to him before his death, he will have no nay nor any delay.

2. The end of this call twofold, as expressed.

1. In respect of himself, that I may shew you that which will befall you in the latter dayes. — In the extremity of dayes. Heb. — What will meet you in the last dayes Sept. In the end of dayes. Cald.

D d d d z S s

So others. Syr. — Of these dayes. Ar. The end in short is as to himself that he might discharge his duty as Gods Prophet unto them before he dyed.

1. The Prophet here is Jacob, or Israel, he stileth himself by both names here; therefore he conveneth them that he may perform his own duty as a Father and Prophet before he dye.

2. The work or act is the declaration of Gods will unto them. He had much to shew them from the Lord.

3. The object to be declared, was about future events, things both good and evil, that would betide them in their generations.

4. The subject to whom this was to be shewed, were his own sonnes, not so much in their persons, as in their posterities.

5. The season and stated time of this concernment is noted by the after-dayes, which note.

1. More neerly the dayes of their deliverance out of Egypt; and the events in the promised land, as particulars noted will declare.

2. More remotely the dayes of the Messiah and the Gospel: which in the sacred callender are generally noted by the last dayes. All must be included here. Ver. 1.

2. In respect of them, which was their knowledge of these things, that they may be acquainted in measure with them; for this purpose he calleth them to hear so earnestly. Hear ye sonnes of Jacob, and hearken unto Israel your father. — Hear ye, two times. Sept. — Receive doctrine from Israel your Father. Cald.

1. The duty, which is the end for which they were convened, is to hear, and thereby to know, whereof note.

1. The nature, hear, hearken, it is all one word in the Hebrew, but notes both act of ears, and mind; to hear, know, and understand, and believe, and do the things revealed.

2. The instance of it in the reduplication of the word, hear, I say hear hearken to your Father.

2. The parties directed to this end, ye sonnes of Jacob; who by your relation are bound to do no less, than to hear your dying Father.

3. The propheticall instrument to which they are bound to hearken for this end, Jacob, Israel, your father. The relation of a father under two names doth ingage them.

1. His natural name given by man, which notes their natural relation, as children to him, a great ingagement to hear him at his death.

2. His spiritual name, given him by God, upon his wrestling and prevailing with him, which carried in it still the blessing; it holdeth out.

1. Authority from God.

2. Promise from him, to both which they owed the obedience of faith.

Quest. 1. How did Moses know that Jacob spake this word?

Ans. 1. Something might be by tradition: such monumentall things being worth preserving. 2. It was doubtles by a Spirit of prophesie, whereby he might know things past, as well as things to come.

Quest. 2. Why write's he so obscurely under figures and parables?

Ans. 1. Such measure of revelation God thought good to give at present.

2. Such manner of speech God was pleased to use for his own ends; both in them that beleaved, and those that did not, God was glorified.

1. The same Spirit gave understanding to some, that gave the word.

2. Others who regarded not God, were left to their own perverseness to stumble at it.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. The Spirits of God hath kept his method in delivering his will by his Prophets. Connect.

D. 2. At Gods set time, his Prophets do call such as must be acquainted with his will.

D. 3. In joint concernments of the Church, God appoints all, at one, to come and know them.

D. 4. The Spirit's earnestness in his call to the Church to come together at Gods call.

D. 5. Readiness in convening becomes Gods servants at the earnestness of his call.

D. 6. Gods Spirit in his Prophets is so earnest to gather soules onely to teach them.

D. 7. It is proper to Gods Spirit from the beginning to shew things to come.

D. 8. The Spirit of old in the Prophets hath foretold good and evil to the Church for the last dayes.

D. 9. The things revealed to Jacobs Sons, concern the Church in the last times.

D. 10. Audience and obedience of faith are earnestly prest unto the revelation of the Spirit.

D. 11. Piety to natural fathers should make make child ren hear and keep their dying words.

D. 12. Trophetical fathers must be beleaved by such as expect to prosper.

2. After the preface, followeth the Testament itself which Jacob maketh to all his Sons by name, which however it is divided by their mothers, of some into fewer heads, yet naturally it is distributed into twelve parts, according to the number of his Sons: in the reckoning of whom he keep's not altogether the order of their birth, but arbitrarily he mentions them as directed by Gods Spirit, which is usual.

The natural order is Chap. 29. and 30. All other nominations of them are arbitrary. So here,

1. The first part of his will concerns Reuben, Jacobs first born. Ver. 3. 4. Wherein note.

Ver. 3.

1. The testator implied, Jacob or Israel. As appointed, and directed by Gods Spirit, not swayed by his own will in this matter.

2. The legate, whom this part of the will concerns. And that is Reuben, considered,

1. Personally, as to himself.

2. Typically, as to his posterity unto which the main things bequeathed by prophesy did appertain, as to the latter dayes, as to his person we have onely his name Reuben, from whom his tribe was called Reubenit's. The reason of his name, his mother renders, because God had looked on her affliction, and she rejoiceth in it, saying, See a son. Which is the meaning of the name Reuben. Chap. 29. Ver. 32.

3. The testamental disposition itself, Wherein,

1. A commemoration of what Reuben was and should have bin by nature, expressed in these terms,

1. Thou art my first born. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. This Jacob saith, with respect to what by nature he might expect, but not as if by God he were established in it: for by him he was deprived of it, yet this mention serveth to mind him, whence he was fallen.

2. Thou art my might and the beginning of my strength or valour. Cald. same. Syr. Sam.

— The beginning of my children, Sept. — Of my grief, vulg. But not suitable here. In these Jacob acknowledgeth by nature the adjunct of primogeniture, which might have bin Reubens. He should have bin the virtue and prowess, and chief strength of Israel, it is the title of the first born, Deut. 21. 17. Psalm. 78. 51.

3. Thou art the excellency of high dignity, and the excellency of strength or power. — Hard to bear, and hard, and self-willed, Sept. — Thou shouldst have received three portions viz. Primogeniture & priesthood and Kingdom. Cald. — Exceeding in pride and impudence, Sa. — Excelling in nobility and magnificence. Ar.

— Reminders of burden and magnanimity, Syr. — First in gifts and greatest in government, vulgar. Several have thus varied in reading, but our translators keep to the letter. Now such should Reuben have bin by natural privilege, the caldee Paraphrase seemeth to hit the true sense of this; that by reason of his birthright, to him did belong the excellency of elevation, or dignity, which was the priesthood, and the excellency of the power which was the kingdom, these Jacob minds him should have bin his: but now God had otherwise disposed of them, to his brethren. The Kingdom to Judah, the Priesthood to Levi. And the double portion to Joseph. Ver. 3.

2. A prediction from God of what he must expect to be now, expressed in two terms.

1. Unstable as waters, swiftness as of waters. Ver. 4.

— to the letter — Thou hast don injury like the waters; Sept. — But because thou hast followed thine own will, as water poured out, thou shalt not prosper. Cald. — Thou hast bin violent & flowed down like water, &c. Sam. and Syr. — Thou shalt not abound with a draught of water. Ar.

It is a metaphorical expression, neither is it hard to resolve it into proper terms, onely it is read by some in the time past, to note the violence of his sin, and by others in the future to point out the swiftness of judgment to come; the word here used notes moveableness to sin, as Judg. 9. 4. and by reason that there is no verb to express the time, men use their liberty, some for time past, and then it must note his swiftness to sin; others in the future turn it to set out his swift course to judgment, and the next word that followeth being of the future tense, it is thought better by some to add the former passage to it.

2. The next part of the prediction is, Excell not thou, or, thou shalt not excell.

— Grow thou not hot. Sept. Thou shalt not receive the most excellent portion. Cald. Think not thy self excellent. Sam. Thou shalt not stand. Syr. In these are an utter abdication of him from his birthright, and excellencies belonging thereunto, Kingdom, and Priesthood, and portion. From God Israel pronounceth, no excellency shall be to him, however he was the first born, God now casts him down from his excellency.

3. The reason of this denunciation, but one in the whole, but expressed two ways,

1. To himself, Because thou wentest up to the beds of thy father, then thou didst defile. — Defile my couch. Sept.

— Then my son thou didst violate. Cald.

Others to the same. Herein he tells him, D d d 3 that that his own sin was the cause to throw him down from his excellency.

1. The party charged, Reuben.

2. The crime, incest in the highest degree in possessing and defiling his fathers bed; that is polluting Bilhah his fathers Concubine. Gen. 35. 22. It is doubled, He went up and defiled.

3. To the rest of his brethren standing by, He went up to my couch, whither thou wentest up, Sept. When thou wentest up to my couch. Cald. But it is the third person, therefore is it said by some, my couch is gon up, or vanished. So our translators varie, but it being the same word as before applied to Joseph; It sits best to him, he went up, &c. So he demonstrat's the vile act of his son to be exemplary unto the rest, and that they might see how justly he was put away from his excellency, some read his excellency is gon up, that is vanished, but that is remote.

Quest. 1. How long before was this sin committed?

Ans. It is said to be near 40 years, and however no mention was of Gods taking notice, yet now God remembreth it, and leaveth this mark of dying Israel upon it.

Quest. 2. Did not Reuben repent all this time?

Ans. It is conceived that he had repented, yet God leaveth an outward token of displeasure in such a temporal deprivation of him.

Quest. 3. Did this deprive him of all blessing?

Ans. Surely no, but an outward chastening it was upon him and his; which also was mitigated, and this tribe afterward blessed by Moses. Deut. 33.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. Prophets, though parents, must deliver the hardest message from God upon their children. So Jacob doth.

D. 2. Sons of providence may not alwayes be sons of blessing & promise.

D. 3. Carnal privilege of birth-right &c. profits little as to get Gods blessing.

D. 4. Birth-right external in the Church under the law, was a great privilege and typical to a better.

D. 5. The beginning of the parents strength in eldest son's will draw parents desire to bless them.

D. 6. Excellency of dignity for Priesthood and Kingdom, were intailed on the first born.

D. 7. Where birth-right is abused, all these are remembered to their reproach, Ver. 3.

D. 8. Swiftness to sin brings a torrent of evil upon men.

D. 9. God casts from their excellency such as abuse his privileges.

D. 10. Impudent lusts of uncleanness turn mans excellency into baseness.

D. 11. Carnal pollution of a fathers bed is horrid provocation.

D. 12. Such great evils are remembered many years after committed.

D. 13. Prophets of God have made sins of some children of the Church, notorious, to be exemplary to others.

D. 14. Heads of families may do those evils that bring Gods visitations upon their posterity, Ver. 4.

2. The first part of Jacobs will being dispatched concerning his eldest son Reuben, the second and the third part of his Testament now jointly follows, with respect to his second and third son Simeon and Levi, Ver. 5, 6, 7. Wherein note,

1. Jacobs description of them, being now to let them know what he was to assigne them from God, and that,

1. By name, Simeon and Levi, the second and third son of Jacob by Leah: the names are said to be given by the mother, and the reason of them is rendred. Gen. 29. 33, 34.

2. By their relation, he stileth them here brethren: not so much as being of the same father and mother, so there were four more of them, Reuben, Judah, Issachar, and Zebulun, but from their confederacy in evil: they are brethren of iniquity, and in iniquity.

3. By their condition: Instruments of violent wrong are their sojourning habitations, In is supplied. They finished the iniquity of their purpose, or way which they chose by a subtil agreement, Sept. very valiant men in the land of their sojourning, they did valiantly. Cald. As if it were praiseworthy. They finished the iniquity of their conventions.

Sam. Instruments of fury by nature, Syr. Their breach was by instruments of tyranny. The variety of instruments, Ver. 5.

rendering one word hath somewhat troubled the reading him, which is מַכְרִיתִים it is read by ours habitations, as that instruments of cruelty, dwelt with them; to this several agree; but others see cause to render it, conventions, agreements, confederacies, conversations, the word cometh from that which signifieth to sell. Whence it is used, for mens conversations in compacts and agreements. I find it no where rendred habitations by ours but in this place. And they have altered it in the margin. Their swords are weapons of violence, making the word synonymous with the Greek, μαχαίρη, so Ari. Mont. Μαχαιρὰ κοινὰ. But no where els is the word so used. I take it best therefore to understand it according to the letter, that their conventions, and confederacies about the murder of the Shechemites were instruments of violent wrong, and they were designed in them. This word is thus used, Ezek. 16. 3. Ezek. 21. 30. Ezek. 29. 14. They themselves with their swords were these instruments of cruelty, in consultation and conversation, this is meant of their action against Hamor and Shechem, Gen. 34. ver. 5. The history is sad.

2. Jacobs detestation of them in their convention of cruelty. Wherein we have to observe,

1. His remonstrance against them. Where, of note,

1. The form, and that is by way of apostrophe from them unto himself, O my soul, my glory, It is a rhetorical, and emphatical aversion from them, as not inducing to look upon them, or speak unto them. He turns away therefore to stir up his own soul against the fact.

2. The matter of detestation, exprest two ways.

1. My soul come thou not, or, thou shalt not come into their secret. Let not my soul come into their counsel. Sept.

My soul was not in their secret. Cald. so Syr. And Ar. read in time past.

It is here plainly a detestation of all their cruel counsels and secrets against the Shechemites from his very soul; my soul come not in a thought of approbation among them.

1. The subject inhibited, his soul and inward man.

2. The inhibition, come not thou into their secrets; they dig as deep as hell to hide counsels from God; my soul have nothing to do with them.

2. My glory unite not thy self to their assembly. And in their consistory let not my bowels contend. Sept. Let not my glory convene in their assembly. Cald. In their assembly. I fell not from my glory. My substance is not joyned. Ar. So he bespeaks his glory, here we have,

1. The subject. My glory, which may be taken.

1. Subjectively. And so it notes both the soul of man which is his chiefe part, and his tongue which expresth the excellency of it. Psalm. 16. 9.

2. Objectively, for glory acquired, let not the glory for which I look be united to their assembly. The first seemeth nearest to truth, the other may not be excluded.

2. The inhibition itself, Be not united to their assembly, be not one of them: abhorre that congregation of evil doers, and bloody men. Keep off from closing with them in their meetings and conversations. This word intimates reason to understand the word in the former verse of conventions, or conversations, whence now Jacob drives his soul.

2. The reason of his remonstrance followeth, which was their horrid cruelty exprest two ways.

1. Against man. Because in their anger they killed a man. Some read it, an indomite, others men, Sept. man. Slew a slaughter. Cald. Men. Syr. A nation, Ar.

1. The principle of action, fury.

2. The act itself, murder.

3. The object, men of high and low degree, Hamor, &c.

2. Against beast, And their self-will they houghed the ox, they digged down a wall.

They houghed a bull. Sep. Sam.

They undermined the wall of their enemies. Cald. They threw down a wall. Syr. and Ar. All the difficulty here, is about one word which by divers points may signify an ox or wall. It is most generally carried for an ox, and so the singular being put for the plural, the meaning is, they did not onely slay the men; but they took away and maimed all their beasts. The ox is named synecdochically; but if this word note a wall, the meaning must be that they made their entrance by force, breaking down door's and wall's, making such a violent assault, both ways it notes injurious violence. Herein note,

1. The principle, is their own will or pleasure.

2. The work was an act of violence, either breaking down houses, or destroying cattel or both, these were cruel undertakings. Ver. 6.

3. Jacobs malediction followeth, whereabout note.

1. Gods act upon their sin, Cursed be their anger, for it was strong, or fierce, and their transgressing wrath, for it was hard, or cruel.

Anger was self-willed, &c. Sept. Wrath was hardened. Sept.

Strong and hard Cald. Vehement and very bad. Syr. In all this Jacob delivered the just will of God concerning their sin, pronouncing,

1. The curse of God upon it. The subject of it was their sin, not their persons, and the curse discovers what a doleful thing it was was, cursed anger, cursed wrath.

2. The reason, it was fierce & cruel, strong and hard. Against Gods command. Therefore it is cursed, that is, made justly by God an accursed thing, even that which will bring all evil upon creatures, temporal, and eternal: that so far they might see the deep of their danger.

2. Gods act by Jacob upon the persons in their posterity. I will divide them in Jacob, and scatter them in Israel. Sept. same, and Cald. &c.

1. The executor of this, God efficiently, and Jacob ministerially.

2. The act, I will divide and scatter them, not only to distinguish the tribes, as all the rest; but to make them lower than all the rest by division & dispersion among the rest. So Simeon came into the lot of Judah, and Levi had habitations scattered. Joshua. 19. 1. 1 Chronicles. 4. 39. 40. Joshua. 21. 2. 3. This is the plain meaning of the letter. Ver. 7. 1

Some queries are to be answered about this.

Quest. 1. How long was this sin acted before?

Ans. About 42 years, yet God forgets it not, neither must Moses, though it concerns his own tribe.

Quest. 2. Did not Simeon & Levi repent?

Ans. It is presumed that they had as to their persons, before this time; for they were still reserved in the Church of God.

Quest. 3. What is the true import of this curse?

Ans. 1. It is a true and real denunciation of Gods sentence against the sin, that it was an act cursed of God and deserving the curse upon the persons acting it. 2. It was yet immediately turned to the outward chastening of them in their posterity: which was an evil and curse in itself, however ordered by God for good.

Quest. 4. Was it not a blessing on Levi?

Deut. 33.

Ans. 1. In this denunciation it was a penalty, and so a curse, or sentence of evil. 2. Through grace it was turned into blessing and God did settle the priesthood on him; which was his prerogative.

Quest. 5. Why was not Simeon remembered in the blessing of Moses as Levi?

Deut. 33.

Ans. 1. The conceits that Judas was to be of the tribe of Simeon is vain.

2. That it was for Zimries sake whom Phineas slew is not certain. 3. I rather conceive he had a part of Judahs blessing, though his name be not expressed.

Note we here.

D. 1. Sons who are sometimes hopes of Gods respect and union, may prove children of trouble and dispersion. Such were Simeon & Levi.

D. 2. Second and third sons by sin may fall under Gods displeasure as the first.

D. 3. There is a brotherhood in sin, as well as in nature, and in grace.

D. 4. Prophets must not spare the enormities of their own children, when God brands them.

D. 5. Conversations in cruelty is a grievous brand upon any guilty of them.

D. 6. Such as are joint in sinning are joined in Gods animadversion. Ver. 5.

D. 7. God in his Prophets and they from him abhorre sin, which is marked to judgement.

D. 8. Councils secret and companies of cruel wicked men, are to be abhorred.

D. 9. Mans soul and glory should be preserved from tinctures by sin: nor come to, nor close with it.

D. 10. Mans slaughter and creature destruction are abominable evils.

D. 11. The wrath and self will of man are the cause of such violence. Ver. 6.

D. 12. Sins may be cursed, when persons may be pardoned.

D. 13. Fiercenes and cruelty are cursed, and cursing evils.

D. 14. Though such sinners may be pardoned, yet are they not altogether unpunished.

D. 15. Fathers sinnes may deprive children of sweet blessings.

D. 16. Dispersion in family, and Church is a great evil; however God may order, and mitigate it.

D. 17. God and his Prophets curse together, and bless together. Ver. 7.

4. The next part of Jacobs will concerneth his fourth son Judah. Whom Leah bare bare unto him, this is contained. Ver. 8.

9. 10. 11. 12.

Wherein we have to note.

1. The form of it in expressing, which is twofold.

1. By way of apostrophe to him, Ver. 8. 9.

2. By declaration to his brethren. Ver. 9. 12.

2. The matter expressed both wayes, which is nothing but good and blessing, and that declared in several heads.

1. In his power and prevalence. Ver. 8. 9.

2. In royal dignity.

3. In the royal progeny of the Messiah. Ver. 10.

4. In his plenty, and earthly prosperity. Ver. 11. 12.

1. As to the form of speech, it is both by apostrophe from the rest to him, and then by speaking to the rest about him, in both his aim is to make both him and them attentive to the great matters which were to be revealed to posterity about this tribe. The apostrophe seemeth to be carried on to the middle of the ninth Verse, and thus in the letter is it read.

Ver. 8. Thou Judah, thy brethren shall praise thee, thy hand be upon the neck of thine enemies, the sons of thy Father shall bow themselves to thee.

Ver. 8. O Judah the lions whelp.

My Son thou art gone up from the prey.

The declaration to his brethren followeth. He stooped down, &c. Ver. 9. 12.

Ver. 9. In the former he bespeaketh the subject of this prophecy, and therein points him out.

1. By his name, Thou Judah, thy brethren shall praise thee.

Ver. 9. Judah thy brethren, &c. Sept. Judah I will praifethee, and thou wert not confounded.

&c. Cald.

1. The name itself notes praise or confession; his mother gave him the name and sheweth the ground, Now will I praise the Lord. Gen. 29. 35.

By this his father calleth him and lets him know, he shall deserve his name, the truth of it should be upon him.

2. His father giveth another reason of it, and that is, partly in present, but more for future in his posterity, Thy brethren shall praise thee. So that, he is called praise not only subjective, but objective.

As being to be praised by his brethren, and had in honor by his fathers sons, some thus refer it; they shall honour or praise his name by being called by it; so it was in after times, but whether that is intended here, is a question.

Quest. Was not Judah guilty of foul evils, as well as Simeon, &c. Why is he all praised, and they all condemned?

Ans. 1. It is certain Judah was guilty of foul incest with his daughter in law Tamar, but in some partignorantly. 2. In the manifestation of that case, Judah condemned himself, for that fact, and former evils that did occasion it. Gen. 38. 13. 16. 26. 3. It is in the liberty of Gods Spirit to conceal the sin of any or declare it. So it seemed good to Gods Spirit to brand Reuben, Simeon and Levi, and here to mention no sin of Judah. 4. This may be added, Judah had not only repented, but carried himself worthily toward his father and brethren, that might countervail his former failings as to men.

2. As to the matter here foretold of him and ordered to him. It is the ground why he is so praise worthy, and that is noted in four heads;

1. In respect of his prevalency, or victory over men, and that is expressed two wayes;

1. Literally, and it doth concern two sorts;

1. Enemies. So we read, Thy hand be on the neck of thine enemies, Upon the back. Sept. Thy hand shall prevail against thine enemies, thy foes shall be scattered and turned back from thee. Cald. Thy hand shall avenge thee on thy enemies. Here is bequeathed to Judah in his posterity a mighty prevalence expressed;

1. By an hand proper to him, an emblem of power, thou shalt have an hand that is, strength and power. (As manum is with the Latins taken.)

2. By its posture, It shall be set upon the very neck of enemies, to bring them under and make them submit.

3. By the object, they are enemies that would have his neck under them, this was confessed by David, thou hast given me the necks of mine enemies. Psalm. 18. Ver. 41.

2. Brethren, The sons of thy father shall bow down themselves unto thee. Shall worship thee, Sept. Saluting shall prevent thee. Cald. This prevalence of Judah, is in the Church, and among his brethren as well as he had victory over his enemies in the world.

1. The subjects spoken. His fathers sons, which carrieth more in it than brethren; that is, they were born of the same father, Yet their privilege exempts them not from subjection, the father in the sons was subject.

2. The subjection spoken of, not forced slavery, but willing acknowledgment and homage to be given.

3. The power noted, Unto thee, to Judah, and his seed carried in it, whom it most concerns. Ver. 8.

2. Metaphorically it is expressed under the power of the lion, king of beasts wherein.

1. The denomination of him by three terms.

Ecco

1. His

1. His former name, Judah. O Judah.
 2. His relation, my son, owned by Jacob.
 3. His virtue or prowess, The Lions whelp. Herein Jacob resembleth this tribe to a Lion, and that from a whelp to an old Lion. Gur. Arich Arich and Labi, are three names here used, the first notes the Lions whelp, the second the Lion grown, the third the old Lion when he is hardy and sturdy. Σούριον λιόντος, Λεων. Sept. Job. 4. v. 10. 11.

2. The action or deportment under this representation and that is threefold.

1. Ascend from the prey, thou art gone up from the prey, From the flock, &c. Sept. — He shall have the dominion in the beginning; but in the end the kingdom of the house of Judah shall be magnified because from the judgment of death my son thou hast taken a way thy soul. Cald. In short by this phrase is intended.

1. His spoil upon enemies, as the Lions prey.

2. His victory, that he is gone up from it, Psalm. 17. 12.

2. His repose after his ravaging, He stooped down, he couched as a resting Lion, and as a courageous Lion. Lying down thou didst sleep. Sept. — He shall rest and dwell in his strength as a Lion and as a Lions. Cald. This notes the quietness of this Kingdom when once the Lion hath prey'd upon its enemies, then it shall rest couchant and lying down as an old Lion, preparing for more spoil.

3. His terrible impression upon enemies in that exhortation, Who shall stir him up, or rouse him? Sept. same. — And there is no kingdom that can move him. Cald. The Question is resolved negatively, none will dare to rouse him when he is couchant nor provoke him to be rampant for prey. Ver. 9.

Quest. 1. What seed and posterity of Judah is here truly meant?

Answer. 1. Doubtless the tribe that was to descend from him by natural propagation. 2. Amongst them, one chief seed of Judah; afterward called Shiloh is intended, this is Jesus the Son of God coming in the flesh from between the feet of Judah, he is called the Lion of the tribe of Judah; Othniel, David, Solomon, &c. were intended; but Christ especially our Lord, who sprang out of Judah. Heb. 7. 14.

Quest. 2. When was this fulfilled?

Answer. 1. By divers gradually, as when the tribe was advanced from a principality to a Kingdom; as from Othniel judg. 1. To David and Solomon when Judah lay couchant. 2. By Christ eminently, and that by his ascending from the prey to glory when he had spoiled all his enemies, sin, death, Hell, and the grave, and now he is sat down, all principalities being subdued, who shall rouse him up? It is horrid blasphemy to transfer this to other creatures.

D. 1. God by his Prophets owneth them souls to be praise who are such. Thou Judah.

D. 2. Where God puts praise upon any, the Church must admire it, and ascribe it.

D. 3. Free grace from God remember's no sin against them to impeach their praise whom God accepts.

D. 4. God hath pointed out to whom he pleases prevalency in the world, and in the Church.

D. 5. Necks of enemies, and knees of brethren, must bow to whom God appoints them.

D. 6. God giveth the hand to whom he pleases among brethren to prevail over others. Ver. 8.

D. 7. The Spirit symbolizeth virtue and prowess by beasts; as well as vice.

D. 8. The spirit of God is the best Herald, he giveth best badges of honour to the Church.

D. 9. Gods Spirit giveth that virtue and excellency to souls, which he blazons.

D. 10. Ascents and degrees hath God appointed in the Kingdom of his Church.

D. 11. Judah was Gods chosen, to set his Church, and make it victorious.

D. 12. Jesus Christ the Lion of the tribe of Judah, is he that rules and none may rouse him. Ver. 9.

2. The next privilege bequeathed unto Judah is Royal dignity. Ver. 10. Wherein we have the third legacy included about the royal seed or progeny to come from between Judah's feet, two promises in all.
 1. Of principality in these words, The Scepter shall not depart from Judah, nor a Law-giver from between his feet until Shiloh come. Ver. 10.

A Prince shall not fail from Judah, nor a captain captain out of his loins until the things come that are laid up for him. Σκηνή.

 — Sept. — He that hath power shall not be taken away from Judah, nor a Scribe from his Children's children; until the Messiah come, whose the Kingdom is. Cald. Onk.

Kings shall not fail from the house of Judah nor skillful doctor's of the law from children's children, until the time, when the King Messiah shall come, whose Kingdom it is. Hieros. Targ. — Kings, presidents and scribes teaching of the law. — The younger of his sons, the King Messiah. Targ. Ion. The promise here given is negative, against the departing of the Principality of Judah, but necessarily includes the affirmative of setting the royal power in that tribe. Herein we have these terms to consider.

שט 1. The subject spoken of in this expression in two terms Scepter and Lawgiver. Appropriate to Judah, the word rendred Scepter notes a rod, and that as some badge of government, (to mean it of affliction is uncouth in this place) and so it came to signify a tribe, as families gathered under one rod. So some render it the tribe shall not fail from Judah: but that suits not so well to the next term of law-giver adjoined: the Scepter therefore here is a royal ensigne, and noteth principality, sovereignty, according to this the Sept. Cald. &c. render Kings, Princes. Such as have power. שטש — Was their royal en-

שטש 2. Again the word rendred lawgiver. Is by some stiled a scribe and teacher of the law, but it is not suitable to expresse supremacy: highest powers give law's, lower may teach them. This notes a power making lawes and imposing them, which properly is a lawgiver. So it is said Judah is my lawgiver. Psalm. 60. v. 7. That is the highest in power, next to God, giving law to his people under him, this is the plain sense of the terms: jointly they note principality.

2. The state prophesied concerning this. It shall not depart from Judah, nor from between his feet; the sense is clear, the sovereign power and dignity shall be in the tribe of Judah; and rulers shall come from between his feet, and come out of his thigh, that is, be born of him from time to time, and they shall not cease, depart or fail.

3. The term of duration, until Shiloh come; this advent of Shiloh shall determine the Scepter of Judah; here it is expressed to limit the principality of Judah, but it contains a special boon itself to Judah, which notes the third legacy of Jacob to him, and so I shall here consider, not excluding its respect to the precedent.

3. The next privilege given to Judah is the progeny Prophesied, & the success annexed to it, so that we have two promises.

שט 1. Shiloh shall come from between the feet of Judah Three terms are observable.

2. The subject, Shiloh, our translators keep it as a proper name, which is best; for it is no where else in the Scripture but here. The Cald. Targum, do all read, the King Mellias, or Mellias singly; some make it a common name, as his son, or her son, as some Rabbins, &c. Others read it peace-maker, which may be noted from the root whence it is conceived to come, but we keep it a proper name, and that a special title unto the Messiah. The vulgar Lat. read he that is to be sent, mistaking the word.

2. The advent, He shall come, that is in the fulness of time spring out of Judah and be born, as the child that com's forth from between the feet of the mother, which was done when the Son of God became the son of man. Gal. 4. 4.

3. The term from whence, here is from the feet, thigh's, loins; and strength of Judah, taking flesh from the fathers in this time. Rom. 9. Now look upon this passage terminating the former promise, the meaning is that in that very season, when God shall make Shiloh to be born of the house of Judah then shall the Scepter depart and not before, but herein is expressly carried, shiloh shall come, which is the promise of the Royal seed from Judah.

2. Here is added the promise of success to this Shiloh, son of Judah, And unto him shall the gathering, or the obedience of the people, be. — And he shall be the expectation of nations. Sept. And the people shall obey him, Onkelos. Herein Jacob prophetically sheweth.

1. That Shiloh when he came must be head, & the principality of Judah perfected in him, he should be lawgiver. Isaiah. 33. 2. That not only within that tribe should his territories be, but among all nations.

3. That of all nations some should be gathered by the Gospel preaching; and obey the Christ of God; and herein is the accomplishment of the great promise.

Quest. 1. When began this Scepter to be in Judah? for now it was in Joseph, afterward in Levi, by Moses, afterward in Ephraim by Joshua.

Answer. 1. Its rise was mean and little at first, mentioned in the principality of Othniel. Judges. 1. 1. 2. 13. 2. The government was various in respect of kind, as in judges at the first &c.

3. The first eminent appearance of this Scepter was in Davids Kingdom.

Quest. 2. How is the cessation of it to be understood?

Answer. 1. Predictions of persistency of this Scepter must not be understood without interruptions. 2. No partial cessation of principality in this tribe is to be judged characteristic to this time mentioned. 3. That the total cessation of the dignity of this tribe, did only point out this time of the Messiah, and his coming was the period of it, when the Kingdom of God was taken from them, and given to the nations to bring forth the fruit of it. This was when Herod destroyed the Sanhedrin; with the sad dispersions of that tribe from that time when the Celars came in, and taxed Judah, at that time this Shiloh was born in Bethlehem.

Eccc 2 of

4. The last legacy which compleats Jacobs blessing unto Judah is the prosperity and plenty prophesied of. Ver. 11. 12. Which is elegantly set forth under several metaphors, among the rest in Scripture used to note a prosperous state, wine, and milk are usual emblems. Isaiah. 51. 1. &c. Isaiah. 7. 22. Isaiah. 51. 1. Under both which the prosperity here spoken of is described; the whole prediction containeth four clauses.

1. Binding his foal unto the vine, and his asses colts in to the choise vine. Sept. to same. תן פארקו Israel shall dwell in the compass of his city, people shall build his temple, and the just men round about it, and the doers of the Law in the doctrine thereof, Onkelos. Leaving altogether the letter and making another paraphrase. Hereabout are considerable.

1. The subject whom this truly concerneth, for the participle binding must needs have its supposit; now hereabout is some difference: some referr' it unto Judah; Others apply it unto Shiloh; it may respect both, our primarily Judah, who is the subject of the blessing. Ari. Monta. reads בני My son. As speaking to Judah, though generally that is here rendered colt, That is a son of an ass, where (*) is paralogical. Judah therefore in his posterity is he spoken of binding his ass, &c.

2. The action attributed here is binding his asses foal to the vine, and asses colts to the choise vine, take it in the letter so as it is to be understood of the posterity & tribe of Judah, it noteth a very great abundance of vines and choise vines, a land of vineyards.

1. It is evident that their great men rode upon asses, or ass' colts, Judg. 10. v. 4. Iudg. 5. 10.

2. That when they alighted at several places, they did tie or bind fast their beasts to some thing.

3. That vines should be so plentiful in the borders of Judah instead of every bush and common stick in an hedge, that they tied their very asses at them, some understand the binding of them to vines was in time of vintage to load them with fruit, which may well be. Luther rejects all literal interpretation of this and the following particulars, as belonging any thing to the tribe of Judah, and understands all spiritually of Shiloh, which is not fully safe, but we shall after consider.

2. He washed his garments in wine, and his covering in the blood of grapes; He shall wash his robe. עליו Sept. The best purple shall be his Garment; his covering shall be silk dypt in scarlet and divers colours. Cald. Onk.

1. The subject is the same literally Judah.

2. The attribute is an act with its circumstances metaphorically setting out abundant prosperity.

1. Washing is a work requiring store of water.

2. Garments inward and outward cannot be purified with a little.

3. Wine

3. Wine and blood of grapes are here the symbolical matters, now we know, it is no way proper, nor usual to wash garments in wine, it were the way to spoile them, this therefore must be the sense in the letters, that they should so abound with wine, as water, so much that they might wash their garments in it, which is but a proverbial speech to note great prosperity.

Tar. Ieru. reads. He shall kill Kings and Princes, making rivers red with blood of their slain, &c. Sutabeto that Isaiah. 63. 1. 2. 3. Rev. 19. 13. But here it seemeth not so consonant, by the other adjuncts, the blood of grapes is a rhetorical paraphrase of wine, Deut. 32. 14. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12. 3. He is red in his eyes above wine. His eyes are fair. עגמיו &c. Sept.

His mountains shall be red, with his vineyards, his hills shall drop down wine; Onkel. How beautiful are the eyes of the King Christ to look upon, more than fined wine, &c. Tar. Ieru. Here is a further figurative expression of plenty from the effect of wine, which makes a colour, and clears the countenance, it is sometimes a note of the sin of drunkenness, the redness of eyes. Pro. 23. 29, 30; but not so here, but a symbolical expression of the good effects of Judahs plenty, his eyes shall be more beautiful ruddy and sparkling than wine, that notes a cheerful and joyous state together with their plenty.

4. And white in his teeth above milk. His teeth more white than milk, Sept. His fields shall be white with corn and flocks of sheep. His teeth are exercised in the law, that he eateth not iniquities, &c. Tar. Ieru. This is also a proverbial expression of abundance of good bequeathed to Judah, it is read comparatively in the Hebr. as that before redder than wine, and whiter than milk, the force of it is to express fertility, as it is noted by the abundance of milk, &c. Teeth here are synecdochically taken for the whole, whose soundness is seen by the whiteness of teeth, so that to the letter, this with the former sets out the good portion of Judah. It is queried.

Quest. 1. Whether Judah be here alone concerned, and how?

Ans. 1. It is certain the Testament doth bequeath all to Judah, that is expressed in this passage. 2. It is true that this is meant more expressly to Judahs posterity to be performed. 3. It is certain that Shiloh was his seed, and that the blessing must concern his people.

Quest. 2. How then is it to be understood of Christ?

Ans. 1. It is hard to render every metaphor in its propriety, as to understand, beleevers to be the ass' colts, and him the vine to which they are bound, & the Apostles eyes, and pastours teeth, &c. these are uncertain conjectures. 2. Yet seeing the Kingdom is promised to Shiloh, which was to be spiritual, temporal acc'ess may well be here intended to the Gospel-Church. 3. It is not unusual neither by these temporal good things to resemble spiritual, as in the whole book of Canticles, so that however the literal sense be principally to be regarded in the text, yet the application of it to set out the prosperity of the spiritual Kingdom of Shiloh, is not to be denied, seeing in him the portion of Judah was eminently intended.

5. The next legacy is here bequeathed by Jacob unto Zebulun; one of Leahs sons, but not the fifth in order, but so here placed; and so by Moses. Deut. 33. and so by Joshua. Iosua. 19. Though Issachar, were the elder, and Zebulun by the natural account the tenth Son of Jacob, according to the order of his birth all bequeathed to him is in this 13th verse. Where note.

1. The testator supposed here, is the same same Jacob, the Prophet of the Lord in this work, bequeathing from God what is expressed.
Eccc 3

2. The Legatee or subject to whom this is bequeathed, is Zebulun, concerning whom we have to consider,

1. His name, which signifieth habitation, or cohabitation, for so Leah named him, because she now concluded her husband would dwell with her, that is, keep his fixed habitation, upon the birth of this sixth son, according to which name the legacy is proportioned to him, as afterward appears.

2. The subject here intended by this name, and that was not his person, but posterity, viz. the tribe of Israel called by his name: for none of this bequeathment belet him in his person; but it was prophesied of his seed to come, and therefore given now to Zebulun's faith, that he might work on it.

3. The legacy itself, which is an earthly portion of inheritance determined to that tribe, which was to proceed from him. And to be gathered together under his name. It contained,

1. The place of his habitation. Zebulun shall dwell at the haven of the sea.

Ver. 13.

2. The fixedness of his habitation is noted, there he shall dwell: as his mother desired her husband to dwell with her, this we read fulfilled. Joshua. 19. 10, 11.

3. The use of his habitation. Even he shall be for an haven of ships. By an haven of ships, Sept. — And he shall bring under provinces by ships and shall eat the good of the sea. Cald. — Upon the beauty of ships. Syr. — In his shore are ships. Ar. All intended here is the use of his habitation, wherein we may observe expressed.

1. The instruments of their employment, ships for navigation.

2. The use made of them, for import and export, such do havens note whence ships go out, and whither they come in for traffick.

3. Implicitly from both is noted, that their trade should be in the seas, and course of life in the deep waters. Therefore Moses seconds this with a blessing. Rejoyce Zebulun in thy going out. Deut. 33. 18.

Prosperous be thy voyages.

3. The bound of his habitation, or its aspect toward another place, And his border shall be to Zidon. Or his side (as others read) toward Zidon. — And he shall extend to Zidon, Sept. — His bound shall touch unto Zidon. About this expression as noting a bound or limit, is much difficulty because no such is named by Joshua; the word randred border signifieth a side; and so it is thought more properly to be rendered, as collateral to Zidon, having ports and havens answerable unto Zidon, which was a place noted for sea traffick, as the great mart in ancient times. This is the portion allotted to Zebulun, Ver. 13. It is queried.

Quest. 1. How could Jacob speak of this, which came not to pass before above 200 years after?

Ans. 1. The Spirit of prophecy from God gave this instinct; therefore Jacob spake not his own words, but Gods.

2. God did this by him, that when it came to pass men might believe divine revelation, that God spake by him, and so receive his revelation for truth, seeing nothing of Gods word falleth to the ground.

Quest. 2. Why is Zebulun put here before Issachar?

Ans. 1. Gods Method is arbitrary in his free gifts. 2. This order here is set as leading to Moses and Joshua in blessing and giving portion unto this tribe, in which order they follow Deut. 33. and Joshua. 19. 3. Issachars lot fell beyond his and next unto him more remote from the sea, & it may be the order of division might occasion the order of naming them thus, as in this place.

Quest. 3. Was there no spiritual blessing in all this given to Zebulun.

Ans. 1. Something of spiritual good was given in the very promise which convey's this habitation, promises are spiritual, though of temporal things, in respect of their rise and end. 2. The portion was typical of better things, it being a part of the land of Canaan, which represented heavenly rest. 3. In the event many spiritual blessings were eminent there within these territories.

1. Nazareth was there, where Christ was conceived, Luke. 1. 26.

2. There was mount Tabor, whereon Christ was transfigured. Matthew. 17. 2.

3. Here Christ began to preach the Gospel, as to the darkest and vilest place in Israel, where sin abounded. Matthew. 4. 13. 16. So that God intended good to sinners in these coasts. Until they by unbelief and sin put away Christ himself from them. Upon which he threatneth them. Mat. 11. 23.

Note we from it.

D. 1. Order in blessing children is arbitrary with God, he sets one before another.

D. 2. Gods blessings are Prophetical cal of a long time before hand, that we might believe them.

D. 3. God drawes the line of his Church partly by the seas, as upon the in-lands.

D. 4. Sea trafficke and affair's are such as God hath appointed some of his Church to converse with.

D. 5. Situations and bounds of habitations to several parts of the Church, as to all nations, are of God.

D. 6. Habitations given by promise, are to be received by faith. So this was by Zebulun.

D. 7. Spiritual blessings may be carried in promises of temporal good.

D. 8. Prophetical legacies of good to the Church in any part imply its worthy walking.

D. 9. Zebulun with its sea pollutions put itself out of the compass of Jacobs spiritual blessings. It first rejected Christ.

D. 10. As Zebulun is like to Sion for blessings, so it may be worse by the abuse of them. Neighbors and sinners together. Ver. 13.

6. Now followeth the sixth Legacy of Jacob unto Issachar, the fifth Son by Leah, but the ninth in order of the several births of his sons. Herein we have to consider these three things prophesied of concerning this tribe named from their Father Issachar.

Ver. 14.

1. The disposition of them, Issachar is an ass of bones couching down between two burdens or bounds. — Issachar desired good, resting between the lots. Sept. mistaking. חומר Concupivit. for. חמר An ass, the letters being alike, and חמר which signifieth a bone, for good. As it is used by some Rabbins.

Issachar rich in wealth and his possession shall be between bounds. Cald. Onk. Here may be noted.

1. The form of words used which noteth time present, and time past, though the word did concern future ages; which teacheth the certainty of the event, as if it were in doing or already done.

2. The matter here spoken of. Wherein observe.

1. The subject whom it concerns, Issachar, whose name seemeth to sute his portion, it noting hire, as his mother speaketh when she gave him his name, though she mistake the merit of the hire. Gen. 30. 18. Here it is a tribal name not personal.

2. The matter attributed to him is his disposition, and that set out two wayes metaphorically.

1. As to his being. He is a strong bony ass. This is a borrowed expression, and therefore the propriety of sense is to be searched out.

1. Here is the assimilant, the similitude, an ass a domestick beast.

2. The assimilatum, Issachar, the tribe that should arise in after times.

3. Assimilatio, the likening of the one to the other: upon what account or reason, is to be inquired; some make it to be to a better fence for a signal of labour, and a laborious disposition, others to a worse fence to note a sluggish dull disposition, as the nature of an ass doth intimate, that hath strong bones but is a sluggish creature, this seems to be more proper, higher things are noted by Lions and Oxen for labouring and prevailing.

2. As to his working, he coucheth down between two burdens. Others read, borders, who understand the former comparison in the better fence, but what hath an ass to do with borders of inheritance? it is more proper, if proportioned to that beast, to render burdens, as the word also notes. And being here in the plural number, it notes two packs or burdens, which the ass stoops down to take up; as we use to put two packs or fardels one against another upon horses backs, so that this tendeth also to set out the servile condition of this tribe, the work being like its nature. Ver. 14.

Ver. 15.

2. That which is spoken of him is his portion, And he saw rest that it was good, and the land that it was pleasant. — The earth that it was fat. Sept. — And he saw his portion, that it was good, and the land that it was fruitful, Cald. Onk. Wherein note.

1. The portion, bequeathed him in two expressions.

1. Good rest; that is ease and quietnes which sometimes he enjoyed, which noted exemption from tumults and stirr's, and the miserable vexations by war's, together with peace in their habitations.

2. A pleasant fruitful land, which gave its increase to them under Gods blessing in all abundance of good things for this life.

2. The sense he had of this portion, he saw that it was good and pleasant. And living by this sight, perswaded him to the condition following.

3. The next thing spoken of him in this bequeathment; is his condition, And he bowed his shoulder to bear, and was a servant unto tribute. — He put his shoulder under to labour, and became an husband man, Sept. — And he shall subdue provinces vinces of people, and shall destroy the inhabitants of them, and they who shall be left, shall be servants and tributaries to him. Cald. both these are strange to the original. Note.

1. The condition here described is slavery or servitude, set out by bowing shoulders, and serving to tribute.

2. The voluntary subjection of it, this he doth willingly and of his own choice, seeing rest was good, would rather enjoy ease and plenty than seek liberty which God giveth. Some carry it to the better sense that he should be of a peaceable spirit, and should rather suffer than loose his quiet, but take all together it seemeth to note a stupid slavish condition. Ver. 15.

The conceits of B. Uz. & Hier. Targ. of their laboriousness in the Law, are fables.

Quest. Is there no good then here promised to these in this blessing?

Ans. 1. This good was, that they had a portion in the land of Canaan, as well as the rest of Jacobs children. 2. That however they might be characterized as a sluggish people, yet Moses seems to bless them, rejoice O Issachar in thy tents. Deut. 33. ver. 18. 3. They were a portion in the visible Church of God.

Observe we thence.

- D. 1. Providence order's the event of names to other ends than men intend them.
- D. 2. Providence bequeath's dispositions to creatures, yet without corrupting them.
- D. 3. Sluggish dispositions are asse like couching under burdens.
- D. 4. Strength and sluggishness may meet together in man and beast, strong bones and dull spirit. V. 14.
- D. 5. Good and pleasant portions may by providence beset a dull and a heavy people.
- D. 6. Rest and abundance, and sluggishness usually go together.
- D. 7. Sight of rest and pleasures, with living by it, maketh men willing to be servants and tributaries.
- D. 8. Such Issachars and their conditions may be among the visible people of God. Ver. 15.

7. According to the method of Jacobs Testament we are now come to the seventh legacy, which Jacob bequeaths to Dan; he had dispatched the six sonnes of Leah before, as being all of one mother; now he giveth legacies to the four sons of the bond women. Ver. 16. 21. Of whom he speaks not in the order of their birth but at his own liberty: he begins with the first Son of Bilhah, Rachels maid, and ends with her second. Ver. 21. And mentions Zilpahs two sons between. Ver. 19. 20.

Now to consider this legacy bequeathed to Dan. We have in it three bequests.

1. Honor equal with his brethren in their tribes. Dan shall judge his people as one of the tribes of Israel. Even as one tribe. Sept. of the house of Dan shall be chosen, and arise a man, in his dayes the people shall be first, and in his year's the tribes of Israel shall rest together. Onkelos. Others much nearer the Hebrew. All tribes of Israel shall obey him together. Uz. In which note.

Ver. 16.

1. The Testator is the same Jacob, as the Prophet of the Lord, who gave the former legacies from God, and so also this.

2. The Legatee, is Dan the first son of Bilhah Rachels maid, whom Rachel challenged for her son, by reason of her prerogative, as Mistress unto Bilhah, of whom note.

1. His name with the reason of it; he is called Dan, which signifieth a judge, or one judging; the reason of its first imposition his mother giveth though a strange one, that God did now judge for her in giving her a son by her maid; how rightly I shal not here discuss; but God giveth a better reason of it, by the legacy added, He shall judge, there is an elegance in the original. דן

2. The subject meant by this name is mainly his posterity to arise from him in after time; as in all the rest their persons were not so immediately concerned, as the subject in which these prophecies should be complete.

3. The legacy itself here given, which as before noted, stands in three heads.

1. That in this verse is his honor which is thus expressed, He shall judge his people as one of the tribes of Israel Wherein,

1. His act of dignity, He shall judge, that is, exercise the authority of a Prince or judge, to order, and direct, and rule, as is the property of men in power.

2. The object of this act, his own people, that is those of the same tribe, for as to the other glosses of ruling over all the tribes of Israel, is groundlessly assumed from this text.

3. The regulation of this act, As one of the tribes of Israel: that is, as there was in every tribe, a Prince and head even in the the time of Moses, and other chief magistrates, so here is it prophesied, that in the tribe of Dan, there should be a judge and a prince, as well as in all the tribes of Israel: as for the transferring of this to Sampson, one special branch of that tribe, (as by the Rabbins it is done) carrieth no even answer to this prophesy, as if it were reciprocal with him, the plain sense of all in the letter is, that Dan was the son of a maid or servant, and being so, might be disdained by the children of the wives; therefore, herein Jacob from God establisheth this son as well as the rest of the handmaids to make their tribes in the Church of God, no less than the rest born of Leah and Rachel, so that herein the like tribal honor is given to Dan, as to all the rest. Ver. 16.

2. The next legacy is the disposition bequeathed to him, Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an arrow snake by the path, biting the horses heels, and his rider shall fall backward. And let Dan be as a serpent in the way, Sept. There shall be a man who shall be chosen and rise from the house of Dan, whose fear shall come upon the people, and he shall mightily smite the Philistins, as a snake; an asp shall lye in wait by the way, he shall kill the strong men in the camp of the Philistins, his footmen with footmen, he shall weaken their horses and charrets and shall cast down their riders backward. Onkelos.

Herein we have discovered under figures. 1. The genius or disposition of this tribe, Dan shall be a serpent in the way, an adder in the path.

1. The subject is the whole tribe, not Sampson the son of Manoah onely as is expressed by some Rabbins, for his time was but 20 years, Judg. 13. and 14. and 15. and 16. Chapters.

2. The disposition of this tribe, set out by the embleme of a snake or adder. An arrow snake. Now the known nature of this creature is to do hurt more by subtilty than force: the word here rendred Adder or arrow snake, is no where used but here, now this is the disposition of this tribe foretold, to be subtil and cunning as the Serpent, in dealing with adversaries; so Sampson did: so did the Danites to Laish, &c. Jud. 18. but these did not make up the tribe altogether of whom Jacob speaketh. And however Moses speaketh of this tribe. Dan is a lions whelp he shall leap from Bashan. Deut. 33. 21. This is not so much to note his strength, as the suddenness of falling on the prey. Gen. 3. 1.

2. The action futable to this disposition, He biteh the horse heels. Now this is the Serpents work to be nibling at the heels, this being brought to its propriety, notes the overthrowing enemies by craft, and not by force, to make horse heels. The house pillars, which Sampson pulled down, is an hard interpretation, as some do who apply all this to him.

3. The issue consequent. And his rider shall fall backward. Now this noteth the fall of the enemy, as when horsemen are unhorsed it speaketh their downfall and destruction: so Jacob prophesieth of the enemies of Dan. Ver. 17.

3. The last donative is the hope or expectation of Jacob for this tribe, which ours read. I have waited for thy salvation O Lord, but to the letter, I have expected Jehovah for thy salvation. — Waiting for the salvation of the Lord, Sept. I expect thy salvation O Lord, said our father Jacob: I look not for the salvation of Gideon because it is temporal salvation, nor the salvation of Sampson the son of Manoah, which is transitory, but I look for the redemption of Christ the son of David, who is to come to call to himself the children of Israel, whose redemption my soul desireth. Onkelos. The other Rabbins run much this way; by their naming of Gideon & Sampson, we may see, that they were their own conjectures, who came after to glosse upon this text; but there is no such thing intended therein as they expresse, the various reading of this last passage maketh various senses.

1. Some, as our translators make it an apostrophe unto God. As if Jacob wearied with the delivering of Gods minde, should divert, and refresh his soul with this apostrophe unto God, I expect thy salvation, &c. But looking to all this passage as propheticall to Dan, which is most reasonable, and considering that the grammar construction is natural, it seemeth better to translate thus, I expect Jehovah for thy salvation: speaking unto Dan of whom he spake before.

1. The person waiting here is Jacob, a propheticall father.

2. The act is expectation, an issue of faith.

3. The object is Jehovah, he to whom all eyes should look.

4. The end of this looking to Jehovah, that he should be salvation unto Dan; which may note, both salvation temporal from outward evils, and eternal from sin.

Quest. 1. Doth Jacob speak good or evil here of Dan?

Ans. 1. The scope of all is good to warn him, and his. 2. Yet the temper foretold of them implieth evil of sin, and miseries attending them.

3. The issue of Jacobs prophesy is good, in a believing prediction of salvation temporal and eternal, to such as were ordained for it.

Quest. 2. Why is Dan left out among the tribes sealed. Rev. 7. if this were good?

Ans. 1. It is a fable, that he was left out there because Antichrist should be of that tribe, as well might it be said of Simeon whom Moses omits, Deut. 33. 2. It might be for the idolatry whereunto that tribe was bent. 3. The order of reckoning the tribes is arbitrary. 4. The reason itself is among Gods secrets.

F f f f of

It learneth us.

D. 1. God can make the son of an handmaid like the son of the free woman.

D. 2. Judgment is the proper work of Princes assigned by God.

D. 3. Judges and Judgment God allois to every people, Ver. 16.

D. 4. God foretells the dispositions of people that they may consider it.

D. 5. Serpentine wisdom may be allotted by God, and abused by men.

D. 6. Subtily may sooner unhorse an enemy than power, Ver. 17.

D. 7. Jehovah's salvation among all the wiles or subtilties of creatures.

D. 8. It is proper unto faith to look to Jehovah for all salvation.

8. The next legacy bequeathed by Jacob in his will, is to Gad the first son of Zilpah Leahs handmaid: who with Asher, his brother are here together inserted between the two sons of Bilhah, Rachels handmaid: This order is arbitrary, neither need's it a further inquiry. The whole Testament concerning this son, is short, therefore the more obscure; Yet to search out the meaning, will be needful: In the whole these same particulars occur.

1. The Testator, the same Jacob, as the Prophet of the Lord in this matter.

2. The Legatee here is Gad, of whom we note,

1. His rise as to his mother; he was the first son of Zilpah, Leahs handmaid, born after the two sons of Bilhah, Gen. 30. ver. 10. he was therefore one of the bond-children.

2. His name, Gad, which his mother gave him upon her own account, but Jacob from God confirmeth upon a better; she named him a Troop, because she had four sons of her own before; and now another by her maid made up a greater company, whereupon she gives the name, but Jacob foresaw, that troops of enemies would afflict him, and at last his troop should prevail: he confirmeth therefore his name to him upon better grounds, Gen. 20. ver. 11.

3. His posterity must needs be here intended under his name: and that not special, to any one of his seed, but to the tribe, therefore no one man, or season is here intended to exclude others.

3. The legacy itself, which is the contents of the whole Verse. Gad a troop shall with troops cut him off, but he shall with a troop overcome at last. Gad a tentation shall tempt him, but he shall tempt him at the feet, Sept. Camps of armed men shall pass from the house of Gad over Jordan to warr before their brethren, and shall return with much riches to their own land, Cald. Onkel.

Gad a troop shall waste him, and he shall waste at last. A despoiler shall despise, &c. Sam. Gad shall go out among the army, and he shall draw the heel, Syr. Gad shall break the rear of whatsoever army that shall be gathered against him, Ar. Ben Uzziel and Hiero. Tur. Much the same with Onkelos.

In this prophetic legacy with some is but one portion, and that all good, but according to the best and most there are two.

1. Evil foretold to befall him. Gad a troop shall cut him off or overcome him. Turma turmatim populiabit eum. Jun.

1. The subject of this prediction, it must be the posterity of Gad, after he was settled in the lot of his inheritance, Josh. 13. ver. 8, 9. &c.

2. The evil itself foretold, whereabout note,

1. The season, and that was after their defection from the true worship of God: upon which account God ordered the Nations about to afflict them at several times, Judg. 10. 7, 8. Jer. 49. 1.

2. The judgment executed, by armies and hosts, the tribe of Gad was to be afflicted, and in great measure, sometimes cut off, so it was for eighteen years together, by the Ammonites, and Philistines, &c. Judg. 10. 7, 8, 9. This seems to be the fulfilling of the Prophecy at this time: And so again in the dayes of Jeremy, they were not without oppressors. נָרַד נָרַד In which is paronomasia.

2. Good foretold concerning him, But he with troops shall cut off: hese at last. This is by some applied to their brethren to bring them into their possessions & their safe return again with wealth to their own possessions, but this seemeth not true. For

1. Reuben and Manasseh did as much in that business as Gad.

2. The proper time seem's to be afterwards when the tribes were distinctly settled in the Land of promise. Now herein note,

1. The subject of the good prophesied the very same Gad in his tribe.

2. The good prophesied, and that is victory over his oppressors, as partly fell out in Iephtahs time, and in others, Judg. 10. and 11. Chapters. 1 Chron. 5. 18, 22.

Ver. 19.

3. The order of this successe, it was at last after much oppression upon them, the word signifieth the heel: And as that is the utmost part of the body; so it noteth the end and close of actions and things, and so is it taken here. The blessing of Moses doth much add to this, Gad dwelleth as a Lion, and teareth the arm with the crown of the head.

Herein his future victories were foretold. It is question'd.

Quest. Was there no spiritual blessing in this?

Answer. 1. The letter in this place expresseth onely outward events of good and evil. 2. This Prophecy doth yet respect this tribe, as being in the Church of God, where good and evil may be sanctified. 3. Moses expresseth much in his additional testament, as to the blessing of this tribe, Deut. 33. 20.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Names and conditions are ordered by God unto his creatures.

D. 2. Afflictions and oppressions by multitudes of men are Gods legacies sometime to his Church.

D. 3. Troops may be overcome by troops, where and when God designes it.

D. 4. God can raise troopes and armies for his Church at his pleasure.

D. 5. At last the armies of the Church shall prevail though at first oppressed.

D. 6. All these events are ordered by God to his Church in part or whole according to Covenant. So he doth to Jacob and his. Ver. 19.

9. The next legacy is bequeathed by Jacob to Asher, the second son of Zilpah handmaid to Leah, wherein also note.

1. The testator, Jacob his father and Gods Prophet, now to bequeath after his will.

2. The legatee, Asher, of whom is noted,

1. His original by his mother he was Zilpahs second son, whom Jacob begat.

2. His name with the reason of it: This is Asher, which Leah gave when he was born and now his father confirms, but upon some other grounds.

1. His reputed mother Leah, gave him this name upon consideration of her own happiness. As she said upon the birth of him. Happy am I, or in my happiness I am, having by her maid another son: hereupon she calleth his name, Asher, that is, happy.

2. His father here expresseth the reason of his name from God, who intended to make him happy in his portion.

3. The legacy itself expressed in the whole verse, out of Asher or concerning Asher, Ver. 20. his bread shall be fat, &c. he shall give or yield the dainties of a King, or for a king, royal dainties.

Asher his bread shall be fat; and he shall give meat to princes, Sept. The land of Aser shall be the best, and he shall be nourished with the dainties of kings, Cald. Onk. Other readings are either the same or onely paraphrases setting out the fertility of the portion of this tribe. Herein note,

1. The subject of this blessing is the posterity and tribe of Asher, after they came to their inheritance in the promised land of which read Joshua. 19. v. 24.

2. The nature of this blessing is set out in two rhetorical expressions.

1. Concerning Asher, his bread shall be fat. So it is, אֲשֶׁר which some read only אֲשֶׁר making ו expletive, but it may be read as a preposition, of Asher, or out, or concerning, &c.

1. His portion is expressed by bread which is the staffe of life, and synecdochically it signifieth all necessaries for this life, as the dayly bread, which we are to pray for.

2. It is commended higher by the adjunct, his bread shall be fat: this is a metaphor, and borrowed from things capable of fatness, and in them it signifieth the choice and best things, and here the finest bread, and as elsewhere it is expressed, the fat of the kidnies of wheat. Deut. 32. 14. It is a great elegancy and notes the excellency of all temporal good things: which Moses sets out in another figure. He shall dip his foot in oile. Deut. 33. 24.

2. He shall give delights or dainties of a king, or to a king, royal dainties. As it is an Hebrewism. Three terms are here,

1. The good itself, the delicacies for nourishment of man: the word cometh from the same with Eden, which was the garden of God full of dainties.

2. The adjunct, they were royal dainties, such as become Kings, or such as Princes will have, these are Ashers part.

3. The freeness and fulnes of these, Asher, that is his land, shall of itself and under Gods blessing give out all these, so Moses blesteth him with outward good, Deut. 33. 24. 25.

Quest. Is here nothing but temporal blessing?

Ans. 1. The things themselves are of this this life. 2. They exclude not better things. 3. They are Church-blessings and therefore must carry more than the outward good in them.

מערני מלך

We observe.

- D. 1. Grace can change the bond-children's condition into happiness.
- D. 2. It is Gods word that maketh portions in the earth to bring forth the best of food.
- D. 3. The finest bread and greatest dainties are blessings from God.
- D. 4. Kings have their allowances of earthly things from God above others.
- D. 5. These portions are vouchsafed of God sometimes to his Church.
- D. 6. When God giveth strength to creatures, they yeeld freely to his people.
- D. 7. Earthly blessings are given with heavenly promise to the Church. Ver. 20.

10. The next Legacy bequeathed by Jacob is to Naphtali, the second son by Bilhah Rachels handmaid, ranked in this place after another order than elsewhere. Gen. 30. His portion is also shortly dispatched.

Ver. 21.

Naphtali is an hinde let loose, he giveth pleasant words, or goodly sayings. Ver. 21. — Is a stump or stock remitted, giving forth beauty or goodness in the fruit, Sept. — Naphtali his lot shall fall in the best land, & his possession shall bring forth fruit, they shall praise and blefs over them, that is for the fruit. — Onkelos. — An hinde of redemption. Sam. — Is a swift messenger, &c. Syr. — As an hinde let loose shall repeat, &c. Ar. — Is a swift hart to declare good tidings, for he told his father Jacob at the first that Joseph was alive, &c. And when he opened his mouth in the congregation of Jacob, his tongue was sweet as honey. Targ. Hieros. — A swift messenger like unto an hart, &c. And when he opened his mouth in the synagogue of Israel to praise, he was more approved than other tongues. Ben. V.

In this part of his Testament we must note,

1. The Testator, who is still the same, Jacob as Gods Prophet.
2. The Legatee, Naphtali, of whom note.
1. His rise too, Jacobs second son by Bilhah Rachels handmaid. So a bond-child.
2. His name, and that,

1. As given him by Rachel. And so the reason of it was, that she strove with her sister to match her in the number of children & therefore called him Naphtali. 1. my wrestling. Gen. 30. 8.

2. As here mentioned by God, and so it seemeth to be applied to note his own wrestlings and escaping out of the hands of hunters as an hinde let loose.

3. The subject intended by this name is the tribe that issued from him, and that after the setting in its portion. Joshua. 19. 32. And these also considered, at several seasons.

3. The Legacy itself, which carrieth two things,

1. The nature and disposition of this tribe expressed metaphorically, Naphtali is an hinde let loose or sent away.

1. The subject here is Naphtali, the tribe of whom Jacob prophesieth, & however some restrain it to Barak, who was of that tribe, yet that cannot be the adequate subject of this prophesy, but the tribe generally.

2. The attribute which setteth forth under a borrowed expression the disposition of this tribe, It is an hinde let loose. Here are two terms considerable,

1. The creature under which his disposition is noted, which is an Hinde, this is undoubted in the letter of the Hebrew. The Seventy have mistaken noting it the stemme or stump near the root: Onkelos paraphraseth it to note the speed of bringing forth fruit by the land. Other Rabbins make it to note a swift messenger: But let these pass, it must be granted, that it is borrowed here to express the condition of this tribe, the same creature is made use of often in Scripture to set out things aptly represented by it, of several properties.

1. The love and loveliness of the wife to the husband as this is to its mate, Prov. 5. ver. 19.

2. The tendernes of mothers to their young, Jerem. 14. 5.

3. The secrets of providence are set out by them, Job. 39. 1. Cahst thou mark when she bindes do calve?

4. They are the emblems of fear and trembling as being fearful creatures, Psal. 29. ver. 9.

5. They are representations of swiftness, and so David speaketh, He make my feet like bindes feet. 2 Sam. 22. 34. Psal. 18. ver. 33. Habak. 3. 19.

Hereupon some read that he is a swift messenger. In which of these significations it is used is now the question, which will be better resolved by taking in the adjunct.

2. The next term is that which is adjoined to the hinde, let loose, sent away, dismissed, so the word properly significeth, now this word supposeth the hinde to be formerly hunted and taken in the net, and now escaped and let loose to shift for itself, so that the propriety may be thus apprehended.

1. Ia-

Learn hence.

1. Jacob Prophesieth that this tribe should be lovely to God, and made desirable.

2. That it should be fearful desiring to escape dangers of oppressors.

3. That yet they should be taken & oppressed sometimes, and be in darkness, as we may read, Judg. 4. 1, 2. 1 Sam. 9. 1.

4. That they should be let loose and delivered by the good hand of God at several times, so they were.

5. That they should be swift to accept deliverance from God, and fly from evil.

6. That as swiftly they should fly upon the enemy; which may be applied to men, but hindes properly are swift to run away from danger, so it may be meant of David, and of Habakuk.

2. The next part of his Legacy is in action, He giveth goodly words, sayings of elegancy. Wherein we are to consider,

1. The Doner, and that is Naphtali, the tribe generally, therefore not to be restrained to Barak one person or one generation, but the tribe at several times, being as an hinde let loose.

2. The fruit given is goodly words, or elegant, fair expressions, what these are, is the difficulty to determine, but safe conjectures may be made.

3. The subject to whom these words are given, and this will determine all the rest, if we can reach who this is.

1. Some make it to be God, & therefore expound this of words of praise & thanks, such as Deborah and Barak gave to God, Judges. 5. And they are good words indeed.

2. Others make it to be men, and then these words must be such as do best suite with the condition of an hinde let loose, and thus they were doubtles words of peace to men for getting favour, which may be part of that blessing which Moses gave to this tribe, O Naphtali satisfied with favour, Deut. 33. 23. Both may be well comprehended here, and these are wrestlings with God and Man, and prevailing, which is the best meaning of his name. It is queried,

Quest. What good doth Jacob give herein?

Answer. 1. He setteth this tribe in the Church of God. 2. He foretelleth their condition that they might believe, and prepare for it. 3. He declareth their deliverance, that they may be comforted in their streits. 4. He presageth their acceptance with God and Man, as to the time of that tribes standing. 5. Christ himself began to visit this tribe with salvation in the first place, which event might answer something in this Prophesy, Math. 4. v. 12, 13, 14, &c.

D. 1. God can turn carnal wrestlings for fleshly preeminence into wrestlings for better things.

D. 2. Gods Will or Testament by his Prophets, makes bondmen lovely Members of his Church. Naphtali a hinde.

D. 3. Gods loving Hinde or his Church may be compassed with fears and snares.

D. 4. God sets his fearful Church, Hinde loose from fears.

D. 5. Vpon Gods dismissal, the Hinde-like Church speeds from her dangers.

D. 6. The Hinde-like Church treats her oppressors fairly.

D. 7. Gods Hinde vpon dismissal from the snare gives pleasant words of praise.

D. 8. Providence sets the Hinde like nature in his Church as well as Lions heart, and Serpents head, Ver. 21.

11. Now followeth the eleventh legacy in Jacobs will assigned unto Joseph, the first son by Rachel, set now in the eleventh place, and after the children of the handmaids, which is done according to the will of him that guided him, in this the three former heads are considerable.

1. The Testator Jacob, Josephs father, and the Prophet of the most High.

2. The Legatee, Joseph, of whom we may note,

1. His rise by his mothers side, it was the first son of Jacob by Rachel his truest wife.

2. His name Joseph, which may be considered,

1. Upon the ground of its imposition by his mother: And that was the expectation by the birth of this, that she should have more, She called his name Joseph, saying, The Lord shall add me another son. So it significth adding, the Lord is adding, this she gave as to her own account.

2. The ground of Gods continuance and confirming of it, is the good effect of it as to himself and posterity. Therefore seeing his name signified adding, God here promiseth him to be a son of great increase.

3. The subject intended by this name, and that is his posterity, the two tribes of Ffff 3 Ephraim Ephraim and Manasseh. As Moles she-weth also in his blessing. Deut. 33. 17.

3. The legacy itself bequeathed, in the declaring of which we have to note,

1. The general proposition of the blessing bequeathed. Ver. 22.

2. The consideration declared in Joseph's person, upon which this blessing proceeded unto his posterity. Ver. 23. 24.

3. The amplification of the former proposition of blessing, with application of it. Ver. 25. 26. Much of difficulty is in these by reason of the truths being covered under many vails of metaphors, and borrowed speeches: but to attempt the exposition in order.

Ver. 22.

1. As to the proposition of blessing, it runs thus to the letter, a son fruitifying shall Joseph be, a son fruitifying by a fountain or well, the daughters proceed, or go forth upon the wall. — A son increased Joseph, a son increased zealously desired, my younger son return to me. Sep. A growing son is Joseph, a son who shall be blessed as a vine that is planted by a fountain of waters, two tribes shall proceed from his sons and shall take their lot and inheritance. Onkel.

My youngest son ascends a wall. Sam. A son of education, &c. Come up O fountain, a strong building which riseth with a wall, Syr. — As a fruitful bow at the fountain of waters, having roots extended upon the wall. Ar. — The daughters run upon the wall. Vulg. The fabulous gloss of Ben. V. And Hieron. Targ. talk of the Daughters of the Egyptians, running upon the walls to see his beauty as he passed and Josephs neglect of them and their allurements, are all vain. That flourishing child Joseph. That plenteous child by the well side, the daughters ran upon the wall. Engl. Anno. 1566. Herein we have the general proposition of the blessing bequeathed from Jacob to Joseph, and it is wholly figurative, here we may note,

1. The subject here concerned, and that is, the posterity of Joseph under his name; of whom came two tribes Ephraim and Manasseh, of these is this prophetic legacy meant.

2. The blessing prophesied of him, which generally is here proposed, and that stands in two particulars.

1. In their inward nature or disposition, and that twice mentioned with respect to both sons.

1. Joseph is, or shall be a son fruit bearing. Now this must be meant of one of his sons, he is a son, &c. The reason why ours and other translat'rs do read a bough, is from the adjunct fruitful, or fruit bearing, which is proper to plants; therefore some supply the son of a fruitful vine, though no such word as vine be in the text; yet it is usual with the Hebrew's to paraphrase issues either of beasts, or plants, or any other things, by the names of son and daughter of such a thing. So a calf is called the son of a bull, Gen. 18. 7. So arms and branches of trees may be called the sons of them, sparks the sons of a burning coal, Job. 5. 7. And in artificial things arrows are said to be the sons of the bow, and quiver. Job. 41. 28. Lam. 3. 13. So is it to be understood here, he is, or shall be a bough, the son of a tree, this bough is here prophesied of to be fruitbearing, or fruitful; in proper terms it is that this son of Jacob shall be numerous in seed.

2. Again it is said, he shall be a son bearing fruit near a fountain or well.

1. This notes another son, Joseph is here set out as a tree growing up with two arms.

2. The disposition is the same, fruitful or bearing fruit, that is multiplying sons and daughters.

3. The cause promoting, this is added, which is common to both these boughs, they are set by a fountain, some read, beautiful to the eyes, but that accords not to the scope of this place, the same word signifies eye and fountain, but here the last is fittest for plants which thrive by moisture.

2. The blessing is discovered in their outward expression; ours read, his branches run over the wall, the word is daughters in the plural; but the verb is singular, it certainly notes the great spreading or increase of their fruitfulness, as vines that send branches and fruit over the wall's.

1. Some read daughters metaphorically by branches which come from those two boughs.

2. Others read properly, for daughters running upon the wall, and some carry to the Egyptian daughters: but altogether mistaken. The greatest difficulty is in the grammar, that the subject is plural and the verb singular, therefore some supply a proposition, with his two branches, he runneth over the wall. This saves the grammar, but the proposition is wanting, which yet may be supplied in that language, as well as others, so that the sense is plain, Joseph as he is fruitful, so he giveth it out by branches by which gradation, do overtop the highest wall, the fruitfulness of a vine and other plants is expressed. Others read, a building riseth over the wall; but that cannot reasonably fit the word in this place. In short Moses giveth the most proper interpretation to this, these are the ten thousands of Ephraim, and the thousands of Manasseh. Deut. 33. ver. 17.

Quest. Was this only an outward blessing?

Ans. No, for first, these metaphors are used to set out spiritual fruitfulness elsewhere, and may do here. Psalm. 1. 3. 2. This fruitfulness promised concerneth the Church and propagation of it: and so includes spiritual fruit.

We

We observe.

D. 1. Providence by blessing turneth names and states to good unto mens selves, that were good to others.

D. 2. It is Gods special care by Jacob to bless his Joseph, his chosen suffering ones.

D. 3. Josephs sons, or the Churches seed is double, to make it increase.

D. 4. Under Gods blessing the seed of the Church becoms very fruitful.

D. 5. It is Gods providential fountain or well, that makes his Church so fruitful.

D. 6. By Gods watering his Church plants spread and overrun the wall's. This is true in outward and inward fruit, Ver. 22.

2. The next thing observed in Jacobs bequeathment to Joseph, is the consideration of some conditions upon Josephs person, which might move Jacob to give this blessing unto his posterity, this is mentioned, V. 23. 24. Three conditions are here named foregoing in Josephs person.

Ver. 23.

1. His state of suffering by the opposition of enemies, thus described, The archers, or Lords of the arrows with bitterness grieved him, and shot, and hated him. Ver. 23. Against whom they that consulted gave reproaches; and the Archers laid wait for him, Sept. אויבים נשקצוהו. And strong men, men of dissension, threatened him, and took revenge of him, and provoked him, Cald. Onkelos. Thereadings differ not much in scope. Herein note,

1. The Patient is Joseph himself in his own person, against whom these Archers shot.

2. The agents, who brought these evils upon Joseph are stiled arrow Masters, or Archers skilful to shoot, and cruel to kill the man at whom they aimed; under this metaphor are doubtless signified Josephs ten brethren, Potiphar and his wife, some Rabbins say, the Magicians of Egypt also. Men of strife, Cald.

3. The injuries done by them and suffered by him expressed in three terms,

1. With bitterness or bitterly they grieved him: They put his soul to anguish and torment, as themselves confess. Gen. 37. 19. Gen. 42. 41. So the word מר is to afflict bitterly; so was Josephs soul by them vexed, and discomposed by reproaches, and injurious dealings threatening death, and selling him for a slave, &c.

2. They shot, that is, at him their arrows even bitter words, revilings and darts of death: Syr. reads they were multiplied; but more properly here to the name of archers applied, it notes shooting: The arrow masters shot; such expressions are used by the Spirit to express the malignant endeavours of the enemies of Gods Church. Psalm. 11. 2. Psalm. 57. 4. Psalm. 120. v. 4. Psalm. 64. 3. 4. So Rabab signifieth to dart or shoot, what is they fastened all reproaches and miseries upon him, to put him to anguish.

3. They hated him with an inward hatred, here was the root and principle whence all other their venomous arrows were directed to hurt him, the word Sathan signifieth deeply to hate: & when persecutions do arise from such a root, they are pernicious and deadly. So did they act upon poor Joseph here, his brethren, and other enemies. Now this is remembered in Gods blessing of his seed. His sufferings were so great, that the saddest calamities afterward upon his seed are called the afflictions of Joseph, Amos 6. 6. Ver. 23.

Ver. 24.

2. His state of victory over all these expressed thus, But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were strengthened by the hands of the mighty one of Jacob. And their bowes were broken by strength, and the sinews of their arms were dissolved or weakened by the hand of the mighty one of Jacob Sept. — And the Prophecy was fulfilled in them, because he kept the law in secret, and purposed constant hope, then was the best gold put upon his arms, &c. Onkelos. — obscure. The Syr. and Ar. read as if it noted him to be overcome, that his bow was beaten back and failed, & his arms broken, but all mistaken. In these therefore the state of Josephs victory is set out, whereabout we have to note.

1. The good event itself, expressed two ways,

1. His bow abode in strength, a borrowed proverbial expression, noting an unconquered condition, when mens weapons continue strong, in the letter occurs to be noted,

1. The subject Joseph, in his person, however carried by some to his posterity, yet here it is historical.

2. The instrument, his bow, where by Jacob likens him to an Archer, also whose weapons are bow and arrows, this notes any means of defence which God vouchsafed; here it answers the adversary. Bow to bow is here opposed.

3. The condition of this weapon, it doth in strength, the verb is future, but conversum notes it to be read in the time past suitable to those actions of his enemies; the word notes setting or abiding, the term read strength is by some applied to God in the strong one; but not well, for the cause of this strength followeth. In summa summe the sense is. The mean's of his defence, and victory continued firm and strong notwithstanding all opposing enemies, and that was the wisdom and grace which he had from God. Wisdom is better then weapons of war, Eccl. 9. 18.

2. The arms of his hands were made firm or strong. Herein is another explication of his unconquered state, wherein we have to note these special terms the whole being another proverbial expression of an unconquered condition.

1. The subject the same Joseph.

2. The instrument, which is here natural, the other was artificial, his bow, but this the arm's of his hands. So called, as being those instruments, which strengthen the hand to defensive and offensive action. This is most requisite for an archer to have a strong arm, as well as a strong bow.

3. The conditions of his arms, they were made strong or strengthened, the word יָד is so used to strengthen; though the Caldee turn it; the gilding of his arms, as if it came from a word signifying gold: but that suits not so well with an arm holding a bow; the summe then is that his strength inward and outward continued and grew under all oppositions of enemies. All means of safety are carried in it.

2. The cause of this unconquered state signified by the strength of bow and arm, is considerable, which is thus expressed, By the hands of the mighty one of Jacob. Confirmed his Kingdom which was given him from before the most mighty one of Jacob. Onkelos. Septua. Almighty Dominus Iacob. This cause is set out,

1. In its power. The mighty one: the attribute of God here, the cause then is mighty, sufficient to make an arm and bow strong, even almighty, as here used.

2. In its specialty, that mighty God, who is Jacobs, that is by Covenant, and experienced help from time to time, he that made Jacob Israel, to prevail like a Prince.

3. By its influence of help to Joseph, intimated by hands, which are instruments of help in creatures; and so after the manner of men attributed to God, his hands made Jacobs arms strong. Almighty influence.

3. Josephs state of eminency and dignity after all this is mentioned, and that upon this account of blessing his seed: It is thus expressed, From thence the feeder, the stone of Israel. Thence Israel prevailed from God thy father, Sept. The God of thy father. By whose word the father and tens of the tribes of Israel are governed. Onkel. The grammar of this sentence is variously read.

1. Ours with others read all in verbo, as belonging to Joseph, He was the shepherd of the stone of Israel, so noting his dignity.

2. Others, Thence is he that fed the stone of Israel; by stone meaning Jacob: who was the foundation of Israel, and fed by him in Egypt.

3. Others read, the shepherd of the stone of Israel: which is construed two ways,

1. By stone some mean God; and then it is the genitive of the efficient: the shepherd whom God the stone or foundation of Israel raised.

2. By stone others note, Jacob and his family, so Joseph was the feeder of them, there is probability in all these conjectures, but I conceive that all concerns Joseph here, & therefore the reading by apposition may be best; and so note,

1. The term of order as to this condition, and that is, וְעַד From there or from thence, which notes not God, as some; but his former state and condition of victory; from thence and after this he was the shepherd, &c.

2. The subject spoken of rationally must be Joseph concerned in all former passages.

3. The condition declared of him is eminency unto which God advanced him; in two expressions.

1. He was the shepherd. So he was made not only to Israel, but Egypt: who ruled and fed them all.

2. He was the stone of Israel, that is, the instrumental foundation and stay of all his fathers house, and the Church of God carried under Israel. Though God himself be the only principal stone and foundation of his Church, yet other mediating stones he hath used for support. And among them the Lord Christ eminently; this is the truth concerning Joseph. Ver. 24.

D. 1. It is no rare thing that men blessed of God are malignated by men.

D. 2. Consideration of fathers sufferings may procure blessing on their children.

D. 3. Persecutors are shrewd archers or arrow Masters

D. 4. Harmles Joseph is usually the mark at which malignant archers aim.

D. 5. Nothing but bitter grief do persecutors aim at harmles soules.

D. 6. Persecutors malignant shoot their bitter words as arrows to grieve poor soules.

D. 7. Inward hatred puts men upon shooting and grieving innocent soules. Ver. 23.

D. 8. Joseph, or poor harmles soules les may be oppressed, but not overcome.

D. 9. Righteous soules have arms and bowes stronger than their enemies.

D. 10. The hand of God puts strength into the arm and bow of his righteous ones.

D. 11. Jacobs mighty God is Josephs assistant against all assaunters, God in Covenant.

D. 12. God keeps his order to exalt from low to high condition. So it was with his son.

D. 13. The exaltation of any of Gods Saints is for the benefit of his Church.

D. 14. Mediating pastors, and founders, hath God made for his people.

D. 15. God vouchsafeth his own name and dignity to them whom he makes ministers of good to his Church. Pastor, stone, &c.

3. Now followeth Josephs blessing amplified in the particulars of that fruitfulness before mentioned. Ver. 25. 26. In this amplification of Josephs blessing we have to note,

1. The principle, or author of blessing thus spoken of here, From the God of thy father, even he shall help thee, and the almighty even he shall bless thee. Even my God hath helped thee and he shall bless thee, Sept. The word of the God of thy father shall be for thy help, and the almighty shall bless thee, Onkel. Cald. About this, all readings do mostly agree.

1. The connection here is by a preposition וְעַד From, or by God; concerning which the quere is, unto what it must be joined, some connect it to the immediate foregoing words, The shepherd and stone of Israel, even by the God, &c. But having given you this resolution of the whole bequeathment.

2. The blessing proposed. Ver. 22.

2. The consideration supposed in Josephs own person, upon whose account the blessing cometh on his seed. Ver. 23. 24.

3. The blessing amplified in these two following verses, the two former seem to me conveniently to come in by parenthesis, wherein is declared the reason of such a blessing on Josephs seed, & that being done, now he proceeds to speak farther of the blessing, so that the connection seems most reasonable between the proposition of the blessing verse. 22. And the amplification, verse 25. to this purpose, Joseph is a fruitful bough, &c. From the God, &c.

2. The cause of this blessing connected, set out by two titles.

1. The God of thy father, El.

2. Schaddai the alfficient or almighty, so that three things concur to make up the excellency of this cause,

1. The very being and nature of God, even his Godhead, the cause of all causes. The word, &c. Cald.

2. The alfficiency, or might, of God which exceeds the compass of created understanding, and must be an unexpressable principle of blessing.

3. The covenanted love and respect of God to his creature whom he blesteth, carried in that explication, the God of thy father, and therefore thy God, all these declare a full cause of blessing.

3. The emanation of the power of this cause expressed, even he will help, and he will bless thee, two acts are joined to express the force which God giveth out for the good of Josephs posterity.

1. He will help, that is, at all need, either to defend against annoyances, or offend enemies that oppose, this is future and respects Josephs posterity.

2. He will bless thee: that is beside help, he will give in all good, that may tend to the blessednes of them, his blessing is effective of all good, what-soever he promisseth.

2. In this amplification the blessing itself in its nature and extent is here set forth, and that,

1. Generally, he shall bless thee, and this is an effectual working of good unto them.

2. Specially, in the particulars of it. Which are these.

1. The blessings of heaven above, Sept. same. Of the dew which descendeth from heaven above. Cald. This takes in the precious things of heaven for the dew, and precious fruits brought forth by the sun, &c. Deut. 33. 13. 14. All the blessed influences of heaven.

2. The blessings of the deep which lieth beneath. Of the earth which hath all things, Sept. Which ascend out of the depths of the earth beneath, Onkel. This is expressed by Moses the precious things of the earth, and fulnes thereof, Deut. 33. v. 16. that is all plenty of good desirable; all the wealth of mines, &c. Deut. 33. v. 13. &c.

3. The blessings of the breasts and of the womb, Sept. same. Blessings of thy father and of thy mother, Onkelos.

This notes all the blessings of increase and nourishment; not only of man but of beast; in the multitude of all was a blessing on Gods people, Psal. 144. ver. 12. 13. 14. These are the particulars of blessing the breast full, & womb fruitful, Ver. 25.

Gggg of

3. The excellency of the blessing expressed.

1. In the greatness of it thus. The blessings of thy father do prevail, or have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors.

Prevalled above the blessings of the stable mountain's. Sept. The blessings of thy father shall be added upon the blessings wherewith my fathers blessed me. Onkelos.

Some difference doth arise about the meaning of this passage, upon this ground; was not Gods blessing on Abraham and Isaac, as great, as upon Jacob? How then doth Jacob now make his greater? To solve this doubt, and clear the truth.

1. The preposition rendred above, may be read with: the blessings of thy father are great with the blessings, &c.

2. If it be rendred above, the meaning is by way of addition, a threefold blessing is greater than a double one: now his was added to the fathers.

3. It may have a just sense, in respect of execution, for the blessings of Abraham and Isaac, had their accomplishment in Jacobs. And then the enlargement of the seed grew.

4. Others say, it was greater in respect of the subject. Abraham blessed Isaac only, not Ismael, and Isaac Jacob only, and not Esau, but Jacob blest both of Josephs sons.

The prevalency by way of addition is the most considerable: so we may read either above or with the blessings, &c. the word read progenitors, by the seventy is read mountains by mistake. Thus therefore the excellency of the blessing is set out by the greatness of it.

2. In the duration of it, exprest unto the utmost bounds of the everlasting hills, And with the blessings of the eternal hills. Sept. Which Princes of old have desired. Onkel. The darkness of this expression hath also caused some trouble to interpreters; one word rendred bounds being by some read to the desire of the hills of the world: but it is hard to make good sense that way.

על המאות

The word here used, is derived by some from a root signifying desire, and by others from a root signifying to limit, or bound, this some have waved to cast away the fable of the Rabbins, that Ephraim's Kingdom should be to the ends or bounds of eternal mountains, but there is little from this phrase, to countenance that, for it is an usual expression, to set out the duration of any thing. As of the Covenant of grace. Isaiah, 54. 10. So that these blessings here spoken of were confirmed to eternity, all blessings here bequeathed, and among the rest, spiritual blessings are included, the plain meaning seems to be that the blessings should be continued to the duration of those eternal hills.

4. In this amplification is noted the subject of all this blessing to whom it is applied. And that must be the posterity of Joseph, thus exprest, They shall be on the head of Joseph, and upon the top of the head of him that was separated from his brethren.

Upon the head of his brethren over whom he ruled. Sept. All these blessings shall be upon the head of Joseph. And upon the man who was separated from his brethren. Onkelos. Cald.

1. The subject here is noted, 1. By his name Joseph. Upon the head of Joseph.

2. By his condition, he was separated from his brethren. The name here is metonymical for his seed.

The condition was separation from his brethren, which was personal to him, in respect of his separation from his fathers house, and also his advancement in Egypt among his brethren. The word note's, not one here separated by vow, but by providence, set apart from his brethren; by them in hatred, by God in love and respect: & yet here it is tribual: Also to note the separation of the seed of Joseph, in their preeminence, as eminently it was in Ephraim; who was set above all the tribes, that forsook the house of David; who went usually under the name of Ephraim in the Prophets.

2. The sure existence of the blessing; it shall be upon him, it shall be surely settled on him, none shall frustrate it.

3. The place of eminency, It shall be upon the head, and top of the head; the expression seems to fire with the manner of anointing Kings, all the blessing run's down from top to toe, Ps. 133. 2. It is demanded.

Quest. Is there no spiritual blessing given here?

Answer. Yea doubtles, for 1. God in Covenant is the author of all; and his Covenant is for spirituals. 2. The blessing of Abraham, &c. was here bestowed, and that carried in it spiritual blessing. 3. The blessings in part were of carnal duration, and such were spiritual. 4. Moses adds the good will of him that dwelt in the bush; and that must be spiritual. Deut. 33. 16.

Quest. Were all the temporal blessings made good to Josephs posterity?

Answer. Yea according to the tenor of this additional Covenant of God, which did require their obedience, which when they denied, God turned the blessing into a curse. 2 Kings. 17.

12. Now followeth the twelfth portion bequeathed by Jacob unto Benjamin his youngest Son by Rachel, & annexed thereunto the summary conclusion of the third part of his Testament. So that we have now to consider.

1. The legacy given to Benjamin. V. 27.

2. The summary conclusion of this work. Ver. 28:

1. The former is thus declared, Benjamin the wolf shall ravine, in the Morning he shall eat the prey, and at evening he shall divide the spoil, Benjamin a ravening wolf, early he eateth as yet, and at evening he devides the meat. Sept. In the land of Benjamin shall dwell the majesty of the temple, and in his possession shall be built the sanctuary, morning and evening the priests shall offer oblations and in the evening they shall divide the residue of their portions of the remainders which were sanctified, Onkelos.

The Seventy read something neer the letter: but the Cald. Paraphrase, wide from the text, Herein we have to observe as formerly.

1. The testator, Jacob as a Prophet more than a father as in the rest.

2. The Legatee: Benjamin of whom we may note.

1. His wife by the mother, he was the second Son of Rachel, in the travel with whom she parted with her life; the last child that Jacob had; therefore must be thought dear unto him; as we read before Jacobs life was bound up in him, therefore would he blest him doubles.

2. His name is considerable three wayes. 1. As given by his mother; and she called him Ben-yoni, the son of my sorrow, because she dyed in bearing of him.

2. As given and changed by his father. He called him Benjamin, the son of the right hand which noted the power and strength either prophesied of him, or given to him.

3. As confirmed here by God, under a Prophetical ground as touching his seed, that they should be children of the right hand full of power and strength to ravine as the wolf.

3. The subject itself here intended by the name; and that is the tribe which was to come of him for making up the Church of God; it is but misapplied to concern any single time or person, as some have done; it concerns the whole tribe as to the time of its duration.

3. The legacy itself bequeathed is to be pondered, Wherein two things are given.

1. The disposition of this tribe, Benjamin is a wolf, or the wolf Benjamin.

1. The subject is the posterity of Benjamin, not of one generation but of many, as to their time of standing in their own land.

2. The attribute is metaphorical, noting the disposition of this tribe. He is a wolf, as before Judah was a lion, &c.

Quest. Doth it note a good disposition, or a bad?

Answer. 1. The wolf itself is a ravening creature given to destroy. 2. Yet such beasts of prey are used by God himself to note excellencies in him; as when in point of strength and wrath he likens himself to a Lion and a bear. 3. Both wayes may it be understood here, for it is applicable both to good and bad, wolfish nature may be good, when God sets it against his enemies, the next verse expresth all under the name of blessings.

2. The action unto which this tribe shall be prone is the next thing bequeathed, and that is futable to the nature of a wolf.

1. Generally it is spoken of him, he shall ravine: that is tear and kill and rend and spoil; as the property of that beast is; it

ישר

Gggg 2 is it is cruel and ravenous, and so it asteth against poor creatures.

2. Specially, and that at two seasons noted,

1. In the morning he shall eat the prey.

1. The eater is Benjamin, the wolf, in his posterity.

2. The eating, is devouring what he killeth, feeding on that which is his prey.

3. The season, in the morning early before men be usually stirring; then the wolf eats for himself, so that this noteth the watchfulness and early stirring, to put out its ravenous disposition to destroy; to make this morning the time of Ehud and Saul, his groundles, as some doe: for the morning work concern's every wolf. Judges, 3. 15. 1. Samuel, 11. 6, 7, &c.

2. And at evening he shall divide the spoil.

1. The agent here is still Benjamin, the wolf.

2. The act is the dividing of the spoil, that is probably to his whelps, or young ones: giving them of the spoils.

3. The season also here noted is the evening when wild beasts are going out to spoil: this noteth the incessant action of the wolf morning and evening: to restrain this also to Mordecai and Hester who were of Benjamin, wants sufficient ground, as if the evening tide concerned them only: for evening and morning work did equally belong to this wolf at all times, and therefore no reason is it to allot the morning to one generation of Benjamin and the evening to another; but the wolf tears and eats morning and evening at all times. Esther 8. &c. 9. It notes therefore the incessant action of this tribe in ravaging continually, many instances are of it in several generations, Judg. 20. &c.

Quest. What is the blessing in all this given unto the tribe of Benjamin?

Answ. 1. That a blessing was here bestowed the next verse sheweth. 2. That the warlike success of this tribe against the Churches enemies was a partial blessing is evident. 3. It was a Church wolf here spoken of, therefore not altogether evil. 4. The additional blessing of Moses evidenceth this tribe to be blessed with the presence of Jehovah and his beloved. Deut. 33. 12.

Observe we.

D. 1. Man may have one end and God another in propheticall imposition of names.

D. 2. God hath his wolves in his Church to make use of for his advantage.

D. 3. Gods wolves may ravine sometimes wherethey should not.

D. 5. Tearing, eating, and dividing, are acts of Gods wolves allowed to save his Church.

D. 6. Gods Benjamins may be made his wolves for his own ends. So here. Ver. 27.

2. The conclusion of all these legacies followeth in this summe. V. 28. Wherein

1. He concludes the subjects spoken of in this Testament that no mistake might be in it. All these are the twelve tribes of Israel. Twelve sons of Jacob. Ver. 28. Sept. Cald. 29. Hebr. The meaning of this summary proposition is, that the subject of all these twelve legacies, were not the twelve persons of his sons, but the twelve tribes which were to arise from them.

2. He concludes the general nature of the legacies bequeathed, And this that which their father spake unto them, and blessed them. Sept. and Cald. to same. The relative turn's us to the antecedent, which is all the precedent legacies declared from the third verse, this is the subject of this proposition, the attribute is in two expressions.

1. The matter which Jacob their father spake to them.

2. This was the blessing of Jacob, what ever he spake unto them.

3. He concludes the special nature of these legacies, Every man even according to his blessing he blessed them. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The party acting here is Jacob from God.

2. The act is blessing which is a real effecting good to them.

3. The object is all these twelve sons, as heads of so many tribes.

3. The specialty of the act: according to his blessing, that is, even as he had conveyed to every one to his peculiar portion, so was each tribe blessed. It is questioned,

Quest. How are these called tribes, when yet they were not so distinguished?

Answ. 1. The heads of all the tribes were now surviving. 2. The subject is propheticall, for Jacob speaks of the seed to come, and so prophesieth of them as tribes to be in after time.

Quest. 2. How can all these legacies be called blessings, as to Reuben? &c.

Answ. 1. It is certain that all those were taken within the Church and therefore under blessing. 2. The evils pronounced were by way of chastening not rejection. 3. Such threatening predictions are ordered to bless, and not not to curse, unless unbelief do so make them.

It teacheth us.

D. 6. Dying fathers respectably Prophets, in their departures seek to bless their posterity surviving, Ver. 28.

2. The last part of Jacobs will is his second charge about his burial, it was noted the fourth part of it from Chap. 47. where he began to make his will.

1. He adjoined Joseph as to his burial, Chap. 47.

2. He adjoined Josephs sons, Ch. 48.

3. He blessed all his sons together, Chap. 49. 1, 28.

4. Now he declares in the last place his will about his burial unto all his sons together, Ver. 29, 30, 31, 32. Wherein we have to note,

1. The form of this Testament, which is by way of command, so it is read, And he commanded, or charged them, Onkelos. same. The Seventy read, He blessed them, but amiss. Other part of his Testament he gave by way of prophecy, and promise, but this he gives by way of injunction or command.

1. The authority, is parental, charging

2. The subjects are sons charged, even all together, Joseph had promised him before, and now Jacob layeth injunction on all; it being filiall piety to obey such a command for burial of parents.

3. The charge is peremptory, yet presumed to be possible by the leave of Pharaoh, and the care of Joseph.

2. The occasion of this Testamental charge, And he said unto them, I am gathered to my people. Onkel. same. I am added. Sept. Wherein note,

1. He foretels his death approaching.

2. He signifieth the issue of it, to be the gathering of him to his own people.

3. He urgeth them hereupon as to his burial.

3. The matter of this Testament, which in summe is his burial, about which he ordereth in faith before he dyed.

1. The work it self, which is inhumation seemly and decent, Bury me. There is no difference in reading: The work is natural, but now intorced by a positive injunction.

2. The company with whom he would lye, with my father; readings agree, these fathers were Abraham and Isaac, as afterward they are named.

3. The place, set out by Jacob several wayes,

1. By the kind of it, a cave, so is it styled by all.

2. By the first owner, Which is in the field of Ephron the Hittite, Sept. and Cald. same. There is no difficulty in the letter; we may note,

1. The continent, wherein the cave was. A field.

1. The owner of it before Abraham, Ephron. Gen. 23. Thus much of the place. Ver. 29.

3. By a more special description of the continent.

1. By the name of the cave and field which did contain it, In the cave which is in the field of Machpelah, which is before Mamre in the land of Canaan. In a double cave, Sept. and Cald. Onk. There is no difference here but in the word Machpelah: which some make a common name, and read a double cave, but others take it for a proper name of the field and cave in it, which seemeth best, here we have then.

1. The name of the place, Machpelah.

2. The situation, that which is before Mamre.

3. The general continent. The land of Canaan.

4. By the purchaser, Which Abraham bought with the field of Ephron the Hittite for a possession of a grave, or burying place. Onkel. to same. Abraham possessed, &c. Sept. This character of it is given. Gen. 23. where the whole matter is related, where are noted,

1. The Purchaser, Abraham.

2. The seller, Ephron.

3. The Purchase, the field forenamed;

4. The end of it, to be for sepulchres, or a burying place, so much of the topography we have. Ver. 30.

5. By those pledges buried there before which were real testimonies of the place.

There they buried Abraham and Sarah his wife, there they buried Isaac and Rebeckah his wife, and there I buried Leah, Onk. same.

They buried Leah, Sept. some add my ancestors buried Abraham;

Gggg 3 &c.

&c. That is supposed. Nothing is here difficult, only it is noted that no where else is mention of the death of Rebekah, & Leah, but here; and this is enough. Ver. 31.

Ver. 32. 6. The place is described, by the publique confirmation of the purchase, the purchase of the field, and of the cave therein was from the sons of Heib. Onk. fame. In the Purchase of the field, &c. Sept. By this Jacob points out the publique confirmation of this bargain of sale, it was all purchased, transacted, and passed over from Ephron to Abraham, in the sight and by the consent and approbation of all the Hittites, or the children of Heib; which was not so well known unto his sons; by all this he describes the place, where his will was to be buried. Ver. 32.

Quest. 1. Why doth Jacob make so large a description of the place?

Ans. 1. His sons at least most of them knew not the place. 2. They knew not so well the right and title that Jacob had unto it. 3. Writings of conveyance were not then in use, therefore it was needfull by tradition to make known legal rights to posterity. Other fables of the son of Eliphaz opposing Jacobs sonnes burying their father, are not worth naming.

Quest. 2. Why doth Jacob charge his sons so much to bury him in this place?

Ans. 1. Something of natural desire might be in it, not sinful. 2. More is carried prophetically in it to the Church in his family to minde them of the promised lad. 3. Under that also his faith of the resurrection with Abraham and Isaac may be here expressed, some instinct of God was doubtles in this matter. It is conjectured by some that these Saints rose with Christ, and went into the holy city, as is recorded. Mat. 27. 53. But that is all together uncertain.

Note we thence.

D. 1. Testamental dispositions from God carry in them commands as well as promises.

D. 2. It is possible for Saints to speak of and settle themselves for dying with chearfullnes.

D. 3. The death of Gods precious ones is but the gathering of them to their people.

D. 4. There have bin prophetical injunctions for burial given by some of Gods Saints.

D. 5. It is parental authority to in-joyn children unto care of due burial.

D. 6. It is needful for some but desirable by all Saints to be buried with their fathers.

D. 7. Place as well as burial may be enjoined by dying parents. V. 29.

D. 8. In bequeathing places for burial it is just to make titles clear, full, living and dying.

D. 9. Civil traffique between Gods Church and the world is allowed of God. Ver. 30.

D. 10. Husbands and wives, with parents and children lye down together in their graves.

D. 11. It is desirable to lye down in the grave with Abraham, and Isaac in their hope. Ver. 31.

D. 12. Publique confirmations of sales among men is the way to clear upright. Ver. 32.

2. The next head in this Chapter observed is the finishing of Jacobs life, next to his last will. Ver. 33. Wherein are four particulars.

1. Jacobs finishing his will, And Jacob made an end of commanding his sons. — Sept. and Cald. fame. Now he had made an end of his work; shutting up his will with Gods.

2. Jacobs preparation to dye, And he gathered up his feet into the bed; Onkelos. fame. — Lifting up his feet, &c. It is an exprellion of a man going to bed for rest after his work done, so did Jacob willingly go to dye, no more is in this, but a discovery of his readiness to dye; so he disposed himself sweetly.

3. Jacobs decease, And he yielded up the ghost. — And he failed away, Sept. and Cald. id est id est. Sept. the same word is used to set out Abrahams death. Gen. 25. 8. It notes a sweet expiration, without trouble and terror; it is a willing yeelding, not a tearing of the life away.

4. Jacobs state after death, And he was gathered to his people. Onkelos. fame. — He was added, Sept. The same is said of Abraham also; and the same of Ishmael, but not in the same sense. His people were bond children, but these free born children of promise, the Church of the first born. Gal. 4. 22, &c. Rom. 9. 6. 7. Heb. 12. 23.

1. The gatherer God.

3. The

2. The gathered, Jacob.
3. The gathering, it was taking by death.
4. The term, his own people which were living and dwelling with the Lord. 2. Cor. 5. 8.

We conclude.

D. 1. The Saints work is done when their will's are finished in the will of God.

D. 2. The Saints work being done, they sweetly dispose themselves to rest in their beds.

D. 3. In their going to rest they willingly give up their Spirits, they are not torn from them.

D. 4. By yeelding up their Spirits the Saints depart to be peopled with the Lord. Ver. 33.

Here ends the History of the Church unto Jacobs expiration. Which was in the year of the World. 2356. It is continued to the end of Josephs life.

CHAP. L.

The last Testament and death of Jacob being declared from Chapter 47. Ver. 27. Now follow the two other generals in this section. The funeral of Jacob; and the remaining life and death of Joseph, which were the third, and fourth heads in it.

This Chapter containeth these two generals.

1. The funeral of Jacob. Ver. 1. to 13. Wherein,

1. Acts preparatory. Which are these, 1. Josephs natural affection to his dead Father. Ver. 1.

2. His order for embalming him. V. 2.

3. The solemnities of mourning in Egypt. Ver. 3.

4. Josephs intreaty for carrying his Father into Canaan with Pharaohs grant. Ver. 4. 5. 6.

5. Josephs journey from Egypt to Canaan for that purpose with the events. Ver. 7. 11.

2. The act consummatory, which was his interring in the place appointed. Ver. 12. 13.

2. The history of Josephs life and death afterward. Ver. 14. 26.

1. The preparatory acts to Jacobs funeral are five, the first whereof, Josephs natural affection exprest to his dead father.

Ver. 1. And Joseph fell upon his fathers face, and wept upon him, and kissed him. Sept. and Cald. fame. With these Sam. Syr. and Ar. agree onely. Ben. Uzziel. and Targ. Hicciol. tell us of Josephs fitting a place with cedar, where he made Jacobs body to lay, and there burnt sweet odours, with such like fables.

In this preparatory act we have to observe,

1. The term of connection, uniting this act unto the expiration of Jacob: no sooner did Jacob yeeld up his Spirit, but this natural affection breaks out.

2. The matter connected, which is a proposition of a preparatory act toward Jacobs funeral, such affection moveth to great care about it. Here note,

1. The subject of this action, Joseph, no name else is added; yet it cannot be concluded that his other sons did not the like; some say all did, save Simcon and Levi, but nothing expresth them in this kind to be more unnatural than the rest. Here Joseph is onely named, as at least more eminently shewing affection than the rest, or leading in it, the dearest son to the dearest father.

2. The action itself expressing natural affection in three acts.

1. And Joseph fell upon his fathers face: this is an effect of strong natural desire and love, which maketh Joseph follow after his beloved father unto death, overcome with desire he even boweth down, and falls upon that face, that he had so much honoured when it was turned toward him alive.

1. The person, A dear son.

2. The posture, falling, caused by the over-working of affection.

3. The object of all, a father, and his pallid face; now become strange to the living, yet desired by a dear son.

2. He wept upon him.

1. The mourner, Joseph a surviving son, and successeur as a patron to Gods Church.

2. The lamented, a father to him. A Patriarch to the Church, and a Prophet by whom God taught them; each of these may provoke teares.

3. The lamentation is by way of weeping, the natural effect of natural affection, expresth itself upon access of evil, in the loss of any that might be a comfort, and access of any fears of evil to come.

3. He kissed him. This is the last act expresth natural affection to his deceased father.

1. The agent is Joseph, a son of love.

2. The object, a father natural and ecclesiastical.

3. The act, is a sweet expresth of love to the body of such a father, now turning to the dust, in all the testimony of a pious heart in a dear son to a dear father, and of a surviving Prophet to a dead one is fully here exhibited.

Quest.

Quest. Did Joseph well in all this? did he not resist Gods will?

Ans. 1. In general, when natural affection is expressed toward the dead, with a respect to the right principle, the right rule of proportion, and the right end to express obedience, it is good and not evil, it is commanded; and the want of it is a sin. 2. All this cannot be denied concerning Joseph but that piety was the rise, Gods word the rule, and glory to God the end. 3. This was not to accuse the providence and will of God in putting an end to his fathers dayes, but to make a right use of it, in being sensible of such strokes, and honouring such whom God would have honoured, yet with such a frame of heart, as willingly to yeeld him up unto God that took him.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. Loss of holy fathers and Prophets from Gods people here justly draweth out sad affections.
- D. 2. The gracious sons of gracious fathers and succeeding Prophets of them departed may bewaile their loss.
- D. 3. Piety to a deceased father may make a son fall upon his face dead, whom he honoured alive.
- D. 4. A dead face of a gracious father and Prophet may draw reverence from pious sons.
- D. 5. Saints surviving may lament with Gods approbation Saints departed.
- D. 6. Gracious fathers of the Church as they live desired, so they dye lamented by their children.
- D. 7. Natural expressions of love may lawfully be given to dead as well as living.
- D. 8. The kiss of living Joseph to dead Jacob teacheth honour to gracious parents, dead as well as living. Ver. 1.

2. The next preparatory act for Jacobs funeral is Josephs order for embalming him. Ver. 2. Wherein we have to note,

1. Josephs command, wherein occur

Ver. 2.

1. The authority commanding, Joseph, now in great power under Pharaoh, sit to do it.

2. The parties commanded, set out here, 1. By their relation; his servants, that is such as were under his command and salary, as is to be presumed, therefore at his beck to do his will.

2. By their profession, The Physicians. So it is read by Onkelos, Sam, Syr. and Arab. The Seventy differ from all who read it the buriers, וְהַמְּבַלְמִים a word strange from the original unless embalmers were so called. The word here used cometh from a root signifying to heal. Whence some derive, Rephaim, that notes Giants. As being mighty to bring help, others think it comes from Rapa, the father of them. 1. Chron. 20. 6. But he was not in the time of Moses. Deut. 2. 11. Others make it the name of devils, and damned ghosts. Prov. 21. 16. But the word here is healers, therefore most proper to note physicians, or chirurgeons, whose work this was that it was commanded.

3. The command with the matter of it, He commanded them to imbalm his father; to season him with sweet Spices. Or ointments Onkel &c. read so. The Seventy to bury, &c. The word is to our understandings best rendered, To imbalm, which is done by seasoning or stuffing the body with spices to keep it from putrefaction; at this art the Egyptians were very exact, to preserve bodies for hundreds of years as some report. From them the Jewes took it as conceived. And it was used about their Kings & great men. 2. Chron. 16. 14. 32. 33. So was it done to Christ. John. 19. 39. 40. Read Herodot.

2. The servants obedience, And the physicians embalmed Israel. Onkel, &c. same. The Seventy read, the buriers buried him where,

1. The parties obeying, the physicians commanded.

2. Their obedience, They embalmed Israel, Joseph names him his father, and the physicians are said to embalm Israel; the name that God gave him as a prince.

Quest. Why did Joseph so order them to embalm his father?

Ans. The reason is conceived to be threefold.

1. Natural, which was to keep the body from putrefaction, it being to be carried unto Canaan.

2. Civil, which was to do honour unto Jacob, as the custom was among the great men in Egypt.

3. Spiritual, as guessed by some to be a sign of the resurrection; as for the Egyptians they had no such intent in it; what Joseph might have, it is not gain said, and in after time in the Church, it might be done to signify that bodies were not to be thrown away like beasts, but to look upon them as to be preserved to the resurrection.

D. 1.

D. 1. Natural affection and piety to dead parents will injoin Children to provide for their burial.

D. 2. It is but seemly, that men in place should be more solemn about the burial of renowned parents.

D. 3. Physicians are of ancient use and standing.

D. 4. It is no dishonour for such to serve Princes.

D. 5. Embalming is lawful in the Church, as in the world.

D. 6. Commands from Superiors are fit to be obeyed.

D. 7. Egyptian Physicians are ready under providence to hono'r Gods Israel.

D. 8. God falleth not short of his word unto his servants, God promised Jacob that Joseph should put his hands on his eyes. Gen. 46. V. 4. Ver. 2.

3 The next preparatory act, is the end of embalming, and other ceremonies acted in Egypt. V. 3. Wherein we may note,

1. The term of completing this embalming and that is thus expressed, And forty dayes were fulfilled for him, for so are fulfilled the dayes of the embalmed. Onkel. same. And they fulfilled forty dayes, for so are numbred the dayes of burial. Sept. Here are two things expressed.

1. The number of dayes wherein he was embalmed, they were forty compleat.

2. The reason of that number, for so was the custom for the embalmed; that moisture might be dried, and the spices fully digested in the bodies to preserve them.

2. The solemnity of the mourning in Egypt here with joined, And the Egyptians wept for him seventy dayes. Onkelos. same. Egypt. Sept. All the difficulty here is about beginning this number of dayes whether from his death or from the end of forty dayes embalming; it is most probable, there were 30 added to these 40, and so the number was made up.

1. The mourners were the Egyptians; strangers to Gods people.

2. The lamented, good Jacob deceased.

3. The lamentation it is expressed by weeping, what kind of sorrow this was as to the life and end of it, we need not much to inquire; it was at least humane, and an outward expression of sympathizing with Joseph.

4. The duration, Seventy dayes, which it seems was according to the funeral solemnities of that nation. Others had other numbers, some seven (as ver. 10.) others nine, others twenty, others 30. These customs civilly considered are not evil. But none of their sacred rites doth Joseph use.

Note hence.

D. 1. Country customs for embalming of dead bodies may be used to the Saints.

D. 2. Humanity will move pagans to mourn with the Church for their deceased.

D. 3. All weepers at funeral solemnities are not like minded. Ver. 3.

4. The next preparative act to Jacobs funeral is Josephs motion to fulfil his fathers will, and hereabout we have to note,

1. The time of it, And the dayes of his weeping were past. Onkel. same. when, &c. Sept. the summe is, that those dayes of mourning according to the custom in Egypt were past.

2. The motion itself, wherein occur.

1. The mediators which he useth in it, And Joseph spake to the house of Pharaoh saying. Onkel. same. To the rulers or mighty men with Pharaoh, Sept. Doubtles, they were such as were neere the King.

Quest. Why used he these?

Ans. 1. His state of mourning might keep him from Pharaoh, as it was a custom. 2. It was more convenient to acquaint Pharaoh by another hand, as he conceived. 3. It concerned some of them to accompany him, whose good will might be thus obtained.

2. The argument of ingaging them to this, If now I have found favour in your eyes, Sept and Cald. same. As if he had sayd, you have seemed to favour me, and now if so indeed, do this for me.

3. The matter trusted to them, to speak unto Pharaoh, which containeth these particulars. Ver. 4.

1. The narration of his fathers charge, My father made me swear, saying, lo I dye. In my grave which I have digged for me in the land of Canaan, there shalt thou bury me. Onkel. same. Before he dyed, Sept. This we read. Gen. 47. 31.

2. His petition. Wherein also occur.

1. His request, And now let me go up, I pray thee, and bury my father. Onk. same.

H h h And

Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

And now going up, I will bury my father, Sept. It is propoſed by way of request to fulfil his fathers will, his digging was preparing his grave.

2. His promiſe, And I will come again, Sept. and Cald. ſame. he declareth his purpoſe to be faithful to Pharaoh, as to his father, having but performed this laſt office.

4. Pharaohs anſwear by way of grant, And Pharaoh ſaid, go up and bury thy father, as he made thee ſwear, Sept. and Cald. ſame.

Ver. 6.

1. The grant in terms deſired.
2. The reaſon, forasmuch as by oath he hath bound thee to it. Ver. 6.

We obſerve.

D. 1. Mourning for the dead muſt ceaſe and care to fulfil their deſires be taken up.

D. 2. Mediators to powers in civil matters the Saints may uſe. Ver. 4.

D. 3. The narration of fathers wills to powers is a reaſonable means to effect them.

D. 4. Saints may dig or prepare their own graves before they dye.

D. 5. It is the deſire of piety in ſons to fulfill the juſt wills of their de-ceaſed fathers. Ver. 5.

D. 6. Lights of nature will grant men to do natural duties, eſpecially when bound by oath. Ver. 6.

Queſt. Why did Chriſt keep the man from burying his father? Mat. 8. ver. 21, 22.

Anſw. 1. He did it not ſimply but upon ſome conſideration. 2. He was a diſciple at that time engaged upon a greater work. 3. It was a petition for delay to Gods work, not ſo much for duty to his father.

5. The laſt preparative aſt unto Jacobs funeral is Joſephs onſet in his journey, to fulfil his fathers will about his burial. V. 7.

11. Wherein we have to conſider,
1. Joſephs motion related in the front, as chief mourner, And Joſeph aſcended to bury his father, Septuag. and Cald. ſame. Herein,

Ver. 7.

1. The term of connection to Pharaohs grant, leave being obtained, Joſeph delayeth not, but with all conveniency ſpeeds in his way.

2. The motion, Joſeph aſcended or went up. As the uſual account was that Canaan lay higher in ſituation than Egypt, He the ſiſt & chief mourner, is noted as leader.

3. The end of this motion, to bury his father as he made him ſwear.

2. The funeral ſociety or company which aſcended with him, ſet out in three ranks,

1. The men of honour that went with him, to ſhew reſpect to the dead and to the living, And there went up with him, all the ſervants of Pharaoh the elders of his houſe, and all the elders of the land of Egypt, Sept. and Cald. ſame. Ver. 7. Herein note,

1. The quality of theſe perſons, they were the ſages of Egypt, the chief men in office to Pharaoh, that might do Jacob moſt honour at this time, Elders, a name here not ſo much of age as of office.

2. The univerſality, all of them; which muſt be underſtood ſynecdochically, for a great many, or ſome of all ſorts of the ſages of Egypt: for ſimply it is not to be underſtood here nor hereafter; ſome muſt be left to manage the affairs of ſtate. Ver. 7.

2. The next ſort attending this funeral are the men of his own kinred, ranked in to two parts. Family and national rulers. Ver. 8.

1. Thoſe of Joſephs family, And all the houſe of Joſeph, that is his ſons and attendants that might be ſpared to go with him.

2. His fathers family expreſſed two ways.

1. By aſſertion, And his brethren, and his fathers houſe, Sept and Cald. ſame, that is all the heads of the tribes of Iſrael, even all the reſt of the ſons of Jacob.

2. By exception, Only their little ones, and their ſtocks, and their herds they left in the land of Goſhen, Sept. & Cald. ſame. within this excepted number muſt be meant ſuch alſo as muſt look to the little ones and the ſtocks. וְהַצִּיּוֹן וְהַבְּרִיָּה Septuag. Ver. 8.

3. The laſt ſort of attendants on this funeral were men of war, And there went up with him both charrets and horſemen, and there was a very great company. The camp, Sept. Cald. ſame. charret ſingular put for plural. Herein two things occur.

1. A ſpecial intimation of one ſort of warlike company, which might be requiſit both for ſafety in the way againſt robbers, ſpoilers, and for honour alſo, to be accompanied with ſuch a militia.

2. A general ſumme of all the funeral attendants, it was a very weighty or great company, take them all together. Ver. 9.

3. The funeral ſolemnity is related which was performed in the way, wherein we may note,

Ver. 9.

1. The ſolemnity aſted, V. 10. Where about ſee,

1. The place of it denoted in theſe, And they came to the threshing floor of Atad, which is beyond Jordan. Sept. and Cald. ſame;

1. The term of their arrival is here mentioned, and that by two expreſſions,

1. By the known name of it, at that time, which was the floor of Atad; only the

Ver. 10.

the difference is whither Atad, be a proper or a common name. In the latter ſome take it as an appellative, and read, to the floor hedged about with thorns, which is made up by a paraphraſe, but is no literal tranſlation, Atad ſignifieth a bramble, whence this conjecture is made, but our Tranſlator's read it as a proper name, which whether to be called from brambles there, or by the name of an owner, it matters not much, onely it was a known place, hither they arrived and here they make a ſtand.

2. It is expreſſed by its ſituation beyond Jordan, which alſo hath begotten ſome diſputes whereabouts in Canaan this place ſhould lye, ſome ſay it was 50. miles in Canaan beyond Mamre, others make it in this ſide Jordan or about it, from the prepoſition uſed; the ambiguity of the name of the place may occaſion this, no article of faith is endangered by it, yet to the letter it ſeem's to be beyond Jordan, and however they might have a ſhorter cut to their journey's end; yet the greatneſs of their company, and other conveniences might induce them to take this way about.

2. The ſolemn aſtion.

1. Performed by the company, And they weiled there with a very great and heavy weiling. Sept. and Cald. ſame.

1. The aſt in external ceremony by the company, they weiled or expreſſed the aſtions of mourners outwardly.

2. The aſt of Joſeph, And he made a mourning for his Father ſeven dayes. Sept. and Cald. ſame.

1. The mourner, Joſeph in chief.

2. The mourning, it was by lamenting his father outwardly, but more ſeriously.

3. The duration was ſeven dayes, this was uſual in Iſrael. Ver. 10.

2. The reſentment of this mourning among the inhabitants, which is here ſet out.
1. By their ſight and obſervation of it, And the inhabitant of the Land the Canaanite ſaw the mourning in the threshing floor of Atad. Inhabitants. Sept. and Cald. ſame. This was their obſervation of it.

2. By their judgment upon it, And they ſaid this is a heavy mourning to the Egyptians. Sept. and Cald. ſame. Wherein.

1. The judges the Canaanites, that knew not much of the matter.

2. The parties judged. All under the name of Egyptians.

3. The judgment, that it was an heavy mourning. Some Targums read, that they lingirt themſelves, &c. It ſeems the greatneſs and ſtrangeness of the ſight did affect them.

3. By impoſition of a new name there-upon Therefore the name of it was called Abel Mizraim, which is beyond Jordan. The mourning of the Egyptians. Sept. and Cald. — At the foord of Jordan as before. Juni.

1. The impoſers, the Canaanite's.
2. The name impoſed: is the mourning of the Egyptians upon Jacobs funeral.
3. The force of this impoſition, to record it unto poſterity.

4. The ſituation of the place new named as before. Ver. 11.

Queſt. 1. Did not Joſeph ill to make ſuch a pompous funeral.

Anſw. 1. In the beſt aſtion ſome miſcarriage might be. 2. Yet here was more than an ordinary work to be done, to make this a memorial unto after ages, concerning Jacob and his ſeed to be intereſted in that land; which an obſcure funeral could not effect. Egypt itſelf now took notice of it.

Queſt. 2. Was it well to take Egyptians to mourn with him?

Anſw. 1. He entertained their civil reſpects without ſin. 2. He had no communion with their ſacred rites.

3. It was needful for ſafety & diſpatch of this work to be ſo accompanied.

Queſt. 3. Why was this name impoſed?

Anſw. 1. Among men greatneſs of aſtions name's places and perſons.
2. With God it was ordered to be monumental to keep in mind Jacob, and his funeral; and his ſleeping in the land of promiſe: as an earneſt of Iſraels right to it, which name was known in the time of Moſes.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Leave obtained of powers that muſt inable, it concerns good ſons to fulfil their Fathers will.

D. 2. Funerals of dead Saints may be hono'ed with the attendance of the Princes of the world. Ver. 7.

D. 3. Natural kinred are proper mourners at the funerals of holy anceſſor's.

D. 4. Funeral duties by ſome to be done, muſt exempt ſuch as are unable. Ver. 8.

D. 5. God moveth powers to afford guards of men, to carry Saints peaceably to their graves.

D. 6. Under providence great multitudes may honour the hearſe of his Saints. Ver. 9.

D. 7. Funeral ſolemnities are fitly carried on with mourning and lamentation.

Dddd 2 D. 8

D. 8. Great wailing may become the loss of great Saints.

D. 9. Set times of bemoaning the dead saints may be, & are allowed. Ver. 10.

D. 10. Its natural to men to observe the great lamentations at Saints funerals.

D. 11. Sympathy as well as observation, suites spectators at the funerals of good men.

D. 12. Great actions in mourning, &c. may even give name to places where performed.

D. 13. God can make monuments of mercies by the very names that men impose on them.

D. 14. God will keep up the memorial of strangers kindness to his saints, with his own mercies. Ver. 11.

2. After all these funeral preparations followeth the actual interring or burial of good old Jacob, Ver. 12, 13. Wherein we have related,

Ver. 12. 1. A general discovery of it; And his sons did unto him so, even as he commanded them. Sept. and Cald. same. Ver. 12.

1. The term of connection joined his burial to the former preparations.

2. The subjects to whom this work is attributed, are Jacob's twelve sons.

3. The work here spoken of them generally is, that they exactly performed their fathers command as to his burial; which is emphatically expressed, they did so, even as he commanded them, performing his will precisely in every point, as it was declared to them, Chap. 49. 29.

2. A special discovery of his work, Ver. 13.

Ver. 13. 1. The subjects here spoken of are the same, Jacobs own sons.

2. The special work here related is twofold,

1. They carried him into the land of Canaan, Septua. and Cald. same. As to the greatest of their journey, it is presumed in some charact. And when they came near the place of burial, they might bear him in their arms, or on their shoulders. Several are the fables of the Rabbins, concerning the opposition of Esau to his burial: and of the ordering of his twelve sons, three to East, and three to West side, &c. And excepting Joseph and Levi, and in their stead appointing Ephraim and Manasse. But these are vain conjectures: No doubt but that there were many circumstances about this work not reported, ted, the Spirit thought it enough to declare the thing done; they carried him into the land of Canaan, to the place appointed by his will.

2. The last work is reported, And they buried him in the cave, &c. double cave, Sept. and Cald. Herein are recorded,

1. The work, They buried him, they laid him in his grave, as the word expresseth.

2. The place, here again described,

1. From its nature, A cave.

2. By its continent, The field of Machpelah.

3. By its purchaser, Which Abraham bought with the field for a possession of a burying place.

4. By the seller of it, of Ephron the Hittite.

5. By the situation of it, Which was before Mamre, of which we had mention several times before, so the letter is not hard to be understood, Ver. 13.

1. Quest. How can this be reconciled with that which is reported by Stephen, as if Jacob were buried in Sichem, Acts 7. 16.

Ans. Answer hath bin returned to this, Chap. 23. 18. The distinguishing of the subjects, and the pointing of the sentences, may give a fit sense to understand these without contradictions.

1. It is certain, Abraham bought a cave and field near Hebron, of the Hittites, Chap. 23.

2. It is certain, Jacob bought a parcel of land in Sichem, there to build an Altar, Chap. 33.

3. It is certain, these cannot be the same.

4. It is certain, Jacob was buried in the cave of Machpelah, as here recorded, Now Stephen is thought to assert him buried in Sichem, which I suppose he did not. Some labour to solve it by acknowledging a slip in Stephens memory, not in Lukes relation; but I see no necessity to grant that. The shortness of the history in his speech begets this obscurity, which by observing the true history in the Old Testament, and distinguishing the particulars in Lukes relation, may be better cleared, As,

1. That Stephen here joineth Jacob and all the Fathers together in their descent into Egypt and in dying there, Acts 7. 15.

2. That after this very briefly he describes their burial, in one Verse, and speaks no more of them, but makes his next step, to Moses: Now then distinguish the subjects, in the 16. Verse, thus, That after Jacob and the Fathers were dead.

1. Some were carried to Sichem, that is to be buried there: so was Joseph, Joshua 24. 32.

2. Some

2. Some were laid in the sepulchre which Abraham bought for a summe of mony, so was Jacob and others: in the cave of Machpelah.

3. Let there be here a comma, to distinguish from what followeth; for Abraham bought none of the sons of Emor; and read (וְהָאֲבֹתָיִם) præter, or ultra, and understand the article (וְ) which in such short speeches is frequent, then it runs, there were some of the fathers laid in the sepulchre, which Abraham purchased, besides that of the sons of Emor, the father of Sichem, that is, besides that which Jacob did buy of them.

2. Quest. What is the Law about burying places, must men be buried in the fields only?

Ans. 1. It is certain that in fields and caves, and gardens, the fathers of old did lay their dead, so was Christ buried, John. 19. v. 41. 42. 2. Some nations afterward made lawes backt with penalties not to bury within their cities, as unwholsom. 3. After-times, subject to superstition, found out holy turf and places to bequeath their dead unto, but this was wicked. 4. God forbids no place merely of itself but as mens actions may abuse them, & therefore Churches or Churchyards are not prohibited in themselves, yet surely to avoid superstition and to preserve health, which is the law of nature; better it were to have burying places more remote.

It instruct's us.

D. 1. Interment after funeral preparations is due to deceased Ancestors.

D. 2. It is piety in children to observe the lawful commands of deceased parents, and much more the necessary counsels of them.

D. 3. All pains are added to piety for making good the wills of parents. Ver. 12.

D. 4. The Land of promise as it is the desire of the dying so it is the labour of living Saints to reach to.

D. 5. The last act of piety from children to parents though the saddest, is burial.

D. 6. Repeated characters of place and duty observed by the Spirit, is to point out something for faith & obedience.

D. 7. The life and death and burial of Jacobs is honorable with men, and ordered by God to their desire and comfort. Ver. 13.

2. The next general of the Chapter is the history of the life and death of Joseph who survived his father, wherein several things occur touching the fate of the Church and him in the remaining compass of his time. Wherein we have to note,

1. Their return from Canaan. Ver. 14.

2. The events following of two sorts.

1. Such as concerned the Church, which were transactions between Joseph and his brethren. Ver. 15. 21.

2. Such as concerned Joseph. V. 22. 26.

1. The history of their return is short and plain. And Joseph returned into Egypt, Ver. 14. he and his brethren, and all that went up with him to bury his father, after he had buried his father. Onkel. same. The last sentence. After, &c. the Seventy want. Other readings agree mostly with the Hebrew. Herein note,

1. The parties returning.

1. Joseph.

2. His brethren.

3. The retinue that went with him.

4. The time, after Jacob was buried, there is no difficulty in the letter: only some queries may be made.

2. The return, these all came back, the funeral being past.

Quest. 1. Why did Joseph return to Egypt?

Answer. 1. His office required it. 2. His promise bound him to it. 3. His time was yet to serve God and preserve his Church in Egypt.

Quest. 2. Why did his brethren return?

Answer. 1. Not by intreaty or force from their brother, as Josephus. 2. They left their own families in Egypt. 3. The time was not yet come of their affliction and deliverance; God so ordered it.

Learn we.

D. 1. Parentall duties being performed by children it is just to return unto acting of office, and promise.

D. 2. Family-charges must be regarded to return unto after necessary avocations.

D. 3. The Church must return and abide in Egypt untill the time of Gods call out of it. Ver. 14.

2. The

2. The events in Egypt are now considerable which are two generally noted.

1. The passage between Joseph and his brethren, wherein occurs to observation.

1. The brethrens proposal unto Joseph. Whereabout we may observe,

1. The occasion moving them thereunto, which was twofold.

Ver. 15.

1. The sense of their fathers death, And the brethren of Joseph saw, that their father was dead. Sept. and Cald. same.

— This occasioned new fears, because they thought, the surviving father might obtain favour for them, this moveth them to the following address.

2. Their own jealous conjectures drawn from their own guilt, And they said perhaps Joseph will hate us, and returning he will return to us all the evil which we have rewarded him, or brought upon him causelessly. — Least Joseph remember evil against us, and as recompence return us all the evils, which we have shewed unto him. Cald. Onkel. — All this is the conjecture of their own jealousy, their guilt suggesting such thoughts.

1. Their concession, that they had offered great evil to Joseph without cause.

2. Their suspicion of retaliation from him.

3. Their communication among themselves, thus they parlied and concluded, Ver. 15.

2. The address which they make unto him, which is two ways also described.

1. By a messenger, wherein we have to note.

1. Their presentment of their desire to him, and that,

1. Upon a pretended command from their father, whereabout we may note.

Ver. 16.

1. The mission of a messenger. And they commanded (one or some) to Joseph saying. Onkel. same. — And they commanding said to Joseph, Sept. mentioning no messenger. This is conceived safely, to be a charge given to a messenger, one or more to shew to Joseph.

2. the message given in charge to say thus; thy father, &c. which doth respect.

Ver. 17.

1. A request from his father, pretended before his death, Thy father did command before he dyed, saying, thus shall ye say to Joseph, I pray thee forgive now the trespasses of thy brethren, and their sin; for they rewarded thee evil. Onkel. same. — Forgive them their unrighteousness and their sin, because they shewed evil things against thee. Sept. Herein is suggested.

1. Jacobs command to them.

2. Jacobs request for them, that Joseph would pass by their former wickedness upon his account.

3. The declaration of their undeservings from him, all this is spoken in Jacobs name to ingratiate them with Joseph.

2. A request from themselves; And now we pray thee forgive the trespasses of the servants of the God of thy father. Onkel. same — Take up the iniquities, &c. Sept. 1. The petitioners, themselves by some messenger.

2. Their request, pardon of their former sin against him.

3. The argument used, that they were now the servants of the God of Josephs father, even the true God; wherein they note.

1. Conversion to God.

2. Communion nearer to him in their fathers house which was the Church, this was a working argument, besides the fathers intreaty.

2. Josephs resentment of all this, And Joseph wept when they spake unto him. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The subject, Joseph a tender hearted man.

2. The passion; weeping upon his address.

3. The occasion, this message by way of supplication from their father and themselves, to forgive their former evils. Ver. 16. 17.

Quest. 1. Who were the messengers?

Ans. 1. It is generally thought that this charge was dispatched by messengers, though the word notes only that they charged it to Joseph. 2. If it were by messengers, they are not expressed, therefore not necessary to be known. 3. It is to bold to determine any; but probably some near to them, that might transact with Joseph about this matter.

Quest. 2. Did Jacob leave any such charge?

Answer. 1. It is asserted by them who pretend to be Gods servants. 2. It might be a special charge to them. 3. This hinders not former reconciliation, but notes the restlessness of guilt on the conscience; which makes them desirous of more assurance, for this sin was acted for near forty years past.

From all learn.

D. 1. As the life of parents is the childrens security, so their death the occasion of their fear's.

D. 2. Hatefull dispositions are apt to think others like themselves.

D. 3. Guilt makes wicked men fear retaliation to their sin. Ver. 15.

D. 4. Fearfull offenders are apt to use all means and mediators for their security.

D. 5. Commands of dying parents to transgressing children for their humbling are to be obeyed. V. 16.

D. 6.

We learn.

D. 6. The name of a dead father speaking is a cogent argument to forgive peccant brethren.

D. 7. Childrens supplications in parents name to offended brethren should be moving.

D. 8. Conversion to God is a mighty argument to forgive sinners against us.

D. 9. Gracious spirits, though injured, melt over such returning offenders.

D. 10. Forgiveness is to be desired of brethren offended, after Gods desired. Ver. 17.

2. This supposed, that all the promises were acted by messengers, their next address to Joseph is by themselves, wherein we have,

1. Their deportment to Joseph, two ways;

Ver. 18.

1. By prostration, And his brethren also went, and fell down before him. Onkel. the same. The Seventy leave out this, where we have to note,

1. The time and order of this, it was after way had bin made by messengers in declaring their fathers request, with their own.

2. The parties acting this, reported, his guilty brethren, whose hearts would not suffer them to be quiet.

3. The action reported.

1. Access unto him.

2. Prostration before him.

1. A demonstration of themselves in their very inward thoughts and purposes, what they would be in respect of what they were; they had bin enemies and oppressors, but now they would be far otherwise.

2. A submission of themselves far under brethren, to become servants, we are to thee for servants. This is a farther proof of the truth of Gods revelation to him in his dreams: they had at other times ignorantly subjected themselves to him; but now knowingly, when God touched their hearts: and really presenting themselves to be his servants, at his beck to be ruled by him.

Quest. Was not this more than ought to be done?

Ans. 1. It is probable, that they expressed their own fears, in some irregular way of passion. 2. It was just with God so to humble them in respect of their former pride and cruelty. 3. It was faithfulness to Joseph in making good his word to him.

D. 1. Tenderness of heart in the offended, moveth spirits of offenders to humble addresses, Josephs tears boweth the hearts of guilty brethren.

D. 2. Sense of guilt, and fear of wrath, and instinct of grace, will make proud enemies sloop.

D. 3. Passion is apt to make soules excessive in prostrations to men.

D. 4. Ingenuous spirits which have bin causeless enemies, will become willing servants.

D. 5. Providence doth bring to pass its purpose, to make Lords and servants as Godpleaseth. Ver. 18.

2. Now followeth Josephs return to them for removing their fears and quieting their guilty consciences, which he doth these ways.

1. By prohibiting their excessive passion. Ver. 19. And Joseph said unto them, Fear not, for am I instead of God?

For I am Gods, Sept. — For I fear before God, Onkel. In these we have to note some particulars.

1. The replier, offended, yet tender hearted, and reconciled Joseph. Then Joseph, &c.

2. The reply, which is by way of prohibition of their excessive passion and prostration, fear ye not; wherein not only the inward perturbation, but the outward expression, by falling down to prostration, is here restrained; as if he had said, Arise my brethren, why are ye so disturbed, away with your fears, and forbear your humiliations unto me.

3. The reason of this reply, For am I in the place of God? So it is read to the letter interrogatively; to this sense; why fall ye down to me, and are so much afraid of me? Am I God? Can I do you of my self hurt or good; why are ye troubled at my presence? I am not God, I am one of Gods servants as ye are; therefore fear not me after this manner; other readings are positive, I am Gods, or the servant of God as ye are, Worship not me; or I fear God, therefore be ye not afraid of me; but the interrogation is more to the letter. Can we resist Gods will? Cal. Vulg.

Note we.

D. 1. Gracious soules though sorely offended yet are reconcilable as God will's them. D. 2.

D. 2. Reconciled Spirits labour to remove fears and jealousies and perturbations from their offenders.

D. 3. Gracious souls dare not take Gods place or glory from him.

D. 4. Consideration of being Gods servants is forcible to keep from hurting fellow servants. Ver. 19.

2. He labours to quiet them by proposing the various ends of God and them, and letting them see that Gods purpose took place. Ver. 20. The whole comprehends a double proposition.

Ver. 20. 1. Of his brethren end in using him so cruelly, and selling him into Egypt, And ye, ye thought or meant against me evil. Onk. same. — Ye consulted evil things against me, Sept. — Herein he upbraids them not, only he minds them that their end was evil in dealing with him, even to seek his destruction; and therefore it must be confessed, that all their works were evil and sinful.

1. The designers his brethren, then sinfully conspiring against him.

2. The designe, to plot evil, mischief and destruction to him, this was their mark.

2. The proposition of Gods end in that wicked designe of theirs, God meant it for good, for to do, according to this day, to live, or keep alive much people. —

Consulted of me for good things, that it should be as at this day, that much people should be nourished, Sept. —

Before God it was ordered for good, &c. Onk. Herein also is observable,

1. The great designer, overpowring this wicked action, God almighty, he concurr's so far as to permit them, to sell him and deal wickedly with him, but their thoughts were not Gods, he is too hard for wicked men in their works to frustrate their designs, and finish his own.

2. The end of Gods designe, was for good to Joseph, to his very brethren, to the Church, and to many other nations, to keep them alive; which must include his own glory.

3. The proof of this, it was experimented now at that very day, they all saw that it was so; and how God brought good out of their evil.

We Learn.

D. 1. In quieting guilty disturbed consciences, it is not amiss to let them see their evils.

D. 2. Opposit ends may be to God and men, in the same works of creatures, good and evil.

D. 3. Evil ends truly denominate mens works to be evil.

D. 4. Good ends do make all actions good, truly directed thereunto.

D. 5. In Gods prerogative alone to make creatures sinners serve his own goodness.

D. 6. Experience sheweth that God brings good out of mens evil, God is justified, but the sinner must be condemned.

D. 7. Gods turning evil to good, may meeken the offended, and quiet offenders upon repentance. Ver. 20.

3. He labours to quiet their spirits, by promise of future alimony and provision for them and theirs, and in making out this observe,

1. His prohibition repeated, And now Ver. 21.

1. His prohibition repeated, And now Ver. 21. fear ye not. Sept. and Onk. same. The sense of this the same as before; only the doubling of it is emphatical, and carrieth more force.

2. His promise, I will nourish you and your little ones. — You and your household or family. Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The ingager, Joseph under God and enabled by him.

2. The ingagement of promise, I will nourish, he undertakes for all their needful provisions.

3. The extent of this, it was to them and their little ones, or their household and families.

3. The historical close of Moses, with this note upon all, And so he comforted them and spake to their heart. Sept. same, —

Spake comfort to their heart. Onkel. He spake those things which were pleasant, and good to them, or that pleased their heart; thus Joseph quiets his disturbed brethren; and so Moses finisheth the transactions between Joseph and his brethren, which was the first event after their return from burying Jacob in Canaan.

Observe hence.

D. 1. Double barr's need to be made against many fears to quiet troubled hearts.

D. 2. To return nourishment for starving is a work of a gracious soul.

D. 3. Under God, gracious men in power power should be free to nourish enemies and their seed.

D. 4. The goodness of the Saints is extensive to many, great and small, as it is with God.

D. 5. It is the duty of good men to be comforters to afflicted souls, and to cheer sad hearts.

D. 6. Such works of grace, are kept for the righteous upon Gods record. Ver. 21.

2. Now followeth the history of providential events unto Joseph, after Jacobs death, unto the period of his own life. Ver. 22. 26. Herein are related unto us.

1. His habitation and term of life Ver. 22.

2. His numerous seed by his two sons. Ver. 23.

3. His presage of his own death, &c. Ver. 24.

4. His adjuring of his brethren for burial. Ver. 25.

5. His end and term of dayes pointed out. Ver. 26.

Ver. 22. 1. The first is thus related, And Joseph dwelt in Egypt, he, and his fathers house, and Joseph lived an hundred and ten years, Sept. and Cald. same. πᾶσα πατρια. The latter hath no difficulty; two things are here reported. The connection of this to his promise.

1. Peaceable habitation of him and the Church of God for about 53 years after Jacobs death; herein note,

1. The subject of this mercy, Joseph with all his & all his fathers house, his brethren and all theirs, who made up the visible Church of God.

2. The privilege or mercy vouchsafed, and that is, a quiet habitation, the word notes sitting, which carrieth rest in it; this the Church had so long after Jacobs death.

3. The place of this habitation, it was in Egypt, a strangeland whither God had brought them, as he foretold to Abraham; and where afterward they were oppressed.

2. The term of Josephs life, he lived 110 years; this is added, to note the duration of the Churches peace, which was 53 years after Jacobs death; for Joseph was 57. at his fathers decease; so that, he ruled in Egypt 80 years; and all that time it fared well with Israel.

Note we.

D. 1. God makes good the promises of peace made by his instruments to his repenting people. From the connection.

D. 2. A quiet habitation is allotted of God to his Church sometimes in the land of strangers.

D. 3. The term of the Churches members continuance is slated by God in their several places.

D. 4. The outward peace of the Church usually departeth with the patrons of it. Ver. 22. Josephs life and Israels peace conterminate.

2. The next thing, is the history of his numerous seed which he saw multiplied in the Church according to Jacobs prophesy. Chap. 48. whereof we have two branches in the text.

1. His seed by Ephraim, And Joseph saw Ver. 23. 1 unto Ephraim sons of the thirys. — To the third generation, Sept. Of Ephraim the third sons, Cald. That is indeed his grand, grand grand - children which was to the fourth generation; so Joseph saw Jacobs blessing on Ephraim.

2. His seed by Manasse, Also the sons of Machir the son of Manasse were born upon Josephs knees. — Were born in the thighs of Joseph, Sept. — Were born whom Joseph nourished, Onk. These were his grand - children, from himself the third generation, but from himself was the fifth generation of Ephraim. So God made good the promise declared by Jacob, even in Josephs dayes. In the former we may note.

1. Joseph, the root.

2. Ephraim, the son.

3. The thirds from him which make 5 descents.

In the latter.

1. Joseph.

2. Manasseh.

3. Machir.

4. His sons, which are but four descents, so that, Ephraim was more fruitful by two.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Unto increase of years God is pleased to make increase of his Church. Connect.

D. 2. God makes good his word to increase the seed of the righteous at his pleasure.

D. 3. According to Gods promise so are the seed of his Church enlarged from their progenitors.

Iiii D. 4.

D. 4. God sometimes maketh men live to see his promise fulfilled which they would not believe.

D. 5. It is natural, and not unbecoming grace, for grand-fathers to tender dearly their offspring. The word notes not only birth, but nurture.

D. 6. From Joseph, Ephraim, and Manasseh is drawn out the line of Gods Church. Ver. 23.

3. The next thing declared here of Joseph is his preface or prophecy; which is here twofold.

Ver. 24. 1. Concerning his own decease, And Joseph said to his brethren, I dye, Sept. and Cald. same.

1. The Prophet is Joseph.

2. The subject to whom, is his brethren, the heads of the families.

3. The prophecy itself, about his own death, I dye; this he might perceive by incroaching infirmities, but more probably, before them felt, he spake of this to prepare them for that which was to follow, and arm them against the consequences of his death, that might befall them: as if he might say, your expectation of comfort is much upon me, but I must die ere long and leave you, therefore rest you not upon me, I must be gone; and alas what should I do here, when God hath finished his work by me, look not to me. I dye.

2. Concerning Gods dealing with Israel after his death, And God visiting will visit you, and will make you go up out of this land, unto the land which he swore to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob: With a visitation will he visit you, &c. Sept. — Remembering he will remember you, &c. Onk. Three great conditions are here prophesied by Joseph concerning Israel.

1. Gods certain visitation of them in Egypt, And God visiting will visit you.

1. The form of words is with reduplication, which notes the certainty and fullness of the event.

2. The matter is visitation, which is twofold.

1. Of judgment and chastening, such as he foretelleth to sinful Israel, and foretold to Abraham about his seed; Exodus. 32. 34. Genesis. 15. 13. This must be here supposed, if not the thing expressed viz. Their visitation by the Egyptian bondage,

2. Of mercy & deliverance out of troubles, so the next words seem to unfold these, so God visits in love. Luke. 1. 68. Both must be here understood.

2. Gods deliverance of them out of Egypt, And will make you go up out of this land. This foretells expressly, their redemption out of Egypt, and from the supposed bondage.

1. Redeemer, God.

2. Redeemed, Israel.

3. Redemption, going up out of Egypt, and from thralldom there.

3. Their instating into the land of promise, Unto the land which he swore, &c. This is the term to which, of their ascent.

1. A land, a portion of inheritance, Canaan.

2. The periphrasis, the land which God by word and oath had given them.

3. The witnesses of this oath, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Genesis. 22. 16. Gen. 26. 3. Gen. 35. 12. This was foretold now 155 years before it was brought about, and exactly so it came to pass.

Learn we.

D. 1. Children-injoyments keep not good soules from minding death. Connect.

D. 2. The death of some eminent persons of the Church hath bin prophetically foretold by them.

D. 3. The death of the best in the Church is declared; to mind others of looking more to God.

D. 4. God hath sufficiently declared that his Church must be under sad visitations.

D. 5. God will not make his Church to be alwayes suffering; but cause them to go up.

D. 6. Gods oath is the sacred seal of his Covenant.

D. 7. Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are Gods witnesses of his engagements to his Church. Ver. 24.

4. The next thing reported of Joseph is his adjuring of his brethren concerning the transportation of his bones with them unto Canaan, when the Lord should make them go up out of Egypt, And Joseph made the sons of Israel to swear, saying, visiting God will visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence. In the visitation wherewith God shall visit you, ye shall also carry up my bones hence with you, Sept. — In remembering God will remember you, &c. Onk. In these we have to note these terms.

1. The party adjuring, Joseph, a ruler, a Prophet, one taught of God to do it.

2, The

2. The parties adjured, the sons of Israel, which were doubtles such of his brethren, that were then alive, as it is certain Levi was, and the other heads of their families in the behalf of them, and their succeeding seed; for it was 155 years afterwards, before this was made good, therefore it did bind posterity.

3. The matter to which they were sworn, and that was, That they should transport and carry his bones with them into Canaan, to be buried there; which accordingly was done, for first, Moses took the bones of Joseph with him upon the account of this oath, Exodus. 13. 19. And secondly, Joshua buried them in Shechem. Joshua. 24. 32.

4. The condition of observing this is Gods visitation of them, to deliver them out of Egypt, visiting God will visit you; and then ye shall carry up my bones with you: if God do not visit you, then are ye free from my oath; but God will surely make you go hence unto the land of promise. I leave my bones as a pledge with you, and at that day, ye shall carry them with you and bury them there in hope.

5. The adjuration itself, He made them to swear unto it, that is, in the name of Jehovah making him witness and judge in the matter agreed on between them. And calling him in to judge, and revenge it, if they should not perform this engagement.

Quest. 1. Why is Joseph so solicitous to have his bones transported to Canaan, were they not as well placed in Egypt?

Ans. 1. He did not this out of any superstitious conceit of an holy land, but in faith he gave command concerning his bones, as the Apostle noteth. Heb. 11. 22. Now nothing can be done in faith but upon Gods foregoing revelation; doubtles therefore he did it by instinct from God. Secondly, he knew the land of promise, and desired with his fathers to have his bones laid there, as heir together with them: this faith suggested to him, upon Gods promise, therefore, he desired to accompany them in hope of the resurrection with them.

Quest. 2. Was it well in him or imitable by us to bind posterity with an oath?

Ans. 1. As to him doubtles it was lawful, for he did it in faith; God had promised Israels return, and with all, the removing of Josephs bones, as an earnest of it; and therefore the engagement of them to do this must needs be lawful. 2. As to us, in those things which God hath either commanded or promised to us and our posterity, such engagements by vows and covenants are lawful and needful; so are we bound to engage our children unto Gods Covenant. 3. As to other matters of civil and mutable nature, it is not safe to lay shares upon ourselves and posterity; great sin may prove to be in it.

Quest. 3. Why did he not injoin the transportation of his bones sooner?

Ans. 1. He knew Gods time of visiting his people, according to what God spake to Abraham: Gen. 15. And therefore faith would not let him hasten sooner. 2. Other reasons might be upon consideration of his station in Egypt: and to gain respect to Israel there. 3. He left his bones as a pledge of Israels return, and therefore ordered them to stay in Egypt as long as they. Scattered and wicked is the Jesuits collection of authority for bones to be carried up and down for reliques, from this example; Joseph commanded his bones to be carried for burial, not to shew them, for superstitious uses.

It inform's us.

D. 1. Vpon Gods visitation of his Church in mercy, it is desireable to be with them in death. Connect.

D. 2. A due swearing in matters just may be required and performed by Gods people. Israel.

D. 3. For waiting upon Gods commands and promises it is fit for holy ancessors to bind posterity by Oath.

D. 4. Faith is the best disposer of a mans bones for a resurrection after death.

D. 5. Faith makes no more haste than Gods word of promise would have it.

D. 6. Faith puts a difference between Egypt and Israel, the world and the Church in life and death. V. 25.

5. The last thing here reported of Joseph is his expiration, after that by faith he had so disposed of his spirit, and of his bones, And Joseph died being a son of 110 years, and they embalmed him, and he was put in an Ark, chest, or coffin in Egypt. Being 110 years old, and they buried him, Sept. — They seasoned him with odours. Cald. where we have these things asserted,

1. Josephs death. And Joseph died, it is sweetly connected to his former disposition of his bones by faith: that being done, he departs in peace, his spirit returning unto God.

2. His

Ver. 26,

2. His age, he was a son of 110 years, that is in the 110th year of his life, 37 years younger than Jacob he died.

3. His embalming, they seasoned his body with odours, as it was done to Jacob before.

4. His intombing for a time, he was put in a chest, ark, or coffin; the fables of the Rabbins, that he was cast into the midst of Nilus; and such other dreames are not worth the naming.

It is enough for us to know what is revealed of this matter plainly. All this was 155 years before Israels coming out of Egypt. Before Moses was born 75. After the flood, 712 years, in the year of creation, 2368, or 69, as some calculate.

We conclude.

D. 1. Faiths disposition of mans bones, and death insuing are by Gods Spirit fully coupled. From connect.

D. 2. A life of 110 years in faith in a precious time.

D. 3. The oldest beleever must dye, to come unto perfect rest.

D. 4. Bodily perfumes in death are not unbecoming gractous perfumes in life.

D. 5. Egypt may afford to a Saint a coffin to transport him to a better place.

This exposition was finished, April. 3. 1659. being a morning exercise on the Lords Day.

D. 6. Life and death are sweetly ordered by God unto his Saints, for manner, time, and place. Ver. 26.

Thus through mercy we have reached to the end of this first book of Scripture called Genesis, as noting the original or rise of all the creatures, and the works of providence in the world and in the Church, for the space of 2369 years.

1. It is the most ancient history and the first Scripture, that ever was, and enjoined and inspired by God to Moses.

2. It is an infallible history, as to the matters contained in it.

3. It is, though short, yet for that time a full and sufficient rule for faith and manners, declaring,

1. The nature of God.

2. The works of God in creation and redemption.

3. The original state, fall, and repair of man.

4. The gathering of Gods Church from the world of sinners.

5. The promise of the Son of God to be manifested in the flesh.

5. The state of the Covenant of grace to Adam, to Abraham, &c.

4. All the Scriptures of Moses and the Prophets following are but as commentaries more largely upon this; unto the unfolding of which, as God giveth life and abilitie I shall proceed; the Lord make these discoveries saying to his people, and write them on our hearts.

EXODUS. GR. LAT. ENG.

April 10.
1659.

Avyng through mercy dispatched the explication of the first Book of Scripture, which contained the History of the original and propagation of the Church for the space of 2369 years, we shall now go on, following the steps of the Spirit in his succeeding History of Gods providence to his Church, as it is recorded in the second Book of sacred Scripture, which discovereth eminent events for the space of 142 years from the death of Joseph: which is made apparent by this calculation.

1. From Josephs death to the birth of Moses are conceived to passe, 60 years.

2. From the birth of Moses to Israels going out of Egypt, 81 years.

3. From Israels egress to the setting up of the Tabernacle, 1 year. The whole make up 142. Within this compasse of time, the whole Book of Leviticus and some part of Numbers are comprehended, as also of Deuteronomy.

About this Book generally I shall premise.

1. The Author to be Gods own Spirit, and the Penman Moses, which Christ owneth, Mark. 12. 26.

2. The name or title inscribed, according to the Hebrew to be the two first words of the Book, These the names. But by the Greek, which Lat. and Engl. and others follow, to be EXODUS, signifying the egress of Israel out of Egypt. This being the main contents of the first part of the Book.

3. The scope to be a good testimony of Gods faithfulness in all his promises to Adam and to Abraham, about the meanes of restoring sinners, and that fitted to a double use.

1. To give a sufficient revelation at that time concerning the way of saving sinners, by the onely meanes of reconciliation, the son of God comming in the flesh, suffering, dying and rising, that they then might believe.

2. To be a standing witnes of Gods grace in Christ, to save sinners, when he should come into the flesh, that the Church might know unto the end of the world, that Moses wrote of Christ. And together with this to let all ages know, the various issues; either of believing, or refusing and tempting God in Christ; that he may be glorified in all.

4. The contents or matter of this book to be an history partly of things acted and done by God to Israel, and by them to him; partly of doctrine, which then God delivered to them, which was in summe the additional Covenant, given to that of promise formerly made to Adam and to Abraham. So filed, Gal. 3. 19.

5. The distribution or analysis of the whole book into its parts to be thus.

1. The most general heads or parts are two.

1. The history of things acted from Chap. 1. to Chap. 19.

2. The history of doctrine and discipline settled by God in his Church, from Ch. 19. to the end. In the former head are considered,

1. The History of events before Israels egress from Egypt, from Chap. 1. to 12.

2. The history of their departure, Chap. 12.

3. The history of events after that egress, Chap. 13, 14.

In the first of these we have to consider,

1. The occasion of this egress recorded, Chap. 1.

2. The preparatory acts of God hereunto.

1. Raising instruments, Ch. 2, 3, 4.

2. Sending them about the work, and that.

1. In speaking Gods mind.

1. To Israel, Ch. 4, 29.

2. To Pharaoh, Ch. 5.

3. To Israel again Ch. 6, 7.

2. In working miracles of two sorts,

1. Of strange effects to confirm their message only,

Chap. 7, 8, 13.

2. Of strange judgments to punish obstinacy also from

Ch. 7, v. 14. to the end of the 11th Ch. and part of the 12th.

K k k k

The

The other two heads of historical facts I shall subdivide when I come to them & so also the general history of doctrine.

Now to take up the first head noted, which is the occasion of Israels deliverance from Egypt, this is related in the first Chapter.

Herein two things occur, which make up the occasion of Gods visiting them.

1. Gods blessing on them to increase, Ver. 1, 7.
2. The Egyptians envy at their good, Ver. 8, &c.

CHAP. I.

There are therefore of this first Chapter these two general parts,

1. Gods goodness in Israels increase, Ver. 1, 7.
2. The Egyptians malice upon this account, Ver. 8.

In the first, we have further to consider,

1. The connection between this Book and the former, it is a copulative term, which ours with others read as continuative, Now these are, &c. Yet others read it copulative, And these are the names, &c. So that plainly this History is continued and coupled to the former, that we may see though Joseph was dead God lived, yea and the Church lived, in which now appeared the wonderful care of God.

Quest. How long was this book written after the former?

Ans. 1. There is no expresse certainty as to point of time when the first Book was written or when the second. 2. This is certain, seeing this is an history of things done, it must needs be written after all those things acted, and therefore after the rearing of the Tabernacle, Cha. 40. 3. The term of connection unites not so much the times immediately as the matter, wherein the Spirit proceed's to declare the mind of God concerning his Church.

2. The matter connected, and that is a narration of three things.

1. The names and the number of the seed of Israel, at their coming into Egypt, Ver. 1, 5.

2. The death of all those chief heads of the families of Israel, Ver. 6.

3. The exceeding increase of the seed, Ver. 7.

Ver. 2.

1. The first is thus expressed, These are the names of the sons of Israel, which came into Egypt, every man and his house came with Jacob, &c. Ver. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Onkelos the same. Sept. read, For out of Jacobs thigh, Ver. 5. All the souls coming from Jacob, and again in the number they differ, for 70 noting 75. All redings; Samaritan, Syriak, Arabik do agree in names and number, only the Septuag. excepted. Herein note,

1. The history of the first entrance of Israel to sojourn in Egypt, wherein we have related.

1. The access into Egypt.

2. The names generally expressed; Ver. 1.

3. The names specially expressed, Ver. 2, 3, 4. And that in this order, Leahs children in the first place, one of Rachels in the next; the children of the Handmaids in the last.

Quest. Why are the names of these sons so often mentioned?

Ans. 1. To shew the small beginnings of the Church. 2. To point out the Church, which God gathered. 3. To discover Gods performance of promise to Abraham, &c.

Quest. Why are those names so variously recorded in several places?

Ans. The method is arbitrary to Gods Spirit.

4. We have the number of them that came in, and were in Egypt, at that time of his seed, expressed Ver. 5. Wherein are reported,

1. The proposition of the number; And all the souls which came out of the thigh of Jacob were 70 souls, Onkelos the same, Sep. 75. but mistaking, unless made up (as they might mean) another way, vid. Gen. 46.

2. The proof of this, that there were so many, by Josephs being already in Egypt, and adding him and his, And Joseph was in Egypt. The Sept. put this before. The Caldee of Onkel. reads there were 70 souls with Joseph, who was in Egypt. That is, Joseph and his made up those that came out of Jacobs thigh 70. besides his other retinue.

As to the doubt raised, Act. 7. v. 14. it was answered, Gen. 46. that it might fall from him according to the translation then in use, which was the Sep. but they relate the number other wise, Deuter. 10. v. 22.

Learn hence.

D. 2. God doth not onely begin but continue revelations of his act & will to his Churches edifying.

D. 2. It is the mind of Gods Spirit in his history that men should know the names of the place of his visible Church, Ver. 1.

D. 3. The line of Jacob is recorded by God to be the visible Church that he owned

D. 4. In numbering names of the Churches eminent members the method

method of Gods Spirit is arbitrary, Ver. 2, 3, 4.

D. 5. Gods will is, in the history of his Church, to shew its beginnings to be small.

D. 6. The thigh is hieroglyphical as to the propagation of the Church in Jacob and in Christ, Rev. 13.

D. 7. The Spirits record makes known the Church to sojourn and prosper in strange places.

D. 8. God provides a Joseph in Egypt to joine with and cherish his Church there, Ver. 5.

2. The next particular in the first general is the narrative of the death of all the heads of the tribes of Israel, whereupon grew the unminfulness of former good done by Joseph, and them to Egypt, which was the occasion of their future trouble, Ver. 6. And Joseph died, and all his brethren, and all his generation, Septua. Cald. same. Syr. are the same. — All the kindred vulg. Lat. — And the rest of the men of that generation, Ar. to Pers. Here the letter is not difficult. These terms may be noted,

1. The term of connection, knitting this history of the death of these to the former of their number, and entrance into Egypt; not as if they all died so soon as they came there, for Joseph lived 110 years, and was 80 years Ruler in Egypt, many events there were within this space, which are not here recorded, it seemeth good therefore to Gods Spirit to contract the history, and passe from relating their lives, unto their death. All things are not written that were done.

2. The matter here connected, which is an historical proposition of the Patriarchs decease. Wherein,

1. The subject spoken of, is threefold, 1. Joseph, he that was that shepherd, and the very stay, and instrumental sustentation of the Church in Egypt; neither is he put here in the first place because he died first of all; for that is uncertain, neither is it revealed of any but onely of Levi, that he lived longer than Joseph. Exod. 6. ver. 16. compare the number of their years; but this order note's the taking away of the most eminent of them, & therefore is he first named.

2. All his brethren, that is, the other 11 sons of Jacob, these doubles were under him great stayes, and guides unto their families, and the Church of God among them, and therefore the loss of them not small.

3. All that generation, that is, all the men, or people, or souls of that generation or age; so that a new generation sprang up, that knew not the works of God, nor the goodness of Joseph to Egypt. והנה here in the Hebrew signifieth not kindred but an age or generation. Vatab. Israelites and Egyptians.

2. The matter spoken of all these, is their death or expiration that they were all gone out of the world; both all the people in Israel, and all in Egypt, who knew the works of providence in the former age.

Quest. Why doth Moses mention their death here?

Ans. 1. To note that the affliction befall not Israel in those dayes. 2. To exalt the goodness of God, who preserved and multiplied his Church, when they were not. 3. To set out the occasion of the future perfection, as is after hinted. Ver. 8.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. It is no true consequence to inferre, things were not done, because not written in Scripture. Many things are omitted in sacred history.

D. 2. The comforts and sorrowes, gains and losses of the Church are knit together by God.

D. 3. In order to succeeding afflictions God takes away the instruments of his Churches comforts.

D. 4. Dearest relations can not keepe one another alive, providence hath sett their term.

D. 5. Generations are mortal as well as persons.

D. 6. Better generations are taken away by God sometimes, and worse do follow. Ver. 6.

3. The next particular is the narrative of Gods blessing in the increase of his Church notwithstanding of decease of all those heads, And the sons of Israel were fruitful, and increased abundantly, and multiplied, and waxed mighty in excess, and the land was filled with them. Ver. 7. Caldee Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same.

grew, were multiplied, made abundant, prevailed very much, very much, and the land multiplied them, Sept. Herein the Spirit giveth an account of the Churches state under Gods blessing, when former instruments of good were taken away, where we may note.

1. The connection between the former event and this, the death of the fathers, and the increase of the children; God rich one to the other in his order; but between these were many intervening events.
Kkkk 2 tieth

2. The matter here coupled in the method of this history, which was the wonderful increase of the Church; wherein we have.

1. The subject spoken of, The sons or children of Israel. Which were the offspring of all those fathers that were dead, and those of another generation.

2. The attribute spoken of them twofold.

1. The miraculous increase of them, whereabout we have to observe.

1. The time of this event, and thereof.

1. The compass of it, not above 250 years.

2. The point of it, when the fathers were dead, and so, much hope of posterity taken away.

2. The event itself, set out in 4. terms.

פרו

1. They were fruitful, that is blessed with the fruit of the womb; they were not barren, but made very fruitful.

שרצו

2. They increased abundantly, the word notes an abundant issue, some say such as of fish; but another word is used for that. Gen. 48. 16. there it is expressed by דגה.

רכבו

3. They were multiplied, that is, by the blessing of this fruitfulness, they grew into multitudes.

יעצמו

במאד

מאד

4. They were strong, exceedingly, exceedingly; this adds to their former number, that they were not only many but very strong; so as afterward we read they were formidable unto the Egyptians. Ver. 9.

ותמלא

הארץ

אתם

2. The demonstration of this increase, The land was filled with them. Some say Goshen, but the land seemeth to take in more. This made it apparent, that they were wonderfully increased; the land of Goshen could not now hold them, therefore they were spread over all Egypt. The 70 read, the land multiplied them, by a metaphor, as if God made the enemies land to increase his Church; but indeed, God increased them, and the land was filled with them.

Quest. What was this increase of them?

Ans. In short, it was from 70 persons to an army of fighting men 600000 besides women and children. Ex. 12. 37.

Quest. How was this done of one family in such a time?

Ans. 1. It was no ordinary increase by the course of nature, however some say, that it was usual for women in Egypt, to bring 4 or 5 at a burden; this is rashly presumed by them, but not asserted by God. 2. It was doubtless brought about by the almighty power of God; that one family in the compass of 250 years, should have a greater increase of souls, than all the people of Egypt; for Pharaoh said, the people of the children of Israel are more than we. Ver. 9.

Quest. Why did God so increase them? (though he might speak somewhat hyperbolically.)

Ans. 1. To make good his promise to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Gen. 15. 5. Gen. 22. 17. Gen. 26. 4. Gen. 28. 14. 2. To shew his special providence over his Church. 3. To declare his power above his enemies, who sought to lessen and destroy them.

Hence we observe.

D. 1. The death of fathers cannot hinder Gods increase of the Churches children. They decrease and these increase under God.

D. 2. Gods promises for his Churches increase cannot fall to the ground. He doth fulfil them.

D. 3. Fruitfulness, abundant increase, multiplication excessive, and strength, are the Churches blessing from God.

D. 4. God works wonderfully to fulfil his promise of increasing his people.

D. 5. The land of enemies is made by God a nursery for the increase of his Church.

D. 6. Gods blessing makes his Israel to fill Egypt, the Church to fill the world. Ver. 7.

2. The next general head of this Chapter followeth, containing the history of the Egyptians envy and cruelty against Israel, upon occasion of Gods goodness to them; whereupon God commeth afterward to visit this people, and to deliver them out of the house of bondage.

The Egyptians carriage toward Israel is set forth from ver. 8. to the end, wherein.

1. Their counsels are reported. Ver. 8. 9. 10.

2. Their attempts against them. Ver. 11. 12.

1. In the report of their consultation, note.

1. The mention made of the head and chief, who moved counsels. Ver. 8. And there arose up a new king over Egypt which knew not Joseph. Ver. 8. Another king. Sept. — Who confirmed med not the decrees of Joseph. Onk. All other readings Sam. Syr. an Ar. to fame. In this relation we have also to observe.

1. The term connecting which is rendered by one as an illative, whereof, i. e. because Israel so increased; by some, continuative, now, &c. By some, adversative, but, and by some, copulative, and. So variously is the term rendered. And it may shew the reason of this evil counsel, which is Israels prosperity related before; or the opposition of Egypt to God; he prospered Israel, but these take evil counsel against them. Or copulative, it may be read as well, continuing the order of the history; this will not prejudice the truth reported.

2. The matter here connected is the succession of a great oppressor to Israel, of whom note.

1. His state and office, he was a king over Egypt.

2. His discrimination from others his predecessors, he was a new king, some say of another family, some think he was so siled from his innovated government, and rule over men, which was divers from his predecessors, so it proved to the Israelites. His name is silenced though vainly presumed to be Ramessu or Amophis.

3. His character from his nescience or ignorance. He knew not Joseph. Hercin.

לא ידע

1. The act denied is knowledge, which sometimes signifieth knowledge of sight, sometimes of reason, sometimes acknowledgment in carriage, now this king could not know Joseph by sight, he being dead a generation before; yet might he know him by history, records, and tradition of great works that he had done before, yet here it seemeth to note more practical ignorance, that he regarded not Joseph, nor any thing done by him.

2. The object of nescience, Joseph.

1. Personally taken.

2. Metonymically taken for his works, both to the people of Egypt under God preserving them in famine and to the king of Egypt, setting the fifth of the land for his revenue. And all this while he made no provision by laws or otherwise to provide for his own sons habitation in Egypt; but resolving that himself and they would be joyful there according to Gods appointment. All this was now forgotten.

יקם

4. His erection: He rose up. It is conceived by some, not an ordinary succession but by new ways, assuming the Kingdom, and so ruling. But however, under providence the kingdom was translated now to him; and God had his end also in setting him up to be glorified upon him, as we shall see in the sequel.

Observe wee.

D. 1. Gods blessing on his Church is the cause that worldly rulers consult against it.

D. 2. Blessings from God, and oppositions from worldly powers usually are connected.

D. 3. Changes of kings and governments, may bring changes on the Churches state.

D. 4. New and strange rulers are set up, when new and strange things are to be in the Church.

D. 5. God suffers such to rise up, and orders them to his praise.

D. 6. All Gods goodness by his instruments to the world are apt to be committed to oblivion and ignorance.

D. 7. Ignorance and oblivion of Gods mercies by his Church causeth wicked rulers to persecute them. Ver. 8.

2. The motion made by this new head of the counsel followeth. Wherein note.

1. The proposal. And he said unto Ver. 9. his people. Syr. Cald. fame. — To his nation, Sept. Sam. Ar.

1. The proposer is this new King.

2. The subjects to whom, his people or nation, that is, unto such of them whom he convened into counsel.

3. The proposition, which is by speech as followeth.

2. The reason of this motion, Behold Ver. 9. the people of the sons of Israel are more and mightier than we. Many and strong above us. — מרוב ומאד ורבים מאלה.

Many and mightier. Cald. Sam. Syr. and Ar. to the same purpose. In these this wicked King suggesteth to his people convened, the Church of God a proper object of their envy & enmity, wherein.

1. The manner of suggesting, is by way of malignant pointing out the people. Behold, do ye not see a company of Israelites, that came as poor travellers into the land, and now to what a passe are they come? I pray observe it.

2. The matter suggested, the present prosperity of the Church, for number and for power.

1. The subject pointed out, the people of the sons of Israel, looked upon those whose God is not ours, nor religion ours,

Kkkk 3 nor

עם בני

שראלי

nor customs ours, they are all of Israel, and they have a God of their own.

2. The state and condition of them visible.

1. For number, they are many above us.

2. For strength, they are strong above us.

The parties of the comparison are something controverted, whether it were all the Egyptians, whom they surpassed, or only some province; it is conceived by some, that they were so spoken of, with respect to some part of Egypt; but I suppose this convention wherein the King speaks was general, and the number of 600000 fighting men, which we read went out of Egypt, was a considerable army, besides others that were not numbered, which are conjectured to be no less than 2400000 which together would make a valuable nation. In all which suggestion nothing is offered of any miscarriage of them, or counsels against Egypt, but only their power and their might. Herein God ordered his own cause against Pharaoh. Ver. 9.

3. The counsel itself proposed, Come on, let us deal wisely with them. Onk. same. Let us wisely oppress them, Sept. same, and Syr. as Hebr. Craftily deal with them. Ar. Here

1. The word of Incouragement, Come on, there is no delay, it is high time to be doing with them, seeing they are so much increased. Here the word notes incitation to some undertakings about Israel.

2. The word of counsel, let us deal wisely with them, or against them, this is but a general word, but to take the particular contents, it refers to all those practices undertaken against Israel afterward. The word is often used in the best sense, but here and elsewhere in a bad, for exercising unjust subtilty, craft, treachery, and all outrageous means to oppress and keep them under.

4. The end of this counsel proposed threefold.

1. That they might not multiply any more. Least perhaps they multiply. Sept. and Cald. same. and Syr. & Ar. to the same. They were afraid of their over-running them, therefore they consult to diminish them. This is their end to make the Church but few.

2. That they might not assist enemies in war against Egypt; which they feared without cause. And if it be, when there shall out warre they also be added to our enemies, and fight against us. Sept. and Cald. same. Sam. Syr. and Ar. to the same. Where

1. They suppose warre coming.

2. They suppose Israel, who all this while had bin loyal, would have assisted their enemies, and now they consult to prevent it, but in a very bad way.

3. The last end was, that Israel might not escape out of Egypt. And go up out of the land. Sept. same. Cald. Ar. same. Least they cast us out of the land. Syr. The end here proposed was to keep Israel in everlasting servitude, that at no time they might escape, and go into their promised inheritance.

Quest. Why did God suffer these counsels against Israel?

Ans. 1. His anger was kindled because Israel had joined themselves to Egyptian idols. Ezek. 20. 5. 6. 7. Ezek. 23. 8. 10. 24. 14. 2. He remembered his promise to work about their deliverance by their oppression. 3. It was the way to make them know their sin, and desire to see his promise made good.

Whence we gather.

D. 1. New Kings in the world set up, fall upon new counsells against the Church.

D. 2. Worldly rulers look upon, and point out, the prosperity of the Church as an eyesore to them.

D. 3. God sometimes maketh the prosperity of the Church visible to their enemies. Ver. 9.

D. 4. Wicked powers encourage all under them to set against the Church.

D. 5. Policy and strength are combined in the world to vex Gods people.

D. 6. The designe of worldly wickednes is to keep Gods Church from growing.

D. 7. It is usual with worldly powers to suggest feares of treachery in Gods people.

D. 8. Sinful rulers project and cause warres, and then charge the innocent as fomenters.

D. 9. Worldly powers are solicitous, that Gods Church may not get out of their hands.

D. 10. Usually wicked powers take counsel to oppress, when God resolves to deliver his. Ver. 10.

2. Now followeth the second particular which is the history of those attempts that the Egyptians made upon the children of Israel,

Israel, to oppress and diminish them, these are, 3.

1. Imposition of soar burdens. Ver.

11. 14.

2. Injunction on the midwives to kill the males. Ver. 15. 21.

3. Injunction on all to drown the males. Ver. 22.

1. In the first cruel attempt, after their counsels to vex them with burdens; we have three degrees observable.

1. The imposition of burdens by taxes and tribute, whereabout we have recorded.

1. The Egyptian oppression. Ver. 11. Wherein.

Ver. 11. 1. The burden, And they set over him Princes of Tributes. So it is in the letter.

And he set over them, Masters or overseers of works or work masters, that they might assist them with works. Sept. And they set over them Princes evil doers that they might assist them with their works. Cald. Onk. — Worst of rulers. Syr. — Imposers of works, that they might assist them with their bondage. Ben. Uz. — Princes of tributes. Sam. and Ar. — That they might vex them with bearing. Ar. In this we have to note.

1. The term of connection. And, which some read therefore; the former declareth this to have immediat dependence upon their counsels, they fell immediatly from consulting to acting; or, it sheweth their counsells to be the cause of their cruel actions, they so consulted, and therefore they did it.

2. The matter connected, the present attempt and the rest that follow. In this.

1. The imposers, Pharaoh and his counsellors, the Egyptians.

עליו 2. The subject of imposition, the people of Israel; upon him, or them, it was laid.

שמו 3. The imposition itself, they set tax-masters, or masters of tribute; (the word comes from working) that is such as should rate them and pill them, and wast their substance and livelyhood, cruel horseleaches, like excise men with us; what their rates were is not expressed, but heavy burdens they were. Others understand it of labour.

למנו 4. The end of it, was to assist them, to bring them low, or starve them, that by this means they might lessen them.

Ver. 11. 2. The issue of this burden, And he built cities of treasures for Pharaoh, Pithom and Rahamses. They built strong cities, Sept. Cities of munitions may it be read. And On which is Heliopolis. Sept. but not right. Onkel to the same. In this.

1. The builder was Israel.

בן 2. The burdensome worke, he builded, if this referre to the taxes, he built them by his charge and cost; it is likely also by what followes, by their labours and travels.

3. The worke itself done, two treasure cities or cities of munitions; cities of Tabernacles, vulg. corrupt. Such as were for granaries, and places to keep treasures safe; the names are added Pithom and Rahamses, some call them Tanis and Pelusium. It was not the same Ramesis mentioned. Gen. 47. 11.

4. The masters for whom this was done, for their cruel Lord Pharaoh; so tyrants serve themselves of their poor people. Ver. 11.

2. Gods blessing hereupon manifested to Israel. And as they afflicted him, so he was multiplied, and so he grew. Onkel. same. Ver. 12.

And as they humbled them, by so much the more they were, and grew very strong. Sept.

1. The subject of this blessing, Israel, that people spoken of in singular number.

2. The blessing itself, multiplication and fructification; their seed multiplied under all these oppressions.

3. The measure of the blessing, it was even as they were afflicted; as their burdens grew so did they increase; God would not be behind in mercy, when enemies grew so cruel to them.

4. The author of the blessing, and that is God, for he made good his promise at this time, when men did most oppose it. Pro. 21. 30. Ver. 12.

3. The Egyptians grief hereupon, And they were straitened, or tediously afflicted, because of the Children of Israel. The Egyptians had tribulation, &c. Onkel. The Egyptians were abominated, &c. Septuag.

1. The subject here of this passion were the Egyptians, Pharaoh and the rest.

2. The affection itself, grief, irksomenes, vexation, that tormented them daily.

3. The reason of it, it was upon the prosperity of the Church or children of Israel, whom they so much oppressed, and yet could not suppress them for God made them the more to increase and flourish. They gnashed with their teeth at it, as not able to bear the frustration of that first designe. Ver. 12.

By which we are instructed.

D. 1. Subtil counsells against the Church do shortly bring forth cruel practices.

D. 2. It is the policy of tyrannical persecutors to begin with taxes to oppress.

D. 3. The affliction and grievance of Gods people is the mark of cruel rulers.

D. 4.

D. 4. Persecuting policy, sets most cruel instruments to pursue their purpose.

D. 5. Wicked Tyrants seek to serve themselves upon an innocent people.

D. 6. Under providence the Church is made to build habitations and cities for its persecutors.

D. 7. Gods relief usually followeth unto his upon their oppression by men.

D. 8. God usually observes proportion in blessing, according to the measure of affliction.

D. 9. Gods goodness to his Church is the vexation of sinners to look upon.

D. 10. Persecutors find nothing but grief where they expected joy and triumph. Ver. 12.

Ver. 13. 2. The next burdensome imposition is servitude, taking away the freedom formerly enjoyed; And the Egyptians made the children, or sons, of Israel to serve with cruelty, hardness, or rigour, Onkel. same. καταδουλοῦντες B1a, Sept. Herein also observe,

1. The imposers Egyptians, Pharaoh and all his Counsellors conspiring together.

2. The subject of the imposition, the same children of Israel, the Church of God.

עבד 3. The burden imposed is servitude, bondage, absolute slavery; where no liberty was, but a pure subjection to the lusts and wills of cruel men, to do and suffer whatever they impose upon them.

בפרק 4. The modification of this bondage, it was hard, sharpe, severe, cruel, with rigour, and asperity, as the word noteth; this is the second degree of their burdens, ver. 13.

3. The last is an imposition of all servile and painful labours, which is set out three wayes.

Ver. 14. 1. In general, And they made their lives bitter in hard bondage, Onkel. the same. And they pointed their lives as in travell, with hard works, Sept. here.

1. The imposers, the same Egyptians.

2. The subject, the same sons of Israel.

3. The burden, bitterness of life in service; the fruit of their bondage was service and labour; the property of that service, bitterness; wormwood and gall cannot be more afflicting to tast than this service to their sense. O the bitter in soul, how are they oppressed!

2. In special is this service declared 3 wayes:

1. In mortar or slimy dirt, Onk. and Seventy same. First in making mortar.

2. And in bricks, that is, in making them, in their kilnes, Onkel. and Sept. same. This was hard work, especially when they had no straw.

3. And in all service in the field, Onk. and Sept. same. That is, in all country labour, plowing, digging, delving, carrying burdens, and labouring out their very lives: All country servitude is here meant.

3. In the modification of all, In all their service, which they served, or they made them serve, it was upon them with rigour, Onk. same. All the work whereby they brought them into bondage by violence, Sept.

1. The subject here is Israel.

2. The work is laborious, wherein they were always serving.

3. The manner or kind was bitter, hard, cruel, rigorous, as before. Such burdens, that made them sinke and dye in the fields, and lye without burial, as is related by some: We shall have more of their bitterness discovered in the following history. All this lasted on them for near 100 years: therefore was Egypt called the house of bondage, Exod. 20. 2. and the transjuration, Deut. 4. v. 20. 1 Kings 8. 51. In these is related the first fruit of the counsels, this bitter persecution of them by these burdens, Ver. 14.

Note we.

D. 1. It is the cruel design of persecutors, to make Gods freemen their slaves.

D. 2. Gods frustration of wicked designs will not persuade them to leave them off.

D. 3. Wicked persecutors use the more rigour to those, whom God favoureth. Ver. 13.

D. 4. Violent men delight to make the lives of Gods servants bitter through their bondage. Tsal. 69. Ver. 21.

D. 5. All kinds of slavish works have persecutors laid on the Church to embitter life.

D. 6. Not only travel, but rigorous and cruel labours do persecutors lay on Gods servants.

D. 7.

Ver. 14.

D. 7. God in wisdom suffers wicked men so to oppress his, yet he observeth them.

D. 8. Egyptians furnace is the mirror of cruelty to decipher persecutors. Ver. 14. The expression of their rigour and bitterness is doubled and trebled.

2. The next cruel attempt to oppress Israel and diminish them is made by Pharaohs injunction upon the Midwives to murder all their males in the birth, ver. 15, 21. Herein we have to observe,

1. The Kings order and injunction, ver. 15, 16.

2. The Midwives carriage to this order, ver. 17.

3. Pharaohs charge on them for neglect, ver. 18.

4. The Midwives answer to the charge, ver. 19.

5. The issue of all touching them, & Israel, ver. 20, 21.

In the first of these we have to note,

Ver. 15. 1. The person and power injoining, And the King of Egypt said, Onkel. same. Of the Egyptians, Sept. Of whom in this may be seen.

1. His power, within his confines was arbitrary for life and death, so heatheneth it.

2. His cruelty and bloodthirstiness against babes.

3. His subtilty in contriving this way first; that it might be least visible while under the midwives hands.

Ver. 16. 2. The persons injoyed, set out here two wayes.

1. By their office and relation, The midwives of the Hebrewesses or Hebrew women. Of the Hebrewes. Sept. Of the Jewes. Onkel. We have two terms here considerable.

מלוח 1. That of their office or work, expressed by the Midwives; it is a participle in the Hebr. and not a noun; and it signifieth to make or help one to bring forth, which is properly the midwives worke; an help to bear העובד 2. That of relation; of the Hebrewesses, or Hebrew women, so it is commonly read; but by others, these words are read jointly, Hebrew midwives, or midwives being Hebrewes or Hebrew women, so that in this divers reading a double relation may be insinuated.

1. To the travelling women among the Hebrewes, that they were their midwives.

2. Or to the nation of the Hebrewes that they were Hebrew midwives, women of that nation, who were attending on that service; both may be included: And then the question about the nation to which these women did belong, is answered, that these midwives were by nation Hebrewes; so the more ancient Rabbins did conceive, Josephus and others stile them Egyptian midwives by their nation. The matter is not great of what nation they were, but the greatest reason to me should make them to be Hebrewes, which should usually attend their own nation.

2. By their names and number, Of Ver. 15. which the name of one Shiphrab, and the name of the other Puah or of the second. Sept. and Onk. to the same, and the rest. Two things are considerable in these.

1. Their number, they were but two.

2. Their names Siphrah and Puah recorded to perpetuate their acts.

Quest. Why did the King of Egypt speake to the two only? could they do his exploit, to murder the children of so many thousands?

Answer. 1. It is conceived that he began his attempt by these, meaning to give charge to the rest likewise.

2. It is thought by some, that these were midwives set up in chiefe, and that there was a school or colledge of them, to be instructed and allowed for that work; so there were in other nations, providing for the safety of teeming women, so that by these it is thought the charge might be given to the rest. It is said that some of them wrote books for help in that kind. It is probable that by them he intended the charges should reach farre enough to execute his designe.

Juni. Anal.

That these two should be Jochebed the mother of Moses, and Miriam his sister is a fable of the Rabbins. Targ. Hier. V. 23. Ver. 15.

3. The injunction itself now followeth, wherein these two things occur,

1. The season pointed out for the work, And he said in your making the Hebrewesses to bring forth, and ye shall see them upon the stools. When ye shall midwife the Hebrew women and they are ready to bear, Sept. And shall see in the birth, Onk.

Two expressions here point out the season.

1. The instant of the midwives work, when ye put help to them to bring forth, so the word properly signifyeth, and that is the midwives work or office, in that moment.

2. The moment of their sitting on the stools, which was at the very point of bearing, when also they might discern the sexe. Some difference is in rendering the word. It is but twice used in Scripture, here, where it is rendered, the bearing stools, and Jer. 8. v. 3. Where it is rendered the Posters wheels or molds: by some Jewish expositors, as it is rendered Cardines valve, the folding dores of the womb, which which open to let out the fruit and they suggest a reason; if it should note stools or receptacles of the child when it came forth the midwife could not so soon dispatch it; therefore the work was to be done before it came out, or in its very coming, when the midwife by a pinch might kill and none take knowledge of it, and then also might they discern the sexe, for if it were a male and came night, the face came downward or if a female the face was upward. This was their observation, which if true, it is probable, the soonest opportunity the King would have them take to hide it. But it is certain in and at that time Pharaoh gives charge to have execution done. Vatab.

Ver. 16.

2. The order or charge given by the King to the midwives, If it be a son, then ye shall kill him, or kill ye him, but if it be a daughter then shee shall live. Septuaginta. relieve or save her, Sept. and Onk. The charge is double on a twofold condition.

1. If ye see a son comming kill him.

2. If ye see a daughter let her live. The words are plain.

Quest. Why doth he deal so cruelly with the males?

Anf. 1. There is a fable in Targum. J.B. Uz. that Pharaoh had a dream wherein he saw a pair of scales, & in one ballance the land of Egypt, and in the other a male Lamb; and this Lamb weighed down the land of Egypt; where upon Iambres and Iambres the magicians told him, that there should come a son of Israel that should destroy Egypt, and that hereupon he did it. But we need no fables. 2. The reason is clear, that by the males the seed of Israel was to be propagated, as the stronger sexe, so Satan hath alwayes laid wait to destroy the man-child of the Church, which should preserve it. Revel. 12. v. 3. 4. 5. So Pharaoh is stiled the great Dragon, &c. Ezek. 29. v. 3.

Quest. Why did they save these females?

Anf. 1. They were lesse offensive being the weaker sexe. 2. They served more for their lust to keep them for themselves, they being observed to be fairer than the Egyptian women. This is the bloody and inhuman injunction of Pharaoh, the like whereof was never heard before.

From which we note.

- D. 1. When burdens do not effect tyrants wills on the Church, murders shall.
- D. 2. Cruelty in the first onset seeks to shed blood by subtilty.
- D. 3. Tyrants will make helps for life to be instruments of death; midwives to be murderers.

D. 4. Bloody powers suborn vesther such as be of the Churches line, or strangers to destroy them.

D. 5. The office, work and order of Midwives, is of great use and excellency.

D. 6. The names of good Midwives are recorded for their praise by Gods Spirit. Ver. 15.

D. 7. Subtil tyrants order the best opportunity at first, to hide their cruelty.

D. 8. It is easy for Midwives to be bloody upon such opportunities as they have.

D. 9. It is devilish to set a tender soul upon bloody designs.

D. 10. Satan in all his instruments hath alwayes aimed at the death of Israels males.

D. 11. Cruel destroyers of men reserve the females for their lust.

D. 12. Egypts blood and murders are no lesse exemplary then their burden. Ver. 16.

2. Now followeth the Midwives carriage as to this bloody command of Pharaoh. Ver. 17. And that is eminent in a threefold act.

1. To God, But the Midwives feared Ver. 17. God himself, Sept. same. Feared before God. Onk. All readings agree. Consider here.

1. The subject of this act, the Midwives, the two women named before, upon whom the Kings authority had enjoined that bloody work of destroying the Hebrew males.

2. The object on which this act is terminated, God himself, so it is emphatically expressed; they heard the King what he said, but regarded God. We read of no answear by word returned from them, only the Kings charge upon them, who thought doubtes that his Majesty would have imposed on them a fear of him, that they durst not disobey his word.

3. Their act was fearing, they feared God, which is indeed a comprehensive word, and notes the whole work of religion unto God, both inward and outward; so that, these women in conscienceto God and his commands, kept close to what God commanded; whatever the King enjoined on them, the fear of God kept them from evil.

2. To Pharaoh their acting is observable, And they did not as the King of Egypt spake unto them, or commanded them, Sept. and and Cald. the same, with all the rest. Here was a clear demonstration of the fear of God, in their departing from evil, and denying to sin. Wherein note.

1. The power enforcing them to this great evil, the Kings word. Have not I commanded you? It was a sad trial upon poor women.

2. The resistance of that power by the Midwives; they did not the word and will of the King; they disobeyed him to serve God; and feared not his wrath so much, as God, faith in God raised this feare of him, and that preserved these from doing evil.

3. Their act towards the male children which came under their hand, And they made to live the male children, Sept. the same.

They preserved the males, that is, saved them alive as God sent them into the world. Onkel. so ours.

1. The subject here, the Midwives (commanded to kill.)

2. Their act, they gave life, or made to live, that is, they did all they could to keep alive, whom they were enjoined to stifle and kill.

3. The object, those very male children, which were judged by Pharaoh to destruction.

Observe wee.

D. 1. Tyrants commands are sometimes crossed by Gods good hand.

D. 2. The true fear of God from faith in him, will make weakest creature abstain from sin.

D. 3. The name of the onely God is powerful to support against the word of mightiest Kings.

D. 4. Gods fear will make men disobey Kings, that they may obey God.

D. 5. The fear of God will make souls do good, though commanded by men to do evil.

D. 6. Life preservers discover regard to God, and not bloody injurious life-destroyers.

D. 7. God makes them save life whom men appoint to destroy it.

D. 8. The good hand of God, doth keep the males or best helps of the Churches peace, whom persecutors would kill. Ver. 17.

3. Hereupon followeth the Kings dealing with them. Ver. 18. Wherein these particulars occurre,

1. His summons of them, And the King of Egypt called for the Midwives, Sept. and Onk. &c. the same. Here.

1. The authority, the King who had formerly enjoined them, he likely had heard or saw, that his designe did not take with them.

2. The parties summoned, the Midwives, who were formerly commanded to slaughter and kill the males.

3. The summons itself, which is a call by some messenger to come to him, and give an account of their actions as to his will.

2. His charge, in the matter of these questions, ye have done this thing, Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Ye have made to live the male children, Sept. Ye have reserved. Onk. to the same, others, as if he had said, did not I command you to kill the males? and ye have bin more careful to keep them alive; ye have contemned my command; ye have done this thing.

3. His check, and threatening expostulation in form, why have ye done thus? Is this your obedience to me? shall I bear such affronts from women? Thus he repleth to them scurrelously, having seen that they regarded not his commands.

Whence note.

D. 1. Wicked Kings and Potentates summon out of band all opposers of their lusts to appear.

D. 2. Persecuting powers, charge disobedience to their wicked commands, as a crime.

D. 3. Mighty persecutors question and threaten all that obey them not, with displeasure. Ver. 18.

4. The Midwives answer and defense for themselves, doth novv follow Ver. 19. Wherein marke.

1. Their boldness in replying, And the Midwives said unto Pharaoh, Sept. and Onk. the same, and so the rest. Here,

1. The repliers, the Midwives, poor women, terrified with the presence of a furious King.

2. The person and power to whom they make their defense, Pharaoh, the King of Egypt; in whose power their lives seemed to be.

3. The reply, they boldly speak to him not fearing his wrath; so faith imboldened them.

2. The reason which they urge for defense of their non-execution of the Kings command, which is laid down in 3 portions.

Ver. 19.

1. Because the Hebrew women are not as the Egyptian women, Sept. and Onk. same, Jewish. Wherein.

1. They transcribe the non-execution of the Kings commands upon the subjects, with whom they were to work.

2. On the different constitutions which God set between the Hebrew women and the Egyptian; and doubles God did make a signal difference between them, in this sad time of persecution; which appears in the next head.

Ver. 19.

2. Because they are lively, Hebr. Sam. Onk. the same. This clause is left out by the Sept. — Because they are wise, Onk. they are all perspicacious Ar. They are Midwives themselves, Syr. They are diligent and understanding in their minds. B. Uz. — More lively. Hieruf. Targ. In this reason.

1. The subject spoken of is the Hebrew women, of whom the Midwives shew the difference in this and the following expression.

2. The attribute here given to these women, they were lively, or more lively than the Egyptian women, and therefore they could not so well deal with them. The word here used, חַיִּים is variously rendered; some make it to come of חַי that signified any beast that beareth, or bringeth forth; as if they had said, the Hebrew women are as strong as beasts in bringing forth, and need no midwives. Others take it from the word which signifyeth to live, and so use חַיִּים as the participle helping, or making to live; whence the Caldees use it to express the name of midwives; so the Syr. and Ar. Mont. — They are midwives themselves. As the Hebrews term midwives from their work in helping to bear or bring forth. So the vulg. Lat. They have the art or skill of midwiving; but generally it is read they are most lively, quick and strong in bearing.

Ver. 19.

3. Because they bring forth before the midwives come in unto them. Or, are delivered ere the midwives come in unto them. Onk. same. — They bring forth before, &c. And have brought forth. Sept. same. Syr. Ar. the same. — Before we come to them they bring forth. Vulg. Lat. — Before the midwife come unto them, they pray before their Father which is in heaven, and he heareth them, and they bring forth. Targ. Hier. and I. Ben. Uz. The words in the Original are plain and import.

1. Their sudden delivery, before the midwives came.

2. Their safe delivery, under Gods gracious hand.

The gloss that they prayed to their Father in heaven is pious, but no such thing is reported by Moses.

Quest. Did these midwives speak truth or not?

Ans. Various are the resolutions of men about this.

1. Some make it meritoriously good to lye in such case who deserve no other than shame for it. Pap.

2. Others do expressly say that it was a lye which these midwives returned to Pharaoh and that God pardoned it, and blessed them notwithstanding. Cal. Aug. &c.

3. Others are of the mind, that what they said was true, though not the whole truth perhaps in some particulars. And how ever it may be slighted, yet considering that the principle by which they acted and answered, was the fear of God, and the issue of all was Gods blessing, it seemeth probable that their report to the King was not so guilty of falsehood; which I conceive upon these grounds.

1. Was not God able to deliver these women without midwives? This cannot be denied.

2. Did not God as great things for them as this was and greater? This is clear.

3. Is it not said before, that the more they were afflicted the more God multiplied them?

4. These two midwives could not possibly attend all the Hebrew women; that brought forth; therefore they speak probably of such, with whom they found this true. 3. Therefore incline to think that however infirmity might accompany these women in that answear, yet that the substance of what they said was truth.

And hence observe.

D. 1. Weak women by faith and fear of God are enabled to stand before the threats of Kings.

D. 2. Faith helps poor women to give reason with boldness unto Kings for not doing evil.

D. 3. God can make external difference upon his oppressed people from their oppressors.

D. 4. God hath made, and can make his persecuted creatures, more lively and strong to bear then others.

D. 5. God can prevent midwives, and deliver sooner, and better than they.

D. 6. Gods power and wisdom to save his Church is too hard for the power of Tyrants to destroy.

Ver. 19.

5. The

5. The issue of these actions followeth, as given by God, both to the midwives, and the children of Israel, expressed Ver. 20 and repeated as the occasion of Pharaohs further attempt to destroy the Church. Ver. 21. This therefore shall be considered with the last verse. In the 20th verse these two good issues of providence are reported, against Pharaohs bloody designe.

Ver. 20.

1. Gods dealing with the midwives upon their fear of his name. And or therefore God did good to the midwives or dealt well with them. Sept. Onk. Sam. &c. the same. Herein.

1. The term connective is considerable. (1) Some read it, And, immediately knitting this work of God unto that of the midwives, in saving the males of Israel alive; others read it illative and causal, therefore God did this, because the midwives feared him, and abstained from evil. Gods goodness to them immediately followeth upon their fear of him.

2. The matter connected. The proposition of Gods goodness to the midwives. Wherein are considerable.

1. The author of this well-doing, God himself.

2. The object of it, the two midwives forenamed.

20

3. The good itself, which God did for them, it is expressed shortly, he dealt well with them, or did good to them.

Quest. What was that good which God did for them?

Ans. 1. Some say God built houses for them, but that will appear not so rightly to be applied to them. Ver. 21. Targ. Hier. and Uz. talk of these two women to be Jached and Miriam; but that hath bin rejected; and that from them should come the houses of the Levites, and priests, or the priesthood and Kingdom; but these are vain.

2. The word here used is to be taken in the largest sense; and it noteth all effects of good, both in temporal and spiritual blessings. For unto the fear of God is all this good promised. 1. Tim. 4. 8. So that, doubtless God did those women good, in preserving them from danger, in giving all outward blessings so farre as they were good for them, and especially adding Church blessings, spiritual good things, such as might perfect them to glory.

Ver. 20.

2. The next issue is Gods goodness unto Israel, in these words, And the people multiplied, and grew very mighty. Or vvaied very strong, Sept. Onk. Sam. &c. to the same.

1. The subject of this providential good is the people of Israel; those who were destined to death and destruction.

2. The issue of goodness itself, in two expressions.

21

1. They were multiplied, as to their number which Pharaoh designed to diminish;

they grew more and more numerous.

2. They vvaied very mighty or strong; that is, to their number vvas added strength, or might; such, though they did not use it against their oppressors, yet Pharaoh vvas afraid of it; so God gave them strength vvhhen he thought to weaken them. In these by Gods over-ruling hand are better events brought about, than the King of Egypt intended; he meant to make the midwives odious to God by murders, but God kept them in his fear from doing evil; and then afterward doth them good, in the vvaie of their obedience. Again, he meant to diminish the number and strength of Israel but God increased both, to the glory of his own name, and cast reproach upon bloody Princes.

Note here.

D. 1. The good return from God to creatures is neerly knit to their fear of him.

D. 2. God is the onely benefactor or good doer to them that fear him.

D. 3. They that fear God and do good are sure onely to receive good from him.

D. 4. All good temporal and eternal is intailed on them that fear the Lord and shew evil.

D. 5. The people, destined to ruin by cruel powers in the world, are more regarded by God.

D. 6. Gods people shall grow to their just number and strength, against all bloody designs upon them.

D. 7. God is too hard for Pharaoh notwithstanding policy and cruelty, and so far all worldly powers.

3. The last bloody attempt of Pharaoh followeth, which closeth this chapter. Ver. 21. 22. Wherein we have 2. things in general.

1. The occasion of this last designe. Ver. 21.

2. The attempt itself, in a bloody decree. Ver. 22.

1. In the first, two things occur, which make up the occasion of this outrageous act of Pharaoh.

1. The midwives fear of God, as it is thus recorded, And it was because the midwives feared God, Sept. the same. Ver. 21. feared before God; Cald. The readings here agree. This was the first occasion which put Pharaoh upon this third execrable attempt; wherein are these terms.

כ 2. The matter immediately connected, which is the first occasion mentioned, of Pharaohs further cruelty, Because the midwives feared God.

1. The persons that gave this occasion, the poor midwives.

2. The work at which he was enraged, The fear of God, which doubtles importeth two things.

1. The cause, Gods fear in their hearts.

2. The effect, which was saving of the Males alive, Ver. 17.

Now when Pharaoh saw this, he sets upon another way to accomplish his designe. This is the first occasion.

Ver. 21. 2. The next event occasioning the following attempt, is thus expressed, And he made them houses. The rational term (because) is here to be added; And because he made them houses, therefore Pharaoh sets upon another plot. Herein we may note,

1. The house-maker not Pharaoh making houses whether the Hebrew women should come to be delivered, that's adream of impossibility, nor Israels making houses to protect the midwives, for they could not save themselves, but this house maker was God alone.

ישי 2. The house making, He made houses, what meaneth this? Surely, this cannot be intended of material houses, such as we dwell in; though it figuratively is sometimes said, house, for house-hold; the phrase of Gods building houses in Scripture, is to make sure families, and settle and establish them to those special uses, whereunto God intended them; as Gods making Samuel an house, and David an house, &c. was to set up their family unto the several uses of government, and Priesthood, unto which he appointed them, 1 Sam. 2. 35. 2 Sam. 7. 27. 1 Sam. 23. 28. Now according to scripture use, this is the meaning of the phrase that God would build and set up families for several employments in his Church, which is not made to women.

לחם 3. The subject for whom these houses were made; this is noted, in that relative (them) which is a masculine in the Hebr. and therefore grammatically cannot relate to the Midwives, but to the people, the sons of Israel, spoken of Ver. 20. So that the second occasion of Pharaohs cruelty was, because he saw, how God blessed the children of Israel, and made them houses to establish them, therefore he layeth about him in another way to dispatch them betimes; so that the clear reading of this with the next verse might be, And it was, because the Midwives feared God, And so saved the males of Israel alive, And because, God made houses for them, that is, the sons of Israel, that Pharaoh charged, &c. They who transferre this to the Midwives are forced to make a change of gender; which, however sometimes it is, yet is not to be made without necessity, as Exod. 2. 17.

The fable of the Rabbins that the midwives were Jochbed and Miriam, and that they got them a good name in a strange nation, and made them houses of Kingdom and priesthood, we passe as a vain figment.

The relative noteth males, and the work of making houses is by sons, as is the usual language of Scripture and rationally it sute's here as an occasion of Pharaohs greater rage against Israel, therefore is this to be judged the true and proper reading and sense of this place. Ver. 27.

2. Now followeth the attempt itself, which is a more bloody injunction, for destroying the seed of Israel, Gods Church. Wherein.

1. The power injoyning, Pharaoh commanded or charged. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Now this tyrannical power can contain no longer, but seeing privat commands would not take upon the midwives, therefore from subtilty, he proceeds to open cruelty, and to put forth his power into a most horrid decree.

2. The parties commanded and injoined to be executioners of the Tyrants will, are All his people. Sept. and Cald. same, &c. Ver. 22. That there may not want bloody slaughter men, the King chargeth every man in his territories, and that doubtles under severe penalties to execute his will on Israel; whereunto also most of them were forward enough of themselves.

3. The bloody cruel charge itself, consisting of two parts.

1. Injoining the present murder of all males to be born. Every son that is born ye shall cast him into the river. Born to the Hebrewes. Sept. — Jewes. Cald. Onk. — Into Nilus. Ar. Ver. 22.

1. The cruelty of the act, to throw children new born into the river and drown them.

2. The universality of the execution, every son, or male child, throw in all, spare nor one. O bloody Tyrant.

2. The other part of the charge is to reserve females to slavery, And every daughter ye shall save alive. Sept. and Cald. same. — Reserve them Onk. All readings to the same. Herein also,

1. The bitterness of the charge, keep them alive, or reserve life to them, but such as might be worse than death; being kept alive onely to serve the lusts of wicked men.

2. The universality of it, every daughter, not one excepted; this, however it may seem to shew pity unto them, yet in the intention, (which could not be good, they shewing so much cruelty to the males) was was a most cruel designe to keep them alive, who were lesse able to resist their villany.

Quest. How long was this bloody decree in power for its execution?

Ans. 1. The time is not expressly noted in sacred Chronicle, yet some guesses may be made about it. 2. It is certain Moses was born under this decree, and lived 40 years in Egypt, and at that time. Act. 7. 23. 3. It is evident, that some time after the King of Egypt died; which fought the life of Moses; but whether this were he that made the decree is doubted, however there was a succession of persecutors, as we shall see. 4. Many young ones went out from Egypt, and therefore all were not destroyed, it is probable therefore that the rigour of the law abated some years after; if it were not taken away; and it may be that law might dye with him that made it, but nothing certain is revealed of it. V. 22.

Observe hence.

D. 1. Under providence, wicked persecutors proceed in sin, as God in mercy unto him.

D. 2. The fear of God, and its effects in crossing commands of Tyrants, makes them more angry.

D. 3. Gods building up his House or Church is a grievous eye-sore unto its enemies.

D. 4. God makes sure houses for the sons of his Church, when persecutors destroy them, Ver. 21.

D. 5. Wicked persecutors proceed from secret subtilty to open cruelty.

D. 6. Bloody powers desire to make executioners enough to destroy the Church.

D. 7. Persecuting Kings do not treat but command their people to be instruments of cruelty.

D. 8. It is the pitch of bloody rage to make innocent infants martyrs, & spare none.

D. 9. Drowning poor infant Church-members is an invention of cruelty.

D. 10. When Tyrants give life to any it is but to make it miserable.

D. 11. No sect nor individual in them are exempted, from Tyrants oppression.

D. 12. God suffers persecutors to go to the utmost of their bounds appointed, Ver. 22.

CHAP. II.

In the former Chapter we have unfolded the occasion of Gods bringing Israel out of Egypt, which was the first particular noted in the first general, and that was the history of events before Israels departure out of Egypt, contained in the 11 former Chapters with part of the 12th.

2. Now followeth in this Chapter the history of some preparatory acts of God and events, leading to this deliverance; which more generally were noted to be two.

1. Gods raising instruments for the work, Chapters 2, 3, 4.

2. Gods mission of them to execute his will about it, Chap. 4, 29, &c.

In the first preparatory work of raising instruments, as they were chiefly two, so we have a double history of them.

1. About raising & fitting Moses for the work, Chap. 2, 3, 4, to ver. 26.

2. About disposing Aaron to help him, Chap. 4. v. 27. 28.

In the history of raising and fitting Moses the first instrument for this work, we have recorded various providential events.

1. In the birth, preservation, education, and disposition of him, with his course of life, Chap. 2.

2. In Gods appearance to him and call of him to it, Chap. 3. v. 1. 10.

3. In Gods encouragement of him. Chap. 3. 11. to the end, and Chap. 4. to ver. 17.

In this second Chap. more especially we have several providential acts preparatory.

1. Such as prepare Moses for the work. ver. 1. 22.

2. Such as prepare the work for him ver. 23. 25.

In the former, Gods preparatory acts as to constitute and dispose Moses for the work are,

1. His giving him his birth and being. ver. 1. 2.

2. His conservation of him by the means recorded,

1. By his mother, &c. v. 2. 3. 4.

2. By Pharaohs daughter. v. 5. 6. 7. 8.

3. His education and adoption into Pharaohs family. ver. 9. 10.

4. His disposing of him to action.

1. Judiciary, though latent. v. 11. 14. 2. Pro-

2. Provisory, for his life and being ver. 15, 22.

To the first, which is, Gods preparatory act in giving him being. ver. 1. and part of the second. These words have it. And there went a man of the house of Levi and he took the daughter of Levi; ver. 1. And the woman conceived, and bore a son. Onk. Cald. fame. — One of the tribe of Levi, and he took the daughter of Levi and had her. Sept. v. 1. And she conceived in the wombe and brought forth a male-child. Sept. v. 2. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same purpose.

In this history of the birth of Moses occurs.

1. The term of connection, And, which knits here, not the marriage mentioned, as consequent to the bloody decree, reported in the last verse of the former chapter, but the birth of this instrument Moses; for these parents were married several years before, and they had Miriam their daughter, who at that time was able to watch what would become of Moses; and Aaron was 3 years elder than he; born before the bloody decree, and therefore exempt from it, but Moses was born about the first coming out of that decree, when it was in the hottest execution, as Stephen notes. Act. 7. ver. 20.

2. The matter here connected is a doubt event.

1. A marriage, 'that had past before. There went a man, of the house, of Levi and took the daughter of Levi. Wherein note,

1. The husband mentioned.

1. By his sex a man.

2. By his tribe, Of the house of Levi, son to Kohath, grand son to Levi.

3. By his name. Exod. 6. 20. Amram, he was the husband mentioned.

2. The wife expressed.

1. By her sex a daughter, a woman.

2. By her lineage, the daughter of Levi, & as it is supposed the only daughter of Levi, and sister to his father Kohath born to Levi in Egypt. Num. 26. 59.

3. By her name, Jochbed. Ex. 6. 20.

3. The acts of marriage.

1. Preparatory, he went.

2. Comptory, he took her, that is, to wife as is elsewhere expressed. Ex. 6. 20. Here must be observed.

1. The legal action, his going to her fathers house and taking her with her fathers consent to be his wife.

2. The time of all this is best rendered in the preterpluperfect, he had gone, and had taken her to wife long before this time.

Quest. Was such a marriage lawful with his aunt?

Ans. 1. It is by some supposed, that by sister is not meant the natural sister to Kohath, but some of that tribe.

2. Yet it is generally taken for the natural daughter of Levi, sister to Kohath. So Targ. Hierosol. He took Jochbed his aunt to wife.

3. The lawmaker did dispense with it, for that time, therefore was it lawful, but not imitable by any, since God hath made a law against it.

2. The next thing here connected is the fruit of marriage, which as here spoken of, was after the bloody decree gone forth.

1. The woman conceived.

2. She bore a son.

1. This woman was Jochbed wife of Amram.

2. This son was Moses afterward named.

3. This conception and birth were under Gods blessing in this sad time, when all the males were to be drowned. So God ordered Moses to his birth and being. The Jewish fables of Amrams divorce of Jochbed, upon the Kings decree, and his returning unto her, being become young by a miracle, &c. are not worth the naming. It is enough for us to know, that of these parents in lawful marriage, God gave Moses his being, who was to be his instrument to deliver Israel out of Egypt. This was in the year of the world 2433. Textual observations may be these.

1. That many things are in Scripture record by וְיָשָׁב אֶמְרָם.

2. That in connection of actions in history, some must be distinct in time.

Moral notes are these.

D. 1. Providence is preparing good, while wickedness is working evil to the Church.

D. 2. Lines, tribes and persons are appointed by God by whom he will work good to his people.

D. 3. In the desolations of the Churches seed, God will have his to marry and continue it.

D. 4. Tribes cursed for their desert, may be made instrumental of good by grace.

D. 5. Marriages are always to be accounted lawful by Gods will revealed about them.

D. 6. Chose and taking in marriage should be under providence, free, and rational. Ver. 1.

D. 7. Special conceptions and births are under providence to special ends.

D. 8. The greatest instruments of the Churches good God ordereth so being in the common way of man.

D. 9. God ordereth in his wisdom instruments of salvation to be born in times of affliction.

D. 10. No policies or cruelties of man can hinder God from sending saviours to his Church. Ver. 2.

2. Gods preparation of this instrument Moses for the redemption of Israel was in his preservation, and that by two eminent means.

1. By his mother, of which we read, Ver. 2. 3. 4. Herein also are observable.

1. The occasion hinted of his preservation, And she saw him, that he was good (A goodly child, as ours) Onk. fame. — And they seeing him fair, Sept. All other readings, seeing that he was fair. This sight and observation, put on his mother more carefully to preserve him. Wherein are considerable,

1. The subject seeing, as here expressed, is his mother; but it may not be understood of her alone, for the Apostle according to the 70 expresseth it, they saw, that is, his parents and relations about him. Heb. 11. 23.

2. The act here is external, sight by the eye, she and they saw with their eyes; and doubts thereupon did ponder in their hearts, concerning what they saw.

3. The object with its annexed form, the child Moses, that he was good, or goodly, good in countenance, fair, beautiful; He was fair to God, as is expressed Act. 7. 20. Some read, exceeding fair; this was no ordinary or natural hue, or temper of white and red, but some note of excellency put upon him by God when he was born, importing some excellent use unto which God had designed him; so afterward God put a glory upon his face, that the Israelites could not look on him to behold his countenance. Some Jewes say that he had the form of an Angel, but that is incompatible with flesh; only it may note an excellent hue of beauty. This puts them upon it more to save him, and encouraged their faith about it.

2. The acts tending to his preservation, which were these 4. following.

1. She hid him three months. Onkel. fame. — They hid him; Sept.

He was hid of his parents, his fathers, as Heb. 11. 23. All readings concur to the same purpose. Herein,

1. The principle of this and the acts following, & that the Apostle asserts to be faith, though not expressed in this place. By faith Moses was hid of his parents. Heb. 11. 23. If so, then this mother did no more than God commanded her, and others, who had a hand in this work; for faith cannot work but upon Gods word.

2. The agent in this work here named is only the mother, but not excluding the father and other helps.

3. The work itself. They hid him, so it is here, and Heb. 11. 23. but Stephen adds, he was nourished in his fathers house, which must be supposed in hiding; so that these things are carried in it.

1. Exemption from danger of drowning by concealment of him.

2. Preservation in life and being by nourishing and cherishing him.

4. The duration of this preservation by hiding, and that is three months; in which all concur, & there is no difficulty; it was the space of completing the course of three moones, as the word in the original imports. Ver. 2. It is a fable of B. Uz. that Jochbed was divorced by reason of the decree, and was 130 years old when she returned, and became young again, and brought forth at 6 months, and so hid him 3 months the better, which made up the nine, but let that pass.

2. The next act of his preservation, was the making of an ark for him and putting him therein, and here we have to note,

1. The reason expressed of taking this course for preserving him, And she could no longer hide him. Onk. fame. —

And because they could no longer hide him, Sept. to which outs agree. — She could no longer make him ly hid. letter. All readings are to the same purpose.

1. The subject here put to these streights, the same mother and father, &c.

2. The stress put upon them, an impossibility of hiding the child any longer or preserving it in his fathers house.

Quest. Why could they hide it no longer as well as three months?

Answer. 1. The supreme cause was the hand of God ordering the wicked counsels and decrees of men, he suffers it so to be, to set faith on work.

2. The terribleness of the Kings decree, which threatened their own lives for preserving the child. 3. It is said by some Jewes, that search was made every three months for the males, and this time being come, they could hide him no longer. This is uncertain. 4. The general exaction, and enquiry after the males born wheresoever being put in execution, probably put's them to this streight that they could hide him no longer.

2. The act itself for preservation upon this account, And she took for him an ark of reeds, or bulrush, and daubed it with slime and with pitch, and she put the child in it. Onkel. fame. — His mother took for him, &c. — Of withy. Syr. others to the same.

1. The agent here, the mother, M m m m not not without help doubtles, but she most sollicitous.

2. The work is twofold.

1. Preparing an instrument of safety, the form, an Ark, the matter, reeds daubed with slime and pitch and fitly compacted against the sudden injury of the water.

2. Putting the child into it; doubtles carefully bestowing and disposing it as might be best for the safety of the child.

3. The next act is, And she put it in the flags by the river-side or brink. Onk. same. In a marshy place, &c. 70. all to the same.

1. The plcer of this Ark, the Mother.

2. The matter placed, the Ark and child.

3. The posture of them, she set it not swimming upon the water, but puts it among the flags and bulrushes by the rivers brink. So not obeying the Kings decree. Ver. 3.

Ver. 4. 4. The last act for preservation by his parents is the setting of a watch over him. And his sister stood a farre of, to know what would be done to him. Onk. same. And his sister watched a farre of, to learn, what would happen to him. Sept. All agree. His sister Miriam. Ben. Uz.

1. The party, his sister Miriam appointed to it.

2. The station of a centinel, shee stood, &c.

3. The end of her station, to observe and know, what providence would order concerning the child being so exposed; therefore so she watcheth.

Q. Was this well done of these parents to expose the child so to death? Is it not unnatural, worse than some brutes, which expose their own lives to save their yong? Might they not have trusted God in hiding the child longer, and found another way for safety?

Ans. 1. It is expressly said by the Apottle, that the first act of preservation by hiding, was through faith; therefore by the same reason all that followed was from the same principle; what is done by faith, is so farre well done. 2. If it were by faith, they must have some general word of God or some special revelation, to work upon, for what they did. 3. It was not unnaturalnes, that was ordered by God and acted by faith in the use of meanes to preserve the child's life; however feare might be working in sense, as faith in spirit. 4. It is said they feared not the Kings command, and if so, then faith carrieth them to hope for the child's preservation. 5. God doubtles had ordered this, that Israels Redeemer should be nourisht by Pharaoh who fought the ruine of them all, therefore were they guided to bring about Gods counsell this way onely.

Whence observe.

D. 1. Preservation God joineeth to the being of instruments for his Churches deliverance. And.

D. 2. God maketh sight serviceable to faith for preserving his own. She saw.

D. 3. Signal goodnes, or glory God casts sometimes upon infants whom he purposeth to save. Good.

D. 4. Sight of such signals is to strengthen faith, for preserving instruments from destroyers.

D. 5. Faith fears no commands of Tyrans, but hideth from their power, whom God will have hid. Hid.

D. 6. Gods time of hiding his instruments, is faiths time also to do it. Ver. 2.

D. 7. Providence orders an impossibility of hiding his Saints from Tyrans sometimes by ordinarie or more obvious meanes.

D. 8. Faith receiveth other wayes of preservation for instruments, when they cannot longer be hid.

D. 9. Faith puts soules upon the most reasonable wayes of saving Gods instruments when exposed to danger.

D. 10. Gods wisdom instructs believers to frame meanes of saving his alive.

D. 11. Reed and slime and pitch ana flaggs, shall preserve Gods darlings at his pleasure.

D. 12. The rivers brink God make's to save, such as Tyrans judge unto rivers to destroy. Ver. 3.

D. 13. Faith teacheth not onely to use meanes, but to wait for the issue of them. Stood.

D. 14. Knowledge of doubtful issues of life is desirable to Saints in danger. Know.

D. 15.

D. 15. Neer relations should set themselves to seek the good and preservation of each other. Sister.

D. 16. Weak indeavours of faith and waiting, are in order to a good return from God. Ver. 4.

The further preservation of Moses Gods instrument is by the hand of Pharaohs daughter; about whom God so wrought, that thorough her hand Pharaoh her father did in the midst of his bloody execution of the Hebrew infants preserve himself the redeemer of Israel, much against his own purpose. Hereabout these works of providence are observable.

1. Gods ordering the coming down of Pharaohs daughter at that time to that place & part of the river, where the child was laid. In these words, And the daughter of Pharaoh came down to wash at the river, and her maidens were walking by the hand, or side, or banks of the river. Onkel. same. Her maidens went upon the river, Septuag. Which must be by it, for they were walking. All readings to the same. Here,

1. The term of connection knitting events together is not to be passed over; the child was lately exposed among the rushes, the sister watching what God would do; now at this time was this descent.

2. The matter connected, which is the occasion of the present saving of the child. Hereabout note,

1. The principle moving and ordering the coming of Pharaohs daughter at this time to this place, that is supposed here, even Gods providence and instinct upon her.

2. The subject made use of, the daughter of Pharaoh, some adventure to say that her name was Thermudis, but I know not whence they should feign it. for Moses was the first historiographer, and he writeth nothing of it. It was the Kings daughter, that is enough, and shee accompanied which her maids.

3. The motion or action ordered to bring her toward the child, she went down to wash herself, or bathe, her maidens walk by the rivers brink, these motions help toward the child's relieve. It is said by B. Uzziel that God had strook Egypt with a fiery inflammation, and a boil, and hereupon Pharaohs daughter being smitten, therewith came for some refreshing to the river, and when she saw the ark, and put out her hand to it, she was healed; this wrought her bowels to the child, but this is mans own invention, Moses is silent, she might come upon ordinary occasions to bathe, as the customs of those countries was.

2. Gods ordering the discovery of the child in this passage, And she saw the ark in the midst of the flaggs, and she sent her maid & took it, V. 5. And she opened and saw him, even the child, Sept. to the same. She put forth her arm and took it, Onkel. The word אֶרְבָּא if ב be without dagges signifieth an handmaid, but with it an arm or elbow. Hereupon the Caldee read's, Her arm, all readings agree. This work of discovery is the very next to her descent to the river, herein no words are difficult. The acts as related are these.

1. She saw the ark pitched among flaggs.

2. She sent her maid for it, to see what it was.

3. She took it by the hand of her maid, Ver. 5.

4. She opened the ark, for it was shut close.

5. She saw the child, him even the child, so emphatical is it in the letter; Child is added to note the truth of the relative foregoing.

3. Gods moving her to bowells and compassion, thus expressed, And behold the babe wept; and she had compassion on him and said, of the children of the Hebrewes is this. Ver. 6. Of the Jewes. Onk. other readings alike. She saw the child weeping and the daughter of Pharaoh spared him, &c. Sept. Herein note,

1. The occasion of this compassion joined to the former discovery, And behold the babe wept.

1. The term of connection notes it to be immediately upon opening the ark taken.

2. The occasion mooving bowells; the child's natural bemoaning of its sad condition.

1. The note of demonstration behold, the Spirit points out God working on the child to its own preservation, it weep's to get compassion.

2. The child's expression, all tears and mourning futable to its sad condition, as now exposed.

2. The compassion moved hereupon, whereabout,

1. The mover of it was doubtles God himself.

2. The subject compassionating, Pharaohs daughter.

3. The act of compassion, she sheweth pity on him, not throwing him into the river according to her fathers decree, but saving him from perishing; her bowels were founding now upon the poor infant; her tendernes condemnes her fathers cruelty.

4. The expression she giveth, This is of the Hebrewes children, or of the Jewes. This note seemes to expresse her pity: this is one of the lambs exposed to slaughter, but my bowels are toward it, I will save it. Thus farre God moved her compassion, Ver. 6.

M m m m 2 4. Gods

4. Gods ordering his sister to be at hand, and take the opportunity of these compassions, and put the question unto Pharaohs daughter, Wherein is,

Ver. 7.

1. Her address unto her, And his sister said unto the daughter of Pharaoh, Sept. and Onk. fame, and other readings alike, no difficulty.

1. The party speaking, the sister of Moses set to watch, Miriam as conceived.

2. The party bespoken, Pharaohs daughter now pitying the poor babe in her compassions.

3. The address made by speech which was encouraged by these bowels expressed.

Ver. 7.

2. Her question proposed, Shall I go and call to thee a woman giving suck of the Hebrewes, and she shall suckle the child for thee, Onk. fame, ——— Wilt thou that I call to thee a nursing woman of the Hebrewes, and she shall give the child suck for thee, Sept. In which question see,

1. Her readiness to go about this work.

2. Her prudence, to call a suckling woman.

3. Her service tendered, that she may nurse it for thee. All this so neatly coupled by God makerh for the preservation of the child, Ver. 7.

5. Gods disposing and preparing an answer of good in the heart of Pharaohs daughter. Where we have,

Ver. 8.

1. The command from the daughter of Pharaoh, And the daughter of Pharaoh said unto her go, Sept. and Onk. fame, and others,

1. The power ordering, the Kings daughter.

2. The command, to go get a nurse.

Ver. 8.

2. The ready obedience of the sister of Moses, And the maid went and called the mother of the child, Sept. The young woman. Onk. and the rest the same. Here,

1. Her expedition, she went upon the word given.

2. Her fitting of a nurse, she calleth the mother of the child, as their hearts desire was. So God ordered an answer unto faith; that now she saveth her child as a nurse, though she could not as a mother. Ver. 8.

Quest. How came it to passe that there was no more words about it, whose child it should be, but presently thus to be given to nurse?

Answ. 1. The abundant births among the Hebrewes might occasion the lesse inquiry. 2. The hand of God was in this as in all the rest to silence them, to affect their hearts so much with the childs condition, as not to trouble themselves about inquiry after parents; so God saveth both parents and child.

We note.

D. 1. Providence knits deepest dangers and best meanes of safety together sometimes for his babes.

D. 2. God sometimes chooseth instruments of saving his little ones, out of the house of destroyers.

D. 3. Creatures occasional refreshings God turneth sometimes to his babes preservings.

D. 4. Providence maketh discovery of his indangered little ones to such as shall preserve them.

D. 5. God doth not onely make his instruments of preserving, see his in danger, but take them out. Ver. 5.

D. 6. Instruments of safety are mooved by God to open and look on his poor creatures exposed.

D. 7. Infants tears providence useth, to moove hearts to pity and save them.

D. 8. God puts compassion into hearts toward his mournful little ones to save them.

D. 9. The Churches children though destroyed by some, yet are pitied by others.

D. 10. The childs tender compassion to Gods babes condemn's the Fathers cruelty against them. V. 6.

D. 11. Providence fits his instruments to help on compassions in them that shall save his people.

D. 12. Opportune queries, for helping on meanes of saving, help on good answers from men.

D. 13. Hebrew nurses are most desirable for Hebrew children. Not the milk of Egypt.

D. 14. Natural relations may prudently and safely give over interest into strangers, to save their seed. Ver. 7.

D. 15. Where God moves the question for saving his little ones, he prepares an answer of peace.

D. 16. God makes enemies sometimes to grant peace to his people, which they intend not.

D. 17. Good relations make hast to save save their own, when a dove is opened.

D. 18. A mother may be called to be a nurse to her own child under providence, when it is exposed to the mercy of strangers.

3. The next thing that tends to the preparing of Moses for Gods instrument to save him, is his education here declared, and that is twofold,

1. Concerning his infancy. Ver. 9.

2. Concerning his youth and grown estate. Ver. 10.

As to the first, we have herein considerable,

Ver. 9.

1. The charge of Pharaohs daughter given to the mother nurse now called unto her, And Pharaohs daughter said unto her take away this child and suckle him for me, and I will give thy wages, Onk. fame.

Keep this child for me, &c. Sept. Other readings agree. Herein we have to note,

1. The person or power committing to charge this child, it was the Kings daughter, who resting upon her fathers favour, saved the child, contrary to this decree; yet probable it is, that he might approve the act, it being presumed to make him an Egyptian by this work. God would so have it.

2. The person to whom the child was committed, it was his own mother yet now by providence becoming an hired nurse to him. So God concealed her, and moved Pharaohs daughter to employ her without any more disquisition.

3. The charge committed to her was the child to be taken with her and nursed by her, Carry the child with thee, and suckle it or nurse it for me, so her own was given to her as a strangers child; no difficulty in the words.

4. The reward promised, I will give thee thy wages, which no doubt was such, as was suitable for a Princes daughter to give for the nurses encouragement.

Ver. 9.

2. The mothers acceptance of the child to become his nurse, And the woman took the child and suckled him, Sept. and Onk. &c. fame.

1. The party here accepting is the mother, and oh how willing poor woman was she now to become a nurse to her poor infant.

2. The actions ascribed to her.

1. She took the child now boldly into her keeping though she in fear had exposed him before, oh how gladly did she take the poor infant!

2. She nursed it, or suckled it, not onely tenderly but openly without hiding it, as before; this she doth as a nurse to Pharaohs daughter, which she could not do as his mother.

Observe we.

D. 1. Providence moveth instruments of preservation to look to the education of his little ones.

D. 2. Kings daughters are made mothers of Gods little ones by him, when mothers are made nurses.

D. 3. God can make persecutors crosse their own decrees to save his people.

D. 4. Providence can return little ones exposed to danger by parents, unto them again by enemies.

D. 5. Powers are made by God to commit to safety ad nurture whom they meant to destroy.

D. 6. God orders the mother to take the child who had exposed it, and to nurse it who had put it away.

D. 7. Under providence mothers may take children freely, and nurse them openly which they were forced to hide, by turning the hearts of men. Ver. 9.

2. After this education & nurture of him as an infant followed his further education when he was weaned, and brought home to Pharaohs daughter. Ver. 10. And the child grew great, and she brought him unto Pharaohs daughter, and he was to her for a son, & she called his name Moses, & she said, because I drew him out of the waters, Adv. Sept. Onk. fame, with other readings also. Herein note we,

Ver. 10.

1. The growth of the child is expressed, And he was made great, that is, grew up from a suckling to a greater child, so God prepared him in carrying from the womb and breast to his smaller growth; for we read of greater afterward, all are steps of providence.

2. The yielding of him up by his mother unto the Kings daughter, And she brought him to the daughter of Pharaoh. Here was a new trial.

Ver. 10.

1. In parents parting with their own child.

2. In giving him up to strangers, as their own, nature would scarce so part with children.

3. In giving him up to be an Egyptian, to be as it were alienated from the Church, and people of God; yet this trial were they put upon; not without the wise ordering of providence, who meant to make use of all this for fitting his instrument to do his work. The mother gives up as a nurse, Pharaohs daughter takes it as a mother, and so is Moses yet kept this way by God.

M m m m 3 work.

Ver. 10.

3. The adoption of him into the house of Pharaoh, And he was to her for a son. Wherein are carryed,

1. Adoption into Pharaohs family to be a Princes son; their was the change of his condition from a poor distressed Hebrew.

2. Instruction and education suitable to his new relation; this must be supposed, and so Stephen expresth it, He was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and was mighty in words and deeds. Act. 7. ver. 22. under this must be intended all courtly accomplishment; all which afterward he denied and refused together with his relation to them. Heb. 11. v. 24.

4. The naming of him; about which note,

1. The imposition of it, Pharaohs daughter as acting the mothers part.

משה

2. The imposition of the name, She called his name Moses, Mosheh, which in the Hebrew notes drawing or drawn out.

3. The reason of this name imposed, for she said, because I have drawn him out of the waters. This was, when she took the ark out from the flags; and this reason imported, that she gave this name to him, upon account of her own action; wherein yet providence ordered Moses to be taught by his name.

1. That he was an Hebrew, and of Gods Israel.

2. That he was exposed to death as other infants by the bloody decree of pharaoh.

3. That he was drawn out of danger and death by the daughter of him who had decreed it.

Quest. How could Pharaohs daughter give him an Hebrew name as this is?

Answer. 1. Some say his mother as nurse suggested it. 2. Others, that Pharaohs daughter gave him an Egyptian name, but of the same signification, some say Mueves, & Moses turned it into an Hebrew name of the same meaning.

3. Yet it may be probable that the Hebrews living so long in Egypt, their language might be known to many Egyptians, and especially to those that were of the highest among them, it matters not which way we take; but it is likely she might so farre understand the Hebrew as to give this name.

Quest. Had Moses no name given by his parents?

Answer. 1. It is presumed that he had at his circumcision. 2. The Spirit is altogether silent about it. 3. This name onely providence ordered to have him known by it, neither need we seeke further.

But may note.

D. 1. Providence carryeth on his instruments from the breasts to childhood, and thence to youth.

D. 2. Under providence parents of the Church may be informed to give up children unto strangers.

D. 3. By Gods order the destitute children of the Church may be made the children of Princes.

D. 4. Adoption and education of the Churches children in Princes houses, God useth to fit his instruments for his work.

D. 5. God orders the adoption and naming of his servants sometimes by powers of the earth to higher ends, then they designed them.

D. 6. Acts of pity from earthly powers to the Churches children, may give them liberty of naming them.

D. 7. God turn's such naming to his own ends, for memorials to his, not intended so by their enemies. God draweth him also from the floods of temptation in Egypt. Ver. 10. Ps. 18. 16.

4. The last thing recorded in this Chapter for the preparing of Moses to the work of delivering Israel, is the call and disposition of him for action after his education, which action is twofold here reported,

1. Judicial, and that is twofold,

1. Vindictive upon an Egyptian. Ver. 11. 12.

2. Mediatory and consultative to an Israelite. Ver. 13. 14.

2. Providential, as to preserving himself and disposing him to feed Israel. Ver. 15. 22.

1. As to the former, wherein he seems to act the part of a judge, the first work considerable, is vindictive, and hereabout note.

1. The time of doing it, And it was, Ver. 11.

in or after those days. Onk. the same. — In those many days, which must be after many days. 70, as ver. 23.

1. The term of connection continueth the history, but with the intervention of much time; this was after his education in Pharaohs house.

2. The force of the preposition, which is rather after, than in; after Moses was nurtured.

3. The

3. The time, those days of Israels oppression and bondage in Egypt; after them in part.

2. The person doing it, described as to his state, And Moses was grown great, Sept. and Onk. same.

1. The person is here exprest by name, Moses, even he whom Pharaohs daughter named.

2. His state, or age, or stature, he was now grown from a child to a man; and probably from being subject as before, to be great in condition, & some command. As Stephen reports, it was when he was full 40 years of age. Acts. 7. 23.

3. The occasion of this vindictive act, comprised in these three acts.

Ver. 11.

1. And he went out to his brethren. Heb. — The sons of Israel, added by Sept. — Went out with his brethren. Onk. by Stephen it is said that it came into his heart to visit his brethren. Act. 7. 23.

1. The principle of this motion is included, which doubles was Gods Spirit stirring in his heart, and moving him at this time.

2. The motion was to go out and look abroad.

3. The term of the motion, to his brethren which were people of God visibly, the Children of Israel. This seemeth to shew his declining from the court, & inclining to the afflicted servants of God, that he goeth out to them; and that not once but frequently.

Ver. 11.

2. And he looked on their burdens. Onk. same. — Considering their plain, Sept. Herein mark,

1. The Object, the burdens, pains, afflictions which where on the loins of Israel, their grievous oppressions.

2. The Act, he looked on them, and beheld not without compassion their daily pressures. This must move.

Ver. 11.

3. And he saw a man an Egyptian smiting a man an Hebrew of his brethren. Onkel. same. — Beating a certain Hebrew of his brethren the sons of Israel 70. This was the more special and immediate occasion of this vindictive act that followeth.

1. The inspector, Moses visiting them.

2. The inspection, he looked on.

3. The object an Egyptian smiting, an Hebrew smitten,

Quest. It is queried what this smiting was whether onely to hurt, or to kill.

Answer. 1. Interpreters are very silent in shewing the effect of this smiting.

2. Stephen expresth it under suffering wrong. 3. The word in the Hebrew, is the same used in the next verse, where it is said Moses smote the Egyptian, which was to death.

4. It is most probable, that the Egyptian did smite the Israelite to no lesse hurt, because Moses taketh no lesse vengeance, Ver. 11.

4. The execution of this vengeance followeth. Wherein we have to note.

1. His prudence or cautelousness in doing it; And he looked, or turned his face hither and thither, and he saw that there was not a man, Sept. He saw none, Onk.

1. The circumspection of Moses, he looks about him every way, on all sides.

2. The event of it, he saw that there was not a man at least appearing in sight.

2. His execution of vengeance upon the Egyptian in 2 acts recorded.

1. And he smote the Egyptian, That is, unto death, a just recompence, limiting for smiting; Sept. and Onk. same.

2. And he hid him in the sand, that is, he buried him out of the way, that no inquiry or discovery might be made of him. Sept. and Onk. same.

Quest. By what authority did Moses this? Answer. Stephen is expresse, that God gave him this authority to save in special, as well as in general. Act. 7. 25.

Quest. Why then did he this work so secretly?

Answer. 1. His authority from God was not yet known. 2. Gods instinct point's out his action thus to be done, in order to other ends.

We conclude.

D. 1. Intervent spaces of time God is pleased to set for the ripening of instruments to save his.

D. 2. Maturity of years and parts God appoint's unto the instruments of deliverance.

D. 3. In that fulnes of time Gods spirit's his servants for his work.

D. 4. Providence orders objects to be seen to move instruments unto their work.

D. 5. Sight of pressures and injuries upon the church must move helpers to compassion.

D. 6. Single injuries done to any member of the Church may occasion just revenge. Ver. 11.

D. 7. As God call's so he seareth men to take vengeance for him.

D. 8. Prudence from God order's secret actions upon a secret call.

D. 9. Vpon Gods motion his instruments give smiting for smiting, to his Churches enemies.

D. 10. Acts of justice upon Gods secret instinct may be kept secret for a time. D. 11.

D. 11. Faith will put instruments upon avenging his, on enemies, when God commands. Ver. 12.

1. The next act judicial was mediatory by reproof and direction in a case that fell out between two Hebrewes, unto whom he interposeth to right him that suffered wrong. Ver. 13, 14. Wherein note.

1. The occasion of this act of Moses is twofold.

Ver. 13. 1. A second egress of Moses to visit his brethren, And he went out on the second day. Sept. same. — Onkel another day. — Stephan, on the next day or the following day. Aēt. 7. 26.

1. The term connecting the visit to the former, notes the diligence and frequency of his inspection over his brethren.

2. The time noted, the next day following, he makes it a successive work as the dayes come about.

3. His motion, he went out as formerly to visit his brethren, the court did not content him to keep there; his heart was with his afflicted brethren.

Ver. 13. 2. The next occasion was a contest or fight between two Hebrewes, And behold two men Hebrewes, did strive or fight. — Onkel. same. — He saw two men striving, Sept. — He shewed himself unto them, or appeared unto them when they strove, or were fighting. So Stephan expresth it. Aēt. 7. 26.

1. The term connecting here joined a sad event and unexpected to Moses in his visit, he went out to visit, he went out to visit them united under a common burden, but finds them assailing one another.

2. The term demonstrating this event, Behold, noting it as observable by him. The 70. read hesu. Luke reports, he appeared; so it was, that the fact was evident and plain before his eyes.

Dathan and Abiram. B. V. 3. The event itself, a sad contest between two that were Hebrewes and brethren, they were seen by him striving and contending, as is imported, with words and blows. Upon this occasion, he interposeth.

Ver. 13. 2. The judicial interposition of Moses, And he said to the wicked or injurious one, why smitest thou thy neighbour? Onkel. same. — To him that did wrong, wherefore dost thou beat thy neighbour? Sept. Stephan relates it thus. He would have set them at peace, saying first ye are brethren, why do you wrong one another? Aēt. 7. 26. In all the relations occur.

1. His aim in interposing, it was to bring them to peace, supposed here by Moses, exprest Aēt. 7. 26.

2. The interposition itself, by speaking to them, wherein are to be noted,

1. The mediator stepping in, Moses seeming as a friend only, yet a judge may deal friendly.

2. The partic bespoken, here it is said the wicked one, or the injurious person, who at this time did the wrong; but Stephan saith he bespake them both; this must be supposed here, in speaking to one; but the injurious person was most obnoxious.

3. The speech here interposed, which is reprehensory, Why smitest thou thy neighbour? to here; Why do ye wrong one another? so Stephan reports it. The speech is castigatory, to both, or where the wrong was apprehended by Moses to be done, and as a judge from God, which he supposed they would have understood, thus he correcteth, directeth and adviseth them to peace. Here note,

1. The evil checked, smiting with hand, &c.

2. The aggravation in the object, Thy neighbour, &c.

3. The check itself authoritative from God. Why do ye thus? This ought not to be so between brethren. So Moses interposeth as a judge from heaven. Ver. 13.

3. The rejection of his judicial interposing. Wherein these particulars occur,

1. A disowning of his power. And he said, who set thee for a man a Prince and judge over us? Onkel. same. — Who hath ordained, &c. Septua. Here consider,

1. The term connecting this dogged answer to such a tender mediation, such things are knit together sometimes.

2. The replier here and rejector, he, that wicked and injurious one, so Stephan explains. He that did the wrong, injurious wretch, he would not be ruled but riseth up against him.

3. The reply, whereof,

1. The manner of it, is here with contempt and slighting; Stephan saith, he thrust him away, when he spake thus.

2. The matter which is a denial of any power or authority of Moses; who made thee such a man a Prince or a judge over us? I know no authority [you have]; and do you come here to reprove us?

2. A crimination of his person. Saith thou this to kill me, as thou killedst the Egyptian? Onkel. same. — Wilt thou kill me as, &c. yesterday. Sept. and Stephan, Wherein [this wicked one] chargeth Moses.

1. With an ill intent in his speech; thou sayest thus with a purpose to kill me, is this your interposing to kill me?

2. With a past fact, you killed an Egyptian yesterday, and do you threaten me, and mean to kill me as you slew him: injurious man, that plead's for an Egyptian oppressor, to bolster up his own wickedness, against reproof; this Moses gott by reproof a scorner.

4. The resentment of all this by Moses, And

Ver. 14. And Moses feared, and said, surely this thing is known. — Or this word is known, Sept. to the same, and Onkel.

1. The term connecting the impression made upon Moses by this reproacher.

2. The affection mooved hereby, he feared or was afraid; criminations and reproaches makes him somewhat to tremble.

3. The reason of this trembling, was the discovery of his secret act of justice upon the Egyptian. He said this word or matter is known.

Quest. Why was Moses afraid if his call was from God, or how agreeth this with, Heb. 11. 27. That he forsook Egypt not fearing, &c.

Ans. 1. That of the Apostle is meant of the second departure of Moses out of Egypt, when he carried Israel with him, and marched before them.

2. His fear now arose because his call was not manifested so fully by God, as afterward it was; neither had he any special warrant of God to stand against the power of Egypt at this time; such notifications therefore might affright him.

Quest. How came the matter to be revealed, if the man of Israel were slain, and the Egyptian also, and none elsewhere in sight?

Ans. 1. I conceive the Israelite was slain, for otherwise, it was hard for Moses to slay the Egyptian, which is credible he would not do, so to go beyond the law, as to kill for a blow. 2. It is not probable that the man wronged, if he were alive, was this wicked one who reviled Moses, & yet who els could know it; unless he should be the man, or tell of it? 3. It is not said, that no man saw Moses, though it be written, that he saw no man; that universal negative may be therefore understood comparatively; he saw none that he feared or suspected: that is of the Egyptians; but some notwithstanding might see him of the Hebrewes, whom he feared not; and upon this charge now laid by one of his brethren, in such a conflict, he breaks out, this thing is known. When my own nation discovers it, the Egyptians will know it, and avenge it. See Aēt. 27. 25.

We gather hence.

D. 1. Daily and successive is the care of Gods saving instruments to his oppressed Church.

D. 2. Gods faithful instruments leave courtly pleasures to visit Gods afflicted frequently.

D. 3. In visiting for good the oppressed Church, sad contentions may appear among the members.

D. 4. It is an observable evil by overseers, to see Church members striving together.

D. 5. Duels in the Church and among its members are sad things to record.

D. 6. Men called of God must interpose & curb the injurious and offending parties.

D. 7. Smiting of neighbours and brethren is a sin sharply reprovable in the Church. Ver. 13.

D. 8. Injurious and offending parties are apt to recoil against rulers upon reproof.

D. 9. Wickedness makes men questio on any authority of God, that would suppress them.

D. 10. Sin will not indure to be suppressed by power; but will rage against it.

D. 11. Justice in reproof, or suppression of iniquity, is called murder by sinners.

D. 12. It is the artifice of malefactors to recriminate powers, for escaping themselves.

D. 13. Acts of vengeance upon enemies of the Church are turned as sin upon the actors by wicked members.

D. 14. Wicked men are more willing to plead the cause of oppressors, than acknowledge just deliverers.

D. 15. Zealous avengers of Gods oppressed may be terrified, sometimes, with criminations of the wicked.

D. 16. Secret acts of justice God may suffer to come to light for trial of his instruments. Ver. 14.

2. The next sort of action unto which God called Moses to fit him for his future work of delivering Israel, is providential; not only so called passively as guided by Gods providence, but actively God reaching Moses under his hand to provide for himself and family, and so to inure him unto care and providence in time to lead his people; this sort of work imposed on Moses is twofold.

Nnnn his

1. The work of enduring hardnes, in a slight unto banishment from the Egyptian court, Ver. 15.

2. The work of a laborious calling, to be a shepherd in Midian, Ver. 16. 22.

1. In the former we have to consider these particulars,

1. The occasion mooving to this work.

Ver. 15. 1. Pharaoh hearing of the fact of Moses upon the Egyptian, And Pharaoh heard this thing or word, Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. the same. — This same or report. Ar. Herein note.

1. The term connecting this act of Pharaoh to the reproach foregoing by the wicked Israelite, no sooner vented but it comes to Pharaohs ear.

2. The matter connected.

1. The party hearing, Pharaoh, Israels enemy, and the bitter adversary to Moses upon that account,

2. The object heard, this same or report of killing the Egyptian.

3. The reception of it, he heard it and that with indignation enough, as appears in that which followeth.

Ver. 15. 2. Pharaohs inquisition after the life of Moses, And he sought to kill Moses. Syr. Onk. Sam. Sept. Ar. the same.

1. The connection here hath its weight, coupling hearing and killing; inquisition after blood.

2. The matter connected.

1. Pharaohs search for Moses, which doubles was with all care and strictnes that might be.

2. Pharaohs aim in this search, which was to kill Moses by way of revenge, this occasion's the first work upon Moses to save his life.

2. The act of Moses followeth, which is twofold.

Ver. 15. 1. His flight from Egypt, And Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh. misxiden Sept. All readings the same.

1. The connection is close hereunto Pharaohs inquiry, A& 7. 29. Then, &c.

2. The work of Moses connected, flight from the face of Pharaoh, that is out of his power and territories.

1. This act is full of fear and trouble,

2. The term from whence makes it the greater, it having an adversary able to pursue, yet God so provides, that, though with much distresse Moses get's out of Pharaohs sight and hands.

2. His pitching after his flight, set down.

1. Generally. He sat down in the land of Midian. — He dwelt in Midian, Sept.

2. Specially. He sat down by a well. The place generally belonged to the seed of Midian the son of Abraham, Gen. 25. 2. The well, more specially where he sat down belonged unto the inhabitants thereof; where he hoped some might come, of whom he might find entertainment, which under providence he obtained. Ver. 15.

From all which we collect.

D. 1. Criminations of Gods servants are soon carried to the eares of persecutors.

D. 2. Persecutors eares are open to receive all reports against Gods people.

D. 3. Fame of any evil against Gods servants stirr's up violent men to pursue them.

D. 4. The death of Gods instruments for his Churches good, is the aim of bloody enemies.

D. 5. God makes the pursuit of bloody men to put his Spirits to flight.

D. 6. God ordering, his pursued servants escape the hand of persecutors.

D. 7. God provides Midian to save, what Egypt would destroy.

D. 8. God is pleased to change court enjoyments for a poor well, to refresh his weary Saints. Ver. 15.

2. The next work unto which Moses is by providence called, is a shepherds life in Midian. In the history whereof we have to note,

1. The occasion of his setting there upon such an account, which is made up of several passages here related, falling out at the sitting of Moses.

1. The access of some shepherds Ver. 16.

2. The opposition of them by some shepherds.

3. The rescue of them by Moses, &c. Ver. 17.

4. The party between them and their father, wherein,

1. His expostulation about their soon return. Ver. 18.

2. Their answer about providential help. Ver. 19.

3. His reproof and command to call Moses. Ver. 20.

2. The agreement of Moses and entrance upon his work, wherein are reported,

1. Moses his consent to dwell with the man.

2. The mans giving him a wife. Ver. 21.

3. The seed given him there by his wife. Ver. 22.

1. The

1. The occasion occurs to be considered, and therein, the first event occasioning the undertaking of Moses, which was the access of some daughters of the Priest or Prince in that country unto the place where Moses sat. Here are observable,

Ver. 16. 1. The parties described, And the Priest of Midian had 7. Daughters. — Prince, Onk. — Priest, 70. and the rest, the parties are here set out.

1. By their father, Priest or Prince of Midian, some contest is about the translation of this word. כהן Usually it notes a Priest, a Minister about holy things, and it is generally so applied to the Priests of God, and Idols; some are apt to cleave to this; supposing that no Prince would set his daughters about such work; yet in these dayes great men did appoint such to oversee their sheep, the word is used for the head of the people, or a Prince also; usually given to the head of a family, who was chief in Church and civil affairs; such might this man be, and yet not live in such a state as others, who despised honest labours for their children. If we take it for a Priest as most; though it is presumed, that from Abraham, they had the knowledge of the true God, and his way of worship, yet being scattered, some corruptions might come in, though not to the grossest idolatry; for probably it is thought, that Moses then would not have married there.

2. By their sexe, they were daughters.

3. By their number, they were seven.

2. Their access is declared. And they came. — Feeding the sheep of their Father Jothor. Sam. Sept. all the rest as the Hebr. They came to the well where Moses sat.

3. The end of their coming. And they drew water, and filled the troughs to water their Fathers flock, or to give drink. Sept. Onk. same. The end of their coming was honest.

1. To draw water sufficient.

2. To water the flock of their Father. No difficulty. Ver. 16.

Observe we.

D. 1. God may order a Priest to relieve his servants whom Kings may pursue.

D. 2. Religion and officers of the Church, may be preserved by God in places distant from his.

D. 3. Priests or Princes daughters, are fit to be employed in honest works.

D. 4. Providence orders the coming of helps to the place where his servants are waiting for good.

D. 5. Honest labour for watering flocks is an honorable work.

D. 6. Children have their reward with God who obediently serve their Fathers good. Ver. 16.

2. The next thing occasional to the undertaking of Moses was the shepherds opposition of the Priests daughters. And the shepherds came and drove them away. Sept. and Onk. the same, with others.

1. The term of connection here knits opposition and oppression from the stronger, upon the weaker, and that in their labours and just rights, the women drew water and immediately the men come and take it away.

2. The matter connected is an act of violence and oppression.

1. The oppressors are the stronger, men-shepherds.

2. The oppressed are the weaker, women shepherds; yet the inclyticke □ Enclitic is masculine; which might be upon some that helped them; or a change of gender which is usual with the Hebrews.

3. The oppression, they came upon them: and drove them from the well and water, which they had drawn.

3. Another occasional act was the rescue which Moses worketh for them. And Moses rose up, and saved them, and watered their flock. Sept. Onk. same, &c. Herein three acts are observable.

1. Preparative to help; Moses arose, from the place where he sat down to rest himself, being mooved with zeal, upon the sight of the injurious dealing of the Shepherds, and the sufferings of the weaker sexe.

2. The act of rescue, he saved them. i. e. freed them out of the hands of their oppressors, and kept them safe; here the relative is feminine; for the rescue was properly of them, the female sexe.

3. The act consequent, he watered their flock. i. e. Before any of the Shepherds should interrupt them, he saw their flocks to drink and be satisfied, here the relative is masculine again; and that may be with reference to their Father as well as them.

Quest. Upon what account did Moses this?

Answ. 1. Providence did guide him unto it, in bringing him to that place at the time. 2. An instinct was given him and power with all, to deliver the oppressed being weakest.

Whence we collect

D. 1. Providence may suffer and order opposition to meet with honest labours.

Nann 2

D. 2.

D. 2. The stronger are apt to oppress the weaker, where no fear of God is.

D. 3. Sin makes men in honest callings to seek hurt each to other.

D. 4. Providence sometimes provideth privat saviours, to privat oppressors.

D. 5. Vpright hearts are impatient to see wrong done to others.

D. 6. Good soules desire to save the oppressed, if they have power.

D. 7. Goodnes puts men not only to save from evill, but to do good unto oppressed.

D. 8. In strange places and extraordinary cases, God giveth instinct to his instruments to save. V. 17.

4. The last occasional event, which fettered Moses a shepherd in Midian was the conference of these daughters with their father upon their return home. Hereabout note,

Ver. 18.

1. Their access, And they came to Revel their father. Sept. Onk. &c. same.

1. The term of connection, notes the order of events, after their flock was ordered being watered; home they came.

2. The matter here connected, is no more but their coming to their father, after their work done, nothing is difficult here, but the name and relation to whom they are said to come.

1. The name is diversly read, Reguel, by some, Rehuel by others. Revel by ours, leaving out an aspirat, this matters not.

2. The greatest difficulty here is, whether it were the immediat Father of them, or their Grand-father; for divers interpreters run both wayes; some think that Rehuel, Jethro, Hobab, and Keni were several names of one and the same man; which was the immediat Father of these Virgins, and Father in law to Moses. Exod. 2. 18. 3. 1. 18. 1, &c. Others make Rehuel and Jethro the same, to be the immediat Father, and Hobab his son, Brother to the wife of Moses. Numb. 10. 29. Others make Rehuel the Grand-father, and Hobab and Jethro, two names of the same man which was the immediat Father; But it seem's plainest, that Rehuel and Jethro were two names of the same man, and Hobab to be his son; for Jethro left Moses, and went home, but Hobab was with Israel in the wilderness. Exod. 18. 27. Numb. 16. 29, &c.

Ver. 18.

2. Their Fathers question, at their coming; And he said, why have ye hastened to come to day? Sept. same, &c. Sooner then ye were wont, &c. Onk. Syr. Their early return puts their Father upon expostulating with them. It seemes the shepherds were wont to make them stay last, and come home late; hereupon their Father questions their soon return. No difficulty in these. Ver. 18.

3. Their reply in satisfaction to him, that they providentially had found help, about which they report two things.

1. Their deliverance from lets, And they said a certain Egyptian or Egyptian man delivered us out of the hand of the Shepherds. Sept. Onk. &c. same. This was one cause of their speed, in that their lets were removed; in that they call him an Egyptian, it was either from his habit, or the discovery of the place from whence he came.

Ver. 19.

1. The person here was a stranger to them.

2. Their hindrance was the hand of neighbours.

3. Their help was deliverance from them.

2. Their furtherance by more help. And also drawing he drew for us, and watered the flock. Sept. Onk. &c. same.

Ver. 19.

1. His pains is faithfully declared by them.

2. The fruit of his labour, which was the watering of the flock. Ver. 19.

4. The return of their father to them.

1. By way of inquiry after him. And he said to his daughters, and where is he? Sept. Onk. &c. same; here is nothing but a grateful inquiry after him.

Ver. 20.

2. By way of reproof, Wherefore this or thus (at this time) have ye left the man? Sept. Onk. &c. same. It seemeth to check.

1. Their neglect in leaving him a-broad, though without leave it became them not to invite him.

2. The time seemeth to be hinted, now, or at this time.

3. His work may be likewise here supposed, why left you him after this worke done for you?

3. By way of command. Call him, that he may eat bread. Cald. Onk. same. Ver. 20. Here,

1. A grateful invitation of a helpful stranger, to his house.

2. A comfortable end of it, to refresh him after wearines, he shall eat bread, that is refresh himself with nourishment after his weary journey and hard labour, Ver. 20.

Note we.

D. 1. Honest labouring creatures are carried out and returned home safely under providence.

D. 2. Fathers houses are just receptacles for children doing their commands.

D. 3. Gods providence may make speedier speedier returns in mercy to him then they expect.

D. 4. Unexpected returns of common mercies, may justly raise wonder in the hearts of men. Ver. 18.

D. 5. The providence of God orders means to speed mercies unto creatures at his will.

D. 6. The hand of strangers is made sometime a deliverer from the hands of oppressing neighbours.

D. 7. God takes the weak sometimes out of the hands of the strong.

D. 8. Good soules are laborious to help oppressed, as well as deliver them.

D. 9. The life and comfort of beasts as well as men is the endeavour of just soules. Ver. 19.

D. 10. Ingenuity makes good soules to inquire for such, who have done good to them and theirs.

D. 11. Good men would not have the man forgotten that hath done kindness to the weak.

D. 12. It is just to invite such as labour to show kindness for their due refreshment. Ver. 20.

The next thing about Moses his undertaking in Midian, is his agreement, and entertainment with the Priest of Midian. Ver. 20. 21.

Herein we have to observe three things. 1. The agreement of Moses for cohabitation.

2. The Priests giving him Zipporah to wife. Ver. 21.

3. The issue that he had by her. Ver. 22. The first is thus reported, And Moses was content to dwell with the man.

1. The term connecting this agreement with the former invitation, which notes an immediat consequence. So providence makes Iethro's invitation, and Moses his cohabitation to meet quickly together.

2. The matter connected, which is the undertaking of Moses for this course of life in Midian; to Gods appointed time.

1. The person agreeing, Moses excited.

2. The person confederat, Reguel or Jethro, the Priest of Midian. This man.

3. The agreement itself, of which is noted.

1. The manner, which is the voluntariness of it, Moses would or was pleased, or content, or agreed, or began, or swore to dwell with this man; all this the word carrieth; and it may note an agreement by oath, they being strangers to each other, and both knowing God, as may appear.

2. The matter of agreement; it was to sit down there, and dwell with the man; which phrase imports several things.

1. Cohabitation, there to abide and stay with the Priest of Midian.

2. Vocation, which was the end of his dwelling with him, it was to serve him & feed his sheep; and so undertake as shepherds life, so we read. C. 3. Ver. 1.

2. The next event reported, is the giving a wife to him by Jethro, And he gave Zipporah his daughter to Moses. Onk. same. For a wife, Sept. others to the same.

Ver. 21.

1. The party giving in marriage, is Reguel or Jethro the father; it was a fathers work.

2. The party given in marriage Zipporah by name; his own daughter by relation.

3. The party to whom, Moses, who had now sometime dwelt with him and served him.

4. The act itself, he gave her to Moses as his, that is to be his wife as the 70 expresse.

Quest. How long was Moses with him before he had this wife?

Ans. 1. The time is not expressed in the letter. 2. It is justly presumed it must be some time of experience, before a man of his condition would give a daughter unto a stranger as he was at first. 3. It is probable that he lived most of those 40 years with him before he gave his daughter to him; for his children were but young, when he took his journey again to Egypt. And one of them was circumcised by the way. Exod. 4. 25. yet it is not of great moment to inquire where the Spirit is silent; whence justly are rejected.

1. The Fable of B. 17. That Reguel hearing of Moses escape from Pharaoh hid him in a cave ten years, & made Sipporah his keeper; and afterward gave her to him to wife.

2. That of Josephus, who saith that he married the Kings daughter of Ethiopia; for he had no more wives or children (as we read) but those mentioned. Ver. 21.

Quest. Was she not a Cushite? Numb.

12. Ver. 1.

Answer. Midian is so called. Heb. 3. 7.

Esh. 1. 2.

3. The last event related, is the issue

N n n n 3 which which God gave him in Midian by this wife. Whereabout we have to note,

Ver. 22.

1. The birth, And she bare or brought forth a son. Onk. same. And his wife conceiving, &c. Sept. Where,

1. The term connecting knits marriage and fruit together.

2. The matter connected is the birth. Wherein note,

1. The mother bearing, Zipporah.

2. The issue born, a son, a male-child.

3. The birth, she safely brought it forth, so farre God comforts Moses in his exilement in Midian.

Ver. 22.

2. The naming of the child. And he called his name Gershom. Onk. same. — And Mose. &c. Sept. The readings are to the same.

1. The imposer here is Moses the Father.

2. The imposition is the calling of his name.

עשר

3. The name itself is Gershom; The Etymon whereof is varied by many; some make it to note a desolate stranger, others, a stranger there, and others, a stranger by name, according as men variously conceived the composition of the word.

3. The end or ground of this naming which is included, and that is conceived to be twofold.

1. Memorative, with respect to the Fathers being a stranger in Midian.

2. Declarative to him and them, that they were strangers all in respect of the inheritance promised to Israel, and therefore to teach them to waite for it.

Ver. 22.

All which is thus expressed; For he said; I have bin a stranger in a strange land. Onk. and Sept. same. and the rest. wherein,

1. The person rendering the reason. He said.

2. The reason rendered, which was his own pilgrim condition at that season, both in respect of time past, and to come until the promised inheritance; as before the 70 and the vulgar adde the other son, but it is not in the text, only Exod. 18. Act. 7. 29.

We observe.

D. 1. Providence useth creatures in vntations to settle the habitations of his servants.

D. 2. Faith makes men as willing to take up a low degree, as to forsake an high estate.

D. 3. Honest callings are not inconsistent with them who must be the Churches deliverers.

D. 4. Just contracts and consent should be, to make servants for mens help.

D. 5. A Son of the Church, a favo- rite of Egypt, and a servant of Midian may meet in one.

D. 6. Habitation and service do concur in the man whom God appoints to serve.

D. 7. In time providence may change a servant to a son, and Masters to Fathers.

D. 8. It is the Fathers right to bestow their children in marriage.

D. 9. A mutual taking of each other by name is that which compleats marriage.

D. 10. Children must leave union with parents for conjugal union. Ver. 21.

D. 11. Vnder providence child bearing is the blessing of marriage.

D. 12. Sons born in time of affliction are recorded as memorable mer- cles.

D. 13. It is the Fathers right to name his Children.

D. 14. Childrens names may be made memorialls of evil state past, and fore-tokens of good to come.

D. 15. Believing soules reckon themselves to have bin, and to be stran- gers here below.

D. 16. A pilgrim life God thinks fittest for them that lead his Church to their inheritance. Ver. 22.

Thus farre of the first head of the Chap- ter in generall, which was Gods preparing Moses for the work of deliverance.

2. The next head followeth, which is Gods preparing the work for Moses in suf- fering and ordering the afflictions of Israel in Egypt untill these 40 years expired in Ver. 23. 24. 25.

In this passage, which makes way to the further preparation of Moses, related in the next Chapter; we have these special things considerable.

1. The removal of some letts in the way of Moses, by the death of some oppressours.

2. The increase of Israels burdens not- withstanding. Ver. 23.

3. The respect of God expressed unto them severall wayes. V. 24. 25. The first is thus expressed, and it was after those many da- yes (in), & the king of Egypt died: Onk. Sep. &c. same. In this passage we read how God prepared the way for Moses to return unto

Egypt,

Egypt, by taking away such as hunted for his life. Herein,

1. The time of connection, and, or then, which knits the order of the history following to that which went before; after Moses had the son spoken of, yea and a- nother also, Eleazar as the Sept. add's in the beginning of this verse, though it be not in the Hebrew here.

2. The matter of history here connec- ted, which is a providential event in taking away a great oppressor, whereabout we may note,

1. The time, ours read in proceffe of time, by the letter it is, in these many da- yes, or after as the 70 render the prepositi- on. I suppose, the proper sense of the pre- position may stand here in those dayes, which space of time must note the 40 years of Moses his sojourning in Midian. Act. 7. 30. Now within the compasse of these dayes or years, these events befel after- ward mentioned, as the death of the King, the cry of Israel, and the regard of God unto them.

2. The event itself, The King of Egypt dyed.

1. The subject here spoken of, is somewhat controverted, which Pharaoh it was; some think, not the same from whom Moses fled, conjecturing the suc- cession of several Kings in that time: o- thers conclude it to be the same upon that word of God to Moses, all the men are dead which sought thy life, Exod. 4. 19. which carryeth most probability in it, that it should be the same; however if such short reigns were among them, as some say; o- thers that succeeded might remember the fact of Moses to avenge it; but more probably it notes the same King, and the Egyptians with him, all whom God took away.

2. The event itself was death, he and all the other enemies of Moses, who sought his life died; God cut them off after their bloody persecutions. Uzziel re- ports that this King whoever he were, when he was smitten by God, com- manded the first born of Israel to be slain, and he washed himself in their blood; but the Spirit reports no such thing.

2. The next event recorded within the compasse of those many dayes, was the grievous oppression of Israel, expressed in a gradual description of it, and that in three steps.

Ver. 24.

1. And the sons of Israel sighed or groa- ned from their bondage, or by reason of it — Groaned for the works, Sept.

The hard bondage which was upon them. Onk. and others to the same.

1. The terme connecting knits this to the death of the former persecutors who died.

2. The matter connected, is conti- nued bondage, though the persecutor died, oppression did not.

1. The subject here spoken of, the sons of Israel, which notes the men, wo- men and children.

2. The event, sighing, inward groaning,

3. The reason urging, grievous bon- dage, in these is recorded the first step of oppression.

2. And they cried out, Sept. Onk, &c. same.

Ver. 24.

1. This is a further expression of their bondage, that made them break forth into grievous cries, cries for pain.

2. It may also carry in it strong cries in prayer, for their abominations as well as afflictions. Ezck. 20. 8. Num. 20. 16.

3. And their cry ascended to God in re- gard of their bondage. Onk same. — Works. 70. &c. In these.

Ver. 24.

1. The exprellion of their misery is in their howling cry, such the word here notes.

2. The aggravation of this cry, it went up to God; great are the cries that reach heaven.

3. The reason of this cry, the same with the former, it was by reason of their cruel bondage. This is the second event, in these dayes. Ver. 23.

Note hence.

D. 1. Succession of times God makes to bring about his purposes to his Church.

D. 2. Dayes and years seem to be many to men, when deliverance is deferred.

D. 3. Though dayes seem many, yet persecuting powers dye at last.

D. 4. Some oppressours may dye, and yet persecution not dye with them.

D. 5. Bondage may be encreased, when men may expect it to be eased by death of persecutours.

D. 6. Groans and cries to heaven may be extorted from Gods persecuted Church.

D. 7. The sons of Israel in howling for bondage should direct their cries to God.

D. 8. The sad cries of the persecuted preface deliverance comming. Cum duplicantur lateres venit Moses, &c. God hears. V. 23.

3. The last event after and within those many dayes, is Gods resentment of the con- tinued burdens laid upon his Church. Ver. 24. 25.

Wherein

Wherein we have, 4. acts of God mentioned.

Ver. 25. 1. Gods hearing of the cry, And God heard their groaning. Sept. same. Their cry was heard before God. Onk. O. thers to the fame.

1. The term connecting knits Gods ear to their cry.

2. The event connected, wherein are.

1. The subject receiving, God almighty.

2. The reception, which was hearing, so attributed to God after the manner of men; It note's a recall apprehension of their griefs.

3. The object, secret groanings, as well as open cries; no sighs, nor sobs, nor grief within, but it hath its voice, and God hears it.

Ver. 25. 2. Gods remembrance his covenant. And God remembered his Covenant with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob. Sept. same. וְיִזְכֹּר &c. Which he made, &c. Onk. Others to the same purpose. Herein we have.

1. The term connecting this act to the former, upon groans heard, he is put in remembrance, Humanitus expressed.

2. The event connected, wherein.

1. The subject, the same almighty and only wife God.

2. The act attributed, which is remembrance; not that he forgets, and calls to mind again; but after the manner of men, God is said to remember when after a long permission of his Churches persecution; he at last appears to deliver, or make good what he hath promised.

3. The object of this remembrance is set out.

1. Generally, his Covenant which was the Covenant of grace, containing in it promises of temporal deliverance also. Gen. 15. 14.

2. Specially, distinguished by the eminent parties in Covenant, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Who were the Fathers of this people now in Egypt. Gen. 15. and 17. Gen. 26. 3. 4. Gen. 46. 4.

Now was the time even at hand for making good all these promises; therefore God is said to remember them. Ver. 24.

Ver. 26. 3. Gods viewing of his oppressed. And God looked upon the sons of Israel. Sept. same. And the subjection of the sons of Israel was known before the Lord. Onk. Others to the fame.

1. The term of connection knits this act unto the former.

2. The work annexed is actual providence.

1. The subject of it the God of Abraham, &c.

2. The act of it, he saw, or looked on, which was no idle inspection, but a sight of providence in present ordering affairs toward their deliverance.

3. The object, the children of Israel, all the afflicted seed of Abraham.

4. Gods knowledge, And God knew.

And said in his word that he would deliver them. Onk. And had respect unto them English, Heb. Sam. Syr. only read, God knew.

God pitied. Ar. Uzziel faith, God saw their repentance in secret, and one man knew not of his neighbour but there is no such thing in the text here.

1. The term connecting coupleth this knowledge to the former sight.

2. The matter connected takes in,

1. The subject spoken of Elohim, almighty God.

2. The act. He knew, which is not in the text terminated upon any object, it is not passive, as the 70. make, He was known, but active, he knew; generally the object is supplied them, referring to the son's of Israel; but if that were to be so, me thinks, that had easily bin added in some incliticke, or otherwise, as objects are expressed here to all other acts. I do rather therefore here take the meaning of this to be, And God knew, that is, God determined or decreed, upon his former sight, remembrance and hearing, what he would do in order to their deliverance; the execution whereof he performeth in the following Chapter. So known to God were all his works from the beginning, i.e. Foreknown, and determined. Act. 15. 18. If it be referred to them, the meaning is, that God knew them to pity and help them. Ver. 25.

We conclude.

D. 1. Gods ear is close to the strong cries of his oppressed people.

D. 2. Secret groans are as audible with God as loud cries.

D. 3. God hears when creatures think him deaf.

D. 4. Gods audience of his peoples plaint and remembrance of his promise are knit together.

D. 5. Covenant remembrance with God is Covenant performance.

D. 6. Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob are parties specifying Gods Covenant to his Church.

D. 7. Abrahams Covenant, &c. carrieth in it mercy to posterity. Ver. 24.

D. 8. Gods remembrance of Covenant, and visiting providence go together to his Church.

D. 9.

D. 9. The sons of Israel are looked on and regarded when they cry to God.

D. 10. Gods inspection on his oppressed is a comfortable visitation.

D. 11. God hath ears and memory and eyes, and knowledge to help his people.

D. 12. Gods knowledge is his decree to make good his Covenant to his people; this he will perform. Ver. 25.

2. By his work, Moses was feeding the flock of Jethro his father in law the Priest of Midian. Madian. Sept. Onk. &c. to the fame.

1. The shepherd by name is Moses, once the adopted son of a Prince in Egypt.

2. The work about which now he was, he was guiding, keeping and feeding a flock; from this trade he called Moses to feed his people as he did David, to make him a shepherd of his people. Psal. 78. 70. Psal. 77. 20.

3. The object about which he was exercised in feeding, it was the flock of Jethro his father in law Priest of Midian.

1. The matter of his care were sheep, cattle or beasts, and these not his own, but his fathers, herein his care was lower than Jacobs, who in 20 years had gotten great flocks of his own; but Moses at the end of 40 years feeds the flock of others.

2. The owner here is set out by his relation, father in law to Moses, by his name Jethro, and by his office Priest of Midian. The difference of interpreters about this name, whether noting the same man as Raguel, as Calv. or the same with Hobab as Imitius, was somewhat resolved before; that Raguel and Jethro seem to be the same, and Hobab the son of him, brother in law to Moses; but that of Judg. 4. 11. where Hobab is said to be the father in law to Moses, seemeth to deny this. Yet it is answered that the word יָתֵר notes kindred of other relations besides father in law, and so may be understood there; for Jethro went to his own country again from Moses. Ex. 18. But Hobab stayed with him. Numb. 10.

3. By the place where now he was, is he described, And he led the flock behind the desert, and came to the mount of God to Horeb. Ver. 1. Into the wilderness, Sept. To the place of the best pasture in the desert, and came to the mount Oreb where the glory of God was revealed. Onk. Others read much to the same. Wherein mark.

1. His motion, he led the flock into the desert, or behind, to the utmost part of it, as some, more to the letter; doubtless this was to find out good pasture for them, as expressed by the Calde.

2. His pitching place.

1. His access, he came, namely with the flock.

2. The place itself, set out.

1. By its relation, called the mount of God, by anticipation, for this name was given it, from Gods appearance in giving the law upon it.

2. By its name Horeb or Choreb called also Sinai; but this seemeth to be but one part of the hill, noted from Sinai a bush or bushes, it was full of thick brambles; and Choreb seems to note the place about it, noting a dry, barren desolate place, here it was, where Moses was providing.

CHAP. III.

Thus farre we have recorded the preparation of Moses to be the instrument of Israels deliverance by Gods giving him being and preservation, and education and a call to action in several kinds. Chap. 2. for 80. years.

2. Now followeth the further preparation of Moses, by Gods appearance unto him and call of him. Chap. 3. 1. 10. Wherein these particulars concur.

1. The subject to whom the vision is made. Ver. 1.

2. The vision itself presented. Ver. 2.

3. The resentment of it by, Moses.

Ver. 3. 4. The speech of God to Moses containing.

1. His speaking to him by name, &c.

Ver. 4. 2. His item to him about his address.

Ver. 5. 3. His discovery of himself in the vision. Ver. 6.

4. His declaration of his end, which is twofold.

1. To shew Moses his respect to Israel. Ver. 7. 8.

2. To call him to the work of their deliverance. Ver. 10.

1. In this history is related the subject to whom this vision appeared, Ver. 1. and he is noted.

1. By his name. And Moses. Sept. Onk. and rest the same. The term of connection is the only thing I shall note here, which by most is made copulative, (And) knitting this part of the history to the precedent, that is, God heard, and remembered, and saw, and knew, and then Moses was feeding, &c. Others read it as a rational particle, For Moses, &c. Immediately knit to the last act of Gods knowing or decreeing about Israels deliverance; God knew or determined to deliver, for Moses was doing thus, and God appeared to him as it followeth; so that this is a demonstration of that.

Ver. 1.

videntially feeding Jethro's flock, & here now God appeareth to him, to use him for his work. Aët. 7. 30.

Whence we note.

- D. 1. Gods decree of delivering his Church, and the execution of it are nearly united.*
D. 2. Gods instruments of deliverance are not laid aside, though long in preparing. 80 years.
D. 3. It is Gods use to take shepherds of flocks to make shepherds of men.
D. 4. Gods great instruments may be servant-shepherds, not Masters of their own flocks.
D. 5. Church deliverers God orders to be nurtured sometimes under Priests among strangers.
D. 6. God orders the motion of his instrumental shepherds to the place of his meeting.
D. 7. Shepherds seeking pasture for flocks, may meet with better for themselves.
D. 8. God makes men pitch, where he meaneth to appear to them.
D. 9. Places are rightly called by Gods name wherefoever he appears Ver. 1.
D. 10. Deserts are sometimes ordered for Saints to meet God in. Horeb.

Ver. 2.

2. The vision itself is here reported. Ver. 2. Herein we have 2 things mainly considerable. The vision presented in these words, And the Angel of Jehovah appeared to him in a flame of fire, out of the midst of a bramble bush Sep. Onk. Syr. Sam. Ar. fame. The Lord appeared &c. vulg. Lat. Herein,

1. The term connecting knits this vision unto the providential being of Moses in the desert, and looking to his fathers flock.

2. The matter connected is the vision here presented, wherein occurs,

1. The subject appearing, the Angel of Jehovah; of whom it is rightly said, that he is the Angel of the Covenant, even the Son of God, who afterward was manifested in the flesh; it is the very same that afterward is called Jehovah, and the God of Abraham, &c. Ver. 4. 5. &c. God in Christ Jesus is he who at this time, and to Abraham before, and to Joshua afterward appeared; God in grace.

2. The subject to whom he appeared was Moses; now feeding sheep in the wilderness, being 80 years of age, and waiting for Gods salvation.

3. The apparition itself, it was a visible discovery, he was at this time seen by Moses, manifested to his eye in the day time.

4. The form of this apparition, it was in a flame of fire; no difficulty is in the letter, for God is called a consuming fire, but here is he seen in a fire not consuming.

5. The special place of this appearance, it was out of a bush, a bramble bush, of which kind many are said to have bin there, whence the mount was called Sinai, from Seneh a bramble. Aët. 7. 30. This is the plain meaning of the history in the letter, what God intended by this will appear best by his speech to Moses which followeth. Ver. 4. 5. 6. &c.

2. The vision proved by sight in the issue of it, And he saw, and beheld the bush burned with fire, and the bush (even) it was not consumed, or devoured; Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. Here,

1. The matter immediately connected is the proof and demonstration of this vision, where,

1. The means of this proof, is the sight of Moses, And he saw, namely that which did appear, and by his eye did find it no phanly, but a real truth; no surer discovery than by the eye.

2. The effect proved. And behold, &c. Two events were demonstrated.

1. That the bush did truly burn.
 2. That yet the bush was not consumed, or eaten up by the fire or devoured, where are to be noted.

1. That the bramble bush was combustible matter, apt to consume in the fire.

2. That it was true fire apt to consume such matter, wherein God appeared.

3. That this fire was in the midst of the bush, and abiding there.

4. That the bush was not at all scorched but continued green in its very burning, not the smell of fire upon it. This was from Jehovah, who interdicted the power of the fire, and gave this wonderful sign in order, to shew Moses what he could do and what he was about to do for Israel his afflicted people.

The moral of this bush burning and not consumed I shall give you from Gods own mouth expounding it to Moses in the verses following; and let passe all other vain conceits of men.

Yet hence note.

- D. 1. After long expected deliverance* rance, God appears at length to help. 80. Years.

D. 2. Gods sweet appearances are usually in desert, wilderness-conditions.

D. 3. God meet's souls usually in a way of honest employment to shew mercy.

D. 5. Christ was known to be the Angel of the Covenant in the time of Moses.

D. 5. God in Christ did appear several wayes unto his people, before he came in their flesh.

D. 6. Gods fiery appearances are sometimes in mercy to his servants.

D. 7. Gods bush-habitation is in order to shew good will unto his Church. Dent. 33. 18.

D. 8. Gods visions of old have had real demonstrations by eye witnesses.

D. 9. Gods power can, and doth at his pleasure interdict the power of fire to consume. Dan. 3.

D. 10. God works miracles upon lower creatures in order to shew his Church his power. Ver. 2.

Ver. 3.

3. The next thing declared in the history is the repentment of Moses concerning the vision thus expressed, Ver. 3. And Moses said, I will turn aside now, and see this great sight why the bramble bush is not burnt. Onkel. fame. Syr. fame.

This wonderful signe. Ar. — Approaching I will see, &c. Sept. Wherein we have to note these particulars.

1. The reasoning of Moses by himself, And Moses said, wherein we have to note,

1. The term connecting and, which knits Gods appearance unto his animadversion.

2. His act here connected, saying or speaking within himself; the vision puts him upon self-reasoning; it could do no less.

2. His diversion, I will turn aside now. Here mark.

1. The occasion, it was the now instant vision made known to him by God.

2. The motion, thereupon he turns aside from his other employments, intent upon the present apparition; where his mind as well as his body is turned about.

3. His inspection more nearly upon the vision presented; wherein occurs,

1. The act, I will see; his meaning was to find out by seeing the strangeness of the apparition, nor yet knowing this kind of Gods discovery to him.

2. The object, this great sight, that was, the fire in the bush, an unusual thing, whereof,

1. The visibility is discovered, it was an object to be seen.

2. The greatness or strangeness of it, he calleth it a great sight; it was of very great moment, at that time; which causeth great wonder.

3. The cause greatning this spectacle, and that was why the bush was not burned; that fire should be in such combustible matter, and yet such stuff should not be consumed, but abide green, as he perceived it; the reason of this Moses was very desirous to search out; as men of ingenuity and observation would be ready to do.

Observe we.

D. 1. Unusual apparitions of God may well put the best men upon self-reasoning.

D. 2. Observing hearts, are inclining more to turne into the inquiry of Gods discoveries.

D. 3. Great appearances of God, are greatly desirable to be looked into.

D. 4. The crossing of the course of nature, that fire should not burn, deserves inquiry. Ver. 3.

4. The next thing discovered is Gods bespeaking Moses, upon his diversion to see this great sight, wherein we have these particulars,

1. Gods calling to him by name, Ver. 4. In which verse we have to consider 3. things,

1. The occasion of Gods call, And Jehovah saw that he turned aside to see. Ver. 4.

And when, &c. that he went forward to see. — And it was revealed before the Lord, &c. Onkel. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. Here note,

1. The connection of Gods observation unto the resolution and motion of Moses, God presently observeth his inclination.

2. The matter connected, which comprehends.

1. Gods act of observation, expressed after the manner of men, Jehovah saw, i. e. immediately observed, and as it were eyed.

2. The object, the diversion of Moses & his approach to see the fire in the bush wherein Jehovah himself appears.

2. The call itself. And God called to him out of the midst of the bramble bush, and said Ver. 4.

0000 2 Moses

Moses, Moses. The Lord called him. Sept. Out of the midst of the fire. Onkel. Sam. and Syr. same with the Hebr. From heaven. Ara.

1. The connection of this call to Gods sight of Moses adds to the goodness of the providence.

2. The matter here connected is Gods call.

1. The caller here is God himself Jehovah.

2. The called, Moses now turning to see.

3. The place of the call, the midst of the bush where the fire was.

4. The manner of the call, expressed vocally, and by name, Moses, Moses; The doubling of it also note's the intention of it from God, to raise attention in Moses.

Ver. 4.

3. The return of Moses, And he said behold me, or as much as, here am I, Syr. Sam. Onk. same. — What is the matter? Sept. What is your pleasure? Ar.

1. The connection here knits the reply of Moses to the call of God, he answers to his name which God calleth by it.

2. The answer connected is the presentation of himself to hear the will of him that called, behold me, lo here am I, what is thy pleasure, what is the matter for which I am called?

Note.

D. 1. Gods observation is knit unto the inclination of them that turn toward him.

D. 2. God looks to them who turn unto his discoveries, with a purpose to shew them more.

D. 3. Gods call and encouragement is joyned with his observation of them who incline to him.

D. 4. God giveth to his servants not only visions, but a voice for them to know his mind.

D. 5. God calleth by name such as incline toward him, and are dear unto him.

D. 6. God doubly calleth where he doubly loveth, and stirreth unto double duty.

D. 7. Ears and hearts of those are attuned whom God calleth by name.

D. 8. Gods truly called, are ready to offer themselves to hear and do his pleasure. Ver. 4.

2. God bespake's Moses by way of Item or direction to him about his turning-aside and addresse toward the sight. Ver. 5. Herein we have.

1. Gods inhibition, And he said, draw not nigh or approach not hither. Sept. Sam. Syr. Onk. Ar. the same. Ver. 5.

1. The connection of Gods inhibition to the reply of Moses is observable, he is ready to come, but God puts him upon a stop. We may read, then or but God said, God prevents him graciously, that he present not himself for hurt.

2. The inhibition connected, which forbids his sudden and rash approach unto the vision.

1. The motion denied, come not nigh, make no further approach; which seemeth to intimate, that Moses was too forward, neither did sufficiently consider, what he was about to do; therefore God giveth him a curb and putteth him to stand.

2. The place denied unto his approach, and that was the situation of the bush, and the fire within it; thereunto he was now moving, to see what it was, and what was the meaning of it, but in his motion God forbids him; come not hither, this is no place for you, while I am here.

Ver. 5.

2. Gods injunction Put of thy shoes from thy feet or loose thy shoes, &c. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. same. No difficulty in the letter; it is Gods command.

1. The act commanded is to loose or put off.

2. The object of it shoes, that were on.

3. The part to which they were fastened, his feet.

Quest. What meaneth this putting of the shoes?

Answ. It is observed, that there is a threefold use of putting of the shoes spoken of in Scripture.

1. Common, and that to divers ends.

1. To wash the feet.

2. To expresse sorrow, as with David. 2. Sam. 15. 20.

2. Civill, as to give a mans right away to another, as Deut. 25. 9. Ruth. 4. 7.

3. Religious, as in this place. Jos. 5. 15.

Quest. What religion is in putting of Shoes?

Answ. 1. None, if we look upon it in itself, for God enjoyeth not men to put off garments for the actions sake.

2. Yet as to the signification of it there is respect to God, as the putting away of filth spiritual, which is resembled by that which cleaveth to the feet; God therefore puts Moses to a stand, and then mind's him of his rash adventure to approach unadvisedly, and command's away his filth, requiring this signal of it.

3. The reason of both these, For the place in which thou standest upon this holy ground or ground of holiness. Sept. Onk. Sam.

Syr. Ar. the same. As

As the injunction was for external work, so the reason is from an external privileged. Wherein these terms concur.

1. The subject spoken of The place whereupon Moses then stood, which was a common pece of ground in the wilderness.

2. The attribute given to it, it is holy ground, that is, for the time, by Gods glorious appearance separated from other places, to be of special use at present for Gods discovery of himself.

Quest. How could this place be holy?

Answ. 1. Not positively, for it was not capable of such holiness neither any other place. 2. Relatively only it is called holy, by reason of Gods appearance there, and while he was there, and no longer.

Quest. Are any places so holy now, or to be so reputed?

Answ. Yea, as to the present appearances of God in his ordinances, the place where they are exercised, may be relatively called holy; but there is no holiness abiding, when they are done.

Quest. Are we to put of shoes as Moses did?

Answ. 1. That was a signal commanded for that time, which God requireth not now, therefore it is superstition, to make the feet bare or to consecrate slippers, or the like abominable practices. 2. The truth is that which God requireth of us, that is, with selfdenial, deposition of the body of sin, and renovation of Spirit to approach unto him; no other shoes doth God command to put off at this time in our approach to him.

Yet hence we gather.

D. 1. Accesses by honest hearts to the place of Gods appearing may be rash.

D. 2. Such hasty and unadvised accesses, God forbids unto his servants.

D. 3. Signal depositions of filth God hath enjoyned heretofore; but now the truth.

D. 4. Due preparations must be made by creatures in their accesses to God.

D. 5. Places have bin and may be relatively holy, for Gods appearance in them.

D. 6. So farre to use them holily as in reference to Gods presence is the duty of all. Ver. 5.

3. God bespake's Moses in the discovery of himself, who it was that was meant by the Angel before that appeared in the flame of fire; and this he doth also to make Moses more careful in his addresse to see this great sight. In this 6th verse we have 2 heads considerable.

1. Gods discovering of himself, & he said. Ver. 6.

2. Moses his resentment of it, And Moses hid, &c.

In the former, who have to note.

1. The terme connecting, And he said, or moreover, as ours render, which noteth a rendering of a further reason why Moses should be so circumspect in his addresse, not onely because the place was relatively holy, but God himself was now there, which sanctified the place, and therefore should strike an awe upon Moses.

2. The matter connected which is Gods own description of himself which here he maketh unto Moses. I am the God of thy Fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. It is I, I am the God of thy Fathers. Act. 7. 32. Sam. Sept. Onk. Syr. Ar. are all in the singular number as the Hebr. Herein is plainly discovered the subject appearing in the Angel, fire, and bush, it was God.

Ver. 6.

1. Expressed by the name of his power, Elohim the almighty God.

2. Expressed relatively, by his correlates with whom he had made his Covenant. There is a little difference in reading the first term of relation. In the Hebrew, it is read singular, I am the God of thy Father, as it were of Amram, but by Luke, Act. 7. 32. it is read, God of thy Fathers plurally, unto which Abraham, Isaac and Jacob are joined by apposition; afterward Chap. 3. 15. it is read your Fathers, in the plural, and it may take in the other intervenient Fathers, as Levi and Amram, but this weakens not the truth intended; for if we read Father in the singular, it taketh in the same apposits, thy Father Abraham, and thy Father Isaac, &c. The summe is, that here we have the mystery of God revealed, that is, God in relation to sinners and in Covenant and communion with them, which alone can be God in Christ. Now more distinctly this description of God declareth to us.

1. That it was the true God, who now appeared, opposit to all Idols. Such was the God of Abraham.

2. That it was God Almighty able to performe all his promises; such was the God of Abraham. Gen. 17. 1.

3. That it was the living God, he that giveth life to all and to Abraham, &c. and will do it from the grave. Mat. 22. 32.

4. That it was God in Covenant with the fathers of the Israelites and with them in Abraham, &c.

5. That it was God in special relation to a people called from the world; as Abraham his friend.

6. That it was God in Christ, for without him made the seed of Abraham, no flesh could have bin so related unto God; Hereby alone Jehovah becomes the God and Father of poor creatures. Joh. 20. 17. This is he who appeared now with good will to Moses in the bush.

Ver. 6.

2. The resentment which Moses had of this discovery of God is thus expressed, And Moses hid his face, for he feared to look unto God. He feared from looking upon him. Hebr. — And turned away his face, for he feared to look before God; or toward him; Sept. — Bowed down his face because he feared to look toward the glory of God; Onkel, — Sam. and Syr. as Hebr. — Covered his face when he feared to look to the Angel of God. Ar. Two things are herein obvious to view,

1. The action of Moses, He hid his face. This is attributed to Angels. Isai. 6. 2. & to men. 1 Kings. 19. 13. Elijah. Job. 13. 20. In which are implied these effects,

1. Self-abhorrence upon sense of the disproportion between God and creatures, therefore they hide,

2. Reverence of Gods Majesty, acknowledging inability to stand before him.

2. The reason of his action, Because he feared to look upon God. The reason is made up,

1. Of his passion, fear, he feared or was afraid, therefore he hid his face.

2. Of the object of his passion, The sight of God.

1. God is terrible when he appears in fire.

2. Sight of God with bodily eyes cannot consist with the life of creatures, as God told Moses upon another occasion. Ex. 33. 20.

Quest. How could he look upon God who is a Spirit?

Answer. It is not meant of God in his being properly, but in that terrible form of fire, wherein he appeared unto Moses at this time; now doubts this was a formidable apparition and the sense of Moses was overwhelmed by the glory of the object; this is it which is called God, but was onely the signal of him.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Gods presence connected to places makes them holy.

D. 2. Gods presence in such holy places should make men careful in approaching.

D. 3. Signalls of Gods appearance are owned by God to be himself. It is I.

D. 4. God in truth is he who appeared in the fire and the bush.

D. 5. God almighty is he who is known to be the God of Abraham, &c.

D. 6. It is the living and quickning God who is the God of Abraham restoring to life.

D. 7. It is God in Covenant who appears in mercy to his people.

D. 8. God is in near relation with whomsoever he is in Covenant. Abrahams friend.

D. 9. It is God in Christ who hath any relation unto or communion with creatures. Gal. 3. 16.

D. 10. God in Christ hath not onely a general, but a personal relation to every one in Covenant.

D. 11. Gods gracious discoveries may prove terrible to them that are not acquainted with them.

D. 12. Consciounes of self-guilt is enough to make creatures hide from God.

D. 13. Apprehensions of Divine Majesty may make the best of creatures vail themselves.

D. 14. Faith in the best of men doth not alwayes over-act sense, but that it may trouble them.

D. 14. Visible discoveries of God, though in grace, are terrible. Man's eye cannot take God.

D. 16. Fear and trembling may befall Gods dearest servants in such apprehensions.

D. 17. All such fears and terrors may dispose to receive Gods sweeter manifestations to men. V. 16.

4. God bespeaketh Moses by declaring to him the end of the present vision, which is twofold,

1. To shew his own respect to Israel. Ver. 7. 8.

2. To call Moses unto the work of deliverance. Ver. 9. 10.

In the first these heads more specially occur,

1. Gods resentment of Israels scorning or oppressing affliction. Ver. 7.

2. Gods resolving thereupon in his present appearance. Ver. 8.

About the first of these we have to observe,

1. The manner of expressing it, and that that was by speech, And Jehovah said: All readings to the same. — The Lord said to Moses, Sept. Herein.

1. The term of connection, joineeth this return of Jehovah unto Moses in his consternation, while he hid his face and was ashamed and afraid to look upon the visible glory of God, now the Lord bespeaks him kindly, to support him under his present passion.

2. The subject returning, Jehovah the same God of whom Moses was now afraid.

3. The manner of returning was by speech to his ear, not by any further appearance to the eye; this was dazzled already, and the glory of God had overpowered it: therefore Gods word would better serve to encourage and support him, by teaching him Gods meaning in this formidable vision. This was doubtless by an audible voice out of the fire, as is expressed Acts. 7. 31.

2. The matter here uttered by God unto Moses for his support which is the narration of the end of his appearance, and therein the genuine sense or meaning of the great sight of the fire in the bush; which was to let him know, that he had impressions of Israels burdens on him, and would now ease them. Two heads are more specially considerable.

1. The sense which God own's of Israels sorrows, and that after the manner of men is twofold.

1. By the eye, thus expressed, Seeing I have seen the affliction of my people, which is in Egypt, Sept. Sam. Syr. same. By revealing is revealed before me the servitude of my people, Onkel. — Now I have regarded the weakness, &c. Ar.

1. The subject of this sense is Jehovah, speaking after the manner of men.

2. The act of sense or seeing here is properly an act of providence, regarding & observing creature actions below, in a tendency to measure unto every creature according to their state, and doings; & the doubling of the word with the Hebrewes notes exactness of Gods apprehension, certainty of it, as ours. I have surely seen, and of the speedy effect of this providence now at hand in Gods care of saving them, seeing to deliver them, he continued to see.

3. The object of this sense, set out,

1. Under the common notion of men, a people, not one poor creature but multitudes.

2. Under a term of propriety, my people; Gods by Covenant with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, even his Israel.

3. Under a special condition of affliction and bondage and oppression.

4. Under a notation of the place of their abode, that people which were now oppressed in Egypt, that which is stiled the iron furnace, the house of bondage; God seeth this place of their sojourning.

Ver. 7.

2. By the ear, thus reported, And I have heard their outcry because of their exactors, or Taskmasters, as ours. יגזרם Sept. — Their cry is heard in my sight; &c. Onkel. — Sam. Syr. oppressors, exactors, governors. Ar.

1. The terme connecting joineeth this sense to the former, hearing to seeing; which note's a thorough sense and deep impression.

2. The subject of it is the same Jehovah.

3. The act of sense expressed after the manner of men is hearing, I have heard. 4. The object of this sense is the cry of the same people; it entered into the ears of the Lord of Hosts. Jam. 5. 4.

All this sets out the true, and deep sense which God had now of Israels sorrows; cries in prayer may be understood.

5. The cause of their crying, the cruelty indured from their Exactors or Taskmasters, or Oppressors, who for above 80 years, had kept the Israel of God under cruel bondage; all this God saw and heard.

2. The proof of this sight and hearing, the sense of Israels burdens. For I know their sorrows, or his (speaking of Israel, as oner.) Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. the same. —

Their griefes are revealed before me. Onkel. This passage is made by some, to be a repetition of the former sense, and synonymous with it, but the rational particle, noteth this rather to be the reason or proof of the former sense expressed, which God had of Israels sorrows.

1. The rational or causal particle ו expresseth the reason of Gods seeing and hearing, I have heard and seen, for I know.

2. The reason itself is Gods knowledge of these sorrows, which I take here in the same sense, as verse the last of the second Chapter; where it was noted that Gods knowledge signified his decrees ordering all affairs about Israel; and here it being a reason of Gods sense of Israels miseries; if question be, why is God so sensible of all their sorrows? Surely because by his knowledge or foreknowledge he hath ordered, what they should suffer from the Egyptians; therefore it could not be otherwise but that God must be acquainted with them: All that he hath ordered by his knowledge, he must needs see and hear when it cometh to passe. All this declares Gods resentment of Israels pressing afflictions in Egypt. Ver. 7.

2. The next head, which makes up the first end of Gods present appearance, is his resolution, what he was now about to do, which is in two effects.

1. In

Ver. 8.

1. In their deliverance out of Egypt. And I am come down to deliver him or them out of the hand of the Egyptians. All readings agree to this purpose. Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. — I reveal myself, or, appear. Onk.

1. The term of connection knits Gods resolution to his resentment, I know, and I have descended.

2. The matter here connected consists in two acts.

1. I have descended; this is spoken after the manner of men, and herein we are to note.

1. The term a quo, Heaven the throne of God, where God had seemed to hide himself from his people; so it seemed to men.

2. The motion of God, expressed by descending. Now God cannot properly be said to ascend or descend, but after the manner of men, he is said to come down when he appears among men, either to visit in judgment, as Gen. 11. Gen. 18. or in mercy, as in this place; and here, in the signal of fire in the bush, is God more properly said to come down, for it came from heaven.

3. The term ad quem, was that very place where Moses was in that mount, and in that bush. Thither came God to discover unto Moses, his purpose of delivering Israel.

Ver. 8.

2. The end of this descent, To deliver Israel out of the hand of the Egyptians, or set him free. Here note.

1. The act, which in part terminates the former descent, deliverance, freedom. I am come down to set free, and deliver.

2. The object of it is Israel, to deliver him, or them as the relative looks upon the whole people.

3. The term from whence of this deliverance is, the hand of the Egyptians, that is, the oppressing and cruelly persecuting power of the Egyptians; under their hand or power they were for present crying: hence God commeth to take them.

Ver. 8.

2. In their induction into a better place, And to make them go up out of this land, to a good land. & a large, to a land flowing with milk and honey, unto the place of the Canaanites, &c. All readings agree, only, Sept. and Sam. adde Gergefams, to 6 others. Herein we have also to note.

1. The connection of this to the former act of Gods deliverance; they go together.

2. The initiation of them into a better estate, set forth in these particulars.

1. In the motion, I will make them to ascend, that is, to mount from this to a better condition.

2. In the term a quo. From this land that was the land of their captivity and bondage, Egypt.

3. The term whereunto, a better land; set out.

1. In a general description by its quality, threefold.

2. It was a good land, made so by Gods goodness.

3. It was a large land; though upon account the whole land was not above 160 miles in length, and 46 miles in breadth, yet large in respect of Goshen, where they were straitened.

3. It was a fruitful land, as here spoken of, flowing with milk and honey; which being a phrase hyperbolical; notes the greatest fruitfulness. Deut. 8. 7. &c. Num. 13. 28. Ex. 13.

2. In special, by the names of the several inhabitants, within the land, so it is called the place of the Canaanites, Hittites, Amorites, Perizzites, Hivites & Jebusites. Ten sorts of people are reckoned. Gen. 15. 19. 20. 21; sometime five sorts. Ex. 13. 5. Sometimes all are meant under the Canaanite, neither doth that make much difference, whether the place described by one or more nations there inhabiting. The Canaanite is thought to be a general name comprehending all, but in this and other places being joined with others, it must note a distinct people as the rest. They were all Chame posterity, into their land God was now bringing the children of Shem. Ver. 8.

Quest. How is the meaning of the vision gathered from all this?

Ans. Thus. 1. This bush is Israel in Egypt. 2. The fire is the scourging affliction on them. 3. The not consuming is the pretervation of Israel in, and deliverance of them out of all these tribulations. And thus God seemeth to speak unto Moses, The great sight which thou art turning to see is this, I the God of Abraham, &c. am in the fire and bush; and am now come to teach thee, that as the fire is in the bush and that not consumed, because I have interdicted the fire; so in the fiery furnace Israel shall not be consumed, for I am now come to perform my word to Abraham, and to deliver them from bondage to liberty, in the land of promise.

Learn we here.

D. 1. God usually speak's kindly to ease the fears and conseruations of his servants at his appearing.

D. 2. Jehovah exactly, surely, speedily and continually resent's the Churches affliction.

D. 3. Gods propriety in his people engageth him thoroughly to see their troubles.

D. 4. Egypt is eyed by God in all their oppressions of his people.

D. 5.

D. 5. Cruel exactors make Gods people cry aloud to him in complaint and prayer.

D. 6. God heareth every cry, which his people put up to him.

D. 7. Gods determining and ordering knowledge of the sorrowes of his Church, must needs affect him.

D. 8. God doth determinately know and order all sorrowes upon his Church for weight, and time. Ver. 7.

D. 9. According to the time fore-known, God will come down for the helpe of his oppressed.

D. 10. Deliverance from the hand and power of oppressors, commeth when God descends.

D. 11. Ascent of the Church to their good and full and large inheritance is on Gods descent.

D. 12. Flowings of milk and honey are in the Churches inheritance. Cant. 4. 11. Ps. 19. 11.

D. 13. The place of wicked nations God can make the inheritance of his people.

D. 14. God will make good his promise to the uttermost to give the Church its inheritance. Ver. 8.

Ver. 9.

2. The next part of the end of Gods appearing now to Moses is to call him to be his instrument for Israels deliverance. Ver. 9. 10. Wherein are recorded,

1. The occasion of this call, Israels oppressed condition; here again repeated. Ver. 9. And now behold, the cry of the sons of Israel is come unto me, and I also have seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them, Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. In these words God sheweth to Moses, what he saw and heard of Israels affliction, and his resolution for redresse implied, whereupon he proceed's to call him in the verse following.

In the present God sheweth to Moses how he was affected with Israels condition in Egypt, and therein what he was intended to do; in the next verse he declareth what Moses himself must do under the hand of God. In this verse we have.

1. Gods special note of demonstration unto Moses. And now, or, now therefore behold, as God had once expressed his sense of Israels burdens in Egypt. Ver. 7. So he doubleth it heré, with a special intimation unto Moses to observe it.

1. The term of connection is read by some, only as Copulative, by others as Illative, and it joineth this to the foregoing words of Gods descending, I am come down, and now or therefore now, do thou Moses consider, he would have Moses to know his sense of his peoples grief.

2. The term of demonstration. Behold, which doth eminently hold out what followeth unto the observation of Moses for his encouragement.

2. The matter demonstrated, which is the apprehension of his peoples misery, and the oppressors cruelty. This is couched in these two expressions.

Ver. 9.

1. The cry of the sons of Israel is come unto me. Herein God expresseth his resentment of Israels sorrowes, under a phrase of motion, wherem,

1. The subject of the motion is the cry of the children of Israel, both in complaint and prayers.

2. The motion itself, comming, it is come, which notes a real access to affect God.

3. The term, unto me; their cries have reached and touched me. And this cannot be without Gods return, to come unto their cries for help.

2. And I have also seen the oppression wherewith the Egyptians oppress them. Here is set forth Gods aspect at the same time upon the enemy.

1. The term coupling this to the former sheweth Moses, that as God had an ear to Israels cry, so he had an eye upon the Egyptians oppression.

2. The act of sense expressed, I have also seen, which is spoken after the manner of men, and as to God it notes an act of providence, that he doth not barely look upon his enemies, but with indignation, and zeal to be avenged. He heard their cry in mercy, he seeth their oppression with fury.

3. The object, the Egyptians in their cruel work of oppressing Israel, with oppression they did oppress them; and now God saith, behold Moses, I have seen all this, and will require it, I will now do my part for my peoples sake. Ver. 9.

2. Now followeth Gods call to Moses to do his part, Therefore now come thou, and I will send thee to Pharaoh, and bring thou forth my people. the sons of Israel, out of Egypt. Onk same. — King of Egypt, and thou shalt bring forth, &c. out of the land of Egypt. Sept. Herein note,

Ver. 10.

1. His call. Therefore now come thou.

1. The term connecting is best read as illative from the precedent, where God bespoke Moses, behold I have heard & seen, & I will do my part for Israels deliverance, therefore I will have you also to do yours in my hand to finish that work, it is great encouragement.

2. The call, come thou, I will now
Pppp make make use of you after my preparing you thus long for Israels deliverance, therefore Moses come thou, came away to attend my work.

Ver. 10. 3. The instancy of this call. Therefore come now; no delay Moses, come away now to help Israel.

2. His mission, And I will send thee to Pharaoh.

1. The connective particle knits this unto the call precedent, and doth demonstrate it, whom God calls he send's.

1. The mission, I will send, that is, in my name power and authority; I will send thee, none but thee, for thee I have called; yea to Pharaoh I will send thee; the oppressor of my people Israel, so it is said, He sent him by the hand of the Angel. Act.

Ver. 10. 7-35. 3. His commission. And bring thou forth my people the children of Israel out of Egypt.

1. The coupling particle joins commission, to mission, and call, which is here properly given by way of command.

2. The mandate of commission is, bring forth, &c.

1. The work commissioned is eduction, deliverance.

2. The object noted.

1. Gods people, as related to him,

2. The sons of Israel, as related to him.

3. The term from whence, from Egypt, the place of bondage, and their miseries, which were inflicted on them therein. Ver. 10.

From all which we observe.

D. 1. God joineth together his own sense of his peoples misery & his servants observation. And.

D. 2. God would have such, that they may be instrumental for the Churches good, strictly to note his respects to it.

D. 3. God would have his servants know, that the cry of his oppressed comes to acceptance with him.

D. 4. God demonstrates that he seeth all the oppressions of the wicked on his people.

D. 5. Gods hearing Israels cry, and seeing Egypts oppression, carry suitable returns to both.

D. 6. In times of hearing his Churches cry, God observeth the works of enemies towards them. Ver. 9.

D. 7. God sheweth respect unto his Church to stir up instruments to help.

D. 8. Gods going before is a sweet encouragement to instruments for following after. Therefore.

D. 9. Gods call by name must be to such as he makes instruments for his Churches help.

D. 10. Gods call is instant and suffers no delays in such as are called.

D. 11. Though God need no man, yet he calleth some for his peoples help.

D. 12. Such as God calls he send's to bring about deliverance.

D. 13. The mission of God may be of the poorest man to the greatest Potentate.

D. 14. Gods commission goeth with his mission and call, commanding their work.

D. 15. Gods command is enough to empower the weakest man for the strongest work.

D. 16. Gods people and Israels children, are in a sweet conjunction.

D. 17. God by his word will have his own people and Israels children out of Egypt.

D. 18. The instruments sent by God shall work out the Churches deliverance. Ver. 10.

3. The next work for preparing Moses for Israels deliverance is the encouragement of him to undertake the office of being Gods instrument in this salvation, which is discovered in several passages of conference between God and him in the remainder of this & part of the following Chapter. Herein we have,

1. The encouragement given to Moses to the 17th verse of the 4th Chap.

2. The events befalling hereupon, from Ver. 18. to 26.

1. The whole encouragement given to Moses by way of discourse between God and him, whereof there are 4 parts in this dialogue.

1. The partly between them. Ver. 11, 12.

2. The next discourse, Ver. 13. to 22th of the third Chapter.

3. The

3. The next conference. Ch. 4. Ver.

1. 9.

4. The last colloquy. Ver. 10. to 17.

1. The first discourse we have. Ver. 11.

12. wherein,

1. Moses begins to excuse himself from the former call in the foregoing verse, wherein note,

Ver. 11.

1. The manner of making it, And Moses said unto God, some read but, adversatively to Gods former call. Syr. and Ar. read no connection. All the rest agree. — Onk. before God.

The forme here of making excuse is by speech or word of mouth, wherein are these particulars,

1. The term connecting, and or but, it knits the excuse of Moses to the call of God, by way of setting against it.

2. The spokes-man is Moses to whom God appeared, and whom he now called.

3. The subject bespoken is God himself appearing in the fire upon the bush.

4. The speech itself, it was the fruit of the lips, in the expression following.

2. The matter of his excuse, is generally his pretended insufficiency for the work, and that level'd at both parts of the call given in the former verse.

1. Who am I that I should go to Pharaoh?

2. Who am I that I should bring forth the sons of Israel out of Egypt? Onk. same.

To Pharaoh King of Egypt, &c. out of the land of Egypt, Sept. all other readings agree well. Herein mark,

1. The agreement to avoid Gods call is the plea of his own disproportion unto it. Who am I? It is an expostulation nullifying, and abasing himself, who or what I? poor I, what can I do? a poor exile and shepherd here in Midian. And this he urgeth against both parts of the work.

1. Call you me to go to Pharaoh? who I for this work? I a poor shepherd, he a mighty King, a Potentate, how shall I come at him? He supposeth,

1. Himself unequal, a poor peasant.

2. Pharaoh as a Prince and mighty King.

3. The access to him to be difficult, if not impossible at least to any purpose to prevail with him about the business in his commission.

2. Call you me to bring forth the sons of Israel from Egypt. Who am I to effect this great work? it requires a King and an host to do it, and who poor I that I should ever bring this about? He proposeth to himself,

1. The sons and children of Israel as a poor persecuted people, able to do nothing.

2. That Egypt was an iron furnace, full of strength and power to keep them in bondage.

3. That to bring these servants out of the house of bondage, was a work infinitely surpassing his strength, therefore he pleads excuse. Who am I Lord for this work?

Quest. How is it that Moses is so backward now, seeing he appeared so ready to plead the cause of Israel in slaying the Egyptian?

Ans. 1. The brunt of his former persecution might impress fear. 2. The serious apprehension of the greatness of the work might put him upon a pause. 3. His humble thoughts of himself, and remembrance of his brethren rejecting of him might put him to a stand.

Whence we gather.

D. 1. Gods servants sometimes may put a but upon his call to undertakings for his Church.

D. 2. God himself may sometimes be deterred by the best of men, in their infirmity.

D. 3. The best souls are apt to have lowest thoughts of themselves for Gods work.

D. 4. Disproportion between the low estate of Gods servants and the heights of Potentates may impress fear.

D. 5. Visible difficulties in the Churches deliverance may dishearten instruments to work.

D. 6. Instruments despised formerly by the Church may be discouraged from coming to its help.

D. 7. The power of Egyptian oppressors may startle weak instruments of deliverance.

D. 8. Redemption of the Church from the house of bondage is a startling work. Ver. 11.

2. Gods answer now commeth upon the excuse of Moses, and that to encourage him against any dismayng apprehensions, and that in a double promise.

1. Of his presence to be with Moses in this undertaking, And he said, surely I will be with thee. And God spake to Moses saying, that I will be with thee. Sept.

For my word shall be for thy help. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. as the Hebrew. Note.

1. The term uniting this reply to the excuse of Moses; God is not behind hand

Pppp 2 with with him to take of his delatory plea.

2. The subject replying, God himself, who had called him, and to whom Moses plead his excuse, so good is God to his refusing creatures, to reply.

Ver. 12.

3. The matter of reply. Surely I will be with thee. It is a promise of Gods presence, wherein,

1. He joineth himself with Moses, thou sayest who am I? Consider Moses who I am; whether I can go to Pharaoh and deal with Egypt, let me be considered as the author of this work. I will be thy sufficiency.

2. The promise is to be with Moses in going to Pharaoh, in bringing Israel out of Egypt.

3. The confirmation of it under certainty. Surely, &c. Or it may be rational, annexing it to Gods former words to Moses, For I will, &c.

This is his first promise, his effectual presence to face Pharaoh and deliver Israel.

2. The promise of a sign, as ours and most others do render, for confirming his faith; but some read it to another sense;

Ver. 12.

And let this be a token unto thee. The verb substantive is wanting, and is by some supplied in the future. And this shall be a sign unto thee. It may as well be read in the present. This is a sign unto thee that I have sent thee. Sept. Onk. &c. same. The various supply of the verb maketh the difference of interpreters, such as read this narratively make it referre to what went before in Gods fiery appearance, And this is or may be a token to thee, that I have sent thee.

1. The term of connection knits the sign unto the promise of Gods presence.

2. The demonstrative particle this so seems to referre to the vision of God in the bush. This which you see of my appearance, is a sign, that I will be with you in your work; and that I have sent thee.

3. The signal attributed, a token, sign, or prodigious semblance; which was verified in this great sight of the fire in the bush; the word note's a notable signal, a stupendous sign.

4. The end of its signification, that I have sent thee to deal with Pharaoh about my people and deliver them.

If the verb be supplied in the future, this shall be a sign or token to thee, that I have sent thee, when thou hast brought forth or in thy bringing forth the people out of Egypt ye shall serve God in this mountain. Here the demonstrative particle is referred to that which followeth, as the matter of this sign, viz. their serving God in this mountain, and so the sign is made out in that work.

According to this reading, we have here to note.

1. The help of faith promised, a sign. And this shall be for a token unto thee, that I have sent thee, seeing thy faith flaggers in this undertaking thou shalt know & be assured by what followeth.

2. The use of this sign to strengthen faith about his mission from God, by this signal maifest thou be confident, that I have sent thee in my name and authority unto Pharaoh; doubt not therefore to go and face him, and deal with him about this matter.

3. The matter of this signal, which is, the effect consequent in thy bringing forth, or when thou hast brought forth the people out of Egypt, ye shall serve God upon, or at, or in this mountain. All this came to passe.

1. That he did bring the people forth out of Egypt, under Gods out-stretched arm.

2. That they did serve God in that mount Sinai, there the Tabernacle was pitched, and there the law was given, and there God spake to Israel in thunder; & there was their eminent attendance on God for a time. When these things should be which now the word of promise declared, then he should know, that God had sent him. Ch. 19. and 20.

Quest. How could this be a sign now to Moses seeing all this was to come?

Ans. 1. Signals which God gave as helps to faith were threefold.

1. Antecedent unto the work promised, such was the fire in the bush, Gideons fleece, &c.

2. Some were concomitant, as the dividing of the sea, and the noise in the mulberry trees.

3. Some were consequent. A virgin conceiving and this serving God in the mount, &c. Which in present God gave in promise, and willed them to expect, and strengthen faith by them that God who was able to make them serve him in the mountain, he would deliver them out of Egypt.

2. A double signal may be here given, both antecedent which was the fire in the bush, and consequent in the peoples serving God upon that mount, and by both Moses was strengthened.

3. If we make more pauses, we may observe here,

1. The exhibition of the sign in the burning bush, to confirm Gods mission of Moses.

2. The promise of the effect.

1. That he should bring forth the people.

2. That they should serve and worship God there: either way tend's to the same purpose.

And we conclude.

D. 1. Gods goodness satisfieth the plea of his unwilling instruments for his work.

D. 2.

D. 2. Gods presence is surely with such whom God send's about his redemption-work.

D. 3. Gods gracious presence answers all objections of creatures weakness for his work.

D. 4. God can and will deal with difficulties, and overcome them for his instruments.

D. 5. Great signals God seeth sometimes useful to help the faith of his in great undertakings.

D. 6. Gods instruments are apt to question their mission from him, therefore need confirming.

D. 7. Events in the way performed may help faith to evidence the end to come.

D. 8. Redemption promised by God shall surely be performed.

D. 9. The service or worship of God is the great end of his Churches redemption.

D. 10. The true service of God in the place that God sets is the best return to him for deliverance. Luk. 1. v. 74. 75. Ver. 12.

2. The next encouragement is against his ignorance of Gods name and works, as the first was against the means of his own person; now this is made out in the second dialogue between Moses & God from the 13th verse to the end of the chapter, wherein,

1. Moses objects and questions. Ver. 13.

2. God answers and encourageth him. Ver. 14. 22.

In the first Moses being satisfied as to the disproportion of his person to the work, that Gods presence would make up that defect, yet a further discouragement is upon him, from his ignorance of Gods name, how to make it out to Israel, when he should come unto them; and if he could not well vouch his authority, he might dispend of getting audience from them, or credit with them. This scruple he opens to God. Ver. 17. wherein,

1. He propounds a supposition, and that twofold.

1. Of his going to Israel in the name of the God of their Fathers, And Moses said to God, behold, I coming to the sons of Israel or (when I come) and say to them the God of your fathers hath sent me. Onk. same.

And behold I will go, and say, &c. Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. to the same.

Ver. 13.

1. The replier hereby by way of supposition, Moses to God; wherein we have to observe,

1. The connection of this to Gods former answer where he had answered to the insufficiency of his person; yet again, Moses objects.

2. His address by way of speech to God, he said unto God as followeth.

3. His supposition proposed, wherein also,

1. The form of it, in a demonstrative particle behold, as if he would have God to take special notice of the matter supposed, lo, faith he, and note something more I have to say.

2. The matter of the reply, suppose I do go, and come to the children of Israel, and tell them that the God of their fathers sent me; suppose all this.

2. Of his entertainment with Israel, suppose also, That they shall say unto me, Ver. 13.

what is his name? Onk. same, to the rest.

— If they shall ask, &c. Sept.

1. He supposeth the children of Israel to be scrupulous, and that they will not easily credit him, but will be questioning of him.

2. He supposeth more specially, that they will question him about his authority by which he cometh to them.

3. He supposeth them hereupon to be inquisitive whether he knew the name of the God of their Fathers which he did pretend; that he could make known that name to them.

2. He makes his question, and there- in his objection, What shall I say to them? Sept. Onk. &c. same. Here he layeth one block more for God to remove; as if he had said, it is well that thou wilt go with me, this may satisfy me; but how shall I satisfy Israel, that it is so if they question me? What name shall I vouch to them for my authority, which may convince them that I am sent from thee unto them? this quere is.

1. Dubitantis, it notes Moses doubting, not of the true God for by faith he lived on him; but of the notation of that authority, which he was to urge; this he could not tell how to blazon, and therefore doubting he queries in what name to go unto them.

2. Objicientis, it note's his unwillingness unto the work upon his pretended ignorance of Gods name; what shall I say? Alas I can say nothing to them, what thy name, and title is to bear me out: one heretofore asked me in my prosperity in Egypt; who made thee a Prince and a Judge over us? And I could not then satisfy, how shall I do it now to the congregation of Israel?

D. 3. Disputing souls about Gods word, are apt to point out difficulties unto God. Behold.

D. 4. Supposition of a duty done, admits exception from Gods own about its success.

D. 5. Dissatisfaction of men about Gods instruments for salvation, may be supposed, as much as their duty done.

D. 6. It is incident to Gods own, to question instruments which God sends to them about authority. Name.

D. 7. Ignorance or doubtfulness of Gods name or authority to hold out, may discourage instruments to work.

D. 8. Inquisition of God to remove such doubts, and clear up his name is a reasonable duty of his servants. Ver. 13.

2. In the next place followeth Gods answer to satisfy Moses and encourage him against this doubt. Wherein we have to observe,

1. A direct answer to Moses about his name. Ver. 14. 15.

2. A repeated commission to go in this name. Ver. 16. 17.

3. A narrative of the issue of this embassy.

1. In respect of Israel. Ver. 18.

2. In respect of Pharaoh and the Egyptians. Ver. 19. 22.

To the first God answereth Moses directly about his name and telleth him what it was, and that two ways.

1. Positively, shewing him his name positive, whereabout we have to consider.

1. The proposition of this name of God, And God said to Moses I am that I am, or I will be what I will be. Onk. I am he that is. Septuagint. Sam. to the same. Syr. keeps the word Ehieh. The Ar. reads the eternal who passeth not away. We have here the almighty confounding to a poor doubting creature, and giving an answer to his demand, where

1. The connection closely uniting the answer to the question, God delayeth not to remove scruples out of the way of his instruments.

2. The replier is the almighty God himself.

3. The subject to whom, is Moses who was doubting and questioning about his call at present.

4. The reply itself, which is the notification of his name, he said I am that I am or I will be what I will be, both are the future tense.

The name which God giveth here himself is by a verb substantive which noteth nothing but being; some read the first verb as his name I am or I will be, tenses are changeable with the Hebrewes, and that wonder which note's Gods being needs to include all time, past, present, and to come;

He that is. Sept read; and that is most proper for God, to say I am in all times; the full rendering of the sense is. He that was, he that is, and he that is to come. Revel.

1. 4. 8. The other clause, that I am, or who am, is read by some as the reason of the former name, I am who I am, that is because I am from myself and will be, but it may all make up the name of God revealed here to Moses, and which expresseth to us,

1. The true and real being called I am.

2. The simple and pure being that purely is.

3. The absolute and independent being, of itself alone.

4. The original causal being of all beings that are.

5. The infinite and eternal being without beginning or end, the first and the last A & Ω.

6. The only being.

7. The universal being, the being of power, of wisdom, of justice, of holiness, of goodness, nothing that truly is, but is within this name. Thus God acquaints Moses with his name.

2. The use of this name, which God sheweth to Moses, And he said thus shalt thou say to the sons of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you or I will be. Onk. same, Ver. 14.

He that is hath sent me, Sept.

Syr. Ehieh. Sam. He that is. In these words God telleth Moses, in what name he shall go, and under what authority he shall deal with Israel.

1. The imposer of this use, God himself, he said.

2. The injunction, thou shalt say unto the sons or children of Israel, when thou comest to them, in evidence of thy authority.

3. The matter enjoined, which was in answer to his quere, what shall I say? Thus saith God, say, I am hath sent me unto you; as if he had said, if Israel question thy power and would know by what authority thou comest; tell them, it is in in the name of him, that is, who hath made them to be, and their generations to be in Egypt, and their afflictions to be, and is now about to make their deliverance to be, let them know that I, who am the being of beings, have sent thee unto them. This being however many of the gentiles confessed, yet under such divided and corrupt notions, that they lost him.

We note hence.

D. 1. Gods reply at hand to shew his name unto them that seek to to know it.

D. 2. Perfect being the cause of all beings is the proper name of God.

D. 3. God desire's to be known by the name of his being unto his servants.

D. 4. Gods being, well known and considered is enough to answer all objections.

D. 5. mission and commission from him that is, will bear out against creatures opposition.

D. 6. It is good for all Gods messengers to go out under the name of him that is. Ver. 14.

2. The next name by which God discover's himself to Moses is relative, about which note.

1. The expression of it in these words, And God said moreover unto Moses, thus shalt thou say unto the sons of Israel, the Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac and the God of Jacob hath sent me unto you, Sept. Onk. &c. same, and the rest.

In this proposition of Gods name observe.

1. The connection which brings in an addition to the former name; however that had bin enough, yet again, or further, or moreover, God ex superabundantia gives Moses satisfaction to his quere about his name; and to what he had said, he saith now more to Moses.

2. The expression of Gods name, two ways,

1. In the term of it; and thereabout note,

1. The preface injoining him, thus shalt thou say to the sons or children of Israel.

1. The person enjoined, Moses.

2. The persons to whom, the sons of Israel.

3. The injunction, to speak as followeth.

2. The name itself as standing in relation, and this expressed in the general, and in special.

1. The general relation is, The Lord God of your fathers, wherein we have to note,

1. The name of the first in relation, which carrieth the greatest dignity, and that double.

1. The name of his being, as before, though some letters are changed, Jehovah.

2. The name of his power, Elohim, the mighty God.

2. The correlate, Israels sons and Fathers, the Lord God of your Fathers.

3. The relation between these, noted in propriety, their God by Covenant, adoption, and they his sons or people.

2. The special expression is with respect to 3. chief heads.

1. The God of Abraham.

2. The God of Isaac.

3. The God of Jacob.

These were the great Fathers of Israel, and God was known by Covenant to be theirs. The threefold special relation, is a threefold testimony of Gods respect to them.

2. In the use of it, let them know, that in this name, I have sent thee unto them, which will be authority enough to vouch, when thou shalt come unto them.

2. The next thing about this name, is the assertion of it, and confirmation, in these terms, This is my name for ever, and this is my memorial to generation generation. Ver. 15.

My eternal name, and memorial of generations to generations. Sept. Generation and generation. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same.

This is a positive assertion for owning this name of God, wherein these terms occur;

1. The subject in the relative, This, which must take in, this of Ehieh or Jehovah, this of Elohim, this of being your Fathers God, this of being the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, all this.

2. The attribute, wherein occur these particulars;

1. The thing attributed, under two notions.

1. This is my name. שמי That of which Moses inquired, now God told him.

2. This is my memorial — זכרי —

The title by which I will be made mention of by men, who would know the true God. Hof. 5.

2. The specifying of both by duration, this is my name for ever; and this memorial of God to all generations; from age to age, unto the end of the world; will God be known by this name; and is, by shewing himself to be the God and Father of Christ, the seed of Abraham. Ver. 15.

2. In Gods answer, next to the revelation of his name, he reneweth his commission unto Moses, to go and make use of it, as before was expressed. Ver. 17. 16. Here the charge of God is given him in 2 heads.

1. To gather and assemble the elders of Israel.

2. To deliver Gods message to them in three particulars.

To the first, which is Gods charge unto him to set on about the work. Go and gather the elders of Israel. Onk. same. — Eldership of the sons of Israel. Sept. — Elders of the sons of Israel. Sam. Syr. Ar. No difference in matter.

The charge here given is in two acts.

1. For motion to dispatch, go hasten into Egypt, there is no longer stay for you in Midian, go now upon my business.

2. For assembling such to whom he was to impart his message from God. Gather or thou shalt gather the elders of Israel.

1. The act here enjoined is to gather together, or assemble after he was come into Egypt, such to whom he was first to deliver his message. The verb literally is the second person of the sense preterperfect put for the future, and that for the imperative, gather or thou shalt gather; be sure to do it, as if it were done already; so the time past seemeth to import.

2. The object of this assembling, the Elders of Israel; some read Senate or eldership, which is a title of office and not of age: such as were heads of tribes and of chief place with them, by whom affairs might be best communicated to the commons under every one of them.

2. The next part of his charge is to communicate his message unto them in 3 Heads.

1. About his authority, And thou shalt say unto them, Jehovah the God of your Fathers hath bin seen by me, or appeared unto me, the God of Abraham, & of Isaac, and of Jacob. Onk. Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. same. Herein he is enjoined to make known his call to them.

1. The subject enjoined Moses.

2. The injunction knit to what went before; when thou hast gathered them, then shew them thy commission by informing them of my present appearance unto thee.

1. By my name Jehovah, the God of their Fathers, the God of Abraham, &c. as before.

2. By the vision of me, tell them of this my extraordinary appearance unto thee, to send thee unto them in Egypt.

2. His message about Gods respect to them; tell them that I say, visiting, have visited you, and that which is done unto you in Egypt. Sam. the same. — And I have seen whatsoever hath befallen you in Egypt. Sept. — Remembering I have remembered you and all things done to you &c. Onk. Sam. Syr. and Ar. Our Translators supply, seen, from the Greek, but no absolute need of it; for Gods visiting doth respect also what was done to Israel in Egypt. In the whole therefore we may note.

1. The act of God to be discovered. Visiting I have visited, with a visitation have I visited. This, as it is referred to divers objects, hath in scripture divers senses; as here also.

1. If this be referred to Israel, it is an act of grace, a visitation in mercy, to deliverance. Whereabout we may observe.

1. The object Israel, Gods Covenant ones, the seed of Abraham his friend.

2. The act, and hereabout also note.

1. The principle of it, is God gracious, his mercy visits here.

2. The nature of it, visitation for help and deliverance to Israel: visiting and redeeming.

3. The certainty and truth of it in doubling the word, visiting I have visited, and actually am now visiting to save you.

2. If this be referred to the doings of Egypt toward Israel, as it is connected, it notes Gods visitation in vengeance, and herein.

1. The object is Egyptians with all their oppositions, and persecutions acted upon Israel.

2. The act of visiting is punishing, wherein.

1. The principle is God in wrath and fury.

2. The nature is vindictive, plaguing and visiting the Egyptians with judgments.

3. The certainty is the same with Israels deliverance, visiting I have visited. It is as sure as done already. Ver. 16. Gen. 15. 14.

3. His message about Gods present resolution, And I say I will make you ascend out of the affliction of Egypt unto the land of the Canaanites, &c. a land flowing with milk and honey. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. In this last message we have to observe.

1. The term of connection, which is read by ours and others copulative, by some, as a causal particle, wherefore, or for this cause I say; others as rational and declarative, for I say; to this sense I have visited you, for I say I will bring you up, this is the proof of his visitation.

2. The matter connected, which is the message, and that consists in two special heads.

1. The assertive authority of what he was to tell them; I say; tell them that I say it, whose name is Jehovah Elohim.

2. The message from the power, which he was to deliver, about Gods salvation of them, and his present resolution to effect it. Wherein are.

1. The term a quo of their deliverance and salvation, the affliction of Egypt; their great and cruel oppressions and persecutions of Israel.

2. The act of deliverance, I will make them go up out of the affliction of Egypt; that is, I will set them above it, and quit them from it.

3. The term ad quem, unto the land of the Canaanites, &c. wherein are given two of the characters specifying this land named before.

1. The present possessors of it, which are noted under the names of 6 nations forementioned.

2. The fruitfulness, and plenty of it. A land flowing with milk and honey; that is mainly by Gods blessing on it; though it were made barren by sin. That they might not be terrified with former famines. Ver. 17.

Whence observe.

D. 1. Gods commands justly issue for obedience unto all them, to whom his name is revealed.

D. 2. Dispatch from creatures must be where God commands, go tarry not.

D. 3. Gods wisdom in revealing his will to nations is by informing the heads of it. Elders.

D. 4. Elders, not only in age but office, God had required in worst times to steer his people.

D. 5. Gods will is, that his instruments of salvation, should shew the appearance of God to them for warrant.

D. 6. Jehovah the God of Abraham, &c. is onely he, that can warrant men for his work.

D. 7. Where God appears it is to say something unto his servants of his will to them.

D. 8. The God of Abraham will surely visit his Covenant seed in mercy to deliverance.

D. 9. The same God at the same time visits Egypt in judgment for vengeance. Ver. 16.

D. 10. Where God visits in mercy

he resolves to performe his will.

D. 11. What God saith is surely done; his saying and doing concur.

D. 12. Though affliction makes the Church go downward, mercy makes them ascend out of all.

D. 13. At Gods own will he changeth his Church from bondage and misery to enlargement and plenty.

D. 14. Gods resolution for mercy is but to quicken instruments to work, and the Church to receive. Ver. 17.

3. The last thing in Gods answer, after his name declared, and his commission renewed to Moses, is to shew him also for his encouragement the successe that he might expect, and that is twofold as in the sequel is expressed.

1. The successe upon Israel. Ver. 18.

2. On Egypt. Ver. 19.

In the successe declared upon Israel, two effects are promised to succeed.

Ver. 18.

1. Their audience or obedience. And they shall hearken unto, or obey thy voice. Sept. same. — Sam. Syr. Onk. they shall obey thee on thy word.

The letter is plain. Here we may consider,

1. The connection of this successe to the attempt of Moses; as if he had said, thou shalt not declare my will to Israel in vain, or to no purpose; say what I command thee, and see the issue.

2. The successe promised, wherein note,

1. Israel promised to be a subject teachable.

2. The compliance of them, they shall hear, or hearken to thy voice, so as to beleive thy word, and be obedient to all that I shall send by thee.

Ver. 18.

2. Their concurrence with him, as to help on their deliverance from Egypt. And thou shalt come, thou and the elders of Israel to the King of Egypt; and ye shall say to him, Jehovah the God of the Hebrews hath met with us; and now let us go, we pray thee, a journey of three dayes into the wilderness, that we may sacrifice to Jehovah our God. There is not much difference in the rest. — Sept. add's Pharaoh, &c. hath called us. We will go, &c. — Onk. the God of the Jewes is called upon us, &c. So Sam. All much to the same. Some read only vocabit for occurrit, which is the word in the text; but this altereth not the sense; for God met them doubtlesse to call them, now herein are foretold.

1. His entrance to Pharaoh, as leader to them; thou in the first place shalt come as the foreman, and guide to them.

2. Their association, thou and the elders of Israel, they shall accompany thee, as well as hear thee.

3. The term of their address, the King of Egypt, the supreme power, oppresting Israel at that time.

4. The addresse itself, thou and they shall come to him and stand before him.

5. The message from God to him, which they were to deliver. And ye shall say, &c. Which message containeth two heads.

1. A declaration of Gods appearance unto them, Jehovah the God of the Hebrews hath met with us. Wherein they were to give him to understand, that they came not now upon their own heads but from the injunction of God; in this is declared.

Ver. 18.

2. The authority injoining, Jehovah the God of the Hebrews. The name of his being and relation are again here used; the Caldee reads the God of the Jewes, but the original is Hebrewes; which note both the same people; but Hebrewes, was a contemptible name of them among the Egyptians, as in the first, and chapters foregoing. Hebrew women and one of the Hebrews children; which noted them a low despised people in Egypt, and therefore the Lord own's them by that name, the Lord God of the Hebrewes.

2. the objection which this authority imposeth the present charge, us, poor despised people.

3. The injunction, is carried in that word of meeting, Sep. read hath called us; the word is met but this meeting with them was to call them out to his worship; God is so said to meet with creatures, when he appears to declare his will to them, as to Balaam, Numb. 23. 3. 4. 15. 16. So here, Gods meeting with Moses and the rest was to declare his will, calling them out of Egypt to worship him.

2. The other part of their message was their own supplication, which they were to make unto the King, that they might answer Gods call, say to him also, And now let us go, we pray thee a journey of three dayes into the wilderness, and we will sacrifice (or that we may) to Jehovah our God. Wherein are charged on them.

Ver. 18.

1. An humble addresse by way of petition.

2. The matter of the petition, liberty to take three dayes journey into the wilderness, to Horeb, as some think.

3. The end of this journey, that we may sacrifice to Jehovah our God; according to the commandment of the Lord.

Quest. 1. Why doth Moses pretend only three dayes journey when a total departure from Egypt was intended? Was not this deceiving?

Answer. No, but the wildome and just proceedings of God appear in this entrance with Pharaoh.

1. God trieth him with this small request, let us go but three dayes journey; to see if so much favour might be granted to to his people; if he deny this, doubtles he will deny the greater.

2. Here is no deceit in this proposal, but a plain and down-right desire is made to him for Gods sake.

3. Gods proceedings are gradual in dealing with Pharaoh about Israels deliverance & he makes small demands at first without fraud or covine, but truly to try him, and convince him of more unreasonable sin.

4. It is no deceit for Gods servants to conceal some of Gods purpose when they declare part of his will as they are commanded.

Quest. 3. Why do they desire to go into the wilderness to sacrifice?

Ans. 1. This was Gods own direction unto them. 2. It was not meet to do it in Egypt, the worke being an abomination unto them, as Chap. 8. v. 26. 3. God also would teach us to single out ourselves for his worship from Idolators.

Quest. 3. Why was this desire made for sacrificing, seeing it was deliverance from Egypt aimed at?

Ans. 1. Their deliverance was in order to worship. 2. This demand discovers Pharaoh's malignity to deny God his worship; the great sovereign. Horrid wickednes it was found, neither to worship God himself, to whom he owed all, nor to suffer Gods people to do the same. this was a great quarrel between God and Pharaoh.

We note.

D. 1. Commission for power from God to minister salvation, with promise of successe is great encouragement.

D. 2. It is Gods work to make men hear and obey the message of salvation sent unto them.

D. 3. Where God promiseth, men shall hearken, and obey the voice which bring's redemption.

D. 4. Upon Gods encouragement instruments and subjects of redemption must move thereunto.

D. 5. Hearts wrought upon by God do not only hearken but concur to use means for deliverance.

D. 6. Under Gods commission his oppressed ones shall face their great oppressors.

D. 7. Gods message must be declared to oppressors to make them zeale.

D. 8. The Lord God own's his people under the most despised names. Hebrewes.

D. 9. Gods meeting with his people by command, and call, necessitate's them to seek their liberty.

D. 10. Humble addresse God will have his people use sometimes to their oppressors.

D. 11. Liberty is to be truly sought from men, with humility.

D. 12. God who can command all from tyrans, is pleased to order his people to beg small things.

D. 13. The smaines of the Churches desire aggravat's the sin of oppressors in denial.

D. 14. Wildernes service is desired by God, rather than mixtures with Egypt.

D. 15. The end of all deliverance unto the Church is Gods worship. This God requires.

D. 16. Relation to God blind's soules truly to the worship of him.

D. 17. God will have his people sometime beg of Tyrans liberty to sacrifice to him.

D. 18. Such requests are to aggravat the sin of oppressors, who deny Gods homage. Ver. 18.

2. The next successe which God foretels for his encouragement, is concerning Pharaoh and the Egyptians what issue his addresse and message shall have with them. Wherein these particulars are declared.

1. Pharaohs resistance and denial.

Ver. 19.

2. Gods contest with him and victory.

Ver. 20.

3. Israels egress with much spoyl.

Ver. 21. 22.

1. God tells Moses the worst, that it might not offend him afterward viz. that he must expect a denial from Pharaoh at his first attempt. Whereabout we may observe,

1. The certainty of the event upon Gods own knowledge, And I know, or I am sure, as ours and the 70. It is manifest in my sight. Onk. — Sam. Syr. Ar. I know. In this therefore note,

Ver. 19.

1. The connection of this to the former good successe of his addresse to Israel, Q999 2 they they shall hearken, but at the same time I know it will be otherwise with Pharaoh; the worst is knit to the best.

2. The subject assuring, I even I the Lord who from everlasting to everlasting see all events.

3. The term of assurance, I know or foreknow the event which you must expect from Pharaoh, and therefore I tell you of it before, that you may not be discouraged.

Ver. 19. 2. The event itself, as to Pharaoh, That the king of Egypt will not grant you to go no not by a mighty hand or unless by a mighty hand.

25) in in Sept. — Nor suffer you to go but for a mighty fear. Onk. Neman quidem valida Syr. — Nifi. Sam. — Neque par manum meam fortem. Arab.

1. The subject of this denial the King of Egypt, the proud insulting tyrant, with his counsel and abettors.

2. The denial, he will not grant you to go, according to your petition, no, not for three days.

25) 3. The aggravation of this denial, no not by a mighty hand, i. e. though I put out power and might to force him, yet he will resist my hand at first; or as the term is used it is more clearly read unless by a mighty hand, which afterward God promiseth to put forth, this is the plain and simple sense of this expression, which aggravates his denial, that he would contend with Gods mighty hand.

Quest. But why would God have Moses and Israel suffer this frustration?

Answer. 1. Hereby God sheweth his mind to aggravate Pharaohs sin being so kindly intreated, that he should dare so to contend with God. 2. Hereby he would exercise the faith of Moses and Israel to strive against sensible discouragements, and live upon his word.

Learn we.

D. 1. God declares the worst as well as the best that meet his servants in the way of salvation.

D. 2. It is Gods peculiar to foreknow and foretell future events. Let them tell us, &c. Isat. 19. 12.

D. 3. Gods knowledge doth assure him of things to come to pass.

D. 4. God knowes what the powers of the world will do against his Church and yet he try's them.

D. 5. It is incident to worldly powers to deny the humblest request from God.

D. 6. God in his wisdom suffers earthly powers, to wrestle with his mighty hand.

D. 7. Their sin is aggravated who ever contend with the mighty hand of God.

D. 8. The madness of sinners is so great, that they will put Gods power to it. Ver. 19.

2. Unto the former event upon Pharaoh which might somewhat discourage Moses, God adds a further & better success, which he promiseth, notwithstanding Pharaohs denial and resistance; Wherein he foretells.

1. The work he meaneth to do in Egypt, which in general was to take vengeance of them, about which we have related.

1. The causal act, And I will send out my hand, And stretching out my hand, 70.

And I will send the stroke of my strength. Onk. — And I will stretch out my hands. Syr. until I send my stroke. Ar. In this note,

1. The term connecting, And, some read it therefore, others, but, as an adverbative: All may well stand; for this connection may shew, the opposition which God makes to the resistance of Pharaoh, or, the reason of Gods putting out his hand, therefore he doth it, because Pharaoh would not grant their egress without it, if we read it copulative it notes the immediate putting forth of Gods hand, upon Pharaohs resistance, as the nearest consequent.

2. The matter connected, which is the expression of the cause, wherein concur,

1. The agent, Jehovah Elohim, the Lord God.

2. The act, sending forth, or stretching out, which notes the effectual manifestation of God against Pharaohs opposition.

3. The object put forth (my hand) so spoken as after the manner of men, but metonymically it notes power, and to stretch out Gods hand is to put forth his power, to the uttermost to contend with Pharaoh; I will see whose hand is stronger, his or mine.

2. The effect produced, And I will smite Egypt with all my wonders, which I will do in the midst of it. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. &c. same; here mark.

1. The term connecting effect to cause, most nearly.

2. The effect itself connected, wherein note.

1. The same cause proceeding, I the same.

2. The dreadful effect, set out to us.

Ver. 19.

1. By the nature of it, smiting I will smite Egypt, which notes Gods breaking King and people to pieces; it is expressed by wounding, killing, in other places; it notes Gods severe exaction from Egypt.

2. By the means of this smiting (With all my wonders or marvelous works) These were all those plagues executed on Pharaoh and the Egyptians.

3. By the certainty of them, (Which I will do in the midst thereof) Wherein God assureth him, that he will work such wonders of judgment in Egypt, that proud Potentates shall feel, and tremble at his manifestation I will surely do them in the very midst of Egypt.

Ver. 20. 2. The success of this work of God in Egypt, And after that he will send you away. Sep. Sam. Onk. Syr. Ar. Vulg. same.

1. The term connecting this, And, immediately after I have done these wonders.

2. The term of order, these wonders of judgment being first done; afterward comes the issue.

3. The success is Israels freedom, about which observe,

1. The deliverer is Pharaoh himself, he that at first would deny their dismissal.

2. The object of deliverance is Israel.

3. The act, he will send you away, and be glad to be rid of the judgements that pursue him. He will thrust you out in haste. Ver. 20.

Whence we Learn.

D. 1. God is at hand to deal with them that contend with his power.

D. 2. Gods hand put forth, will smite the arm of flesh.

D. 3. Upon Gods putting forth his hand to vengeance, great smittings are on enemies.

D. 4. Wonderful vengeance Gods hand giveth forth sometime to cruel adversaries.

D. 5. God will certainly work wonderful plagues, where he threatens them.

D. 6. The very midst of Gods enemies shall have experience of his wonderful plagues.

D. 7. Where grace will not prevail with wicked adversaries, force from God shall.

D. 8. Gods power put forth makes the greatest oppressors quit his people, will or will they. He that denieth them egress, thrusts them out. Ver. 20.

3. The last thing wherein the success of the embassy of Moses into Egypt is declared, is the clear and comfortable passage of them out of Egypt, whereabout God foretelleth these things to encourage him.

1. His grant of favour to them from enemies.

2. His promise of their egress withfulness. Ver. 21.

3. His discovery of the manner, Every woman, &c.

4. His purpose to the end of all. Ver. 22.

1. The first is thus expressed, And I will grant favour to this people in the eyes of the Egyptians. I will grant the favour of this people, &c. I will give favour to this people before the Egyptians, Sept. — I will give the people into favour, Onk. — I will make this people gracious. Syr. Sam. and Ar. to the same. Herein note,

1. The term of connection, and, this knits the following event, to the precedent; so soon as God hath made the King to yield, then will he incline the people to a compliance for his peoples good.

2. The matter connected is a promise of making the people of Israel gracious in Egypt, however they have bin vile. Herein note,

1. The Author Jehovah undertaking it.

2. The subject, that people, Israel owned by him.

3. The boon vouchsafed, favour in the eyes of the Egyptians who had maligned and oppressed them.

4. The effectual causation, by the almighties gift or grant, who had all their hearts in his own hand; I will give favour unto this people from the Egyptians, or give them unto favour; they shall favour them however they have abhorred and persecuted them.

2. The second is in these words, And it shall be, when ye go out, ye shall not go empty. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. I two things are here promised by God to them.

1. That they shall certainly go out of Egypt by his power, & exprossive command, ye shall surely walk, or go out from Egypt.

2. That they shall go out full fraught; it is expressed negatively by a utrum, but affirmatively it carrieth a fulness of good, wherewith they should march out of Egypt; when it is said, ye shall not go empty, according to the promise given to Abraham.

Gen. 13. 14. Ver. 21.

3. The third particular notes the manner, how they shall be so filled and enriched at their departure, And, but, or for a woman shall aske of her neighbour, and of her that sojourneth in her house jewels of silver, and jewels of gold and garments, and yeshall put them upon your sons and upon your daughters, Sept. Onk. Syr. to the same. — A man of his neighbours, and a woman of her neighbour shall ask, Sam. — Shall borrow. Ar.

Ver. 22.

1. The terme of connection is read adversative, ye shall not go away empty, but, &c. And by some rational, For every woman, &c. and by others copulative, knitting close this word unto the former.

2. The matter connected, which notes the way of lading themselves with precious things.

1. By asking of their neighbour such things as should enrich them. In which passage.

1. The subject mentioned, a woman indefinitely read, every woman. The Samaritan read, both man and woman.

2. The act, ours read borrow, which may be gathered, but the word signifieth to aske, and so the 70 render it. And most others read it so. Now whether they did aske by borrowing, or by demanding from them who had oppressed them is a quere.

3. The object, vessels of silver, and gold, and raiment; all good things to sustain them in their way; and overplus of riches.

2. By putting on or cloathing their sons and daughters with all these good things; so that they went away clad with the riches of the Egyptians.

The fourth thing sheweth the end of Gods thus proceeding with them, And ye shall spoil the Egyptians, or Egypt; In summe this was the end of these Gods dealings, to take from them that which he had given them, and make his people execute his will in this matter.

Quest. Was this just and lawful for Israel to do?

Answ. Yes doubtlesse, for, 1. God alone is the true and proper owner of all that creatures possesse.

2. God himself commandeth them thus to ask, and demand of the Egyptians and carry away.

3. Gods ends as well as commands were just.

4. The obedience of his people therefore herein was no sin, but duty to his will.

D. 1. Gods bowing potentates and inclining people to deliver his Church together.

D. 2. There is a grace of favour which the world may shew unto Gods Church.

D. 3. Its Gods only work to incline the hearts of enemies to favour his people.

D. 4. Favour wrought in the hearts of oppressors lets the Church go out of thraldome.

D. 5. Fullnes as well as freedom, oppressors yeeld to Gods people at his word. Ver. 21.

D. 6. Soules shall but aske and have of their very enemies, what they will, when God inclines them.

D. 7. Gods Church is as neighbours or inmates with a wicked world for Gods setting.

D. 8. Silver and gold and jewels God makes these neighbours yeild to his people at his will.

D. 9. The sons and daughters of the Church God makes to carry away the treasures of enemies somtimes.

D. 10. At Gods command his Church shall spoil the enemies who spotted them. Ver. 22.

CHAP. IV.

Herein follow to be considered as the general heads of the Chapter.

1. The remaining encouragements.

Ver. 1. 17.

2. The events befalling after. Ver. 18.

26. All this is in preparing Moles.

3. The joining of Aaron with him who was the second instrument to be prepared.

Ver. 27. 28.

4. The mission and setting upon their word enjoined. Ver. 29. &c.

These are the heads of this Chapter, considered also as parts of the general division, and so the first head here is Gods third discourse with Moles for his encouragement.

1. He had answered him, as to his pretended insufficiency. Ch. 3. v. 11. 12.

2. He had satisfied him about his name, and encouraged him to go out in it, with promise of successe with Israel, and over Egypt. Ver. 13. 22.

3. The next encouragement followeth against further objection, which Moles doth make against Gods former discovery of his purpose to make Israel believe him.

Ver. 1. 9. Herein we have now more especially to note,

1. The discouraging reply by Moles.

Ver. 1. 2. The

2. The encouraging answer of God, Ver. 2. 9.

In the former we have these particulars occurring,

Ver. 1.

1. The form and manner of it; And Moles answered and said, All read the same. Here,

1. The term connecting another objection to so full an answer, sheweth the dissatisfaction of Moles, that yet he had to reply to God, and his infirmity therein, not to acquiesce in Gods revealed promise; so hard is it to take Gods word.

2. The replier, Moles, called, encouraged, and yet not satisfied with all.

3. The manner of reply is by speech, he answered and said, i.e. he readily returned further by discourse, as God vouchsafed.

2. The matter of the reply, which consists in a double suggestion made by him.

Ver. 1.

1. Of Israels unbelief against Gods former promise, But behold they will not believe me, nor hearken to my voice. Sam. Syr. Vulg. same. — Will not obey me. Onk. — If therefore they will not believe me, nor hear my voice, &c. What shall I say to them? Sept.

1. The adversative term but, as our translators read it well, sheweth this to be objected to God.

2. The term demonstrative, behold puts God upon another consideration. It is read by the 70. conditional, if they will not believe me, and thereupon, they adde what then shall I say to them? But that is not in the Hebrew, and therefore the objection is positive, behold they will not, &c. Jer. 3. 1.

3. The matter thus objected, They will not believe me nor hearken to my voice. This is a hard speech when God had said they shall hearken to thy voice. Ch. 3. v. 18. yet, thus sense prevails to make him weak in faith, while he pretend's others would not believe God by him, here then is his pretended strait yet to stop him.

1. That whatever he saith, Israel will not believe him, that is, give credit to his word, which he should speak in Gods name.

2. That they will not so much as hear him to be obedient to him, or persuaded by him.

2. Of the reason of it, For they will say, Jehovah hath not appeared unto thee. The readings do agree. Here we have a reason suggested by Moles, to ground his objection thereon, they will not believe me, for they will say Jehovah hath not bin seen by thee.

1. He positively asserts their reasoning, For they will say thus, notwithstanding God hath promised to over power them that they should believe.

2. He expresseth what they will reply for their not believing, that Jehovah hath not appeared to him nor given him any such commission. This his thoughts run upon; however he had not the keeping of their hearts, but God. Wherein he suppoeth,

1. That the name of Jehovah would not be trusted.

2. That his appearance unto Moles about this business would not be credited by them, therefore he concludes to what purpose should I go to them?

Quest. How could Moles know this, or was it well that he should put this block in the way of his obedience?

Answer. 1. It is conceived by some, that he spake only conditionally as the 70. if they do say so, what shall I say to them? 2. If positively understood, he could not certainly know so much; but it was suggested to him by his own sense and fears; he supposed they would refuse him upon such an account; and likely upon their rejecting him when he was in his prosperity in Egypt. 3. The action in objecting God doth not expressly reproove, yet doubtles it had its rise from unbelief; and therefore to be charged on the infirmity of faith, however God vouchsafeth graciously to answer it; and hereupon takes occasion to confirm his authority in the hand of Moles by his mighty works.

We conclude hence.

D. 1. Dissatisfaction is incident to good soules in difficulties, after Gods full satisfaction given to them.

D. 2. God permitting, soules backward to Gods hard works, are apt to be objecting.

D. 3. Infirmity of faith may make men suggest things contrary to the promise of God.

D. 4. Soules may tax others with unbelief, and be such unbelievers themselves.

D. 5. Obstinacy experienced among creatures may make Gods ministers despair of successe.

D. 6. It is incident with sinners to deny Gods appearances to his instruments.

D. 7. Gods ministers are apt to apprehend such denials for discouragement to Gods work. Ver. 1.

2. Now

2. Now followeth Gods encouraging answer unto Moses, the summe whereof is, that he would procure faith unto him from Israel, by his miracles which should be done by Moses in their sight. He instanceth in 3 from ver. 2. to Ver. 9. The two former are mostly demonstrative, the last seemeth also to be vindictive.

1. The miracle of his rod changed. Ver. 2. 5.

2. The miracle of his hand diseased and cured. Ver. 6. 7. 8.

3. The miracle of turning water into blood. Ver. 9.

In the first these particulars are observable.

1. The preface or preparation unto the first signe or miracle. Ver. 2 and that is made.

Ver. 2.

1. By Gods question to Moses, And Jehovah said unto him, what is that in thy hand? Sept. Sam. Syr. same. — What is that which thou holdest? Onk. — He said to him for warning, &c. Ar. here note,

1. The term connecting which sheweth that the Lord is not weary of satisfying Moses; therefore he joineth further encouragement.

2. The subject answering, Jehovah the eternal God, he saith, what followeth in favour unto Moses, though he had cause to be displeased with him.

Ver. 1.

3. The question itself, What is that in thy hand? It is not a question of one ignorant or doubting, God knew what it was, but of one teaching and preparing a creature unto further comprehension of the good will and power of God, to make him note what he had with him, and what God would do with it and by it.

2. By the answer of Moses, And he said a Rod or staffe, such as shepherds used to have. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. the same. In the answer is a plain return to God, that it was a poor staffe and nothing els, an unlikely instrument to do any great things. This God would shew Moses for preparing him unto the future signe.

Note hence.

D. 1. God is not angry for the infirmity of his in objecting, but hastens to heal it.

D. 2. God questioneth his people sometimes, not to know of them, but to teach them.

D. 3. God by making creatures sensible of their poor hand instruments prepares to shew them his power. Ver. 2.

2. The exhibition of the signe itself. Ver. 3. 4. Here observe,

1. A double command from God.

2. A double obedience by Moses. And both these orderly following each other. There are three events of both.

1. The first command to Moses is this. And he said cast it on the ground. All readings agree: after God had prepared him by his question, he now orders him to do something in tendency to the signe, which he was about to give, and it is no more but to throw his staffe upon the ground. Ver. 3.

2. The obedient return of Moses, And he cast it on the ground. All readings are the same. This carrieth no difficulty in it; only expresseth the obedience of Moses unto Gods command. Ver. 3.

3. The event, which was twofold.

1. Upon the Rod, and it was for a serpent or it became a serpent, or it was turned into a serpent. All readings herein agree. The terms are not difficult. Ver. 3.

The subject here is the Rod or staffe. The attribute is the serpent.

The connection is by a verb substantive which notes the transubstantiation of it into a serpent, so it is said, It was turned into a serpent. Ex. 7. 15. To a dragon. Ex. 7. Ver. 9.

2. Upon Moses. And Moses fled from before it. All readings agree, from the face of it. Ver. 3.

1. The subject affected, Moses, who had the rod in his hand before, and walked with it.

2. The affection, Fear, which made him fly, he started at such a change and fled from such a creature, though it were but his own rod.

3. The object or cause affecting, the rod made now a serpent, the form was terrible to him, as mans nature abhorres such creatures. Ver. 3.

2. The next command is thus expressed. And Jehovah said unto Moses; put forth thy hand, and take it by the tail, or catch its tail. All readings agree. Ver. 4.

1. The authority commanding is Jehovah.

2. The subject commanded, Moses.

3. The command itself is double.

1. To extend his hand, and therefore to draw nigh after he had fled away, and not to be afraid of this change.

2. To take the new-made serpent by the taile; it was a hard work for a fearful man, especially considering the poisonous effect that might follow.

4. The return of Moses to this command is obedience, And he put forth his hand and caught it. All readings are to the same. Herein, Ver. 4.

1. The subject, Moses, who was commanded.

2. The return which is obedience in two acts,

1. He put forth his hand.

2. He caught it.

5. The event. And it was for a Rod in in his hand or it became a Rod in his hand. All readings agree.

In this is another act of transubstantiation, turning a living creature into a stick, as was the turning of Lots wife into a pillar of salt. In both these God sheweth the first signe that he will give Moses to do for procuring credit to his call from God.

Quest. Was this a true serpent or a phanasy?

Ans. Doubtles it was truly such in nature, and truly turned into a stick again: The reason is undeniable.

1. The God of truth maketh no lying wonders.

2. In Gods signes all changes have bin experimented to be true, as it was the best wine made of water by the power of God.

3. This distinguisheth between Gods works and the Devils; as will appear when we come to the forcerers works.

Quest. What did this signe import?

Ans. 1. Some give vain conjectures and ridiculous, not worth naming.

2. Others pious conceits, that the same instrument should be a support to Moses and Israel as a staffe should be terrible to Pharaoh as a serpent; this is of good use. 3. Yet no certainty in these; but the main sense is, that it was to be a miracle adjoined to the commillion of Moses, and by it Israel was to be convinced of his call, before he came to shew it unto Pharaoh; this was Gods intent in doing it as appears in the next. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

3. The end of this signe exhibited followeth, That they may believe that Jehovah, the God of their Fathers, the God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, hath appeared unto thee or hath been seen by thee. All readings agree.

This reason is brought in something abruptly, and yet no lesse forceably, for it is full to the objection; Moses had said, that Israel would not believe that God appeared to him; God sheweth what signe he should give them to prove the truth of his call. As if he had said, do this, that they may believe, &c.

In this end proposed are seriously to be noted:

1. The subjects aimed at for good, which is Israel.

2. The duty aimed at for their good. Wherein mark.

1. The object proposed, which is the appearance of God to Moses for this call, and herein.

1. The subject appearing, God as here described in relation, which was opened before.

2. The apparition, which was Gods visible discovery of himself in the bush to call him.

2. The act, which was to believe, or to receive as undoubted truth, that God so appeared to him; and sent him upon this worke of Israels deliverance from Egypt.

Quest. What force have such signes to work faith?

Ans. 1. No physical influence to beget faith in any. 2. A moral efficacy they have, to persuade that the truth is from God, which these works do testify, and that none can do them but God; therefore men are left inexcusable, if after these they do not believe, If I had not done the works, &c. Joh. 15. 24.

Learn we.

D. 1. God followeth expostulations with resolutions to satisfy the souls of his servants troubled.

D. 2. Gods almighty power may be tried in small things, even about a Rod.

D. 3. Gods commands in smallest things are to be obeyed by his servants.

D. 4. When God commandeth small things he worketh miracles to confirm them.

D. 5. True transubstantiation of creatures into mutual natures is Gods work. This was to make a stick a serpent, and e converso.

D. 6. Gods miracles may be terrible to his servants, when intended to be comfortable.

D. 7. Sense working upon Gods terrible signes makes men fly. Ver. 3.

D. 8. Faith in Gods word dares meddle which the most terrible signes from God.

D. 9. God can make slaves serpents and serpents slaves, terrors to enemies, and supports to his own. Ver. 4.

D. 10. Miracles are given by God to turn from unbelief to faith in Gods word.

D. 11. True miracles are the only work of the true God, the God of Abraham.

D. 12. Gods appearance is eminent to them by whom he worketh true miracles. Ver. 5.

2. The next signe or Miracle, which God sheweth to Moses, by which faith should be procured to his message, is upon his own hand, which was first diseased and then healed, and both in a strange prodigious way. Ver. 6. 7. 8. Wherein occur these particulars,

1. The sign itself. Ver. 6. 7.

2. The use of it. Ver. 8.

In the first of these we have,

1. Gods command doubled. Ver. 6. 7.

2. The obedience of Moses doubled.

Ver. 6. 7.

3. The signal event doubled. Ver. 6. 7.

2. The end or use of this event declared.

Ver. 8.

1. Gods first command, &c. We have. Ver. 6. And therein.

Ver. 6.

1. The additional preface, And Jehovah said furthermore unto him. Readings agree.

1. The term of connection adde's this dignation of another signe to answer the former objection, one act of grace is knit unto another.

2. The matter connected, Gods further discovery of his good will to Moses, Jehovah said.

3. The term of continuation. Further more again.

Ver. 6.

2. Gods command, Bring in now thy hand into thy bosom. All readings agree in this. There is no obscurity in terms. It is Gods expresse command to Moses to put his own hand into his own bosome, being intended thereby to shew him more of his power.

Ver. 6.

3. The obedience of Moses is exprest, And he brought his hand into his bosom and brought it out. readings herein agree. Two expressions note his obedience here.

1. His putting in of his hand into his bosom.

2. His taking it out of his bosom again, and both doubtles upon Gods word.

Ver. 6.

4. The event hereupon evidenced, And behold his hand was leprous as snow. Sept. Sam. Syr. the same. — White as snow. Onk. Ar. Here, in the first prodigious work consider.

1. The note of demonstration Behold, it is pointed out.

2. The matter demonstrated in the event effected.

1. A found hand put into a found bosom.

2. this hand in a moment made leprous and with such a leprosy as in itself was incurable by men; it was by the leprosy made as white as snow, which noteth a bloodless and a spiritless condition, and it was no other but as a dead hand. This leprosy is written of Levit. 13. 23. &c. Ver. 6.

2. The next part of the signe is given.

Ver. 7.

1. The command of God to Moses repeated. And he said return thy hand into thy bosom. All readings agree. The words are plain. It is Gods command unto Moses once more, to put his leprous hand into his bosom, having something more of his power to discover unto him.

2. The obedience of Moses repeated, And he returned his hand into his bosom, and took it out of his bosom. Herein Moses objected God.

1. In returning his hand into the same place.

2. In taking it out again at Gods word.

3. The event hereupon, which did compleat this signe, And behold it was turned as his flesh. Onk. Sam. Syr. to the same. It was restored into the colour of his flesh. Sept. wherein we may note,

1. The note of demonstration pointing out this part of the signe.

2. The matter demonstrated, which is another prodigious change, wherein,

1. The subject is aleprous hand.

2. The change of it from what it was, it was turned, that is, from its leprous condition.

3. The term unto which it was changed, and that is into the same healthfull state with his own body, Ver. 7.

2. The use or end of this signe followeth in the next verse, wherein we have, come to passe, or it shall be if they will not believe thee nor hearken to the voice of the first signe. All readings agree to the same sense. Herein is supposed an opposition in them to believe which Moses was ready to object; they will not believe though my staffe be made a Serpent, suppose that faith God.

1. Something supposed, And it shall Ver. 8.

1. That they will not believe thee.

2. That they will not hearken to the voice of the former miracle.

2. Something asserted, They will believe the voice of the latter signe. — Of the second. Sept. Ar. Sam. Syr. Onk. same. Wherein God promisseth that all his miracles shall not be in vain, but that by the latter, if not by the former, souls shall be over-powred, and made to see the truth of Gods message to them, that they shall by faith embrace it to salvation. Ver. 8.

Quest. What did this miracle of diseasing and healing the hand of Moses signify?

Ans. 1. There are many vain conceits of his hand leprous, and his hand healed, to note many things which never were intended. 2. It is piously conjectured, that thereby he would teach Moses that though he were never so base and weak in himself, yet that God who calleth things that are not, as if they were, would and could make him by his word, though he were as incurably leprous yet to live, and to be mighty for his work. Some also thinke that it was to to keep him humble in his employment, that he might not be puffed up as if the Miracles were done by his hand. These are conjectures only.

3. The proper signification is the intent of a miracle, and that is as a second means to command faith in Moses to trust God, who can smite and heal, and to work faith in them to Gods word, unto whom he was sent to shew these wonders. And this sense God giveth himself. Ver. 8.

D. 1. God at his own pleasure giveth signe to signe to help the weaknes of faiths but not so alwayes.

D. 2. God sometimes commands his servants in order to disease and try them.

D. 3. Such commands are readily to be obeyed by Gods people. So Moses did.

D. 4. Vpon such obedience God sometime sheweth his servants bitter diseases.

D. 5. Sudden change from soundnes to leprosy is Gods miracle. Ver. 6.

D. 6. After trial God commands his servants again in order to healing.

D. 7. Obedience must be acted to see the good of such commands.

D. 8. God answers the obedience of his servants with wonderful healing.

D. 9. It is Gods prerogative alone to disease and heal his creatures miraculously by his word. Ver. 7.

D. 10. Miracles at first may misse of their end and not persuade men to faith.

D. 11. Second miracles may do that which former did not effect.

D. 12. Gods word and promise alone can make miracles themselves effectual means of faith.

D. 13. Miracles have voices which should command faith and obedience. Ver. 8.

3. The last signe or miracle now followeth, whereby God will persuade Israel to believe that God appeared to Moses, and had sent him to deliver them. Ver. 9. Wherein we have,

1. A supposition of the inefficualnes of the two former signes, that notwithstanding both of them yet Israel might not believe. And it shall be if they will not believe also these two former signes, and will not obey thy voice. — Believe thee. 70. Ver. 9.

Obey thee. Onk. But if it happen, that they do not believe also, &c. Sam. Syr. and Ar. to the same purpose. There is no difficulty in the words. You may note

1. The term of connection knitting this to the former, God abounds in goodness to satisfy the doubts of his poor servants.

2. The matter connected, which is a supposition which Moses might be ready to object, and it is twofold.

1. Of Israels infidelity concerning the two precedent signes, it may be, they will not believe for both these wonders.

2. Of their disobedience, they will not hearken to my voice notwithstanding; suppose all this will be so. God thus yeilds to his infirmity.

2. An injunction together with a promise of enabling him to shew a third signe more terrible; this was not only to be demonstrative but vindictive upon the Egyptians. Herein observe.

1. The command of God, That or then thou shalt take of the waters of the river and poure upon the dry land. Sep. Onk. Sam. Syr. the same. — Take of the water of Nilus. Ar. herein may be noted,

1. The connection of this word to the former doubt.

2. The injunction unto two acts.

1. To take of the water of the river, of any river junius. Others, of the river of Egypt Nilus where this was afterward executed; but the general notion here is best.

2. Thou shalt poure upon the dry, that is, the earth. This is all commanded.

2. The event promised, And the waters which thou takest out of the river shall be, even they shall be into blood upon the dry ground. The whole is a miraculous transmutation, wherein note,

1. The subject of it, the waters specified, even these which thou takest out of the river.

2. The term of this change, blood, true blood.

3. The change itself, transubstantiation in the verb substantive doubled, they shall be, even they shall be, into blood, that is turned, into the substance of blood.

4. The place of this change, upon the dry ground.

Quest. Was the signe done in present, or was it onely before Pharaoh as we read, Ch. 7. 19.

Ans^w. 1. It is doubtful whether any water were in the place where now Moses stood. 2. The signe spoken of was to work faith in Israel. 3. The signe was shewed unto Israel, before Moses went unto Pharaoh. Ch. 4. v. 30. 4. It was not the same, with that of turning the rivers into blood, for this was done on the dry land, but that was in all places of waters; yet this was an instance of what God would and could do in that.

Quest. What was the main scope of this signe?

Ans^w. 1. To confirm the call of Moses with the rest foregoing. 2. To shew some terribleness of judgment in turning an element of nourishment into an instrument of death. 3. It may be also to recompense their sin in destroying the Hebrew infants in the waters.

Hence we collect.

D. 1. God troubleth his indulgence to help the infirmities of his servants.

D. 2. It is incident unto sinful men to mistrust the wonders of God.

D. 3. Such incredulity may discourage Gods wonder-working instruments in their work.

D. 4. God knoweth this evil of men, and grants it may be so, but not approves it.

D. 5. God work's not onely strange but terrible signes to make sinners believe.

D. 6. When God giveth forth his word, water shall blood the land, not water it.

D. 7. When waters are made blood-guilty they are justly turned into blood.

D. 8. Signes demonstrative of Gods power unto his servants are vindictive unto his enemies. Ver. 8.

4. A further encouragement of Moses to his work, we have, Ver. 10. 11. 12. Wherein note.

1. A further objection made by Moses against the undertaking of the work unto which God called him. Ver. 10.

2. Gods satisfactory answer to him. Ver. 11. 12.

1. The objection of Moses occur-reth, wherein observe,

1. The term connecting another objection.

2. The person objecting, Moses.

3. The person to whom, Jehovah.

4. The manner of it, by speech.

2. The matter of his objection expressed two wayes.

1. Negatively, For me, O my Ver. 10.

Lord, I am not a man of words, either from yesterday or from the third day, or from the time that thou hast spoken to thy servant. — I pray thee, O Lord, I am not well spoken or eloquent, &c. Sept. Onk. same. to Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same purpose.

This objection is from his want of words that he was no good spokes-man, and what should he do to deliver his message to the King? to this purpose he replieth.

1. The object of his reply, is his Lord.

2. The subject of the complaint is himself. As in me.

3. The complaint he maketh, and that is that he had not the faculty of speech.

1. Expressly denying it, I am not a man of words, a man of lips, a talker. Job. 11. 2. I have no voluble tongue to bespeake the Majesty of Princes. I am not eloquent. So the mighty man is a man of arm. Job. 22. 8.

2. Gradually complaining in three expressions.

1. Not since yesterday.

2. Not from the third day.

3. Not from the time that God appeared to speak with him: that is, neither by nature, nor education, nor infusion of such a gift from God.

2. Affirmatively, But I am heavy Ver. 10.

in mouth and heavy in tongue. Sam. same. Syr. to it. — Heavy of speech, and of a deep tongue, that is, hard to speak. — Onk. slow. — Ar. Of a slow vile or stammering voice, &c. Sept. The word in the original, is heavy of mouth, and heavy of tongue; that signifieth in our speech, infirmity of speaking, unaptness to expresse himself unto men of place and parts so as to be accepted by them; he doth, in short, assest himself, to be a weak man as to exprelling of himself, and therefore unfit to be such an ambassador, from heaven, to a great potentate and mighty persecutor.

Quest. Was Moses indeed slow of speech, or was it not an excuse? Why doth the Spirit say, he was mighty in word and deed, Act. 7. 21.

Ans^w. 1. It was no untruth: Moses might naturally be slow of speech, for God seems to grant it in his answer.

2. It was yet doubtless his infirmity to urge this against his undertaking Gods work. 3. The expression of Stephen doth doth

doth not impeach this, for mightines in word there, was not in volubility of speech, but in efficacy of it, when he spake, in the name of God, and the worke was done: you have the sense.

Learn the result of it in these truths.

D. 1. Infirmity of faith maketh Gods called ones to object many times against his will.

D. 2. Miracles sometimes will not silence such objections of fearful doubting soules.

D. 3. Unwilling soules for Gods work are apt to plead real infirmities for excuse.

D. 4. Such pleading of weak Saints is yet with application to God as their Lord.

D. 5. Weaknes of faith, will urge against Gods call, not only self insufficiency, but Gods not supplying.

D. 6. Infirmity in speech may be an argument as to men, though none unto God, to hinder his work.

D. 7. Good soules are apt to sit down under such discouragements and deny Gods call. Ver. 10.

2. Gods answer followeth to take off this discouragement from Moses. Ver. 11.

1. Wherein are,

1. Gods check by expostulation. V. 11.

2. Gods injunction with promise. Ver. 12.

In the former occurre to observation,

1. The preface. And Jehovah said unto him. — The Lord said unto Mo- ses. Sept. Readings agree. The termes here are plain, and easy to know.

1. The term of connection sheweth the close return of God to the objection of Moses.

2. The Replier, Jehovah.

3. The party to whom, Moses.

4. The reply itself, he said, as followeth.

2. The answer in a double expostulation.

1. Who put the mouth to man, or who put the dumb or deaf, or the open eye or the blind. Onk. & Sam. same. — The first man:

Ben Uz. — Who gave the mouth to man, who made the dumb and deaf, the seeing and blind? Sept. — Who made, &c. yr. — Who created pronunciation, &c. Ar. All to the same purpose.

This question puts Moses upon inquiry and consideration of the great creatour and former of all parts, powers, and faculties of men, that when he complains upon his defects, he might consider there was a way to supply them, and not to despond by reason of them.

1. The scope of the question, is to stop the objection of Moses; do you want a tongue or a mouth? pray consider who made them.

2. The matter of the quere is in the letter about the position or instruction of mans mouth and faculties; which notion of putting is emphatical, and carryeth in it these things.

1. Creation or forming of the mouth to its special office, as well as the ear or eyes.

2. The fitting or framing them to act according to their created natures.

3. The ordering or determining of them either unto effect or defect; who sets the mouth to speake or to be mute, or the ear to be deaf or hearing, or the eye to be blind or seeing who orders and effect's this in man, consider, and tell me Moses.

2. The next question resolves the former, Have not I Jehovah? All readings to the same. — Have not I the Lord God? Sept. Am not I God the creatour of them?

2. This question must be resolved affirmatively, I Jehovah have set the mouth in man, &c. And if I be he, who now call thee to go and deliver Israel out of Egypt; dost thou stop for want of a mouth or tongue, seeing it is in my hand to create and order them? thus the Lord gently reprooveth him. Ver. 11.

2. After this check he encourageth him to obey his call, and make no more delay, and that,

1. By his injunction repeated, And Ver. 12.

on, vulg. Herein God shakes him out of his delays, and straitly chargeth him; stand not upon those frivolous objections, but considering who calleth you, and who it is that giveth the mouth to man, it is I Jehovah, go therefore at my word, tarry not.

2. By his promise added, And I will be Ver. 12.

and instruct thee what thou shalt say. Sept.

My word shall be in thy mouth.

herein are pomised,

Christ.

Christ. Matth. 10. 19. 20. Mark. 13. 11. Luk. 12. 11. 12. Thus God labours with a fearful inhuman creature to raise him from discouragement, and set him to his work. Ver. 12.

Quest. How is God said to make the dumb? &c.

Ans. 1. That it is only his prerogative, & power to do it, he opens and shuts mans mouth, &c. 2. That where-ever he shuts he doth it justly. 3. That graciously and for tryal he exerciseth this power upon some for his glory as on Zechariah; (the end expressly mentioned in the case of the man born blind.) Luk. 1. Ioh. 9.

Quest. What is carried in Gods presence and influence upon mans mouth?

Answer. 1. The gift of wisdom, which orders words. 2. The gift of utterance to declare them. 3. The almighty efficacy of both.

Learn we hence.

"D. 1. Jehovah indulgeth his weak servants to object, that he may multiply satisfaction to their doubts."

"D. 2. God teacheth and checketh his servants sometimes by questioning with them."

"D. 3. Mans mouth and use of it is from him, it is not of himself."

"D. 4. Defects of speech and senses are incident unto [some among men]."

"D. 5. Perfections and defects in all faculties are the works of God. [Isa. 35. 56]."

"D. 6. God alone put's or sets all these events, and none can change them. Ver. 11."

"D. 7. Gods injunction of duty, justly followeth his satisfaction to doubts."

"D. 8. Mans drawing back from duty puts God upon new injunctions to them. Go he must."

"D. 9. Gods promise of presence and influence backs his injunctions strongly to his servants."

"D. 10. The mouth where God is and which he instructs: is mighty in the word of wisdom. Ver. 12."

5. The last encouragement given unto Moses for his great undertaking is to be observed in Ver. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. Where in note.

1. The last repulse of Moses wherein he would utterly shun Gods call. Ver. 13. And he said, for me, O Lord, job my Lord or I pray thee, O Lord, send, I pray thee by the hand thou shouldest send, or of him whom thou wilt send. — I pray thee Lord chuse one mighty whom thou wilt send, Sept.

Send now by the hand of him who is worthy to defend. Onk. — Send whom thou wilt send. Ar. — By him whom thou wilt send. Syr. By the hand of him whom thou wilt send.

In this reply we have observable,

1. The connection to Gods former encouragement, and he said, that is, Moses, notwithstanding God had answered him fully to all his objections, and had promised him also wildom, power and abilities for discharge of his call, yet Moses staggering in faith replieth at last, with a plain shift, and desired for all Gods encouragements to be excused from the undertaking; so his carnal sense and unbelief oppose all Gods appearances and promises to him, notwithstanding all, yet Moses thus bespeak's God.

2. The reply connected is a plain putting of the work from himself, being unwilling to be employed in it, though the most honorable service that God could assign unto him. In the reply note expressed,

1. The manner of it, by humble address, I pray thee, O Lord, or as for me, O Lord, I pray thee. So the term. — is read by some as a pronoun, by others as an interjection, both ways it notes yet an humble address of Moses to God though his reply were bad.

2. The matter of it which is a request of excuse, send by the hand thou shouldest send, wherein we have to observe.

1. His request explicit, that God would send some other fitter instrument about this great work, that might manage it for Israels deliverance.

2. His request implied, send not me, let me, I pray thee, be excused from this heavy undertaking.

Quest. What is meant by the explicit request?

Ans. 1. By the hand synecdochically is meant the man the instrument of this deliverance. 2. By sending that or him whom God should or would, notes plainly any man els whom God should think fit, so he might be spared; some apply it to the Messiah, as if Moses would now have God send him; but it hath no sound reason in it, the summe is, excuse me, and send by whom you will, thus Moses resisteth still. Let the message be sent by Phineas. Ben. Uz.

Quest. Did Moses sin in this request?

Ans. It is apparent that he did sin.

1. In disobeying Gods call.

2. In not believing Gods promise.

3. In

3. In provoking God to anger, however God remember mercy, and deal kindly with him in his answer to his last excuse.

Learn we hence.

"D. 1. Unbelief hath still something to oppose against Gods call and promise unto his work. It is never satisfied."

"D. 2. Infirmary of faith in Saints doth not keep them from humble address to God, though it grieve him."

"D. 3. Weakness of faith is willing to avoid difficulty of work."

"D. 4. Hands or instruments God doth make use of to bring about his own work."

"D. 5. Infirm believers are ready to put of Gods work to any from themselves."

"D. 6. The weak in faith would yet have them to be of Gods sending that shall be employ'd for saving his Church. Ver. 13."

Ver. 14.

2. Thereturn of God to this excuse of Moses. Wherein we have to note,

1. Gods resentment of this reply, And the Anger of the Lord of Jehovah was kindled against Moses. — The fury of the Lord was angry against Moses. — Onk. Syr. Ar. God being angry with anger, Sept. — Burned. Sam. In which are,

1. The term of connection, closeth this affection of God with the excuse of Moses; God had born with him all this while, and answered all his objections, & procured sufficiency for his work; but all persuades not Moses, now therefore God carrieth himself in another manner to him.

2. The affection discovered, or the expression of something represented by it, The fury of Jehovah burned, or was hot or angry against Moses. This is spoken after the manner of men; and it notes Gods aversness and opposition to the wayward carriage of Moses; and now he did as it were change his countenance, and frown upon him, yet not as an enemy, but a displeased father, seeking the childs amendment, but severely reprimanding against its sin. The same phrase therefore doth not always note the burning wrath of God against the wicked, but sometimes severe chastenings also of his love when their ways & works displease him.

2. Gods encouragement to him, notwithstanding his put off; and that is given two ways.

1. In providing an associate in this work with him. Ver. 14. 15. 16.

2. By appointing a signal of working wonders. Ver. 17.

In the former we have to observe.

1. Gods pointing out the man for his companion in the work. Ver. 14. where in three things,

1. Gods determination of the person, expressed by expostulation, Do not I know, Ver. 14. Aaron the Levite thy brother, that speaking he shall speak? So it is read to the letter, without supply of any thing to make up the sense. Our translators read, Is not Aaron the Levite thy brother I know, &c. But then the verb substantive must be supplied, which otherwise need not, Do not I know, &c. Geneva. — Behold is not Aaron the Levite thy brother? I know, &c. Sept. — Aaron the Levite is thy brother, is it not known before me? &c. Onk. positive. Syr. Ar. same with 70. Sam. with Hebr.

1. The cause determining this person is Gods knowledge of the person, do not I know? or have not I known? i.e. Foreknown, ordered, determined & approved.

2. The person known and determined set out.

1. By his name, Aaron, well known to Moses.

2. By his tribe, the Levite, the same with Moses.

3. By his relation, thine own brother, A man therefore most familiar with thee, and fit to joine with thee in the work to which I call thee.

3. The work known and determined, which was that he speaking could speak, that is freely and fully to the purpose for which God sent Moses, and this is further added to answer the former objection; that if Moses would not trust God for a tongue to himself he should have a tongue by another creature of his a near relation.

2. Gods predication to Moses about him, twofold.

1. Of coming to meet him, And also behold he cometh forth to meet thee. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. the same. Here,

1. The term of demonstration connected, And also behold, God did not only know and determine him, but had shewed him of his appearance to Moses, and moved him upon the same account to joine in his work.

2. His motion demonstrated. He is now coming forth, and setting on towards thee.

3. The end of his motion foretold, and that is to meet with Moses, and joine with him in the work.

2. Of

2. Of his rejoicing in seeing Moses come about this work, And he shall see thee and be glad in his heart. Onkel. Sam. Syr. fame. — Seeing thee he shall rejoice in himself. Septuag. Ar. Wherein we may note.

1. Aarons sight of Moses unto mutual embracings and injoyments.

2. Aarons readines and gladnes of heart unto the work; which something seemes to check the dulnes and backwardnes of Moses. He will be glad to see thee come about Israels deliverance, and rejoice to help thee, and thou art putting of the work, though I call thee. Ver. 14.

3. Gods distinction of their work, in the joint carrying on of Israels deliverance, wherein note,

Ver. 15.

1. The work imposed upon Moses, And thou shalt speak to him, and shalt put the words into his mouth. Onk. Sam. fame. — Thou shalt give my words, &c. Septuagint. Syr. — Speak and put this work, &c. Ar. — Put my words. Vulg. Herein we may note,

1. The authority impowring, Jehovah.
2. The person impowred, Moses, thou.

3. The subject over whom he is impowred, Aaron, and his mouth and tongue.

4. The power itself speaking, and putting words into his mouth, where God maketh Moses to be supreme, as the mind and understanding, and Aaron as the mouth or instrument of making known what the mind suggests; or rather higher, as one from God informing the mind, or teaching.

Ver. 15.

2. The work assumed by God himself, And I will be with thy mouth and with thy mouth, and I will teach you what you shall do. Sam. Syr. fame. — With thy speech. Ar. — I will open thy mouth and his mouth, will instruct you, &c. Sept. — My word shall be with thy mouth, and with his mouth, &c. Onk.

1. The undertaker Jehovah himself.

2. The undertaking, to be in the mouth of Moses and Aaron by his presence and influence.

3. The effect of it, I will teach you, or make you instructed for all that you shall do. All the words and works of both of you shall be of my framing. Ver. 15.

Ver. 16.

3. The work laid upon Aaron, And he shall speak for thee to the people. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. This defect Moses complained of, and God had promised to supply it in himself, to make him a good spokesman; but he not believing, God appoints that work for Aaron, where you may note,

1. The promiser Jehovah.
2. The subject of the promise. Aaron.

3. The matter promised, speaking and clearly declaring all matters revealed to the people, to make them understand.

4. The subject for whom this is promised Moses, who was discouraged by his own slowness of speech. He shall speak forth.

4. The confirmation of this order between Moses and Aaron, by doubling each promise to both.

1. Concerning Aaron, And he shall be, he shall be to thee for a mouth. Sam. fame. — He shall be thy mouth, Sept. He shall be thy interpreter. Onk. Syr. Ar. This is no more but what was said before, only it is confirmed by doubling.

1. The subject spoken of, Aaron.
2. The use attributed to him, was to be a mouth to Moses, to speak his mind.

3. The certainty of promise is in the doubled expression, he shall be, he shall be. Ver. 16.

2. Concerning Moses, And thou shalt be to him for a God. Sam. Syr. fame. — Thou shalt be to him in things pertaining to God. Sept. — To him for a Prince. Onk. a Lord. Ar.

1. The subject here concerned is Moses.

2. The place assigned him in this work is under the notion of God; which is applied to chief Magistrates in the Church; and to here, but with more eminent stamp of Gods glory on Moses.

3. The certainty of it, thou shalt be.

Whence we conclude.

D. 1. Multipled oppositions to Gods call may provoke God to be angry with his servants.

D. 2. When Gods promises and reasons cannot persuade, Gods anger drives off his servants from their excuses.

D. 3. God may be very angry with the sins of his servants, though well pleased with their persons.

D. 4. When one refuseth Gods work in redeeming his Church, he knoweth others to use for it.

D. 5. God indulgeth the weakness of his instruments to give associates, when they decline to go alone.

D. 6. Gods knowledge of persons, relations and conditions, put them in a capacity to do his work.

D. 7. Gods knowledge determineth to one eminency of speech, and not to another.

D. 8. God moveth the hearts of instruments sometimes to the same work, when they are in remote places.

D. 9. Some hearts are more ready to move about Gods work than others.

D. 10. Providence moveth instruments to meet, for carrying on his work, when they are at distance.

D. 11. Creature meetings and injoyments God appoints, to encourage to his work of saving.

D. 12. God useth the gladness and cheerfulness of some, to help on the deadness of others in his work. Ver. 14.

D. 13. God maketh one instrument to superintend and instruct others for his work.

D. 14. God himself superintends all instruments, with them, and teacheth them their work. Ver. 15.

D. 15. Some instruments for saving his Church God useth for speaking his mind.

D. 16. Several works are designed of God to several instruments for delivering his Church.

D. 17. Some God appoints as mouths and interpreters, and they shall be such.

D. 18. Some Jehovah makes as Gods in dominion and rule, and they must guide the rest.

D. 19. Gods own name is put upon instruments of salvation, to dignify them. They are as Gods.

D. 20. It is Gods part to give oracles, & his ministers to declare them. So God sets Moses in authority above Aaron. Ver. 16.

Ver. 17.

2. The next part of Gods last encouragement of Moses, is the appointing him a sign of doing miracles to procure faith. Ver. 17. And this rod thou shalt take in thy hand wherewith thou shalt do the signs. Onk. fame. — This rod that was turned into a serpent thou shalt take, &c. 70. — Wherewith thou hast done signs. Sam. but the verb is future. — Prodigies.

— That thou majest work signes, Syr. Herein we have two things to note,

1. An injunction, and this thy rod thou shalt take in thy hand, in which passage.

1. The term of connection and knits the word of power to do miracles, unto the former encouragement by an associat.

2. The manner connected is Gods injunction upon Moses, to take nothing else in his hand, but the shepherds staff or rod, which formerly was turned into a serpent. Take that in thy hand, which though it be a simple instrument to appear withal before Pharaoh, yet take it, for it shall be a rod too strong for him to deal withal.

2. A promise. Here with thou shalt do signes or miracles, which after ward were done. Ch. 7. &c. Here

1. The authority promising, Jehovah.

2. The subject of promise, Moses.

3. The matter of promise, Wonder-working.

4. The certainty of it. Thou shalt do them.

We observe.

D. 1. God can adde wonder working power to his associated instruments for his Churches redemption.

D. 2. God injoineth his servants small things, but promiseth great.

D. 3. God sends his embassadours with a shepherds staff against royal scepters.

D. 4. Gods servants must obey, and go in that despicable form that he will have them.

D. 5. Obedience to God in small things, shall have great events.

D. 6. Gods promise giveth miraculous works by poor signalls. Despise them not. Ver. 17.

2. The event of providence after all in encouragements given to Moses, come now to consideration, which tend also to the further preparation of Moses to his work, these events are of two sorts.

1. Concerning action in matters done, Ver. 18. 23.

2. Concerning passion or suffering. Ver. 24. 26.

In the active events we have to note.

1. Moses his valediction to his father. Ver. 18.

2. Gods encouragement hereupon, Ver. 19.

ssss 3. Moses

3. Moses his preparation for his journey. Ver. 20.

4. Gods instruction unto him about his work. Ver. 21. 23.

The first of these we have Ver. 18. Wherein note,

1. The proposal of Moses to his father, herein are considerable,

Ver. 18.

1. His access to him, And Moses went and returned to Jethro his father in law. All readings agree, only in the name.

Hebr. Jethro. Sept. Jethro. Onk. Syr. Sam. Jethro. Ar. Ethro. The letter is plain and easy. In the whole note.

1. The term of connection, knitting this carriage of Moses to his father with Gods resentment of his excuse, and further encouragement unto his work, at last Moses is persuaded, and put upon motion.

2. The matter of the history connected, is the motion of Moses to his father in law, wherein,

1. Something is supposed, that now God in the apparition of fire in the bush, left him, and he departed from God and (as safely presumed) by leave to bid his father farewell.

2. Something expressed and that is his motion.

1. The subject moving is Moses now persuaded.

2. The motion itself expressed, in two terms. — He went, and he returned.

3. The term of this motion, Jethro his father in law.

Ver. 18.

2. His bespeaking of him, And he said unto him let me go I pray thee, and return to my brethren, which are in Egypt and see, whether yet they be living, I will go and see. Readings agree. Herein mark.

1. The term connecting speech to motion, and.

2. The parties speaking and bespoken, Moses and Jethro.

3. The speech itself, which is an humble request of Moses, to have his consent that he might go, and return, and visit his brethren in Egypt, no difficulty at all in this.

Ver. 18.

2. Jethro's answer to Moses his son in law, And Jethro said unto Moses go in peace, באשר יצאנו Sept. go in health; all other readings agree. Herein observe.

1. The term of connection knits a gracious answer, from the father to the son; so providence ordered that the fathers answer should further his work.

2. The answer annexed is plain, wherein are,

1. The replier, Jethro. The father in law who might have scrupled the business but did not.

2. The subject to whom, Moses: unwilling enough in himself to the work.

3. The reply itself, which is a grant, with a prayer for a blessing, Go in peace. herein mark.

1. His licence, go, as thou hast desired and God commanded. Thou shalt not be hindered by me, haste and go.

2. His prayer, go in peace, go and prosper, it is a phrase carrying a desire of the confluence of all blessings upon him in his way and work.

Quest. Did Moses well to go back and take leave of his father in law, when God commanded him for Egypt?

Ans. 1. However sometimes such valuations are forbidden, when they retard Gods work, yet not so in other cases. Luk. 9. 61, 62. 2. It was requisite for Moses in such a journey to carry his family with him, which he could not well do, without his fathers consent. 2. It is safely presumed that he did this with Gods allowance who would have him set his house in order, and then proceed to his work.

Quest. Why did Moses conceal Gods call of him, and pretend only a visit into Egypt?

Ans. 1. It is indeed thought by some that he told Jethro nothing of his business, but this is only a conjecture because such an act is silenced. 2. Moses did not deceive Jethro by pretending a visit, for it was true. 3. The visit of his brethren did doubtless import more than a common salute, it was doubtless to do them more good, of which Jethro was not ignorant. 4. In part without doubt something of God was discovered to Jethro, about this undertaking, if not so fully now, yet when Moses sent back his wife and children to him from Egypt, which could not be very long after this: however no evil was in Moses about this matter.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Gods single encouragement may be despised, but his displeasure and mercy together set souls on going and doing. From the connection.

D. 2. Gods call sometimes hindreth not from duty to relations.

D. 3. Obedience unto Gods command may consist with asking leave of man.

D. 4. The looking after lives of relations is a duty natural and desirable.

D. 5. Under the natural affection and duty of a man, greater intents from God may be hid.

D. 6.

We learn.

D. 6. Hearts of fathers are moved to yeeld, that Gods work may go on.

D. 7. Not only liberty is given, but prosperity desired by strangers when God moveth.

D. 8. Grace may make Midianites to help on the salvation of Israelites. so here. Ver. 18.

2. Gods further encouragement followeth Moses hereupon. Ver. 19. Wherein we have,

Ver. 19.

1. Gods injunction on him, And Jehovah said to Moses in Midian, go return into Egypt, most readings agree. The 70 adde. After those many dayes the King of Egypt dyed. Herein.

1. The connection sheweth Gods quickning of Moses again unto the worke, while he now was bidding his father farewell.

2. The matter connected is an injunction. Wherein are,

1. God injoyning.

2. Moses injoyning.

3. The injunction itself, Go return into Egypt.

4. The place where it was given, Midian. All plain to the letter.

Quest. Was this a distinct appearance of God to Moses from the former?

Answer. 1. It is conceived by some that this text belongs to the former appearance, and it is transposed here, but there is no need of such transposition. 2. The distinct places named do rather argue distinct appearances.

Ver. 19.

2. Gods consolation, the reason of his injunction, Go, for all the men are dead, which sought thy life. most readings agree.

Who sought to kill thee. Onkel. In which observe,

1. The rational particle notes this to be the reason of Gods injunction, which also Moses might acquaint Jethro withall, having at first told him of his flying out of Egypt, that he might more willingly yeeld to his going.

2. The reason or encouragement from God is a certificat made to Moses of the death of his enemies, under Gods own testimony, which import's,

1. That there were some, and these great ones in Egypt, that did seek after his soul, that is, his life to destroy it, and kill him.

2. That all these implacable adversaries were now dead; and therefore no fear of them to trouble him.

D. 1. God seeth there is need of new incentives to stirre up his servants to duty.

D. 2. Frequent discoveries of God are useful to stirre up faith.

D. 3. God will not leave his instruments, but to Egypt they must go to do his work.

D. 4. Many murderers may seeke the life of Gods servants to discourage them.

D. 5. Death under God, makes a riddance of them at last.

D. 6. Such remooves of enemies, God assures, to encourage instruments to work. Ver. 19.

3. The next event of action is the immediate preparation of Moses for his journey, wherein we have to note,

Ver. 20.

1. His company assumed, and disposed, And Moses took his wife, and his sons, and made them ride upon asses.

And put them upon an ass. Onk. Sam.

And put them on asses. Plural. 70.

Made them go up. Ar. And carried them upon an ass. Syr.

1. The term of connection knits this act of Moses to Gods former encouragement, his fear being removed he presently prepares for his journey.

2. The matter connected is his preparation with respect to his company, wherein are,

1. The agent Moses, the father of a family.

2. The patient, his wife, and sons, which were two Gershom and Eliezer. Ch. 2. 22. Ch. 18. 4.

3. The Act about these, which is twofold,

1. Taking of them, assuming and leading of them, as his companions in his journey, desiring therein to carry them to the Church of God in Egypt.

2. The disposition of them for travel. He set them upon an ass or he made them ride upon an ass; to the letter the 70. read plural upon asses; which is not dissonant from the scope in the Hebrew, for the word notes rather the kind of beast than the number. It is probable also that he had more beasts than one, convenient to carry his company, and that the burden of a woman and two Children was not determined to one beast only. In this are obvious this acting of providence.

1. That his messengers must go lowly, not as the garb of the world is, he ssss 2 bath

hath no camels harneſſed richly, nor horſes, but a poor aſſe. So Chriſt, Zech. 9. Ver. 9.

2. That they ſhall have ſufficient help in their way, to bear their burdens.

Ver. 20.

2. His motion, And he returned into the land of Egypt. All readings are to the ſame ſcope. Wherein obſerve,

1. His motion is knit to his preparation, and that expreſſed, He returned, that is, leave being taken, of his father he ſet upon his journey to return; ſo the circumſtances of the place do neceſſitate to underſtand it, that now he attempted to return.

2. The term of his motion intended was the land of Egypt, whether God called him. He turns not aſide another way: Thither his commiſſion bound him.

Ver. 20.

3. His Array, or aſſuming an inſtrument for his journey, And Moſes took the rod of God in his hand. The rod which was from God. Sept. — By which miracles ſhould be done, &c. Onk. Sam. and Syr. as Hebrew. — The ſtaff which God commanded him that he ſhould take in his hand. Ar. This was that which God commanded him. V. 17. And herein are obſervable,

1. The ſubject obeying, Moſes.

2. His obedience, He took the rod of God in his hand.

1. His act is taking or aſſumption,

2. The object, the Rod of God, that which was turned into a ſerpent, and again returned into a rod.

3. The manner of taking it, In his hand.

Queſt. Did Moſes well to take his wife and Children with him in this expedition?

Mede. Diatrib.

Answer. 1. It is aſſerted by an eminent man, who undertakes to prove Zipporahs innocency about circumciſing her ſon; that Moſes was in fault in bringing his wife great with child out of Midian, and that ſhe had child by the way; and however God ſpared them in the wildernes, who circumciſed not their Children in their travels for 40 years, their tedious journeys neceſſitating it; yet God was angry with Moſes, becauſe he brought a neceſſity upon himſelf by taking this incumbrance with him, for he might have left her with her father, as is preſumed, that now upon this occaſion he ſent her backe. But all things are not ſo clear as preſumed.

1. Though we read not of the name of the ſecond ſon before Moſes his entrance upon his journey, yet we read, that he ſet his wife and ſons upon the aſſe; and it is not probable, that the ſecond was then unborn; for how then could it be known to be a ſon? If therefore the order of the hiſtory be natural, as the events fell out, the ſecond ſon muſt be born before Moſes began his journey; therefore ſhe did not fall in travel by the way.

2. That Moſes did ſend mother and Children back is ſure; and that he might do it upon the circumciſion is probable; yet this concluſion's not that he did it againſt Gods will.

3. It may poſſibly be, that Moſes did carry wife and Children with a purpoſe to joyne with Gods Church, and perchance not ſo well conſult with God about it; which was his infirmity; yet is it not ſaid, that God was angry with him about carrying his wife, but about the circumciſion.

Queſt. Why is the ſtaff of Moſes ſtilled the rod of God?

Answer. 1. It was that on which God wrought a miracle which might intitle it to him. 2. It was the ſignal of Gods promiſe to Moſes, that he would cauſe him to ſhew miracles; and all Sacramental ſignes are Gods. 3. It was the rod, that God commanded him to take with him; therefore rightly beareth it Gods name. Other phanſies, that it ſhould come from heaven or out of Jethros orchard by Gods power in Moſes, &c. are but fables. As that of B. Uzziel who ſaith Moſes took it out of his father in lawes bed chamber, and it was of great weight, and made of a ſaphire of the throne of glory, and had a great and pretious name on it, &c. are all dreams.

4. Gods inſtructions to Moſes upon his preparation now followeth. Ver. 21. 22.

23. Herein mark,

1. He inſtructs him what he ſhall do. Ver. 21.

2. He inſtructs him what he ſhall ſay. Ver. 22. 23.

In the firſt, theſe particulars occurre to note,

Ver. 21.

1. The preface, And Jehovah ſaid to Moſes. Readings in this all agree. Theſe terms are obſervable,

1. The term connecting Gods inſtruction to his preparation.

2. The ſubject prefacing, Jehovah himſelf.

3. The ſubject inſtructed, Moſes.

4. The way of inſtructing, God beſpeak's him.

Ver. 21.

2. The time of his inſtruction to be obſerved, In thy going to return to Egypt. Readings agree all to the ſame purpoſe, no real difference. In this ſtating of the time for obſerving Gods inſtructions mark,

1. The perſon is noted, thou Moſes.

2. The motion is ſuppoſed, that he go forward,

3. The arrival is expreſſed, even his return to Egypt. And when he was come thither.

Ver. 21.

3. The inſtruction itſelf, See all the wonders that I have put into thy hands, and thou ſhalt do them before Pharaoh. Sept. and Onk. ſame. — That thou do them Sam. — Do them. Syr. and Ar. no material diſcord. The whole inſtruction carryeth two things in it,

1. That Moſes ſhould ſee all thoſe miracles that God put into his hand, wherein conſider,

1. The act noted by ſeeing, is to conſider and weigh, and provide for the obſerving the matters that are here ſpoken of within his commiſſion; ſuch as follow,

2. The object, made up of two particulars,

1. The things to be done, they were the miracles and prodigies, by way of emphasis, which afterward were in Chap. 7. and following, recorded.

2. The power he had over them, that God put them into his hand, which was into his power to do; ſo hand doth ſignify in this place.

2. That Moſes ſhould do them before Pharaoh. This is the end of ſeeing and conſidering them; wherein he is directed.

1. To the full edition of all Gods miracles.

2. To the ſpecial doing of them before Pharaoh. He being the cheif with whom God was reſolved to encounter at this time for Iſraels deliverance.

4. The event of all this, And I will make ſtrong his heart, and he ſhall not ſend away the people. — I will harden, Sept. Onk. Sam. Ar. — I will mak his heart great, &c. Syr. Herein are to be noted,

1. Gods act upon Pharaoh but or And I will harden, make ſtrong, make proud or great his heart againſt all theſe miracles,

1. The agent, God himſelf.

2. The object, Pharaohs heart; the innermoſt and mightieſt principle of action.

3. The act, I will make it ſtrong or hard or proud againſt my great works.

2. Pharaohs act on Iſrael, And he will not ſend away or diſmiſſe the people. All readings agree here.

1. The agent here, Pharaoh hardened.

2. The object, Iſrael.

3. The act is negative, he ſhall not diſmiſſe Iſrael or let them go, though my miracles be done before his face.

Queſt. Was not God the author of Pharaohs ſin, ſeeing he hardened his heart? Anſw. No, for the act of God in hardening was not by inſuſing any ſin into his heart, to make him rebel; but herebelling.

1. God withdraweth his grace from him.

2. God leaveth him to the motions of his own Spirit, and lets him alone.

3. God judicially giveth him up to be hardened by ſin and Satan; but this was not the cauſe of his ſin; but a judgment thereupon, which was full of juſtice.

D. 4. It is Gods will his ſervants ſhould ſee and conſider that power delegated.

D. 5. Gods will is that his miracles ſhould be done before his proudeſt enemies.

D. 9. Miracles ſometimes, will not prevail with perſecutors to diſmiſſe Gods people.

D. 7. Hardnes of heart is that which makes men reſiſt Gods wonders.

D. 8. When men harden themselves by sinne, God hardens them by judgment. Ver. 21.

2. Gods instruction to Moses is, what he shall say when he comes to Egypt, wherein God gives him these three things in charge.

Ver. 22. 1. To assert Israel to be Gods peculiar, And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh, thus saith Jehovah, my son, my first born is Israel. Onk, Sam. Syr. fame. — My first born son, &c. Syr. and Ar.

1. Here we have the ministry used, And thou shalt say unto Pharaoh. In which are.

1. The term connecting which knits Gods injunction for his word unto that of his great work's formerly mentioned.

2. The immediat matter connected is an injunction upon the minister to his work.

1. The minister is Moses.

2. The person ministered unto, is Pharaoh.

3. The ministration itself he was to speak that which was put into his mouth as followeth.

2. The authority urged, Thus saith Jehovah. The minister doth but speak & the author is alledged for this assertion, Jehovah avoucheth it himself.

3. The matter asserted by God unto Pharaoh which is a peculiar owning of Israel in two attributes.

1. Israel is my son.

1. The subject is the name of the 12 tribes, the whole seed of Jacob.

2. The attribute is a term of neer relation; the whole seed together is my son.

2. In the order of sons he is my first born; such among men are of dearest account. The son, and the first born; what can be dearer? Zech. 12. 10.

Quest. Why doth God thus assert Israel to be his son? &c.

Ans. 1. The efficient cause is his own free grace, and Covenant to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to be a God to them and their seed. 2. The end of this asserting Israel, is, to answer Pharaoh's objection; that they were a people subjected to him, and kept in his territories so many years, and who could then justly challenge them out of his hand? God therefore pleads with him, and claims the people to be his, and therefore requires their dismissal. Ver. 22. Israel is called first born. Jer. 31. 9. Hebr. 11. 28. All upon Christs account. Psalm. 89. 27. Mala. 2. 10. Colof. 1. 13.

Ver. 23. 2. God requires Pharaoh to dismiss them out of his dominion, And I say unto thee, let my son go, or send away my son that he may serve me. Sept. same. — In the desert. Onk, other readings are to the same purpose.

1. The authority requiring, Jehovah, I say unto thee.

2. The matter required, Send away my son, let him go freely out of your hold.

3. The end of this exaction. That he may serve me, that is, according to my will and in the place where I appoint, he may be serviceable to me in ways of worship and obedience, from which he hath been turned aside in your land.

3. God threatens him upon refusal, where you have.

1. His denial supposed, And thou Ver. 23. wilt refuse to send him away. — If thou wilt not send them away, see therefore I will kill thy first born son, Sept. and Onk. same. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same.

2. Gods threatening is expressed, Behold I am slaying thy son, thy first born. Readings are to the same purpose.

1. In the supposition of God is no uncertainty, however read so by some, but the word is in the future tense thou wilt not send my son away. (This God knew well.

2. In the threatening note.

1. The term of demonstration as evidently pointing out the doom to Pharaoh, behold, take notice of what I say.

2. The threatening itself, wherein is carried.

1. The severity of it, killing his son and first born, that is, all such in the land of Egypt, which was executed; even from the kings to the poorest family. Ch. 12.

2. The certainty of it, God saith, I am slaying them already. The expression is in the present time, as if God were doing it already.

Thus are the instructions given to Moses, that with his shepherds staffe he should go to Pharaoh, and do the wonders enjoined, and deliver the message to him from Jehovah King of Kings, demanding the dismissal of his people, or els threatening the vengeance of heaven upon him and his.

From which we conclude.

D. 1. God joineth his word with his works, that his messengers may shew the world what God requireth.

D. 2. Gods Embassadors though never so mean, must speak to Kings, what God enjoineeth them.

D. 3. Gods name must be vouched to his message, that Kings may stoop to hear it.

D. 4. God asserts his own Israel or Church to be his son, his first born.

D. 5.

D. 5. Gods Son and first born is but one, all are made so in Christ. Math. 17. 15. Pf. 89. 27. Ver. 22.

D. 6. Jehovah requireth this first born of him, from the hands of all oppressors. Hall and Egypt.

D. 7. Gods command is peremptory for the dismissal of his first born Church.

D. 8. The end of Gods exaction of them from bondage is that they may serve and Worship him according to his will.

D. 9. Wicked powers of Hell will deny dismissal of Gods son as long as they can hold him.

D. 10. God sheweth those powers of darknes what they must expect by contending with him. Behold.

D. 11. The sons and first born of the world, God will slay for the redemption of his own.

D. 12. Gods Son and first born people in Christ are dearer to him than all the first born of the world. Ver. 23.

2. The suffering event which befel Moses in the way, is next to be considered, in Ver. 24. 25. 26. Herein these particulars occur.

1. The evil of danger befalling Moses. Ver. 24.

2. The means of deliverance used. Ver. 25.

3. The escape of Moses from it. Ver. 26.

In the first these special terms occur.

1. The circumstances about this event, which are three.

1. Of order, wherein this fell out, which was after Gods call and encouragement given him; this is carried in the term of connection And.

2. Of the special season when it fell out, And it was by the way. All readings agree; The season then of this event was, when Moses was entered upon his journey toward Egypt, and was now in the way.

3. Of the place where it fell out, it was in an time, whether he had betaken himself and company for lodging, and a nights rest. All readings expresse this too.

2. The event itself, thus expressed, That Jehovah met him, and sought to kill him. — The Angel of the Lord. Sept. and Onk. — The Angel of God fell upon his son, &c. Ar. — Sam. and Syr. the same with Hebr. Two things are eminently set out in this event.

1. The action of Jehovah twofold.

1. Hemet with Moses, but this is meant, he came against him, and fell upon him as an adversary; such a meeting it was as the assault of an enemy.

2. He fought to kill him; or to put him to death; Wherein are observable,

1. The evil expressed, the death of Moses.

2. The progress toward it, he fought to kill him; that is, God terrified him, that he apprehended nothing but death; for God need's not to seek out for means to kill men; but in this seeking is noted Gods delay, or respiting of his death, though he put him in fear.

2. The passion of Moses, what he suffered upon this account, which was in two effects.

1. In a deep apprehension of the terrors of the Lord, even to astonishment and ecstasy.

2. In a fear of death now hanging over his head; for these answer the acts of Jehovah, meeting and threatening him.

Quest. 1. Was it Jehovah himself or his Angel?

Answer. 1. In the letter it is Jehovah expressed, as the Author of this trouble to Moses. 2. It may yet be so, that he met him, and terrified him, by the appearance of an Angel, so some read it.

Quest. 2. Was it a visible appearance?

Ans. 1. Certain it is that it was such an appearance as wrought upon the sense of Moses, and Zipporah. 2. It was therefore visible or sensible in some kind, which is enough for us. 3. That it was in the shape of a Dragon, is a fable; or that it was by a grievous sickness, is very uncertain and improbable, for it held not long; but a present perturbation it was, very grievous, though not expressed.

Quest. 3. Why did God so meet? &c.

Ans. 1. No doubt Moses had offended some way. 2. It is certain by what followeth he sinned in the neglect of circumcision. 3. Therein he might pollute Israel. Having not the seal of the Covenant on his.

D. 1. After greatest encouragements may bitter discoveries be made from God to his servants.

D. 2. In the way of obedience, Gods servants may meet with the sharpest tentations.

D. 4. Jehovah himself may meet his dearest servants as an adversary.

D. 5. God may seek to kill, when he purposeth not to kill his servants.

D. 6. It is some sad defects in Gods servants that put him upon such attempts. Ver 4.

In the second, the means of his deliverance is recorded. And then Zipporah took a sharp stone or knife and cut off the superfluous foreskin of her son, and made it touch his feet, and said, surely a husband of bloods art thou to me. Ver. 25. Sam. agreeth.

Ver. 25.

Ver. 25.
Nede.

A spouse of blood. — And fell at his feet and said, the blood of the circumcision of my child hath stood up, Sept. — And offered it before him and faith for the blood of this circumcision, let my husband be given unto me. Onkel. — And held his feet and said thou art an husband of blood to me. Syr. — And offered it in his sight and said, it was but a little distant, that my husband had been killed, Ar.

In this record of the means used we have to note. That it was the circumcision of his son, which put a stop to this stroak, and this done by Zipporah his wife, whereabout we may observe.

1. Her preparation, then or and Zipporah took a sharp knife. Wherein are obvious.

1. The term closely connecting this help unto the former danger, then, immediately, when shee saw her husbands life in danger, she bestirre's herself.

2. The subject preparing, Zipporah the wife of Moses, now in her husbands sight, a Midianitish woman.

3. The instrument, which is read a sharp stone a flint. Syr. and Ar. But it is used for any sharpe instrument; knife or other, which was most fit for this service at this time, and neer at hand.

4. The act of preparation, shee took this knife or instrument in her hand.

2. Her execution, And she cut off the foreskin of her son.

1. The agent here, was the same hand of Zipporah.

2. The patient was her son yet uncircumcised; some say it was Gershom the eldest. Ben. Uz. But this is improbable, for God would have bin as angry with Moses before this time as well as now, if that had bin neglected. Others more likely, understand it of the youngest not long before this journey born, whose name was Eliezer.

3. The part in which he suffered, was his superfluous foreskin.

4. The act upon it, she cut it off.

3. Her disposition of it being thus cut off; And she made it touch his feet, or, as well paraphrased, she cast it at his feet, wherein.

1. The disposer Zipporah, who cut it off.

2. The matter disposed, the foreskin cut off.

3. The disposition of it, she cast it down or made it touch his feet, she threw it under foot; the 70 read it, she cast at his feet. i. e. of Moses.

The Caldee read, she offered it before him, viz. Jehovah, The Syr. reads, she held his, i. e. the child. In the letter it is, she made it touch his feet; all the difficulty is about the relative, whose feet these were, it being by divers referred to Moses, to the child, and to the Angel of Jehovah who was ready to kill Moses; if to this, it is conceived to be by way of oblation to pacify Jehovah; as some Rabbins say; but the foreskins were never appointed for oblations. If it be meant of the child's feet, then the speech which followeth must be directed unto him, which most deny. If to Moses, it must be in discontent and indignation, as the words following are by most interpreted; one of these two last must be intended.

4. Her expression upon the whole, Ver. 25.

And she said, because or surely a spouse or husband of bloods art thou to me. The right interpretation of this tend's much to the understanding of this whole action. And the sense of it depends upon the determination of the person, to whom these words are directed, about which there are two opinions.

1. That which is more generally affirmed, is that these words were spoken unto Moses, and then they must be words of passion.

2. That which is more rare, that they are spoken unto the child, and so note the form of words used in circumcision.

Against the first it is urged that the word חתן is never used from wife to husband after marriage, for it notes onely such espoused or initiated; and indeed this carrieth reason in it, that the words are not so spoken by Zipporah to Moses, she having had two children by him at this time.

Again for the second it is urged from the records of the Hebrewes, that the infants circumcised were called by the name of חתן as being initiated by the blood of circumcision into the Church. I am persuaded that the greater reason swayeth the sense this way; that when the foreskin fell off at the feet of the infant, she said to her son, Now art thou espoused to me by bloods, that of circumcision, for that is given as the expression of the meaning of these bloods in the verse following. Moreover to call any a man of bloods or an husband of bloods according to the force of the Hebrew phrase denoteth a man to be a shedder of

of

of blood, but Moses shed none, neither could she so tax him; therefore improbable it is that these words should be in passion against him, for she spake them about the circumcision as in the next. But it is queried.

Quest. Did Zipporah do well in this act of circumcising her son?

Ans. 1. This act is unparalleled in all sacred history, therefore hereupon dubious. 2. Though the law before this time doth not declare to us the administration strictly, yet this worke was first committed to Abraham, and afterwards in the settlement of the Church to Ministers fit for the doing of it; and this sheweth what was right to be done in former times. 3. It was doubtles her husbands duty, and for her to do it in his presence could not belong to her but upon necessity, he being at that time by the opposition of Gods hand disabled. 4. Doubtles here was infirmity in all, which though God pardoned, yet he did not allow. 5. This was a singular extraordinary act, therefore not to be drawn into imitation by any against Gods law of administration of baptism under the Gospel, as the Papists do.

D. 1. In Gods threatening death to him and suspending it, he provideth means to escape. Then.

D. 2. It is the wifes duty and praise to save the husband from perishing under Gods hand.

D. 3. Sacrament - administration may reconcile, where the neglect hath provoked God.

D. 4. God hath born with weak and unfit hands in such administrations, but not to approve them.

D. 5. Foreskin cutting off, is the way to cleanse families, and make God propitious.

D. 6. The foreskin is better to be under foot, than in the place where it offend's God.

D. 7. Infants were espoused by blood of circumcision in the Church of God.

D. 8. Such sponsals of infants to God, are to be acknowledged by the members of the Church.

D. 9. Forms of words are useful in the Sacraments, such as are suitable to their nature, but not arbitrary.

D. 10. It is dangerous neglecting initiating Sacraments which God ordaines; It is most safe to use them. Ver. 25.

2. Now followeth the escape of Moses from this danger, And, then or so he departed from him and let him go, then said shee a spouse of blood for the circumcisions. Ver. 26. And the Angel departed from him, wherefore she said, the blood of the circumcision of my son hath stood up, Sept. — And when he had let him go, then she said, but that for the blood of this circumcision my spouse had bin condemned to death. Onkel. — And he desisted from him, then she said, &c. Syr. — And he departed from her, &c. Sam. — And he withdrew from him and she said the spouse to be slain is made circumcised. Ar.

Two main things are here delivered.

1. The exemption of Moses from his danger in the desisting of God from smiting him, or contending with him, wherein we have;

1. The term connecting this effect close to the former means, immediately thereupon was this successe.

2. The matter connected is the escape of Moses, wherein;

1. The subject departing, Jehovah or his Angel, who now visibly appeared contending with Moses, as once he wrestled with Jacob, and pinched him, so probably the Angel visibly appeared, calling him down, keeping him under, and lifting up his hand as it were to slay him.

2. The party from whom he goeth, was Moses whom he had met, and offered to kill him for his neglect of circumcising his son.

3. The act of deliverance, in the Angels or Jehovahs dismissal of him; he left crushing him, and threatening him, or bruising him; and so his life was spared, and God yet graciously reconciled, which must be imported in it. As to conjectures that Zipporah should leave Moses, or that Moses should leave the child, they have no semblance of truth or reason in them as to these words.

2. The recognition of Zipporah hereupon, Then said she a spouse of bloods for the circumcisions. Wherein we may note,

Ver. 26

1. The recognizer here, which is Zipporah, for the verb is in the feminine gender אמרה therefore it cannot be grammatically here applied to Moses, as some do, and make him here the speaker, yet Junius in his Anal. makes this Zipporahs speech. Willets for Moses. But she said. And that the woman was the speaker is clear.

Jun. Anal.

2. The recognition which she makes upon her husbands escape, a spouse of bloods for the circumcisions; which most under-

T t c under-understand, she speaks by way of excuse to her husband, that she called him a bloody husband, not for any cruelty, to her, but because by reason of him she was forced to circumcise her son and shed blood. But, it seemes to me more reason, that these words are exegetical to those before, in the act of circumcision, which she pronounced about her son. A spouse of bloods thou art to me, what meaneth this spouse of bloods? She saith, a spouse of bloods for the circumcision, because thereupon he was espoused to the Church & become as a son adopted unto God, and initiated by circumcision. It was then upon the account of circumcision Gods ordinance, that she spake these words; therefore not probably in passion to her husband; the position of this cause of the words, doth seem to remove all other. How lovely &c. Ben. Uz.

Quest. Did Zipporah leave Moses now?

Answer. It is probable that upon some intimation from God in these crosse providences, that Moses did now send her back with her sons to Jethro his father in law; yet nothing expressly maketh this out; but back she went, for afterward, Jethro brought them to Moses. Chap. 18. 2.

Quest. Why are circumcisions here in the plural?

Answer. 1. Some say with respect to both sons of Moses. 2. It may be with respect to the customary circumcisions in the Church. 3. The number is not of moment, but the nature of the thing; which was the ground of her speech. The use of numbers may be arbitrary; the same thing is sometimes singularly and plurally represented by Gods Spirit.

Yet we observe.

- D. 1. Deliverance is very near at hand to the obedience of Gods servants.
- D. 2. God ceaseth from plaguing when men cease from sinning.
- D. 3. Gods ceasing from punishment is the entrance upon reconciliation with him.
- D. 4. The husbands deliverance is worth recognizing of the means by the wife.
- D. 5. Infants may bear names from ordinances to recognize mercies to parents. A spouse.
- D. 6. Circumcision did give an espousal of the circumcised unto God in his Church. Ver. 16.

If the words be taken as spoken to Moses in passion, then some other notes may be as this.

D. Women under good husbands may be offended with the strictness of Gods ordinances, passionate thereupon with their husbands under Gods hand, and yet at last brought to excuse it.

This is not written, nor noted for imitation.

3. The next general head noted in this Chapter, is the disposing and siting of Aaron to joine with Moses in the work of Israels deliverance; which in the general division Ch. 2. was noted to be the second head of Gods preparing Aaron to be an instrument with Moses for bringing Israel out of Egypt and this finisheth that hand of Gods preparing instruments; this we have Ver. 26. 28.

In this preparation of Aaron the second instrument we have to consider. Ver. 27.

1. Gods call of him, And Jehovah said to Aaron go to meet Moses in the wilderness. Sept. Onk. Syr. Sam. and Ar. to the same.

1. The term connecting this preparation of Aaron to that of Moses, is considerable; when the first instrument, by call, encouragements, challenging, and delivering was now prepared, God quickly joineh a second, he seeing need of it and so ordering it.

2. The matter immediately connected is the call of Aaron, wherein we have to note.

1. The power calling, Jehovah himself, who formerly had bin preparing Moses, the same heavenly authority sits both.

2. The party called, Aaron, of whom formerly was noted, that he was elder brother to Moses, the eldest son of Amram, the son of Levi; yet him God calleth now to second unto Moses the younger brother.

3. The call itself, God spake to him, either by vision, or some other way, wherein God made known his mind; but speak to him God did, when he was yet in Egypt, and Moses now on his way thitherward, so Jehovah is omnipresent calling and informing his instruments at distance, uniting hearts, when they see not each others faces. nor know each others conditions.

4. The work unto which God called him, Go into the wilderness to meet Moses, here.

1. The motion commanded, up and go, dispatch, take your journey, and move whether I call you.

2. The term whereunto, which is the wilderness between Egypt and Midian, where where a little before Moses had bin feeding his fathers flock; and the more special place is afterward named, the mount of God; this supposeth the term from whence he was to come, which doubtles was Egypt where he sojourned with his family.

3. The end of his journey thither, it was to meet Moses; wherein must be weighed.

1. The person to be met, which might encourage him to the journey; it was Moses.

1. His younger brother, doubtles dear unto him, of whom perhaps he scarce knew whether he were dead, or living; to see him was desirable.

2. His superiour and chief under Gods constitution, who was to be as a God unto him.

3. His redeemer in subordination to God as well as Israels, to whom God gave the first commission; and in which he joineh Aaron as a second, and special help.

2. The meeting of Moses unto which God calleth Aaron, seemeth to import.

1. Access unto him in the place appointed.

2. Audience of him in the matters, which God by him would make known to Aaron.

3. Obedience to him as to the commands of God by him, to finish the work of Israels redemption, these things must be metonymically the sense of this meeting. For God called not Aaron, only to meet Moses.

Ver. 27.

2. Aarons answer to this call of God. And he went and met him in the mount of God and kissed him. Sam. and Ar. same. They kissed each other, Sept.

In the mount where the glory of God was revealed, &c. Onkel. In Horeb. Syr. In the whole, Aarons obedience to Gods call is declared, wherein we have to consider.

1. The term connecting, which knits the answer close to Gods call; he dispures not with God about it, as Moses did.

2. The answer itself connected, wherein are.

1. His motion, he went, with all readiness.

2. His meeting, and he met him, it is another word used, as that, of Gods meeting Moses, but here in a better sense, to hear the will of God from him, and to join with him for his help.

3. He kissed him; this was his salutation.

1. A signal of natural love among brethren.

2. A signal of homage; and civil obedience to him; knowing his exaltation by God to be his sovereign. Ver. 27.

3. Moses his declaration of Gods commission to him, whereby Aaron might know him to be called of God, and that in two points.

1. As to the words of God unto him, And Moses declared to Aaron all the words of Jehovah who had sent him. Sam. Syr. same. Ver. 28.

All the which he sent, Sept. For which he sent. Onk. Ar. All the business of Jehovah for which he sent him. Jun. wherein also note.

1. The term connecting the order of history, and immediately joining this declaration of Moses unto the meeting and salutation of Aaron, God made known more to him quickly, after his ready obedience unto his call.

2. The matter connected is the declaration itself, wherein we have to consider.

1. The party declaring, Moses, set up of God as his chief minister in the present work.

2. The party to whom this declaration was made, Aaron, in subordination joined with him as to the commission of delivering Israel.

3. The matter of declaration, which in this part was the words of Jehovah, and these twofold.

1. The words which the Lord spake to him, of his calling him, of the promise of his presence with him, of the opening of his name, of the promise of successe with Israel, and of encouragement several ways to himself.

2. The words, which he commanded Moses to speak to Pharaoh, to tell him of his right to Israel, of his will for their deliverance, and of his vengeance if he refused.

4. The declaration itself was in plain terms of speech from Moses to Aaron, he told him all.

The author of all, he who sent him.

2. As to the works, which God commanded and enabled him to do, these he declareth in the second place, And all the signs which he had commanded him. Onk. same, the same. All the words, &c. Sept. which commanded him to do. Ver. 28.

In these the matter of declaration is all to be here considered, wherein we have to note.

1. The works themselves which were the miracles and prodigies, which Jehovah gave Moses power to do. C. 4 v. 2. 9.

2. The authority injoining them to be done by Moses, Jehovah himself commanded them.

3. The declaration of them to Aaron, might be either by telling him what power God had given him, or els by doing the same miraculous works in the sight of Aaron, which is conceived by some. Ver. 28.

D. 14. Gods wonderful works as well as gracious works must be shewed at his command.

D. 14. Joins Embassadors of the Churches deliverance need to know Gods words and works. Ver. 28.

2. After Gods preparing the instruments of Israels deliverance from the second Chapter to the verse immediately foregoing. God now further prepares for the work of deliverance, and that, by sending them about it, and their onset on the same, which now followeth in the history. And in pursuance of this,

1. He sends them to speak his mind.

1. To Israel, Ver. 29. 30. 31. Which is the fourth head observed in this fourth Chapter.

2. To Pharaoh. Ch. 5.

3. To Israel again. Ch. 6.

2. He sends them to work his will. Ch. 7, &c.

In this order for speaking and delivering Gods mind about Israels deliverance; they begin with Israel to make it known to them, which in the division of the Chapter containeth the fourth head, in the three last verses of it.

Herein we have to note three main things.

1. The access of Moses and Aaron unto Israel and the collection of their elders. Ver. 29.

2. The delivery of their embassage from God unto them. Ver. 30.

3. The event or effect of all upon the people. Ver. 31.

In the first we have two things obvious.

1. The motion of these joynt instruments, And there went Moses and Aaron. Ver. 29.

All readings agree. Onely the verb here singular is rendred by some in the plural; but it is a singular, and so a protogynma is here to be observed. Here occurre,

1. The term of connection, which knits this motion unto the meeting of Moses and Aaron, and the opening of their commission; this done, immediately they set upon their journey.

2. The parties mooving, Moses and Aaron jointly, both in their order, as sent by God.

3. The motion itself, they went forward from the mount of God unto Goshen in the Land of Egypt; so it must be here considered as the motion perfected, they went and now were come to Goshen; which appears by the sequel.

2. The collection or assembling of the heads of the people; to whom by God they were directed first to go, and declare Gods respects unto them. Herein are observable,

1. The power convening, Moses and Aaron.

2. Persons convened, All the elders of the sons of Israel. All readings agree. The 70. read ElderShip.

The reason of this was upon prudential considerations; as

1. These were the heads of the children of Israel, under whom the people were ordered in their tribes.

2. These were conveniently to be gathered together, but the whole congregation consisting of so many hundred thousand, could not meet.

3. The mind of God was, as by Moses ses to speak to these, so by these to inform the people better of Gods visitation of them, so to engage them, each to other.

3. The convention itself, They gathered them together, this verb is plural; that is, Moses and Aaron brought them together in one place; where they might open their commission to them from God. Ver. 29.

D. 1. Preparation unto and motion of instruments in the Churches deliverance, must be joyned.

D. 2. Orderly motion of instruments in the Churches redemption is to be observed.

D. 3. Gods ministers of salvation must reach home to those soules to whom God sends them.

D. 4. Trudential assembling is requisite for making known Gods will to his people.

D. 5. The collection of heads and rulers by them to manifest the will of God to his people is rational.

D. 6. All the Israel of God is eyed by him thorough these helps to know his salvation. Ver. 29.

In the second which is the opening of their commission unto the congregation, we have to note, the declaration of two ways.

1. By word, And Aaron spake all the words which Jehovah had spoken unto Moses. All readings agree. Herein also may we note

1. The connection of this speaking to the assembling of them before; they came not together in vain.

2. The speaker here expressed is Aaron whom God ordained a spokesman from Moses to them.

3. The matter here spoken unto them, he spake all the words, which the Lord had spoken unto Moses. The very same which Moses told Aaron, Ver. 28. which were doubtlesse words of promise for Israels deliverance, God having seen their affliction, and words of command to him, for visiting them and going to Pharaoh, and demanding the liberty of the people, and in Gods way to effect it; all words of this kind which Jehovah had spoken, he now speak's to these heads of Israel, that they might hear and believe the Lord.

2. By deed, And did the signes in the sight of the people. All readings are to the same purpose.

1. The term of connection here also knits doing to speaking, as God had joynted them in his commission.

2. The sign-doer is here carried in the verb, and some make it to be Moses who did the sign, as Aaron did speak the words; but as our translators hint, this also is to be understood of Aaron. He spake, and did the signes, the verbs are so closely combined; And so I take it, that God in Moses, by Aaron as the minister, did these things.

3. The works done, were signes, even those miraculous and prodigious works, spoken of in the beginning of the Chapter; turning the shepherds staffe into a serpent, &c.

4. The witnesses of this wonder-working, it is said they were done in the eyes of the people, that is of the people which were assembled, and they were the elders of the children of Israel: To them first, to Pharaoh and all Israel afterward, not only those but other prodigious works of wonder were wrought and declared.

Whence we observe.

D. 1. Declaring of Gods will is suitably untied to the assembling of his people.

D. 2. Gods spokesmen made by him are fittest to declare his mind to his people.

D. 3. The words of Jehovah onely which he hath spoken to his servants, must be given to his assembly.

D. 4. God may give his mind more immediately to one servant than to another. To Moses.

D. 5. Gods stupendious works must be done, as well as his words spoken to his people.

D. 6. Gods congregation are the first subject to whom his words and works are sent. Ver. 30.

In the third, which is the event of assembling the elders, and of speaking, and doing these works before them, we have these particulars obvious.

1. The peoples faith, And the people Ver. 31. believed. All readings agree. In this event note,

1. The connection of this unto the former ministry, the word was preached, and signes shewed and the people believed. These are joyned.

2. The subject of this event, the people, which cannot be meant of all the congregation of Israel, for they neither heard, nor saw the things spoken or done; but synecdochically these elders are said to be the people, before whom all these things were discovered, being their representations.

T e t t 3 people

3. The event itself, they believed, which carryeth in it.

1. A professed assent unto the truth of all those words spoken by Aaron, and confirmed by the signs.

2. A professed consent and dependence upon God for their deliverance according to his word.

3. Consequently a professed subjection unto the present Ministers who were to be the instruments of their salvation.

Quest. Was this faith genuine and in truth?

Ans. 1. The subject receiving must be distinguished, either into those who were among them truly Israel, or such as were so only in name. 2. This distinction made, it is answered.

1. That they who were the true seed, though few did in truth believe; but as to the generality who were Israel only in name, they believed after the manner of men, so far as sense sustained them; but afterward upon the appearance of a little affliction upon their loins, they murmured against Moses and Aaron, and God; as is evident in the next Chapter. So the wisdom of God orders it and he gets glory by all.

Ver. 31.]

2. The next event is the demonstration of their faith by bowing & worshipping; And they heard that Jehovah had visited the sons of Israel, and that he had seen their affliction, and they bowed the head and bowed themselves. — That God had remembered, &c. Onk.

— And they rejoiced, &c. and the people bowing down worshipped. Sept. — And that God had remembered, and seen their bondage, they prostrate worshipped. Syr and Ar. Herein note,

1. The occasion, ground or reason of this event, and that was the hearing of some good tidings.

1. Herein the way of reception is noted which was by hearing, And they heard; that is, with their ears, these good tidings spoken by Aaron from Moses.

2. The matter of reception by hearing, which is expressed in two particulars.

1. That Jehovah had visited the sons of Israel.

1. The visitor Jehovah, he that was and is, and is to come, and makes to be what pleaseth him.

2. The visited, the whole seed of Israel here named under the sons of Israel.

3. The visitation itself, which was in mercy to redeem them, from bondage and deliver them into the liberty of his children.

2. That he had seen their afflictions.

1. The same Jehovah the seer here.

2. The same Israel in all their afflictions oppressions, and burdens seen.

3. The seeing of all this, an act of providence implying these things.

1. Sense of all their misery on them.

2. Pity to his afflicted under all, his eye cannot see, but it must pity.

3. Help, he seeth to deliver from the hour of temptation.

2. The event hereupon in the sons of Israel, which is but one, a grateful return unto God by faith, expressed in two acts.

1. They bowed their head. This by the Hebrews is noted to be the least degree of external worship, the bowing of the head only; they had three other steps.

1. Bowing of the body towards the knees.

2. Kneelings down.

3. Prostration of the whole body from top to foot upon the earth.

2. They bowed themselves, that is, by prostration upon the earth, which was the greatest outward signal of worship, and in both these; that which is intended in Gods commands and counsels, is the true, thorough, and sincere worship of God both in body and Spirit; a bowing body under a heart lifted up is abominable unto God; in this action however it is to be judged of some, that they worshipped & blessed God sincerely and in faith, yet of all it cannot be presumed; by the following miscarriages toward God hereafter expressed in the history.

From which we collect.

D. 1. The peoples faith should closely follow upon Gods word ministered and by his works confirmed. A good connection.

D. 2. Where God promiseth success to his ministers in the faith of others, there they shall believe. Chap. 3. Ver. 18.

D. 3. All professed believers, receive not Gods word with the same faith.

D. 4. Hearing is the usual sense of bringing in faith and the fruits of it.

D. 5. Gods gracious visitation of his Church, and providential sight of its afflictions, is very good to be heard by them.

D. 6. Such hearing of Gods visiting love and redeeming providence must affect Gods Israel.

D. 7.

D. 7. Faith working by this sense stirs up souls to suitable returns unto God.

D. 8. The humblest and sincerest Worship in body and Spirit is the most suitable return to God for his redemption. Ver. 31.

Thus the first message was dispatched by Moses and Aaron unto Israel, to prepare them for their deliverance wherewith this fourth Chapter is ended.

CHAP. V.

NOW followeth in this Chapter the Embassy sent to Pharaoh himself from God by the mouth of Moses and Aaron, wherein two heads are noted,

1. The embassy itself here delivered.

2. The events following thereupon.

In the former these particulars do occur.

1. The proposition of their message.

2. The return of Pharaoh to it.

3. The confirmation of this message.

4. The peremptory reply of Pharaoh.

1. The proposition of the message is made. Ver. 1. Wherein these are obvious.

1. The order, And afterward. Sam. Syr. same. — After these things, Sept. and Onk. — After this. Ar.

no difference in the sense. This only notes the connection and order of this work to the former; that after they had shewed Gods mind to Israel, and procured faith in measure from them, now according to their order from God, they come to Pharaoh; so it was commanded.

2. The persons, which were ambassadors, Moses and Aaron, to these Gods commission came in that order mentioned in the former Chapter; yet they came not alone, but with some company of the heads of Israel with them, as may be gathered. Ver. 4.

3. Their access and declaration, they went in and said to Pharaoh. All readings are to the same purpose, herein,

1. Their access; though poor despised men, which could scarce be admitted into the presence of a King, yet sent of God as his ambassadors, they press boldly into his presence and come home to him.

2. Their action, they spake and made a declaration to him of their embassy from heaven, as followeth.

4. The embassy itself proposed, Ver. 2.

Thus saith Jehovah, the God of Israel, send away my people, that they may, or and they shall keep a feast to me in the wilderness. Most readings agree to the latter. Onkel. reads, — That they may sacrifice before God. Herein,

1. The authority is proposed, Thus saith Jehovah the God of Israel; wherein,

1. The name of his being Jehovah. He that was, and is, and is to come.

2. The name of his relation, The God of Israel, the poor brick makers in Egypt; now under grievous oppression; that very God who owned them, and was worshipped by them; God, not [in abstraction] considered by himself but [in concreto] as now made known in his revealed will to Israel, how he will be served and worshipped by his creature.

3. His word is urged, thus saith he to Pharaoh king of Egypt; it is not man, but God proposed speaking unto Pharaoh. This is the authority.

2. The message or embassy itself sent from God, Dismiss or send away my people; the matter proposed from God to Pharaoh is to set Israel free, and dismiss his people from their bondage; wherein, God owneth them for his people and mooveth here for their dismissal. The form of this message is preceptive, and by way of command. I say send my people away.

3. The end of this exaction, That they may, or and they shall keep a feast to me in the wilderness. In this end note,

1. The subject Israel Gods people as before,

2. The object to whom this work is to be done, God.

3. The work itself, which is the end proposed of their dismissal, to keep a feast Which is here synecdochically for all other things considered in spiritual feasting, where there was worship, and offering of sacrifice, upon which account the Calde paraphraseth, That they may sacrifice before me. So that under this feasting is carried the whole service and worship of God, inward, loving God, fearing God, trusting in God; rejoicing in God; and outward, as sacrificing to God and worshipping God in the dances, according to the rule of worship then given. This is the end.

4. The place of performing this service. Not Egypt, for from thence God demand's them, but the wilderness, and therein, the mount of God, where they pitched, when God gave them his law from thence, thus farre is the proposition of their message. As to the quere, whether this demand was not equivocal, when full deliverance from Egypt was intended? I have answered already; that God deals really, and demands but little at first, to convince the tyrant of the justice of Gods request, & the unreasonableness of his denial.

Ver. 2.

2. Now follows Pharaohs answer to this proposition, Ver. 2. Wherein note,
1. The replier, And Pharaoh said; the reading is generally the same. Herein observe,
1. The connection knits this answer to the proposal close, he is presently upon them again, with an hasty answer.
2. The person replying, Pharaoh King of Egypt unto those dispicable embassadours from heaven, Moses and Aaron, he too in the pride of his heart bespeaks them.
3. The answer itself made two wa-

yes.

1. By way of proud expostulation, Who is Jehovah that I should obey his voice? Ver. 2. to send away Israel? Sam. Syr. Ar. same.

Who is it whose voice I should hear? &c. Sept. — The name of the Lord is not revealed to me, that I should? &c. Onkel. — It is not manifest to me in the book of Angels. Ben. Uz. In this we have,

1. The expostulation, whereabout note.

1. The matter of it which is about Gods being.

2. The form of it, which is scornful and contemptuous; as if he had said, why tell ye me of Jehovah the God of Israel? What is he that is a God of a poor pillared people? He denieth not God here in the abstract but in the concrete, as he was Jehovah God of Israel; who or what is he to me?

2. The reason of the contemptuous question which is his scorn to hear his voice, or be obedient to this demand.

1. Shall I hear the voice of the God of Israel, such a base people, whose God is like them or els he would deal better with them.

2. Shall I send away Israel out of my power at the command of such a God as he? I scorn to hear of it.

2. By way of obstinate denial, I know not Jehovah, and also I will not send away Israel. Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. same.

— The name of the Lord is not revealed to me, &c. Onkel. Wherein his obstinacy appears in two peremptorie negatives.

1. I know not Jehovah. This respects God, and it carrieth in it these negatives.

1. I know no such Jehovah as you mention.

2. I acknowledge not that God of Israel.

3. I fear him not, let him do his worst.

2. And also I will not send away Israel. This denial respects Gods people; and their liberty, wherein we may observe,

1. The connection, denying right to men followeth close upon denying knowledge of God, or acknowledgment of him.

2. The denial itself is peremptory.

1. Expressed, here is a peremptory bar to their liberty, besides what I say to you of God, I say also, I will not dismiss Israel; none shall take them out of my dominion.

2. Implied is this assertion, that do what they or their God could, he would keep them in bondage. Thus he wickedly rejects Gods proposal.

We

We note here.

D. 1. Proud impertuous Spirits are hasty to reply roughly upon Gods messengers.

D. 2. Idolaters are apt to despise God in the true revelation of him.

D. 3. Hardened souls vent their contempt upon God himself more than on his Church.

D. 4. Contempt of Jehovah suffers not men to hear his voice.

D. 5. Disobedience to God ushers in oppression to his people.

D. 6. Scorners of God can never come to the right knowledge of God or acknowledgment of him.

D. 7. Wicked wretches glory in the contempt of knowing God.

D. 8. Denial of knowing God denieth all good commanded for his people. Ver. 2.

3. The next thing is the serious inculcating and impressing their message upon Pharaoh by some forcible grounds, which seem in this third verse to be threefold.

1. Gods appearance and call of them to the work forementioned, And they said, the God of the Hebrews hath met with us or hath called us, as called upon us. So the word is variously read. The God of the Hebrews hath called us. Sept. — The God of the Jews is called upon us. Onk. — I am the God of the Hebrews hath appeared to us, Syr. — The command of the God of the Hebr. is come unto us Ar. In these they give a reason of their former proposition of their message, that as God had required their dismissal from Pharaoh, so he had met with them, and called them, to go and keep a Feast to him in the wilderness, therefore they were bound to go. Herein are these terms,

1. The persons rendering this account or reason of their message, both the same messengers by consent, Moses and Aaron say again as followeth.

2. The account or reason which they render of proposing their message. Wherein note,

1. The authority pressing them. The God of the Hebrews, synonymous with the God of Israel; and this title is the rather used, because as the Hebrews themselves were now a despised people, so their God was a despised God by Pharaoh; who is he? as before he spake with contempt: now however enemies did undervalue him, yet Moses and Aaron do vouch him. The God of the Hebrews.

2. The impression of this authority upon them as to this work, which is rendered these ways

1. He is called upon us, So it is in the letter, the verb is passive, and for the reason is, God is named on us, and we are his people calling on him; therefore ought we to go at his call.

2. He hath called us, a verb passive used active as is usual with the 70. καλεσεν, he hath called us, for the reason of pressing their message is Gods call, or command upon them to go into the wilderness.

3. He hath met with us, as if the verb were קרא not קרא so ours, and others, which meeting was by his former visible appearance, and imports his call of them unto this work. This is the first account given of their message.

2. They presse it by way of intreaty, Let us go we pray thee, a journey of three dayes into the wilderness and sacrifice to Jehovah our God. Onk. Sam. same. We will therefore go a journey of three dayes, &c. Sept. Syr. and Ar. So that this passage is rendered two ways.

1. As a resolution.

2. As a supplication.

Ours take in the latter, as others of good note; and so note,

1. The form of words, they are prayer wise under that term נא We pray thee; so they urge Gods message of themselves by way of intreaty.

2. The matter of it is in two petitions.

1. Liberty for three dayes journey into the wilderness, as they were ordered by God.

2. Leave to sacrifice unto Jehovah their God; that which was stiled feasting. Ver. 1. Is here stiled sacrificing, which indeed comprehend's the whole service of God, this is all, that they might go whither God called them, and do whatever God bid them; and upon this account they in the second place presse their message.

3. They urge it upon Gods threatening of them, Left he fall upon us with pestilence or with the sword. Therefore let us go, we pray thee. Left death or the sword meet us. 70. — Death and slaughter befall us. Onk. Vulg. — With the sword and mortality. Syr. — Ar. and Sam. agree with Hebr. The argument is from the fear of Gods judgments. Wherein we have to note,

1. The power feared, lest he our God.

2. The evil feared, pestilence and the sword, two of Gods great plagues.

3. The infliction feared. Irruption, or breaking in of God with these plagues.

4. The subject of the infliction, us. Which comprehends Israelites & Egyptians, you will not be free if we be plagued. Hereupon lastly they urge their message. The request request

request for three dayes was not equivocal as was answered before in Gods charge. Other Jewish fables of the words and works of Moses are foolish.

Note we hence.

- D. 1. Gods Embassadors must not forsake his message, upon mans denial. Connect.
- D. 2. Further arguments must presse Gods message, when the proposal is not enough.
- D. 3. The God of the Hebrewes must be owned by them, though despised by Pharaoh.
- D. 4. Relation unto God, and call from him necessitates souls to follow his commands.
- D. 5. Although God command powers, yet it becometh his people to intreat them.

- D. 11. These plagues are incident on all that neglect God, but much more on them that forbid others to serve him.
- D. 12. The feare of these judgments should awe souls from slighting his message to them Ver. 3.

4. The scornful and peremptory return of Pharaoh puts an end to this first delivery of Gods message to him, Ver. 4. 5. Herein observe,

Ver. 4.

1. His angry expostulation with Gods messengers. And the King of Egypt said unto them, wherefore do ye Moses and Aaron cause the people to cease from their works? Onk. and Syr. same. — Why do ye divert or turn away? &c. Sept. Sam. — Why draw ye the people? Ar. — Why do ye solicit or periwade? Vulg. Lat.

1. The term of connection knits this rough reply unto an humble request precedent.

2. The subject increpating by this expostulation, the King of Egypt. One great enough and malicious enough against God and his.

3. The persons under checke, Moses and Aaron Gods Embassadors.

4. The increpation itself, why do ye draw away, divert, distract, solicit, or cause the people to cease from their works? His expostulation is with rage and menacing, carrying in it nothing but displeasure.

2. His remanding of the people to their work Get ye, go ye to your burdens. — Go every one of you to his works. Sept. — Go ye to your service or bondage, Onk. Syr. — Go to your carriages, Ar. — Sam. as Hebr.

1. The persons remanded, were such as formerly were under service whether in higher or lower ranke; it is likely the very elders of Israel were not exempted from some kind of service; & some doubtles went with Moses and Aaron unto Pharaoh, to whom he thus speak's.

2. The condition unto which they were remanded, to their burdens, service, bondage, carriages, as in their making bricks and other drudgeries.

3. The remand itself. Away, get ye gon speedily to your burdens, let me hear no more of you, for going to serve your God, you shall go & do my work, every one of you go to your burdens. Ver. 4.

3. A further crimination of Moses and Aaron by Pharaoh, And Pharaoh said, behold the people of the land now (are) many and ye make them rest from their burdens. Onk. same. παύετε αὐτοὺς.

— The people of the land are multiplied, let us not therefore make them cease from their works. Sept. — They are more than the people of the land, and ye make them rest, &c. Sam.

— The people are very many and ye draw them away. &c. Syr. — Is there so great a multitude of the inhabitants of the region, that ye hinder them from their hearing? Ar. Herein note,

1. A demonstration of the ground of his charge, And Pharaoh said, behold now, the people of the land now are many; here,

1. The same is plaintiffe who before was angry and threatening. Pharaoh said.

2. The matter of his plaint discovered, Behold the people of the land now are many.

1. The term of demonstration noteth that it was a notorious thing, which he now expresth.

2. The thing demonstrated, is the mul-multitude of the Israelites, unto which they were grown under the persecution, the people of the land here doubtles signify the seed of Israel; and the matter of his trouble is their multitude.

Quest. Why complains he of their multitude?

Ans. 1. His envy doubtles against the increase of Israel Gods people. 2. His pretense of danger, if this multitude should mutiny upon this occasion. 3. It may import also that now much work might be done for him by this multitude, and therefore no small losse came unto the King, by their sitting still and not working.

2. The charge or crimination itself upon Moses and Aaron, Ye make them rest from the burdens, herein ye prejudice my gain, and ye lay a ground for their mutiny and seditious rising; to this purpose tend's the charge.

1. The persons charged are Gods Ministers Moses and Aaron.

2. The crime charged on them, that they made the people rest from their burdens, while they mooved for them to go and serve their God; which doth import a charge of detriment to the Kings gain, and of raising sedition. And having thus roughly dealt with them, he turns away from them to increase their burdens.

Quest. Why did not Pharaoh lay hands on Moses and Aaron, and cut them off, and so have hindred the work, these heads being taken away?

Ans. The full answer to this is, that it was Gods sovereign power which curbed the violence of such a tyrant, and limited his wrath to go so farre and no further; so the almighty will preserve his instruments that they shall do the work designed. Ver. 5.

We conclude here.

- D. 1. Persecuting powers hasten rough answers to humble petitions.
- D. 2. Oppressing Kings make nothing of despising, checking and menacing Gods messengers.
- D. 3. Wicked powers censure the motions for Gods service to be detractions from their work.
- D. 4. Oppressing rulers are angry with instruments, that moove souls to serve God.
- D. 5. Cruel Masters drive Gods people from serving him to bear their burdens. Ver. 4.

D. 6. The multiplying of the Church is a great eye sore to persecutors.

D. 7. From the multiplied seed of the Church, tyrans expect multiplied labours.

D. 8. It is the envy of persecutors to see Gods servants have rest from burdens.

D. 9. It is incident to wicked powers to suggest that Gods Ministers moove his people to idleness and sedition, Ver. 5.

2. The next general head of this Chapter containeth the sad events, upon delivering this message unto Pharaoh, which are four.

1. Pharaohs command to increase burdens on Israel. Ver. 6. 7. 8. 9.

2. The taskmasters execution. V. 10. 14.

3. The cry of Israel unto Pharaoh. Ver. 15, 19.

4. The complaint of Israel upon Moses and Aaron with the effect. Ver. 20. 23.

In the first we have these particulars occur.

1. The authority commanding, And Pharaoh commanded in that day. All readings agree, only the 70 leave out that day.

1. The term of connection joineith this cruel command unto Gods message, and Israels petition unto Pharaoh; proud heart! he takes occasion hence to be more cruel.

2. The matter connected immediatly carrieth,

1. The person, and power stirring hereupon, Pharaoh King of Egypt, enraged now by the message which God sent him for dismissing his people; and here he begins to discover the hardnes of his heart against God.

2. His motion, which is by way of strict command and injunction so forcible as his power could make it.

3. The instant of time, in the very same day, wherein the message was given him, he delays no time for revenge.

2. The persons commanded to execute his will, The exactors or taskmasters of the people and their officers, or such as were set over them saying, Onk. Sam. Ar. to the same. — Sept. and Syr. read scribes for officers. Here two sorts are under command.

1. The one are called exactors, or taskmasters, these were highest, to whom the work done or the bricks made were to be given up; oppressors are usually set out by this name, these, I judge, are best conceived to be Egyptians, who did execute Pharaohs command, and exact it of their under officers and of the people to the utmost.

V v v v 2

most; some think them to be of Israel.

2. The other are stiled officers, scribers, such as were by the taskmasters set over the labourers, who kept account of the work, and gave it up to them; these were Israelites who afterward cried to Pharaoh. Ver. 25. They were under governors to keep the rest to work. On both these the command is laid. Ver. 6.

3. The command itself imposed on these, threefold.

Ver. 7. 1. By prohibition of the former means allowed to work by, Ye shall not add to give straw to the people to brick bricks as yesterday and the day before, let them go and gather for themselves straw. All readings agree to the same purpose. Herein the inhibition is expressed two ways,

1. Negatively, Ye shall no more give straw to the people to make brick as heretofore, or, ye shall not add to give, as in the letter. Wherein,

1. The persons prohibited the officers, under whose hand doubtless the straw was, and by them given out.

2. The matter prohibited, straw, the onely means of making briks.

3. The person to whom this must be denied, are the people, the brickmakers a most cruel prohibition is this.

2. Affirmatively, Let them go or they shall go and gather straw for themselves. Herein their labour is doubled.

1. To pick straw.
2. To make brick. This was their hard case enjoined by Pharaoh after God had sent the message for their deliverance. Ver. 7.

Ver. 8. 2. The command is by way of injunction, And the tale of bricks, which they made yesterday and the day before, ye shall lay upon them, ye shall not diminish of it; for they are idle therefore they cry saying, we will go, we will sacrifice to our God. All readings to the same. The composing of bricks which they make every day, Sept. Herein observe;

1. The command, which is expressed.
1. Positively, the usual tale of bricks which they made when they had straw, you shall still lay upon them, and exact it daily.

2. Negatively, ye shall not bate or diminish a brick from that number. The words are plain.

2. The reason suggested of this command by Pharaoh, which first he proposeth, For they are idle, and then he proveth, Therefore they cry saying, we will go and sacrifice to our God. Wherein we may note,

1. A most false suggestion, that the people were idle, when they labored hard in the brick every day, as he himself mentioned they did yesterday and the day before; yet this pretense he maketh the ground of his cruelty.

2. A most impious slander upon Gods service, as if that did bespeak idleness; as well as a plain lye against them, for they spake by supplication, We pray thee, let us go, and he makes them to be mutinous, we will go and sacrifice. Thus wicked powers slander God and man, that they may take occasion of doing evil to his people. Ver. 8.

3. The command is by way of aggravation, Let the work be made heavy upon the men, and let them labour therein and let them not trust in words of a lye. And let them care for these words and not care for vain words, &c. 70. Let them be occupied in the work and not, &c. Onk. Ar. Let them attend to it, and not, &c. Sam. Let them think upon it. I. e. the work, &c. Syr.

Herein we have to observe these two things.

1. The commanded, which carryeth two particulars in it.

1. Let the work be made heavy and burdensome to the men; lay on more load, make their labour as hard as may be, by straitning the means, and keeping them to work.

2. Let them labour in it, though never so hard, and see they do it, and spare them not.

2. The reason of it, to bear them of from regarding Gods promise and word to them, and let them not regard vain or lying words, keep them to work, and let them not have time to think of the vain and lying words which Moses and Aaron bring them from God. Where,

1. Blasphemously he chargeth Gods words of promise to be lyes as Rabshakeh also to the Jews. Isai. 36. 7.

2. He driveth Gods people maliciously to slight and deride God in his promises.

3. Consequently he strives to set God against them for unbelief of his truth. See the sad Character of a heart hardened against God, and a cruel persecutor of his Church. Ver. 9.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Gods commands and his peoples intreaties are bitterly and swiftly answered by wicked powers. Connection.

D. 2. Sinful Potentates dare countermand Gods, and cross the petitions of his servants.

D. 3. Persecuting powers delay not to vent their malice against God and his people.

D. 4. Wicked rulers have their instruments struments by whom they afflict the people of God.

D. 5. Cruel powers stop the hands of ministers from doing justice to such as they will oppress.

D. 6. It is savage cruelty to deny means and expect work and advantage.

D. 7. Former justice is forgotten, where future oppression is intended.

D. 8. Cruelty exacts double labours from Gods people, where single are not due.

D. 9. It is unreasonable slavery to work for powers, at mens own cost and charge. Ver. 7.

D. 10. Heretofore gain in time of allowance is expected by wicked powers in times of their oppression.

D. 11. Imposition of such unreasonable burdens is exacted from unreasonable persecutors.

D. 12. Wicked powers will loose no gain though they allow poor souls nothing to get it with.

D. 13. Cruel rulers suggest idleness against them, whom they have a mind to oppress.

D. 14. Godless persecutors esteem the service of the true God the cause of idleness.

D. 15. Ungodly oppressors belye the petitions of Gods servants, to take occasion against them. Ver. 8.

D. 16. Aggravated work wicked powers are pleased to lay upon poor men.

D. 17. Exactors are required by such powers to see that do it to the utmost.

D. 18. Atheistical oppressors charge Gods words of promise and commands to be lies.

D. 19. Hereupon wicked powers drive souls from regarding God, to respect them. Ver. 9.

2. The next special thing in the second general is the execution of Pharaohs commands by his taskmasters over Israel, and the officers under them; wherein we have these particulars to note,

1. The delivery of Pharaohs message to Israel. Ver. 10. 11.

2. The obedience of Israel to this message delivered unto them. Ver. 12.

3. The exaction on this account made by the instruments appointed and set over Israel. Ver. 13. 14.

1. The delivery of the message from Pharaoh unto the people is related Ver. 10. 11. Wherein,

1. The address of the messengers, who were to carry the word unto the people, And there went out the taskmasters of the people and their officers; and they spake to the people saying, Ver. 10.

All other readings agree.

1. The connection here knits the execution to the command foregoing, no sooner he commanded; but it is done, without delay.

2. The persons executing this command, were Egyptian exactors, who doubtless did it with all readiness, and were glad of it, others were the officers of the people, Israelites, who went about it with an heavy heart, and afterward suffered under it.

3. Their execution of the command by way of address, and declaration unto the people, they went out and spake to the people according to what they had in charge from Pharaoh, from which neither could swerve, without the Kings displeasure.

2. The message delivered by them is in three heads.

1. Thus saith Pharaoh, I will not give you straw. All readings agree. Herein are noted,

1. The author of this message urged, Thus saith Pharaoh, this name of power makes it terrible.

2. The message itself, a denial of all means for their work imposed, I will not give you straw; this is not onely a denial of personal act, but; of this to be done by any power or license under him, I will not suffer any to give you straw; this is the same which was commanded before to be told them. Ver. 10.

2. The next message is an injunction, Give ye straw, wherewe may find it. All readings agree in this. Herein is enjoined,

1. Travel from their places of work.

2. Labour in seeking and gathering straw.

3. Uncertainty of place. He sends them no whither to find or have it; but makes them wander to get it where they could find it. Unreasonable oppression is this.

3. The last part of the message is a prohibition of any abatement of their work and the product of it. Yet not ought of your work shall be diminished. Of your structure, service. Sop. Of your servitude. Sam. Others agree. Of your work. Note,

1. The matter of the prohibition is

Vvvv 3 the

the diminishing of their daily work.

אין דבר

2. The measure of it or extent, not ought, not a thing, a jot, not a tittle. This is the full message. Ver. 11.

Whence we observe.

D. 1. Cruel commands of powers are quickly acted by their instruments.

D. 2. Instruments must move and say, what persecuting powers command.

D. 3. Some messenger may deliver sad tidings to Gods servants with gladness, others with regret and trouble.

D. 4. Under providence, the saddest message of persecutors denying means, is declared to Gods servants.

D. 5. Oppressing powers are urged to make heavy their commands. Ver. 10.

D. 6. Treble burdens do wicked powers lay upon Gods servants and they must bear and bear them.

D. 7. It is hard work to be enjoined to seek where none knoweth what to find.

D. 8. It is the Churches portion sometimes to hear no abatement of work, when means utterly failles Ver. 11.

Ver. 12.

2. The obedience of the people now followeth, And the people were scattered abroad thorough all the land of Egypt to gather stubble instead of straw. The readings are much to the same, onely some read stubble and straw others stubble to straw, in the letter it is stubble for straw. Wherein we have two things declared.

1. The dispersion of the people, and therein,

1. The subject of this dispersion, which is said to be the people, this is not to be understood of all the people, for some doubts must be tempering the mold, others were making brick; and the rest which were wont to be at hand and second the work, they were forced to scatter themselves.

2. The dispersion itself, which was a sad affliction, if we consider,

1. That it hindered the work of others

2. That they were put to toilsome labours, and to little purpose, for they could not get sufficient to make their tale, for which their officers and selves suffered. The extent of this dispersion adds much to it, they were wandering through the coasts of Egypt.

2. The end of their dispersion, to gather stubble for straw, for as to the better, that was cut up doubtles and carried away, the stubble was but stump of it, and very unfit to dispatch their work, as longer straw, yet to get such as they could was their daily labour and travail. Thus were they worn out and yet obeyed and suffered. Ver. 12.

Observe.

D. 1. Cruel commands of persecuting powers are obeyed by afflicted souls.

D. 2. Dispersion from fellow-workers is a hard burden on them from whom work is exacted.

D. 3. It is a grievous thing to drive farre from work and yet expect daily labours.

D. 4. Stubble for straw is a hard charge for them that must make equal work.

D. 5. Such hard undertakings are the servants of God sometimes forced to bear. Ver. 12.

3. The last particular in this execution of Pharaohs command by some instruments is, exaction of work to be done as formerly, when abundant means was offered them, this was twofold.

1. By harsh words, And the taskmasters Ver. 13. basted them, saying fulfil your works, the matter of a day in his day, as when there was straw. All readings are to the same purpose. Here note,

1. The connection of this unto the peoples dispersion, while they were getting stubble, and others could not go on in their work, this urgency is pressed on them to make their agony greater.

2. The persons here urging are the Egyptian taskmasters, cruel exactors under a bloody tyrant.

3. The exaction by hard speeches, Fulfil your daily tasks as when there was straw, an unreasonable exaction; yet thus they cry upon them, ye shall have no straw, yet fulfil your work, make it as much and as good, as it was, when ye had straw.

Ver. 13.

2. By hard blowes, wherein we have to note.

1. The

Ver. 14.

1. The penalty inflicted, And the officers of the sons of Israel, which Pharaohs taskmasters had set over them, were beaten. Onk. same. Sam. — And the scribes of the kindred, &c. were scourged. &c. Sept. Ar. — And they were punished. Syr.

1. The connection knits hard blowes to harsh words, they cry upon them, and scourge them.

2. The persons suffering, the officers of the sons of Israel who were Israelites, as the 70 interpret, these were set over the labourers by Pharaohs taskmasters, and now beaten by them, for the failing of their work.

3. The penalty, is expressed by smiting in the letter, by scourging in the 70. and Syr. Doubtles they were with cudgels or whips or thongs beaten cruelly, by way of exacting labours and work, which was impossible.

2. The reason pretended, saying, wherefore have ye not fulfilled your appointed task, to make brick as heretofore, so also yesterday, also to day.

All readings to the same sense, wherein is to be noted.

1. The demand, wherefore have ye not fulfilled your appointed work, now therefore ye shall smart for it.

2. The unreasonableness of it, why is it not the same to day and yesterday, when ye had no straw, as heretofore when ye had enough? The very demand sheweth the cruelty and unreasonableness of their horrid torture. Ver. 14.

Learn here.

D. 1. In the absence of help, cruel taskmasters are hasty to call for work.

D. 2. Full work is called for by wicked exactors, where means of doing it are withheld.

D. 3. Daily work is commanded by oppressors where they deny daily bread. Ver. 13.

D. 4. Hard blowes as well as harsh words cruel powers lay upon Gods harmles ones.

D. 5. Tender officers are made to smart by superiours, because they dare not oppress others under them.

D. 6. Unreasonable demands are the best reasons, which oppressing instruments give for their cruelty. Ver. 14.

3. The next event following upon Gods message delivered to Pharaoh is the officers appeal unto him after their unjust punishment, together with the success. Ver. 15.

19. Wherein.

1. Their sad appeal to Pharaoh. Ver. 15. 16.

2. His savage answer to them. Ver. 17. 18.

3. Their bitter resentment of it. V. 19. In the first which is their appeal, we have to note,

1. The addresse or application made, in these words, And the officers of the sons of Israel came, and cried unto Pharaoh, saying Ver. 15.

— The scribes, &c. Sept. and Syr. In the rest all agree. — Exactors of, &c. came and implored the help of Pharaoh Ar. Herein these terms are observable,

1. The connection, and or then immediately upon their unjust punishment exacted.

2. The subjects of this addresse, the officers of the sons of Israel, who were beaten.

3. The term of their addresse, Pharaoh, the supreme power from whom their oppression came.

1. By coming.
4. The addresse itself, ling.
2. By crying or howling.
3. By speaking unto him.

In all which there is no difficulty, but the terms are plain.

2. The appeal in part of the. 15 and 16. verses. Wherein also we have to observe.

1. The form of it, which is by way of expostulation, Wherefore dost thou thus to thy servants? or against thy servants. All readings are to the same purpose. Wherein,

1. They charge their hard dealing upon him, thou dost thus, that is, cause us to be beaten.

2. They acknowledge themselves his servants, and therefore should be under his protection.

3. They hint the unreasonableness of such dealing, wherefore, or for what cause is it, that we are thus beaten? So they under misery expostulate for mercy, and that with greatest reason, their harsh usage being causeless. Ver. 15.

2. The matter of it, which is by way of complaint of two unreasonable things.

1. Concerning their work unreasonably demanded of them, upon a double account.

1. A denial of means unto them, straw is not given unto thy servants. All readings agree: which was the execution of his cruel command, ye shall give them none. Ver. 16.

2. An exaction of their full work, And they say to us make brick. All readings agree. A most unjust exaction, to command brick and deny straw, as well might they hey deny clay or mold to make them, and yet expect them.

2. Concerning their punishment, most unreasonably inflicted upon these grounds.

Ver. 16. 1. That the punishment is upon them, And behold thy servants are beaten. Readings agree, are scourged. 70. that is, those officers of the sons of Israel, who were true servants of his, were injuriously handled and smitten at his command, this is the matter of plaint.

Ver. 16. 2. That the fault was upon others, And it is the sin of thy people. Onkel, to the same. Io Ar. Punitur populus tuus, Ar. Mont. And thou injurest thy people, or therefore. Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. According to the letter, it is, the sin or fault is of thyn own people; that is the Egyptian Taskmasters who denied the straw, & that others offend and we should be punished, this is hard. Why dealest thou thus? Others read it as if, by thy people were meant Israel, and the sin to be Pharaohs afflicting of them, but this is not the letter. Ver. 16.

We observe here.

D. 1. Oppressed souls cannot but complain of cruel and unjust smitings; blowes make cries.

D. 2. Addresses for reliefe are fittest from the afflicted to the highest power oppressing.

D. 3. Accesse and cries and sad speeches are forced from oppressed to oppressors.

D. 4. The execution by instruments, unjustly charged upon their Lords.

D. 5. True servants may justly expostulate about hard dealings from their rulers. Balaams asse might do this. Num. 22. 28. 30.

D. 6. Unreasonable exactions will force afflicted ones to expostulate with powers oppressing them. Ver. 15.

D. 7. To give no straw and to command bricks is a most unreasonable exaction.

D. 8. To punish innocent servants, when others sin, is a most unjust oppression.

D. 9. Such sad dealings makes Gods servants, sometimes to complain to earthly powers. Ver. 16.

2. Now followeth Pharaohs brutish answer, wherein we may observe,

1. His false crimination of them, in these terms, And or but he said, ye are idle, ye are idle; therefore ye say, we will go, we will sacrifice to Jehovah. Sam. same & the Ar. the Sept. Syr. Onk. and vulg. let us go, &c. In this accusation we may note,

1. The crime laid to their charge, idleness, and that,

1. Boldly asserted.

2. Doubly charged, Ye are idle, ye are idle, and with an impudent face, he avers and asserts the same falsely as he must know, for they took double pains to fulfil what was laid upon them.

2. The reason of this charge, therefore ye say we will go, &c. which imports,

1. That their religion to their God was the cause of idleness and neglect of him, which was blasphemy against the Lord.

2. That they should say they will do it, when they did humbly intreat his leave to do it, for so the letter is. Ver. 17.

Ver. 18. 2. His peremptory dismissal of them, And now go ye, work or serve ye Labour; all readings agree. Herein may be noted,

1. His dismissal of them in a peremptory way. Begon.

2. His amandation to their labour, get ye out of my sight, away to work.

Ver. 18. 3. His cruel prohibition continued, And or for straw shall not be given to you. All readings agree. This he confirms again by his own mouth which at first he charged by the taskmasters. Cruelty itself.

4. His unreasonable exaction, And or yet ye shall deliver your tale of bricks. — Ye shall render the accustomed number of bricks. Vulg. This is also the same formerly charged upon their exactors; only here cruelty and inhumane dealings are doubled by his own mouth to these oppressed. Ver. 18.

We Note.

D. 1. Cruel oppressors of Gods people are as deaf as stones to their complaints.

D. 2. Crimination though false, instead of acceptation, is returned to the appeals of innocents by cruel powers.

D. 3. Double labours are branded for talenes by unreasonable oppressors on Gods servants.

D. 4. Persecutors do not only charge men but God, for making his people idle. Ver. 17.

D. 5. Inhumane persecutors drive the appealing oppressed out of their sight to work.

D. 6.

D. 6. Cruel oppressors double their denial of help unto sad plaintiffs.

D. 7. Complaints of exaction upon Gods servants are usually answered with adding more. Ver. 18.

9. 3. The resentment of this answer by the officers now followeth, And the officers of the sons of Israel saw them in evil, in saying ye shall not diminish of your bricks, and of a day in its day. — Sam, themselves in miseries, saying, &c. Sept. —

When it was said, &c. Onk. — Themselves in evil by this saying, &c. Sam, — The Scribes looked on the sons of Israel sadly and said unto them, &c. Syr. — Seeing their own soules in misery said, Diminish not the bricks, the stated work of every day. Ar. Herein occur to be observed,

1. The sense they had, wherein also note,

1. The term connecting, And or then, immediately upon this sad answer from Pharaoh.

2. The persons affected, the officers of the sons of Israel who appealed.

3. The affection of sense itself. They saw that themselves and Israel were now in a miserable state; and doubtles walked sadly and mournfully under it.

2. The cause impressing this sense, that word from Pharaoh, Ye shall not diminish ought of your daily work or task of the day. This being peremptorily enjoined and straw denied makes them to see themselves and Israel in a sad condition, and walk sadly under it, Sept. Syr. and Ar. render, as if, the officers said this to Israel.

Learn we.

D. 1. Cruel exactions of persecutors may make deep impressions upon the sense of Gods servants.

D. 2. Good overseers are more afflicted when they see themselves forced to oppress the innocent.

D. 3. Hearing of hard impositions from powers, and having no means to discharge them, makes souls to bow. Ver. 19.

4. The last event noted, upon the message delivered unto Pharaoh is the officers falling upon Moses and Aaron together with the issue of it; wherein occur these particulars.

1. Their bitter charge on Moses, &c. Ver. 20. 21.

2. The resentment of it by Moses in his cry to God. Ver. 22. 23.

3. Gods reply unto Moses. Ch. 6. 1. 2. &c.

In the first of these we may observe, 1. The meeting of these officers with Moses and Aaron. Ver. 20. And that is read, And they met or lighted upon Moses & Aaron standing to meet them in their commanding forth from Pharaoh. Sam. Syr. same. —

Ver. 20. And they met Moses and Aaron coming to meet them; when they came out, &c. 70. — Who stood in their sight, &c. Onkel. — And when they came out from the sight of Pharaoh and his servants. Ar. no difficulty in the reading.

1. The term of connection knits this event close unto their sad usage by Pharaoh upon his cruel reply, they presently come out and fall upon Moses, &c.

2. The matter of this meeting, it was to them fortuitous, and not expected, as the word seemeth to carry in it, they rushed on them at unawares to themselves, so Ar.

3. The persons met withall, described.

1. By their names. Moses and Aaron.

2. By their posture, they had set themselves in some convenient place to meet these afflicted sons of Israel, when they came out from Pharaoh, desiring to know what answer they had from him; so they were solicitous.

2. The greeting which these afflicted soules to give do Moses and Aaron when they meet them, Let Jehovah look upon you, and judge because ye have made our favour to stinke in the eyes of Pharaoh and in the eyes of his servants; to give a sword into their hand, to slay us, Septuagint. Sam. same.

Ver. 21. — Let the Lord appear upon you and take vengeance on you, &c. Onk. — Ye have done evil to our Spirit in the eyes of Pharaoh, &c. delivering us to the sword, &c. Syr. — And judge against you as he have corrupted our state with Pharaoh, and with his Captains, so that if a sword were in their hands they would slay us. Ar. In these we may observe,

1. The connection of this act to the former, being in anguish they cannot hold but fall upon them who come next, so blind fury doth.

2. The greeting itself which is by way of imprecation, Jehovah look upon you and judge. Wherein,

1. They pray Gods visitation of them in displeasure.

2. They pray Gods judgement against them for revenge.

1. The persons imprecating souls afflicted by Pharaoh.

2. The object on whom they imprecate; Moses and Aaron, those that did them no hurt, but sought their deliverance.

3. The imprecation itself. Wherein,

2. Gods name is abused in sinful imprecation. X x x x cations to judge against his own will, and promises and servants.

2. Gods ministers are cursed for their good will.

3. The reason of such imprecation, which was a pretended charge of two evils to be done by them.

1. That they had made their favour stink in the eyes of Pharaoh, &c. that is, they had made them odious and abhorred by Pharaoh and his servants.

2. That they had given a sword into their hands to kill them, that is, by their message to Pharaoh from God, they had incensed him and as it were put a sword into the tyrans hands to slay them.

Q. Did Moses and Aaron do this evil? Ans. Surely no. 1. They were but ministers from God to them for good. 2. They did nothing but deliver Gods message, which must be done. 3. They were no more in fault than God, for he was the occasion of this by sending to Pharaoh, and so were they, but no cause at all.

Quest. Was this imprecation just?

Ans. Surely no, but very wicked.

1. As to the principle of it, which was unbelief, and brutish sense.

2. As to the end of it, which was to render evil for good.

3. As to the import of it.

1. Gods name is blasphemed.

2. His servants are cursed, both which are great abominations.

4. As to their instability in sense, era while they blessed God for them, and now under a crosse event they curse them.

We conclude.

D. 1. Sense of evil from tyrans may make the oppressed fall foul with their best friends.

D. 2. Providence orders his servants sometimes to meet with friends after sad usage by oppressors.

D. 3. Ministers of salvation wait to meet Gods afflicted, when they look not after them.

D. 4. Instruments of deliverance may desire a good escape of the oppressed from tyrans, and not find it. Ver. 20.

D. 5. Sense overcharged with oppression may make men reproach God and curse his ministers.

D. 6. Unbelieving souls are ready to set God against his own word, and instruments sent by him.

D. 7. Hasty unbelievers under crosse providences are ready to charge the cause upon Gods ministers.

D. 8. It is the lot of Gods instruments of life, to be charged to be causes of death, by foolish souls.

D. 9. Such unreasonable charges are recorded to the shame of such brutish creatures. Ver. 21.

2. The resentment of this by Moses and his demeanour thereupon now followeth in the two last verses, wherein we have to note, Ver. 22.

1. His present address to God, And Moses returned to Jehovah. All readings are to the same purpose, some read to God, others to the Lord. In the letter to Jehovah.

1. The connection here joins the action of Moses to the imprecation and imprecation of the Israelites, they curse him, and he goeth presently to God.

2. The subject moving is Moses.

1. Deeply afflicted with Israels misery, as may appear.

2. Believing and closing with God.

3. Patiently bearing the reproaches of the people.

4. Doubling in measure.

3. The motion, He returned unto Jehovah.

1. The term from whence, was the officers, &c.

2. The term whereunto is Jehovah the Lord that could help.

3. The motion itself, which was sequestering himself from others & betaking himself to God to inquire about the present issues in Israels troubles. The term made this good, but the principle of this motion seems to be evil. viz. sense.

2. His expostulation with God, And Ver. 22.

said Lord wherefore hast thou done evil to this people? Wherefore is it that thou hast sent me? All readings are to the same purpose, some read, Why hast thou evil intreated? others, why hast thou afflicted these men? Ar. The expostulations are two.

1. About Israel, Wherefore hast thou done evil to this people? In which quere,

1. The matter or form of it is considerable, which is doubted whether it be exprobrans, by way of challenge unto God, as doing unjustly, and against his word; or whether it be inquisitivus, of one that desires to know the ground of Gods dealings with Israel, or whether it be orans, an expostulating prayer, yet with humble submission deprecating this evil from Israel. It seems to be a mixture of nature, wherein something of flesh and something of spirit appears to work. It is safely presumed, that the imprecations of the people had imprecation upon Moses, and his sense might

now also stagger his faith; yet we see in the issue his faith did not fail; but he gave glory to God by believing and so finished the work, the conceit of some Hebrewes that this kept him out of the land of Canaan is not found; for we find another cause recorded.

2. The matter of this quere is considerable, wherein mark.

1. The subject questioning is Moses now disturbed.

2. The subject questioned is Jehovah himself.

3. The matter of the question is about doing evil in all these oppressions upon Israel. Wherein,

1. He may partly charge God with it foolishly.

2. He may inquire of God humbly about it.

3. He may herein deprecate such severe visitation from Israel: Flesh and Spirit seem to work in him.

2. He expostulates about himself, Why is it that thou hast sent me?

1. The form of this quere seems to be the same with the former of a mixt nature, according to the temper of the Spirit of Moses at this time, which was disturbed.

2. The matter is about his own mission, which may be understood variously.

1. Either as a rash charge upon God for sending him to no purpose, seeing Israel is more laden.

2. Or, as a tender inquiry, why was I sent, if it were not to deliver Israel and not to oppress it?

3. Or, as prayer, looking after a better issue of his mission; Lord why was I sent for this? Ver. 22.

3. The reason of this expostulation thus with God, which is twofold here expresse.

1. From Pharaohs actings, For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he hath done evil to this people. All readings to the same sense, some words differ. Herein note,

1. He mentions the time of his coming. From then or that hour as Syr. or point of time, that I first entred in to Pharaoh.

2. He mentions the work enjoined, which was to speak to Pharaoh in Gods name, as indeed he did, and that was intended for deliverance.

3. He mentions Pharaohs return, He hath done evil to this people; that is by doubling their burdens and increasing their sorrow, therefore this seemed hard to Moses.

2. From Gods own denial of help, And thou in delivering hast not delivered thy people. Readings are much alike, onely some read single delivering, others double and others by another phrase, Thou hast not delivered at all. Upon this account Moses expostulates with God, why he should be sent, and as yet no deliverance came from God, no not any, but more oppression.

Quest. Is Moses excusable in all this?

Ans. 1. Not from all sinne, for

1. His sense and disturbed passion did worke here against faith.

2. He chargeth God foolishly for afflicting his people, as if it were breaking his promise.

3. He limits the holy one for time, which the Lord had challenged as his propriety, and foretold him that Pharaohs heart for a time should be hardened; therefore ought he to have believed and waited.

Quest. Was it just with God to let oppression now be doubled?

Ans. The judge of all the world must needs do right.

1. Israel deserved more than this from Gods hand for their iniquities.

2. God told Moses that Pharaoh would afflict them, but yet they should be saved.

3. God failed not at all in his word, therefore he was righteous in all this that came to passe.

D. 1. Unjust criminations from Gods people may make the ministers of God quail and recede from their duty.

D. 2. Gods faithful instruments though they do retreat of weakness, yet it is unto the Lord.

D. 3. Gods faithful ones under pressures may charge God foolishly for doing evil to his people.

D. 4. In such workings of flesh, the Spirit may humbly expostulate with God by prayer.

D. 5. Sad events in ministering may make Gods servants question their mission.

D. 6. In such questioning, soules may humbly deprecate the frustration of their ministry. Ver. 22.

D. 7. The evil doings of men may turn his servants sometimes to expostulate with God.

D. 8. Wicked men will do worse and worse notwithstanding Gods instruments come and speake in his name.

D. 9. Evill instruments may be permitted of God to oppress, and he not at all deliver.

D. 10.

D. 10. Such forbearance causeth Gods servants to expostulat with him sadly. Ver. 23.

CHAP. VI.

3. According to the division of the last head now followeth Gods sweet reply to the froward expostulations of Moses, which is continued to the 14th verse of this Chapter. This was noted at the 29th verse of the 4th Chapter, to be the third head of Gods preparing the work of redemption by sending his instruments to speak his mind.

1. To Israel. Chap. 4.

2. To Pharaoh. Chap. 5.

3. To Israel and Pharaoh both, again, in the former part of this Chapter, so God ends his preparation for deliverance by his word. Chap. 7. v. 7.

At the 7th Chap. v. 8. the second way of preparation noted begins and that is by Gods works.

Now in this Chapter there are 3. general heads.

1. Gods reply to Moses by encouraging him and Aaron to the work, notwithstanding this first repulse from Pharaoh. Ver. 1. 13.

2. A digression for a record of the heads of Israel that now survived, in order to shew the line of Moses and Aaron. Ver. 14. 27.

3. A further injunction to Moses, for proceeding in his work. Ver. 28. 30.

In the first, these particulars occur to note,

1. Gods encouragement of him yet again to bespeak Israel. Ver. 1. 9.

2. Gods charge on him and Aaron, to go again unto Pharaoh. Ver. 10. 13.

In the former these special heads are noted,

1. Gods encouragement of Moses. Ver. 1. 5.

2. Gods charge of him to speak it to Israel. Ver. 6. 8.

3. The obedience of Moses.

4. The sad return of Israel. Ver. 9.

1. Gods encouragement to Moses is from three considerations.

1. Gods promise given in present, which is twofold.

1. Concerning his dealing with Pharaoh. Ver. 1.

2. Concerning his manifestation to Israel. Ver. 2.

2. Gods former appearance and discovery. Ver. 3. 4.

3. Gods present sense of Israels condition. Ver. 5.

1. The first encouragement is from his promise renewed to Moses and Israel about his dealings with Pharaoh, which is thus recorded. And or then Jehovah said to Moses, now shalt thou see what I will do to Pharaoh, for by or with a strong hand he shall send them away, and by a strong hand shall he drive them out of his land. All readings agree. Herein note,

1. The connection of this reply to the plaint of Moses, And, or then Jehovah said to Moses. This is immediately knit unto that querulous expostulation of Moses with God. Here mark,

1. Jehovah gracious.

2. Moses froward.

3. The reply good, and presently given. In what manner this was made whether by voice or vision is not expressed; but doubtless, Moses had his recourse constantly to God, for so we read he returned to him, and God did still appear to manifest his mind unto him, upon all occasions in this work of Israels redemption; therefore he had a sure answer from God which way so ever the Lord was pleased to make it; the most probable way is, that God by voice did answer him, so the word seems to intimate, Jehovah said unto him.

2. The reply itself connected, which is a double promise.

1. A promise of evidence to Moses concerning Gods dealing with Pharaoh, Now thou shalt see what I will do to Pharaoh, wherein,

1. The instance of promise, now even now after this harsh and cruel reply of Pharaoh.

2. The matter of promise, I will deal with Pharaoh, according as he doth with Israel.

3. The evidence of it. Thou shalt see it. In which expression, seems to be a tacit reproof; as if God had said, I perceive you will not believe what I told you I would do to Pharaoh. Ch. 3. 19. 20. Therefore you shall see what I will do very shortly.

2. A promise of deliverance, expressed two ways.

1. By a strong hand he shall send them away. Herein is,

1. Good promised, which is dismissal of Israel from bondage by Pharaoh.

2. The cause of this dismissal, Gods mighty power forcing him to do it; he could have made him willing to dismiss them but he chuseth now to force him.

3. The rational account of this, because God would have it conspicuous, and it might be seen, that he wrought it.

2. By a strong hand shall he drive you out of his land. Where observe,

1. The former good is amplified, he shall not only dismiss them, but he shall drive them, and hasten them away to be rid of them.

2. The cause repeated, the same mighty hand of God.

3. The

3. The term from whence of their departure, out of his land, even out of Egypt.

Thus farre according to the Hebr. Sections of the law reacheth the 13th, and at the next verse begins the 14th section or lecture called Varon. But it is a very unequal division, for this verse doubtless belongs to that which followeth, and therefore fitteth to be in this section. Here it is divided by three S. S. S. As sometimes by three P. P. P. The latter notes Parasha or section, the former Seder, order, or methodical distinction.

Learn hence.

D. 1. The gracious Jehovah sometime followeth the froward expostulations of his servants with good.

D. 2. The good Lord sometimes, promisetb sight of his great works, when his servants scarce believe him.

D. 3. In granting them sight God reprooves the unbeliefs of his servants.

D. 4. Gods strong hand is double engaged to work deliverance for his Church.

D. 5. God chooseth to force deliverance from tyrans to make his work conspicuous.

D. 6. Not only dismissal but expulsion from bondage, Gods hand forceth for him, from tyrans. Ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

2. His promise followeth concerning what he will be to Moses and Israel, And God spake to Moses and said unto him, I am Jehovah. — I am the Lord, so most readings. — I am God. Ar. Herein note,

1. The connection of this promise to the former, what he would be to Israel, as well as what he would do to Pharaoh.

2. The promiser is the mighty God, he that can and will make good his word.

3. The subject to whom this is promised is Moses, in the behalf of Israel.

4. The evidence of this promise, God spake and said it; which declareth more fully that God discovered all this to Moses by voice.

5. The good promised, I am or will be to you Jehovah. This expression doubtless carrieth in it a gracious promise of a better discovery to Israel of God himself, than formerly had bin made unto his Church.

The weight of all lieth upon this name Jeho- vah, I will be to you Jehovah, this promise is heightened by setting it above Gods former appearance to Abraham, &c. which is a further consideration for encouragement. The weight of this promise stands not in the letters of the name, but in the force and virtue of it, which may be conceived in these particulars.

1. God makes over himself in his being unto Israel, if they would believe, all is engaged to them.

2. God here promisetb all the efficiency of his being, that is, to make to be all good for his Israel.

3. God in special intendeth, that he will be Jehovah unto them in putting into being and actual performance, the promise of their deliverance from their bondage, and their entrance into and possession of the promised land. In which he giveth them a more gracious discovery of himself, than ever he had done to their fathers, as is expressed in the next verse.

Hence we observe.

D. 1. God usually joineth the promise of grace unto his people with that of force upon his enemies.

D. 2. Gods promise of grace is plainly declared and revealed to his servants.

D. 3. God useth to convey these promises of grace by a Mediator to his people.

D. 4. The highest promise of grace is that God will be Jehovah to his people.

D. 5. Where God is Jehovah all his promises are put into being.

D. 6. God in Christ becometh truly Jehovah unto his Church. In him all promises are yea and amen. 2 Cor. 1. 20. I am A and Ω Rev. 1. 8. Ver. 2.

The next encouragement which God giveth to Moses, is from his appearance unto them now, in a better way of discovery, than formerly to Abraham, &c. The argument is drawn from the less unto the greater, my name was manifested unto Abraham indeed in my power and sufficiency to deliver their seed, but not in my actual performance of it, but unto you I now appear ready to put deliverance into being; should not ye then much more believe me upon such manifestation?

In this we have a double proposition of Gods appearance unto Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

X x x x

1. Af-

Ver. 3.

1. Affirmatively expressed thus. And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob in God almighty, or by the name of God almighty. Being their God. Sept. I was revealed, &c. Onk. Sam. as Hebr. Who manifested my self, &c. Syr. Who named my self to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob almighty, sufficient. Ar. Herein note,

1. The connection of this encouragement unto the former, wherein God abounds in goodness.

2. The matter of it, in declaring his former appearance unto Abraham for their sakes also. Here observe,

1. The subject appearing, God himself.

2. The subject to whom, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and to them for Israel's sake, that so God might be known unto them.

3. The apparition itself, whereof we have expressed.

1. The manner of it, I was seen, that is by vision and revelation, such did God vouchsafe to these fathers in their respective ages and seasons.

2. The matter of it was to be God almighty or al sufficient. El-Schaddai: Various conceits there be about this word, some conceiving it to be a destroyer, others, to note, sufficiency, or almightiness. The word is so diversely used. Isai. 13. 6. Job. 23. 16. Here it is terrible; but to Abraham it is comfortable. Gen. 17. 1. Neither may we think in this, or that which followeth, that the letters or syllables of this name are here insisted on, but the truth and effect of them; as that God had made himself known to Abraham to be an almighty God, al sufficient to him and his, and Abraham knew him to be able to perform his promise, so did Isaac and Jacob, and they believed in him for that which was yet to come, though they saw it not performed. This is the summe of this apparition here asserted.

Ver. 3.

2. Negatively also is it here recorded, But by my name Jehovah was I not known unto them. My name Lord I did not manifest to them, Sept. rendering the passive actively. Ar. Syr. My name Adonai I shewed not. Onkelos, so Samar. Ar. reads all affirmative. Wicked is the supposition of the Jews in making this name ineffable. The verb is passive but usually by the 70 translated actively as here, but my name Jehovah I made not known unto them. Here we have,

1. The subject denying, God himself.

2. The subject to whom it was denied, Abraham, &c.

3. The matter denied, I made not known my name Jehovah unto them, or I was not known unto them by that name. Isai. 49. 23. 60. 18.

Quest. Did not Abraham know God by that name Jehovah?

Answ. Yea doubtless if it be meant of the literal name; but that cannot be here meant, but the force and effect of this name was not known to them, by Gods putting that promise in execution at that time, having reserved it to this time of Moses, where, in he now appears. The summe is, that Abraham, &c. did not see the deliverance of their seed from the land of their captivity, yet he believed God; but now the Lord appeared to Moses to effect it, and therefore they had now the force of both names given to them, that they might believe and be encouraged to the work, notwithstanding all the opposition hitherto made; a secret reproof is here hinted to Moses and Israel that they should have such advantages above Abraham in Gods discoveries and yet not believe, but as it were make God a liar. Ver. 3.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. God knits one encouragement to another to help the weak in faith.

D. 2. Gods appearances are, have bin, and must be to work faith in creatures.

D. 3. Gods appearances have bin gradual from the beginning until now, in manner and measure.

D. 4. God almighty making promise of good is a sweet discovery of him.

D. 5. God almighty making good this promise is a fuller and sweeter manifestation of him.

D. 6. Fullest discoveries of God require the greatest faith, and aggravat's the sin of unbelief.

D. 7. El-Schaddai and Jehovah are united into one name of God. Power and performance. He is one who declares himself both together.

D. 8. Gods name consists not in letters and syllables but in mighty word and work.

D. 9. Knowledge of Gods name is needful to make souls trust in it.

D. 10.

D. 10. Where there is the least discovery of Gods name, sometimes maybe the greater faith. This is supposed to awaken Moses. Ver. 3.

3. Now followeth the third encouragement from Gods discovery of his present sense of Israels condition. Ver. 4, 5, where in occurs.

Ver. 4.

1. Gods minding Moses of his former Covenant. Ver. 4. And also I established my Covenant with them to give them the land of Canaan, the land of their sojournings, wherein they sojourned. Onk. same, & Sam. & Syr. — Where they inhabited, Sept. and Ar. Here God declares to Moses what he did to Abraham, &c. as El-Schaddai, in the fulness of his sufficiency, he Covenanted with them; about which are here declared.

1. The constitution of it, And also I established my Covenant with them. This we read solemnly done. Gen. 15. 13.

2. The matter of this Covenant upon Gods part, To give them the land of Canaan, &c. Wherein consider,

1. The portion assigned both by name, the land of Canaan, and by a periphrasis of their sojourning in the same.

2. The alienation itself, by gift for inheritance. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

2. Gods sense of Israels bondage in Egypt thus expressed, And also I have heard the cry of the sons of Israel, whom the Egyptians make to serve. The groaning, Sept. — In my sight is heard, &c. Onk. — Whom the Egyptians press with bondage, Syr. Sam. as Hebr. All much to the same. Herein note,

1. The connection, And also, which some make illative from the former, some copulative; either are good, I stated my Covenant, therefore I have heard or I established my Covenant, and I have heard also the cry of my Covenanted ones.

Ver. 5.

2. The matter connected is Gods sense of their present evils, which he foretold would come on them, and being come now, he resolved to remove. Of this God spake before to Moses. Ch. 3.

3. Gods remembering his Covenant there upon, And I have remembered my Covenant. All readings agree. Herein also note,

1. The connection of Gods memory to sense, which he speaks after the manner of men.

2. The matter itself. Wherein are,

1. The object of remembrance, his Covenant to deliver them. Gen. 15.

2. The act, remembrance itself, which is the recognition of it to performance.

Gods remembering is here the doing of it. Ver. 5.

We may observe hence.

D. 1. El-Schaddai Jehovah being in Covenant with a people is a main encouragement to them to wade through difficulties.

D. 2. Gods Covenant to his people is stated and settled.

D. 3. Gods Covenant is to give his pilgrims rest. Ver. 4.

D. 4. Gods Covenant of giving rest infer's the hearing of his peoples cries and groans.

D. 5. Egyptian oppression to make Israel slaves is resisted fully by God.

D. 6. Bondage and groans are the common lot of all in Gods Church.

D. 7. Gods sense of his peoples groans makes him remember his Covenant.

D. 8. Gods Covenant-remembrance is his Churches deliverance from all evils. Ver. 5.

2. After these things declared to Moses for his encouragement, followeth Gods charge upon him to give the same unto Israel. Ver. 6, 7, 8. The sum of the charge is a declaration of Gods mind to Israel, wherein we may note.

1. The manner of it, which was by speech, Therefore say unto the sons of Israel. Ver. 6. Sam. Syr. Onk. Ar. same. Ar. & Go and tell, &c. Sept. Herein note,

1. The term of connection which is illative, therefore; the force of it is thus manifested, seeing I have now appeared to thee to be Jehovah, ready to put my promise into being, and remember my Covenant with my people, therefore go you, and tell them this.

2. The injunction connected is to speak to the children of Israel, and make known Gods mind to them as followeth.

1. The person enjoined, Moses.

2. The persons to whom he is sent, the sons of Israel, who but lately had reviled him.

3. The injunction, which was to speak unto them.

2. The matter of the declaration here given in charge to him. Two ways.

1. Simply and in short say to them that I am Jehovah, as I have said to thee. Ver. 6. I am the Lord, Sept.

God. Ar. that is, let them know me by this name, that I am not onely El-Schaddai, God al sufficient, but God now making good my Covenant to Abraham, &c.

2. Complexly and by way of interpretation of this name, that he was now making good to them a threefold promise.

1. One

1. One for deliverance of them out of their present bondage, and this in a treble enunciation that they might believe it.

Ver. 6.

1. And I will bring you from under the burdens of the Egyptians. Sam. — Bondage, Sept. Syr. — The midst of the tribulation of servitude. Onkel.

וּמִצָּרָתִי

Carriage. Ar. In this let them know, I am Jehovah, I will, nay have made you escape from under Egyptian burdens; the verb is in time past, to note the certainty, though at present they were not escaped; though they burden them to make bricks without straw, yet now I will cause them to pass from under these burdens.

Ver. 6.

2. And I will rid you out of their servitude, or bondage. — Deliver from their power, Sept. — Their work. Syr. — Their bondage. Sam. Onk. Ar. Let them know this also that I will, and have plucked them out from being servants, and slaves to them; they shall be so no more; I will certainly rid them from their slavery, as if it were done.

Ver. 6.

3. I will redeem you with a stretched out arm and with great judgments. All readings agree to the same purpose. — Mighty hand is added by Syr.

Tell them this also, I will undertake the redemption of them: where we may note,

1. The act of grace. God almighty will redeem them, that neither burdens, nor slavery any longer oppress them; tell them I am doing and have done it.

2. The manner of this redemption with an arm stretched out and with great judgments, wherein is promised to them.

1. The cause, even the high mighty, and stretched out arm of God, which noteth power extended and continued to the finishing of the work of their redemption.

2. The effect produced by this arm, great judgments, both in the disposition of Gods counsel, and execution of his vengeance, upon the Egyptian for this purpose. Ver. 6.

2. Another promise of adoption, and taking them to himself, as well as of delivering them from Egypt. Herein he giveth Moses in charge to declare.

Ver. 7.

1. The promise itself, And I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you for a God. All readings to the same. — I will apply you before me. Onk. This is closely connected to the former, and herein we have to observe,

1. The adopter, Jehovah Elschad. dai.

2. The adopted, The children of Israel.

3. The adoption itself, which stands in two things.

1. Gods taking them to be a people unto him, such as he calleth sons, daughters, servants, &c. Gods making them peculiarly his people.

Ver. 7.

2. Gods giving himself to them to be their God peculiarly, according to his promise unto Abraham. Gen. 17. 7.

2. The end of this promise so effected, And ye shall know that I am Jehovah your God bringing you from under the burdens of the Egyptians. All readings to the same.

From the power, Sam. Sept. The end here is the notification of God in his works toward Israel now in Egypt.

1. The matter to be known.

1. Jehovah.

2. Your God.

3. Your deliverer.

2. The subject of this knowledge, Israel.

3. The knowledge itself, which carrieth in it,

1. Clear apprehension.

2. Full acknowledgement and ascription of all this grace to Jehovah their God. Ver. 7.

3. Another promise of signal inheritance which was a pledge of better things, Wherein,

1. The promise under a gradual expression.

Ver. 8.

1. Of introduction, And I will bring you into the land, about which I lift up my hand to give it to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob. Sept. Syr. Sam. same.

I swear, Ar. — I swear by my word. Onk. Observe,

1. The connection knits this as a signal to the promise of adoption foregoing.

2. The promise is here Jehovah.

3. The subject to whom it is made, Israel.

4. The promise itself, introduction into the land promised; and that here, by a periphrasis, described, even that land concerning which, God swore to give it to Abraham, &c. The phrase here of lifting up the hand is a symbol of swearing as used by men, who lift up hands to the most high God; but only after the manner of men it expresseth the first act of Gods, swearing by himself, so that it was a sworn promise here mentioned.

Gen. 14.

v. 22.

Isai. 62.

v. 28.

2. Of donation, And I will give it to you for an heritage. All readings to the same.

1. The donour Jehovah.

2. The subject Israel.

3. The donation itself, that land for inheritance, and not only temporal, but signal of an everlasting inheritance. Heb. 11. 10. 16.

2. The confirmation of all this by reiterating his name, I am Jehovah. I am now doing and executing all this, therefore believe. Ver. 8.

Ver. 8.

From

From all which we gather.

D. 1. Gods appearance to him in spiritual instruments is in order to make himself known to the Church.

D. 2. Ministers must speak to the Church, all that God reveals to them.

D. 3. The main matter that must be revealed to the Church is that God is Jehovah.

D. 4. Gods being Jehovah sets his Israel free from all Egyptian burdens.

D. 5. The meaning of Jehovah is to rid the Church from bondage temporal and eternal.

D. 6. Redemption of Israel, with an arm outstretched and great judgments, is Jehovahs work. Ver. 6.

D. 7. Adoption of Israel to himself is Jehovahs work next to redemption.

D. 8. Souls are adopted when they are Gods, and Gods theirs.

D. 9. Jehovah doth all this that Israel may acknowledge him to be his in his being and saving power. Ver. 7.

D. 10. Promise of pledges and signals Jehovah addeth to that of adoption.

D. 11. Jehovah in such promises, doth swear for confirmation.

D. 12. Gods promise and oath to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob is in order to successive seeds.

D. 13. Introduction into such signal privileges is a good step to the full blessing.

D. 14. Jehovahs donation of the inheritance promised surely followeth this introduction.

D. 15. Gods being Jehovah puts all this good in present being to his Church.

D. 16. The name of God and meaning of it must be declared to procure faith in him. Ver. 8.

3. The next particular in Gods disposing Moses again to bespeak Israel after this repulse by Pharaoh is his obedience; thus expressed, And Moses spake to the sons of Israel. All readings concur, and in this passage note,

1. The connection of this act to Gods incouragement and command, Moses having received such motives, and charge from God to Israel immediately obeyeth.

2. The matter connected is his obedience, Wherein note,

1. The subject of it, Moses newly charged.

2. The persons to whom he expresseth, the sons of Israel, who ere while had despised him.

3. The act of his obedience, he spake to them all that God had discovered, and given in charge about his being made known to be Jehovah unto them.

4. The last thing noted in this Gods ordering Moses again to speak to Israel, is their sad entertainment of his message, thus expressed, But they hearkened not unto Moses for the straitness of spirit and for hard bondage or servitude. Sep. — Non acquieverunt, &c. Onk.

Ver. 9.

Syr. and Ar. as Hebr. The Samarit. adds. — And they said to Moses desist from us now that we may serve the Egyptians; for it is better for us to serve the Egyptians than to die in the wilderness. Sam. All we have express in the originals is in these.

1. The term adversative connecting, Moses spake, but they were set against all that he should say.

2. The persons so opposit, the sons of Israel.

3. The opposition itself, they hearkened not to Moses, they gave him neither ear nor heart, but by unbelief threw all his words away.

4. The cause of their rejecting his word set out under two expressions.

1. Straitness of spirit, which is taken either passively for the straits of grief, or actively, for the shortning or straitening of their hearts through unbelief toward God, the first was their misery, the last their sin.

Numb. 21.

v. 4.

Pro. 14.

v. 29.

2. Hard servitude or cruel bondage, now lately increased to make brick without straw; and suffering under the scourge when ought failed.

These Notes may be observed from all this.

D. 1. Gods faithful messengers do speak his will speedily and fully to whom God sends it.

D. 2. Former discouragements from men, must not hinder Gods ministers further to declare his will.

Y y y y

D. 3.

D. 3. After all Gods promises and commands revealed, perverse Spirits may refuse to hear or believe.

D. 4. Straitnings of Spirit in faith from sense of outward pains cause unbelief. Sense of outward pains may infer straitnings of Spirit in faith, and cause unbelief.

D. 5. Gods message to his people in such straits is to ease their pain, and enlarge their Spirits.

D. 6. Sense of straits and pains make some souls unreasonable, even to reject their own mercies. Ver. 9.

2. In the reply of God to Moses, which takes up the first general of this Chapter, the next thing is Gods charge to him to go unto Pharaoh, here renewed, and upon Aaron joined with him, Ver. 10. 11. 12. 13. Wherein these particulars are considerable,

1. Gods injunction to Moses singly Ver. 10. 11.

2. The reply of Moses to God. V. 12.

3. Gods charge again jointly to him and Aaron. Ver. 13.

In the first, we have these special heads.

1. The authority injoining, And Jehovah spake to Moses saying. Readings agree.

God spake a speech. Ar. Herein,

1. The term connecting this injunction to Israels refusal of hearing Moses, God notwithstanding followeth on his charge to Moses.

2. The authority is Jehovah himself, he that is, and gave Moses and Israel their being.

3. The act expressed is speaking to him, notifying his will. Ver. 10.

2. The injunction itself laid on Moses, thus exprest, Go in, speak to Pharaoh King of Egypt that he send away (or he shall) the sons of Israel out of his land. Readings agree.

1. His motion injoining, is to go in, and not withdraw upon a small repulse.

2. His worke, it was to speake and deliver a second message, and that to Pharaoh himself king of Egypt.

3. The message to be now spoken again, which is, that he dismiss the children of Israel out of his land, as Ch. 5. 1. Here God sends him by Moses a second summons to dismiss his people, he giveth him warning enough. Ver. 11.

Learn we.

D. 1. God sometimes joineth harder work to the discouragements which his ministers have from men. Ver. 10.

D. 2. When Israel heareth not, God will have his embassadours go into Pharaoh, from friends to enemies.

D. 3. God will have his message declared to the proudest potentates, that dare oppose him.

D. 4. Though powers oppress and refuse to ease Gods Church, God makes them know, they shall dismiss them from bondage. V. 11.

2. The reply of Moses followeth, And Moses spake before Jehovah, saying, behold the sons of Israel have not hearkned unto me, and how shall Pharaoh hear me, and I am uncircumcised in lips. Sam. same. And I am backward in speech, Sept. Onk. Syr. Ar. The whole is the apologetic of Moses to be excused from going to Pharaoh. Wherein,

1. The manner of his reply, And Moses spake before Jehovah, saying, doubles this was in the usual way of his commerce with God about this matter.

1. The connection knits this close, he replieth presently to his charge.

2. The address connected, he speaketh unto God, and makes more bold with him, than he durst with Pharaoh, a fellow creature.

2. The matter of his reply in two heads.

1. Of narration of what he had found already concerning his message to Israel, Behold the sons of Israel have not hearkned unto me, they reject my word and acquiesce not in what I say. Onk.

2. Of expostulation as to his future message unto Pharaoh, And how shall Pharaoh hear me, and I uncircumcised in lips? It is resolved negatively, and backt with reason, as he thinks.

1. He peremptorily denieth. Pharaoh will not hear me, to what purpose then should I go any more to him?

2. The reasons suggested.

1. Israel was more likely to hear than Pharaoh, but they have not hearkned to me, how much less will Pharaoh.

2. I am uncircumcised in lips, backward in speech, and of foolish and unclean lips, how should I speak to Pharaoh? The superfluous skin is over my lips, and alas my words are stopt, and little hope they should prevail. It is like to that excuse he makes. Ch. 4. He was as tongue-tied, speechless, ἄλογος. Sept. Ver. 12.

Note

Note hence.

D. 1. Infirmary of faith may cause Gods bessefervants to plead excuse from hard work enjoined.

D. 2. The refusal of the Church to hear and believe Gods message, is a remarkable evil. Behold,

D. 3. Israels unbelief may make Gods Ministers fear that strangers will much more refuse his will.

D. 4. Powers and wickednes together make the greater obstruction against hearing Gods word.

D. 5. Weaknes in Ministers for speaking, may discourage them from speaking to powers beneath.

D. 6. Good men are apt to forget that God circumciseth lips, and gives a tongue, to do his message. Ver. 12.

Ver. 13.

3. The charge of God repeated, And Jehovah spake to Moses and to Aaron and gave them a charge to the sons of Israel, and to Pharaoh King of Egypt, to bring the sons of Israel out of the land of Egypt. The 70 leave out sons of Israel at first. All other readings agree with the Hebr. Herein observe,

1. The term connecting this repeated charge to the former excuse; when Moses draws back God puts him on with renewed commands.

2. The matter connected carrieth in it these things,

1. The party charging Jehovah.

2. The parties charged, Moses and Aaron.

3. The charge itself, which was Gods special command upon them, not in the preterpluperfect tense, as some, it did not only repeat the charge formerly given but this notes what he did now in repeating this charge upon Moses and Aaron.

4. The parties to whom this message was sent, Israel and Pharaoh, to deal yet again with them both, about this Gods business of their redemption.

5. The end of it to bring out the Children of Israel at last out of the land of Egypt. This work God was resolved to accomplish, therefore doth he give charge to his instruments to follow on the work injoined them for the accomplishment of the same. Ver. 13. The prosecution of this charge followeth Ver. 28. After the digression (which is the second general) is over. This therefore must be continued to that.

Note we hence.

D. 1. Excuses must not serve turn for Gods instruments, but God will have his work done.

D. 2. God joine's instruments under his charge to encourage unto his commands. Moses and Aaron.

D. 3. Gods commands to his instruments are in order to the Church & others to make known his will.

D. 4. Redemption of Gods Church from bondage is the end of all his will revealed. Ver. 13.

2. The next general head of this Chapter is the digression noted, which contains a threefold genealogie.

1. Of Reuben and his line. Ver. 14.

2. Of Simeon and his stocke. Ver. 15.

3. Of Levi and his progenie. V. 16. 17.

In the first occur these particulars observable,

1. The title general to all the times mentioned, These are the heads of the house of their fathers. By the 70. and the rest it is read, — These are the Princes or chief; that is, these three that follow, are the heads or fountains of their special lines, and rulers over them for their time.

Quest. Why are these mentioned here?

Answer. 1. To prevent fables and falsehoods which Saian was ready to forge to obscure the line of the Church, and falsify Gods word and promise to Abraham, this therefore seems to be inserted with some reference to the Covenant with him forementioned. Ver. 4.

2. To shew the race of these poor instruments by whom God delivered Israel, that they had no carnal advantages for the worke, but were acted in it only by the power of God.

2. The special generation of Reuben, here.

1. The father named, Reuben the first born of Israel, so all agree.

2. The seed from him, The sons were Chanoe, Pallu, Chesron and Carmi. Gen. 46. 9. 1 Chron. 5. 3.

3. The use of this, to shew, these to be the heads of the progeny arising; These are the families of Reuben. Kindred. Sept. and Onk. — Generations, Syr. From these came all the families of Reuben, this is the short account of this race.

Quest. Why is Reuben here mentioned?

Answer. To bring down the line from Jacob to Moses more distinctly, therefore he reckons the two elder first, that his own line may appear to be from Jacobs third Son.

Quest. Why is he called the first borne?

Answer. 1. He was so naturally, which

Yyyy 2 Moses

Moses respects. 2. His abdication from primogeniture, was upon more spiritual accounts. 1 Chr. 5. 1. 2.

Learn here.

- D. 1. Sacred genealogie is made by Gods Spirit to make clear the line of his Church.
 D. 2. Natural primogeniture may be allowed to such to whom the spiritual may be denied.
 D. 3. The multitude of the Churches seed did arise from small beginnings. Ver. 14.

In the second we have to note these particulars.

- Ver. 15. 1. The second head, Simon the father, and Lamin, and Obad, and Iachin, and Zohar, and Shail the son of a Canaanitish woman. This notation of the last son by his mother is not to be past over, but notes corruption then in the sons of the Church by their mingling with the daughters of idolaters. Names are altered. 1 Chr. 5. 3.
 3. The use of this genealogie also to note that these were the heads of the families of the Church in the second tribe.

Quest. Why so short an account of these two?

Answer. These were mentioned onely in order to the third brother, therefore Moses stayeth not on them.

Observe.

- D. 1. Order in genealogie is usefull to give right understanding of the Churches line.
 D. 2. Heads of families in the Church have bin too prone to mingle themselves in strange marriages. V. 15.

In the third Moses is more large, and in one line leads to the 6th generation, this being the line of Levi Jacobs third son, from whose loins came Moses and Aarons for whose sake this digression is especially made. In this

1. Therefore I shall note the order of generations.

1. The first is the third son of Jacob by Leah called Levi the father of all that follow.

- Ver. 16. 2. The second generation is of his immediate sons, which were these: The sons according to their generation were three, Gershon, Kobath, and Merari. These being mentioned, the dayes of Levi's life are numbred.

And the years of the life of Levi were 137 years. Readings agree. Ver. 16.

Quest. Why are his years mentioned? Answer. 1. To shew the true chronologie of the Church. 2. To clear the time of Gods fulfilling his promise to Abraham. Gen. 15.

Quest. Why are these 3 onely mentioned of Jacobs sons?

Answer. 1. Some thinke to recover their names again, who were branded by their father. 2. Yet rather it is probable, that there needed no more here, the main scope here being to discover the line of Moses and Aaron.

Learn here.

- D. 1. Levis line is remarkable by Gods Spirit.
 D. 2. A poor stock may yeild noble Instruments for the Churches salvation.
 D. 3. The fathers who lived long yet saw not all the promises fulfilled. He died 121 years before Israel was delivered. Ver. 16.

3. The next generation is threefold from these 3 sons of Levi.

1. From Gershon, the sons of Gershon Libni and Shimi, according to their families. Houses of their families. 70. By their kindreds. Onk. Ver. 17.

2. From Kobath,

1. His seed is recorded, And the sons of Kobath, Amram and Izhar, and Hebron, and Uzziel. Ver. 18.

2. His dayes are numbred, And the years of the life of Kobath were 133 years. The reason of adding this number is the same as of Levi. Ver. 18.

3. From Merari, And the sons of Merari, Mahali, and Mushi: these are the families of Levi according to their generations. Thus far reacheth the third generation, Ver. 19.

Observe.

- D. 1. Gradually God increaseth his Church.
 D. 2. Third generations under God may adde much more seed unto his Church.

4. The next generation is reckoned from 3 of the sons of Kobath in this order.

1. From Amram, the eldest of whom we read,

1. His

Ver. 20.

1. His marriage, And Amram tooke Jochebed his aunt to wife, some read his fathers sister, some his mothers sister. She was the daughter of Levi born in Egypt, Numb. 26. 59. — Of his Fathers brother. 70.

2. His seed, And she bare him Aaron and Moses, They were born in Egypt. Aaron elder by 3 years, Miriam is added by the Sept.

3. His terme of life, And the years of the life of Amram were 137 years, The reason of this mentioned is as before, Ver. 20.

Quest. Was Amrams marriage good? Answer. Surely by the law it was incestuous, though it were not given at Sinai, yet it was not unknown; God so passed by the weakness of his then, but it must be evil; and here Moses hides not the blot of his original; yet God maketh use of it to bring forth his instruments. Ver. 20.

We conclude.

D. 1. Incestuous marriages are not good, though by God sometimes passed over.

D. 2. God can bring out his instruments and work from the sins of men.

Ver. 21. 2. From Izhar the second, And the sons of Izhar, Kobath Nephew and Zichri. Ver. 21.

Ver. 22. 3. From Uzziel the last son, for the third Hebron is left out. And the sons of Uzziel, Mishael, and Elzaphan, and Zichri.

5. The next generation is reckoned, 1. From Aaron the eldest son of Amram, of whom,

Ver. 23. 1. His marriage is recorded, And Aaron tooke Elizabay daughter of Amminadab, sister of Naathan, to him to wife, Elizabab, 70. The sound of the name is not much, onely note.

1. That she was of the tribe of Judah and he of Levi.

2. That she was of the choise of that tribe, the Princes house.

2. His seed is reported. And she bare him Nadab and Abihu, Eleazar and Ithamar. Ver. 23.

Ver. 24. 2. From Korah, eldest son to Izhar Aarons colen-german, And the sons of Korah Atfir, and Elkanah, and Abisaph, these are the families of the Korhites. Ver. 24.

6. The next generation is reckoned here from Eleazar third son to Aaron, of whom we read,

Ver. 25. 1. His marriage, And Eleazar son of Aaron took unto him one of the daughters of Phuel unto him to wife. Here is no difficulty.

2. His seed, And she bare him Phineas.

3. The summe of all these accounts,

These are the heads of the fathers of the Levites according to their families. Ver. 25.

Quest. Why are all these generations mentioned after Moses and Aaron? Ans. Doubtles to prepare for the understanding of the after histories about Eleazar, Korah, and Phineas, with other matters that might have respect unto them.

1. Some in mercy to his faithful ones.
 2. Some in reproach to wicked ones.

We observe.

- D. 1. From generation to generation God continueth the succession of his Church.
 D. 2. God hath various ends in recording good and bad in the genealogie of his Church. Ver. 21. 25.

2. The scope of this digression in the genealogie mentioned followeth, which is to point out these two persons whom God used as his instruments of Israels deliverance as to their original, and as to the charge which God laid upon them. A threefold indignation there is here of them.

1. With respect to Israel, This is that Aaron and Moses to whom the Lord said even to them, bring ye out the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt according to the hosts. — With their power, Sept. — By their troops. Onk. — All their armies. Syr. Where they are demonstrated.

1. By name, this Aaron, this Moses.

2. By commillion, of which,

1. The author, is Ichovah.

2. The matter, to bring Israel out of Egypt.

3. The order, in their Armies or hosts, not confusedly. Ver. 26.

2. With respect to Pharaoh, These are they which spake to Pharaoh King of Egypt, to bring out the sons of Israel from Egypt. Readings much to the same. Wherein they are noted,

1. By their address to Pharaoh, these poor men bespake him from God.

2. By their message to him, which was to bring the sons of Israel out of Egypt.

3. With respect to themselves, This is that Moses and Aaron, viz. to whom God spake. Ver. 13. Poor men of a poor stock, yet these called out by God to deliver Israel out of the hand of mighty oppressors. So God led them as a flock by the hand of these two shepherds, this Moses and this Aaron. Pf. 70. 20. Ver. 27. The order of naming them is arbitrary.

Yet we mark here.

- D. 1. God would have his Church
 Yyyy 3 know

- know the instruments, whom he calleth, though of low descent.
- D. 2. Gods commission maketh poorest instruments eminent for greatest deliverance of his people.
- D. 3. It is Gods work to make shepherds lead Armies. Ver. 26.
- D. 4. God intitles his poorest instruments to honour, even to face Kings at his pleasure.
- D. 5. God honours his weak instruments to deliver his Church out of the hands of Kings.
- D. 6. In Gods record and at his pleasure the poorest names are made eminent. Ver. 27.

3. The digression being past Moses returns in his history to declare Gods further charge upon him, for going again to Pharaoh, and bespeaking him in the name of the Lord, together with some further encouragement added, from verse 28 of Chap. 6 to verse 8th of Chap. 7. Wherein occurs,

1. Gods charge unto Moses. Ver. 28. 29.
2. The excuse of Moses repeated. Ver. 30.
3. Gods reply by encouragement to him. Ch. 7. v. 5.
4. The obedience of Moses and Aaron. Ver. 6. 7.

Ver. 28.

1. In the repetition of his charge note.

1. The time of it, And it was in the day wherein Jehovah spake to Moses. The relative wherein is here supplied. Onk. Sam. Syr. fame. The 70 read in the day. In which day, &c. This noteth the season of Gods setting upon Moses again to take him of from his excuses. At this some begin the 7th Chapter, because the beginning of the next Chapter belongs to this discourse; and it is [more convenient, either to join these three verses to the 7th Chapter or to take the former verses of the 7th & join them to the 6th Chapter, so the matter would be more intirely related together. I shall onely note.

1. The term connecting this repetition of the charge to verse 13.
2. The season, or day, to be immediate thereupon, some read it indefinitely, it came to passe, that in what day Jehovah spake to Moses, he said, as followeth. Ver. 29.

Ver. 29.

2. The place of this charge, it was in the land of Egypt, Moses being now there arrived. Ver. 28.
3. The authority charging, Jehovah, thrice named in this place I am Jehovah.
4. The charge itself, Speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt all that I speak unto thee. Readings agree.

1. The matter of the charge is to speak.
2. The person to whom, Pharaoh King of Egypt.
3. The extent of his speech. All that God did speak to him, Ver. 29.

We observe.

- D. 1. In the day of instruments drawing back, God repeats his charge to quicken them. Connect.
- D. 2. Place as well as time for duty God orders in his charge. Ver. 28.
- D. 3. Jehovah rebleth his name unto creatures, to make them obedient. So he to Moses.
- D. 4. The name of Jehovah carrieth enough in it to support his Ministers. I am Jehovah.
- D. 5. Moses is charged to goe to Pharaoh, the shepherd to the King, at Gods word.
- D. 6. Gods Ministers must speak his whole mind to those unto whom God sends them. Ver. 29.

2. The excuse of Moses again followeth, And Moses said before Jehovah behold I am uncircumcised in lips, and how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me? Sam. fame. and Vulg. Lat. — Of a small voice 70. — Of an heavy speech. Onk. It is the very fame which he gave before. Ver. 12. And therefore there is the lesse need to speak much of it here. Note,

Ver. 30.

1. His boldness in replying, And Moses said before Jehovah.
2. His ground of excuse, Behold I am of uncircumcised lips, which may note,
 1. Infirmitie of speech.
 2. Uncleanes such as may offend.
3. His inference hereupon, And how shall Pharaoh hearken unto me? As if he had said, Lord it is to no purpose, Pharaoh will not yeild to me, and therefore send me no more unto him, Ver. 30.

We gather hence.

- D. 1. Weaknes of faith puts Gods servants sometimes upon their shifts to waver his work.
- D. 2. Bodily infirmities may discourage the minds of Gods servants from their work.
- D. 3. It is weaknes to urge infirmities ties against Gods charge, who can heal them.

D. 4. Sense of unperiswadeableness in creatures may discourage Gods Ministers to speake to them. V. 30.

Thus farre the 6th Chapter according to our distribution; but as to the dependance of the matter these 3 last Verses were better joined to the 7th Chapter.

CHAP. VII.

IF we consider this Chapter by itself, two general heads may be noted.

1. Gods finishing of his preparation of Moses and Aaron, as to what they were to speake. Ver. 1. 7.
 2. Gods preparation of them by the workes which they were to do in order to deliverance. Ver. 8. 25.
- But with respect to the dependance of this former part of the Chapter with the precedent, I shall observe the former method noted, before Gods encouragement. Ver. 1. 5.

3. Then here followeth Gods answer to the excuse of Moses, which is by way of encouragement to him against his exceptions made before; and that in these wayes.

Ver. 1.

1. In what God will do for Moses, And Jehovah said to Moses, see, I have given thee a God to Pharaoh. Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. fame. — A Prince to Pharaoh. Onk. — A Lord, &c. Ar. Herein we may profitably observe.

1. Gods designation of Moses after so many excuses and put-offs, yet to speak to him again for his encouragement. And Jehovah not withstanding the former shift, yet saith to Moses.

2. Gods demonstration to him see; all readings to the same, in which expression he puts Moses to consider, that how ever he thought of himself, yet he should now perceive what God thought of him & would do unto him, see, look upon, consider what I shall say.

3. Gods donation, I have given thee a God to Pharaoh. Some read Elohim here used, a Prince, a Lord, but here the term of God is most apt.

1. The gift bestowed is to be a God, not properly which is incommunicable, but by participation & in a borrowed sense; so he is.

1. A sovereign to Pharaoh to command him.

2. A judge and avenger, to execute wrath on him.

3. Terrible to Pharaoh, as God is to the Kings of the earth, so Ben. Uzziel.

paraphraseth, fear not, I have made thee to be feared by Pharaoh. Tremendum feci.

2. The manner of bestowing it, is by gift, freely and powerfully constituting them in this kind and state of a deity, which is onely in the absolute power of God to do.

3. The subject over whom God gave him this preeminence, Pharaoh King of Egypt, so the Prince is subjected to the shepherd, and is made to tremble at the shepherds staffe.

2. The second encouragement is Gods disposition or designation of Aaron, And Aaron thy brother shall be thy Prophet. Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. fame. — Thy interpreter. Onk. and Ar. This God replieth, as to the uncircumcision of his own lips; the like whereunto we had. C. 4. 14. Here God maketh,

Ver. 2.

1. Moses to be the oracle from himself.

2. Aaron to be the Minister to declare and speak from this oracle, for such is the meaning of Prophet here, not a foreteller of secrets to come, but a preacher of Gods will revealed in present unto Pharaoh and Israel. Ver. 1.

Observe we hence.

D. 1. Great is Gods goodness and patience to reason with and encourage his backward servants.

D. 2. It is seasonable for Gods servants against discouragements to consider what God offers them.

D. 3. It is Gods prerogative to give his name and power to shepherds over Kings.

D. 4. Men judging themselves as uncircumcised, may be made by Jehovah as Gods.

D. 5. Jehovah can make instruments Gods, for vengeance to enemies, and oracles to his people.

D. 6. Inferiour Gods made by Jehovah may need their helps to speak though he need none.

D. 7. Prophets are properly Gods mouth and lips to his Church.

D. 8. Such helps are great encouragements to rulers in carrying on Gods work. Ver. 1. Ecra. 5. Ver. 1. 2, 3.

3. The encouragement is, Gods next efficacious work upon the mouth of Moses and Aaron.

1. Gods

Ver. 2.

1. Gods undertaking for Moses, Thou shalt speak all that I command thee. Readings mostly agree. — Speak to him, Sept. — To Aaron thy brother, &c. — And he, &c. Ar. This word was certainly given for the encouragement of Moses, it may be understood as well by way of promise, as of injunction, that God doth not only injoin him to speak, but promisceth or undertaketh he shall speak, however he pretends his infirmity.

1. The subject of this encouragement is Moses.

2. The encouragement itself is an injunction of him with efficacious assistance to speak, thou shalt surely speak, notwithstanding weakness.

3. The person to whom is not expressed in the Hebr. — The 70 read to him. — The Ar. to Aaron thy brother; which seemeth probable, he being made a Prophet to Moses.

4. The matter of his speech. All that God commanded. This was the part of Moses.

Ver. 2.

2. Gods order as to Aaron, And Aaron thy brother shall speak to Pharaoh, that he send the sons of Israel out of this land. All readings agree. Here note,

1. The subject enjoined and enabled Aaron thy brother.

2. The party to whom he is ordered is Pharaoh.

3. The work insisted on was to speak.

4. The matter of the speech, that he let the sons of Israel go, or send them out of his land: this God not only enjoins but undertakes that it shall be spoken with effect.

Note we.

D. 1. Weakness and unwillingness in instruments God quickens to his work by precept and promise.

D. 2. When God makes man to speak, he utters all his commands.

D. 3. God orders one instrument from another to utter his mind to worldly powers.

D. 4. At Gods word poor despicable creatures, command oppressing powers to release the oppressed, and it shall be done in time. Ver. 2.

Ver. 2.

4. God encourageth Moses further by shewing him how he will order Pharaoh and his land to bring to pass his word. V. 3. 4. 5. Wherein,

1. Gods act is recorded, Ver. 3. Which is twofold.

1. Upon Pharaoh, And I will harden Pharaohs heart. All readings agree.

1. The agent, God.

2. The patient, Pharaoh.

3. The action, Obduration, or hardening Pharaohs heart.

Quest. How doth God this and is blameless?

Ans. This act God own's often, Chap. 4. 21. I will make strong Pharaohs heart, here it is, I will make hard or difficult to be persuaded by all words or works; that God doth so is certain; and that God cannot sin is as certain. Consider then.

1. Hardness, or sinful obstinacy as mans own sin arising from a corrupt principle within him. He that hardens his heart, &c. Pro. 21. 14. Job. 9. 4.

2. Hardening as an act judicial belongs to God (such is this here) and that without sin, for God puts no evil into mans heart, but thus act's.

1. He leaveth man to his own hardness.

2. He occasioneth further hardening by his word and works which stirre up wicked hearts to sin. So the law occasions sin and death, and is holy.

3. He in his just judgment giveth up such to be hardened by Satan, and their own lust. In all this he is righteous.

2. Gods act upon Egypt and all the inhabitants, And I will multiply my signs and my wonders in the land of Egypt. All readings agree.

1. The agent here, the same Jehovah.

2. The act is multiplication of signs and wonders; such as might instruct, and such as would afflict; that they might be persuaded. The enumeration of these follow in the history.

3. The object upon which these are wrought in the land of Egypt, that is all the people of the land, (viz. Egyptians.) and some strange works upon the land itself for their sakes. Ver. 3.

2. The effects consequent upon these acts of God; and they are 4.

1. Pharaohs denial, And Pharaoh will not or shall not hearken unto you. Readings agree. — Shall not acquiesce. Onk. — Shall not obey. Ar. In this is the sad effect of Gods acts, that Pharaoh will not be persuaded nor hearken to any message from God for Israels dissolution.

2. Gods further infliction upon Egypt, That I may or and I will give or lay my hand upon Egypt. Sept. Sam. Syr. and Vulg. same. — And I will lay the stroke of my strength, &c. Onk. — Until I send my stroke. Ar. here mark,

1. The inflicter, God.

2. The infliction, laying on his hand which is his vengeance.

3. The

3. The object of it, Egypt, or the Egyptians. This is the consequent of hardening the heart and turning away the ear from God.

Ver. 4.

3. Gods leading forth Israel, And I will bring forth mine armies, my people, the sons of Israel, out of the land of Egypt with great judgments. Sept. with my power and great vengeance. Onk. Sam. Ar. same as Hebr. Syr. wants this.

1. The work, education from Egypt.

2. The object } 1. Gods Armies. set out } 2. Gods People.

3. The sons of Israel, whom God had demanded from Pharaoh before.

3. The manner of leading them forth, with great judgments of which we shall read hereafter. Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

4. The manifestation of Gods glory upon all, And the Egyptians shall know that I am Jehovah, when I stretch forth my hand upon Egypt, and I will bring out the sons of Israel from among them or midst of them. Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same. — When I lift up my strong plague, Onk.

1. The end aimed at is the notifying of Jehovah unto the Egyptians, Israels enemies.

2. The means to reach this end. Two-fold.

1. Gods stretching forth his hand in great judgments upon Egypt.

2. Gods delivering and bringing forth of Israel from the midst of them. Hereby he was known to be Jehovah in putting judgments in being upon enemies, & making promises good to Israel. Ver. 5.

We Learn hence.

D. 1. God foretels mans obstinacy unto his will revealed, that his instruments should not be offended.

D. 2. God hardens hearts as a judge, but men harden themselves as sinners.

D. 3. Gods word and works may be an occasion to men of hardening but not the cause.

D. 4. Mans hardening is truly the cause of Gods multiplying his terrible signs upon men. Ver. 3.

D. 5. Sin and judgments will not let men hear the voice of Gods words or wonders.

D. 6. Refusal to hear makes God put forth his hand in greater vengeance.

D. 7. Hardness of heart in oppressors cannot hinder God from redeeming his people.

D. 8. Gods Church is his armies, his people, and his Israel.

D. 9. Great judgments shall make men yield, when great mercies cannot persuade them. Ver. 4.

D. 10. God is proved to be Jehovah to his enemies by putting his judgments into being on them.

D. 11. God is Jehovah to his Church by putting deliverance into being for it.

D. 12. The great end of God in all these providences is to be known to be Jehovah in the world. Ver. 5.

2. The obedience of Moses and Aaron; which was the fourth head in the general division, now followeth. Ver. 6. 7. Wherein are two things.

1. The obdiential answer made by these instruments. V. 6. And Moses & Aaron did as Jehovah commanded them, so did they. All readings agree. We have here to note,

1. The connection of this obedience to Gods former encouragement, at last God prevails, and he gave not over till he gained his will.

2. The matter connected, an obdiential return.

1. The parties obeying. Moses and Aaron.

2. The act of obedience, they did the will of God.

3. The rule of their obedience, Gods commandments, as Jehovah commanded.

4. The certainty of it in the redemption. So did they; exactly in every part, and faithfully as to Gods will. Ver. 6.

2. The age of both these instruments recorded; And Moses was the son of 80 years, and Aaron the son of 83 years when they spake to Pharaoh. All readings are to the same purpose, Moses was 80 years old, &c. Herein note,

1. The age of Moses is recorded. 80 years.

2. The age of Aaron is related. 83 years.

3. The time when their ages were compleated described by their embassy, it was when they were sent by God and spake to Pharaoh about sending Israel out of Egypt.

Quest. 1. Why doth Moses record his own obedience?

Ans. 1. Not to boast himself, or commend Aaron as if their forwardness had caused Israels redemption. 2. But as he had recorded his own fears and withwithdrawings from the work of God impartially to his own shame; now he discovers that God had overcome that unbelief, and unwillingness of his, so that, now both he and his brother, go readily to their work; and after this make no more excuses; Moses therefore here ascribes to God the victory over his will.

Quest. 2. Why are the ages of them both here recorded?

Ans. 1. It is generally to help on the right understanding of the sacred chronologic set down in Scriptures, Act. 7. 23. 30. 2. It might be to let us see Gods prerogative in setting the younger before the elder. 3. It is conceived by some to set out the venerable state of these instruments by their age. 4. It seems yet more probable, it was, to set forth Gods glory who chose such as for their age were decaying men, and going to their graves, now that God should make them renew strength and parts and courage, to lead the armies of Israel out of Egypt; this magnifieth Gods grace, as it was noted afterward of Moses that when he was 120 years old, his eye was not dim, nor his natural strength abated. This was Gods great work, Deut. 34. 7.

We hence observe.

D. 1. God by his encouragements at last gets victory over the unruly wills of his servants.

D. 2. Souls made willing do exactly look to Gods command in their obedience.

D. 3. Gods glory is much concerned in the record of the exact obedience of his servants. Ver. 6.

D. 4. Old decaying age can God receive to make it useful for his Church.

D. 5. Gods prerogative it is to set the younger before the elder.

D. 6. God makes old servants powerful and venerable to worldly potentates in bespeaking them. Ver. 7.

2. Now we are come to the second general head of this Chapter, which was also noted in the first great Analysis to be the second way of Gods preparing his instruments for Israels redemption, by working signs and wonders, as well as by speaking to Israel, and Pharaoh. Now this preparatory work begins here, and continueth to the 30th verse of the 12th Chapter. Herein,

1. God inableth them to work strange persuasive wonders to win Pharaoh. Ver. 8. 13.

2. Terrible vindictive wonders to force him to send away Israel. Ver. 14, and so to the 12th Chap.

In the first we have these things considerable,

1. The injunction of them to work Ver. 8. 9.

2. The execution of Gods will by them. Ver. 10.

3. The consequent events hereupon.

1. Pharaohs opposition to Gods works. Ver. 11. 12.

2. Gods confutation of Pharaoh; Ver. 12.

3. Pharaohs hardning hereupon. Ver. 13.

1. About Gods injunction to Moses and Aaron note,

1. The preface to it. Ver. 8. And Jehovah said to Moses and to Aaron in saying, Give us a sign or a wonder. Sep. Readings are to the same. Spake this speech. Ar. no difficulty is here.

1. The injoiner Jehovah.

2. The injoined Moses and Aaron.

3. The manner of injunction by speech.

Ver. 8. 2. The occasion or ground of the injunction supposed, When or if Pharaoh shall speak to you saying, Give us a sign or a wonder. Sep. To me. Ar. Shew signs. Vulg. Wherein is supposed.

1. Pharaohs slighting of them.

2. Pharaohs scornful putting them upon the proof of their commission; Give a miracle for you; that is, let me see what you can shew for your authority; that you come to demand Israel from me, let me see some prodigie, signe, or miracle that may speak for you.

3. The injunction thereupon, Then thou shalt say to Aaron, take thy rod and cast it before Pharaoh. All readings agree.

1. Herein the authority of Moses is confirmed over Aaron; Thou shalt say.

2. The matter of command from Moses to him.

1. Take thy rod, here it is ruled his; which before was the rod of God and Moses. So it is.

2. Cast it before Pharaoh; throw it at his foot. Nothing difficult in this.

4. The issue of these acts, It shall be a dragon, so the word Tannin here doth notes a huge great snake or serpent which was formidable. Mal. 1. 3. Sam. Sept. Draco. Onk. Coluber. Ar. Syr. Draco.

However this was mentioned twice before and acted at Moreh and before Israel; yet here, here, God will have this signe or prodigie done now before Pharaoh. Ver. 9.

We remark.

D. 1. After God hath won his servants to willing obedience, he commands them, Ver. 8.

D. 2. God supposeth and foretelleth his instruments that worldly powers will sift their authority.

D. 3. It is the frame of wicked hearts, to put Gods Ministers to do miracles before they believe.

D. 4. God to testify to his Ministers sometimes giveth miracles to be done by them.

D. 5. One instrument may God set over another to do his strange signes.

D. 6. When God injoineth his to work wonders, he is sure to effect it.

D. 7. Dead sticks shall become dragons at Gods word to awaken unbelievers.

D. 8. God by his word and work leaveth sinners without excuse for unbelief. Ver. 9.

2. The execution of Gods will by Moses and Aaron now followeth. Ver. 10. Wherein are these particulars.

Ver. 10. 1. Their entrance in unto Pharaoh, And Moses went in, and Aaron unto Pharaoh. Before Pharaoh and his servants, Sept. Readings agree.

1. The term connecting knits this obedience to Gods command precedent, he bids them go, and they go, and make their way to Pharaoh.

2. The subject of this motion, Moses and Aaron, now newly animated and spirited by God.

3. The motive itself, the first act, they went boldly in before Pharaoh and his servants.

Ver. 10. 2. Their obedience set out two ways.

1. Generally, And they did so as Jehovah had commanded. All readings concur. The subject, act; rule and extent of obedience are here remarkable.

Ver. 10. 2. Specially, And Aaron cast his rod before Pharaoh and before his servants. Readings concur mostly, onely servants are called Captains by Ar. Nobles. Syr. Here is no difficulty. Onely it is supposed, that here Pharaoh did demand a signe, upon their bold entrance, and then is it expressed that Aaron did at the word of Moses cast down his rod or staffe before Pharaoh and his servants.

3. The effect, And it became a dragon, Ver. 11. Sept. Turned into a snake. Onk. All readings agree.

1. The connection here joins the effect with Gods promise, and obedience to his command.

2. The effect, a strange mutation, whereof here,

1. The subject, Rod.

2. The change, It was.

3. The term, A dragon.

Quest. Was this a real or true conversion? Ans. Yea doubtles, for,

1. God had done it before to them, and commanded it to be done by them, and promised the effect. Ver. 9.

2. Gods might and power to do such things is unquestionable, he that made all things of nothing, can make any thing of any thing.

3. It is Gods property to create true and real effects, according to the truth of his own being.

Learn we.

D. 1. New quicknings the best of Gods servants need, unto new undertakings besides their call.

D. 2. Poorest instruments, animated by God, dare face oppressing potentates on earth.

D. 3. It is the onely safety for Gods servants to do as he commands them.

D. 4. Small actions in obedience are ordered by God to great issues, though despicable to men.

D. 5. Not a word of God shall fail, but the very nature of creatures shall change rather to verify the same.

D. 6. Gods miracles are in truth, to confirm his authority among men. Ver. 10.

The events hereupon following are three.

1. Pharaohs opposition to this signe; Ver. 11.

1. In calling the Magicians. And or then Pharaoh calleth for the wise men and soverers, Readings agree onely in rendering the term soverers which others read magicians withers, &c.

2. The person calling here is Pharaoh, Zzzz 2 raoh, now set to contend with God by his instruments.

2. The persons called, are set out by three titles describing them, two are in this passage.

חכמים

1. They are called wise men; such they pretended themselves to be, and such they were accounted by their adorers: the 70 call them חכמים, which notes, the hunters or depravers of wisdom, using wits to deceive.

מכשפים

2. They are called, as ours read, forerers, witches, wizards; this title among the rest must not such as by pretended art did oppose the divine revelations of God; whether it were mediately or immediately consulting with the Devil, as the way was various.

3. The call itself, he doubts by his power commanded these servants of his to contend with Moses and Aaron, and the God from whom they were sent for Israel's redemption, and to view wonders with them.

2. In the works which they did these are described.

Ver. 11.

1. Generally, And they also, the magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments. Onk. same. Sam. and Syr. to the same. — The enchanters of the Egyptians, did in like manner with their force-ries. Sept. — They did so by their secrets. Ar. — And some secrets they did likewise. Vulg.

הרמטי

1. The subject spoken of is the same persons under another title, read magicians; it comes from a word noting heaven, & is used to note such Astrologers as by the observation of the heavens calculat nativities; these were such as by pretended skill in the constellation opposed God speaking by Moses. Enchanters. 70.

2. Their worke, they did also in like manner as Moses and Aaron in shewing wonders; so it was as to the sense of Pharaoh.

בלשיתם
להשיתם

3. The way of doing it, With their enchantments, it notes secret mutterings, or singings, which is, by converse with the Devil; in one way written Belahatem is the Devils proper work, but Belahatem is the work of the witch. Buxtorf Lex. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12.

2. Specially is their worke discovered, And for they cast down every man his rod, and they became dragons, Septuagint. Sam. Syr. same. Vulg. — as dragons. Ar. — Turned into snakes Onk.

1. The special worke done, They cast down every man his rod, as Aaron did, the words are plain.

2. The effects, they were turned into dragons or great serpents.

2. The next event is Gods confutation of Pharaoh, and these works of forcerers, by victory over them; so it is written, And on but the rod of Aaron swallowed up their rods. Readings agree.

Ver. 12.

1. The conquerer is Aarons rod, and God by it.

2. The conquered. The rods of force-ers and Pharaoh in them.

3. The conquest, the first swallowed up the second, so were these magicians assumed, they could not keep what by enchantments they made.

Quest. 1. Who and what were these magicians?

Ans. 1. Their names are not here recorded, but the Apostle names two of the heads, Jannes and Jambres; and some of the Rabbins mention the same. 2 Tim. 3. ver 8. 2. Their number is not certain, but probable divers were they, to outvie the two instruments of God, and shew, that Pharaoh had many to work such things as these by. 3. Their quality is set out by three words here.

1. Chacamim, wise men.

2. Measaphim, Sorcerers.

3. Chartumim, Magicians.

But to these are more titles added. Deut.

18. 10. 11. 14.

4. Kosim, A diviner.

5. Meyomen, An observer of times.

6. Menachesh, An inchanter, or southfayer.

7. Chober, A charmer.

8. Sheeolob, A consulter with familiar Spirits.

9. Jideyon, A wizard.

10. Doresh El-hammethim a necromancer, one that consults with the dead.

11. Mecosheph, A witch.

All these are unlawful practices, wherein if men make immediat contracts with the Devil, it is the highest wickedness; but if not so, the Devil delude's and help's them on to do this horrid sin. Such are these men.

Quest. 2. Were the rods of these magicians turned into true serpents?

Ans. 1. Satan with all his power cannot make any true being but lyes.

2. God yet may permit and order Satan, to make use of that which himself create's, as to speak the truths which he alone giveth, so Balaam did. 3. These were mirra but not miracula, which he hath a power permissive to perform, but miracles are past his skill.

Quest. 3. What is carried in their swallowing up by Aarons rod?

Ans. 1. The discoverie of them to be but false signes. 2. The destruction of them, that men might see there was no cause to be seduced by them. 3. The last event, is the hardning of Pharaohs heart by these, wherein note,

1. Gods judicial act, And he hardened Pharaohs heart, or Pharaohs heart waxed strong. — והקשה את לבו, Sept. 1.

Was hardened, Onk. to Sam. Syr. Ar.

1. Pharaohs sin. 2. Is here implied.

2. Gods judgment. 3. The

Ver. 13.

2. The effect, And he hearkned not unto them, Sept. Sam. same. He let them not go. Syr. — He obeyed them not. Ar. — He rested not in them. Onk. All this is carried in the phrase, he heard them not.

3. The proof of Gods word to be true herein, As I Jehovah had said or spoken. All readings agree; wherein is observable that the event did fully answer Gods prediction; so he foreknew and so he foretold, that his servants might not be offended.

Quest. 4. Was Pharaoh excusable upon these signes?

Ans. No, for. 1. They were false, and acted by wicked instruments. 2. They were destroyed, which might have convinced them. 3. They were against the word which God sent him. Such are lying wonders. Deut. 13. 1, &c. Ver. 13.

From all which we gather.

D. 1. Miracles from God will not persuade wicked hearts to believe.

D. 2. Unbelieving sinners are apt to call in all instruments of Satan to gainsay God.

D. 3. Providence hath of old suffered wisdom to be abused to sorcery, and pernicious acts. Ver. 11.

D. 4. God hath suffered creatures by Satans help to doe some like things to his miracles.

D. 5. Under Gods permission Satan may worke strange changes in creatures, but no miracles.

D. 6. Gods true miracles devour all lying wonders of Satan. Ver. 12.

D. 7. Wicked hearts harden themselves by lying wonders against God, and therefore are hardened by him.

D. 8. The fruit of such hardning is rebellion against Gods word and will.

D. 9. Gods word is made good in all the disobedience of the wicked foretold. Ver. 13.

2. Now followeth the preparation for Israels deliverance by Moses and Aaron in the works of vengeance as well as wonder executed on Pharaoh and his people; which is best divided into ten heads according to the number of judgments related, from the 14th verse of this 7th Chapter to the 30th of the 12th, which we shall orderly consider,

The first judgment is reported in the residue of this Chapter from the 14th verse to the end, wherein we may note,

1. The cause of it mentioned. Ver. 14.

2. The command for it. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19.

3. The execution of it. Ver. 20. 21.

4. The opposition to it by the magicians. Ver. 22.

5. The events upon it. Ver. 22. 23. 24.

6. The duration of it. Ver. 25.

To the first. In the discovery of the cause of this first judgement these particulars occur,

1. Gods bespeaking Moses about it, Ver. 14.

And Jehovah said to Moses, All readings agree.

1. The term connecting knits the speech of God to the former event on Pharaoh by the miracle shewed him, which sheweth that Gods special notice was upon Pharaohs return.

2. The speech itself. Jehovah said to Moses, by way of intimation to him, that now his word was made good; Pharaoh would not hear, and by way of encouragement to him, see how it is?

2. The cause of the future judgement declared, Pharaohs heart is heavy, Ver. 14.

Ver. 14. send away the people, Most readings thus.

— Hardned. Syr.

1. The cause is expressed. Pharaohs heart is made heavy. This phrase noteth the avernes or indisposition of any to their duty; to have eyes & ears & hearts heavy, is to be altogether indisposed to the duties unto which men are called. Isai. 6. Ver. 19. Luke. 21. Ver. 34. This was done sinfully by Pharaoh through unbelief, but judicially by God.

2. The demonstration of this cause by the effects, He refuseth to send away the people. Though I have expressed the truth of my message by a miracle; he will not yet let Israel at liberty,

Learn we.

D. 1. God quickly observes what successe his word and works have upon creatures.

D. 2. God sheweth the unbelief of the wicked to his instruments for encouragement.

D. 3. Unbelief makes the hearts of sinners heavy unfit for duty, and judgement fastens it.

D. 4. The heart heavy to believe refuseth any of Gods words or commands sent to it. Ver. 14.

2. Upon this renewed heaviness of Pharaohs

Zzzz 3

Pharaoh's heart, God giveth out his command for his first judgment to be executed upon him by the hand of Moses and Aaron. Wherein,

- Ver. 15. 1. He commands his address to Pharaoh, Go into Pharaoh in the morning, behold he goeth out to the waters, and thou shalt stand by the river's brink. Most readings agree. — Go to morrow, &c. stand by the brink of Nilus. Ar. Here note,

1. The Author of this address, Jehovah.
2. The subject of it, Moses.
3. The term of it, Pharaoh.
4. The time of it, early in the morning.

- Ver. 15. 5. The place, the river's brink where Pharaoh was walking.
2. He commands him to take his instrument, And the rod which was turned into a serpent, shalt thou take in thy hand. Readings agree, and no difficulty is in the words. Ver. 15.

3. He commands him to deliver his message.

- Ver. 16. 1. His demand of Israel repeated, And thou shalt say to him, Jehovah the God of the Hebrews, hath sent me to thee, saying send away my people, that they may serve me in the wilderness. Readings the same. All this was said to him before.

- Ver. 16. 2. His rebuke to him for not hearing, And behold thou hast not heard hitherto. Readings are to the same purpose. Sam. and Onk. Herein God chargeth him with his unbelief.

1. In the nature of it. Thou hast not heard.

2. In the measure of it, hitherto. Thus farre. Ver. 16.

3. His threatening. Wherein he proposeth.

- Ver. 17. 1. The end of it, Thus saith Jehovah, in this shalt thou know that I am Jehovah. Readings agree to the same purpose. The scope is the notifying or making known of the name of Jehovah unto Pharaoh, by executing his foretold judgments on him, and making good promised deliverance unto Israel, which yet Pharaoh would not believe.

- Ver. 17. 2. The plague threatened, Behold I smite with the rod which is in my hand upon the waters which are in the river and they shall be turned into blood. All readings to the same. — The water that is in Nilus. Ar. This was a part of his message commanded, what he should say to Pharaoh, wherein he tells.

1. What he will do. Behold I smite &c.

2. What the effect will be, water turned into blood. Ver. 17.

3. The events following this plague, are three.

- Ver. 18. 1. And the fish which is in the river shall die. All readings to the same, this was a grievous stroke.

2. And the river shall stink, most so read. Nilus shall stink. Ar. — The river shall boil up or be hot. 70. This was a noisom plague.

3. And the Egyptians shall be wearied Ver. 18. to drink the waters out of the river. —

Shall not be able, &c. 70. Ar. — They shall be grieved or afflicted to drink.

Onk. Sam. — Troubled to drink. Syr. This was a sad effect, like to kill them with thirst. All this Moses had now in command to make known unto Pharaoh. Ver. 18.

4. After this address injoined, God giveth command for execution of this plague. Where,

1. He chargeth Moses to give the word to Aaron, And Jehovah said to Moses say thou to Aaron. All readings agree. Here onely God observes his order, that Moses shall carry his mind to Aaron. Ver. 19.

2. The word of charge itself given, Take thy rod and stretch out thine hand upon the waters of Egypt, upon their streams, and upon their rivers, and upon their ponds, and upon all the gathering of the waters. All readings are to the same purpose, no difficulty is in the letter. Ver. 19.

3. The issue (ingaged hereupon), And they shall be blood, and there shall be blood in all the land of Egypt, both in vessels of wood and vessels of stone. In wood and stone. V. 19. Readings agree; no difficulty in words.

3. Now followeth the execution of all this.

1. Their obedience generally is noted, And Moses and Aaron did so as Jehovah commanded. Readings agree, the words are plain. Ver. 20.

2. More specially Aarons act is recorded, And he lift up the rod and smote the waters which were in the river in the eyes of Pharaoh and in the eyes of his servants, readings are to the same purpose. This is but acting of what was commanded. Ver. 20.

3. The event following discovered in these particulars.

1. And all the waters which were in the river were turned into blood. Readings agree, this was threatened and now done. There is another word that notes the conversion of them by a mighty power into blood. V. 20. Ver. 21.

2. And the fish which was in the river died. All readings to the same. This was foretold.

3. And the river stank, readings the same. It was grievously noisom.

4. And the Egyptians could not drink water out of the river. All agree. Here was a great and strange plague.

5. The extent of this, And there was blood in all the land of Egypt, all readings agree.

Thus farre it came to passe as God had threatened. Ver. 21.

Quest. How could Aaron stretch forth his hand over all the waters of Egypt? Answ. Doubtles signally he smote onely the the waters which were in Pharaoh's sight, but virtually, as to the effect, it was a stroke upon all waters not onely abroad, but within dores in tubs, or cisterns.

Quest. What was the number of the plagues, and why?

Answ. 1. The number was ten. 2. The reason of it doubtles, Gods will in numbring and measuring his judgments to do his work. 3. As to the conceit of ten being a perfect number it is light, and that it should be proportioned to Gods ten commands, is not solid, however by these God might worke awe upon some hearts to obey them. I am the Lord, &c. Exod. 20. 1.

Quest. In what space of time were these plagues executed?

Answ. It is not expressly stated, but it is probable, that it was no long but short time as some conjecture about a moneth, for when God began he sent his judgments one upon the neck of another, and if we consider the first plagues continuance 7 dayes, and so go on to the rest, the time of execution could not be long, though God was long suffering before.

Quest. Why was this first plague on the waters and so the rest in order?

Answ. 1. The will of the judge is the supreme cause of all plagues in nature and order. 2. It is justly guessed God did by this avenge the blood of infants which were drowned in them. 3. It is thought God sent this in extremity, for it was not onely a necessary element for life, but their Nilus was all their glory for plenty, merchandize, fishing, &c. So that hereby Pharaoh might be moved the sooner.

Note hence.

D. 1. Early doth God dispatch the messengers of judgment to such as harden themselves against his works.

D. 2. God orders time, and place, and persons to meet with his adversaries.

D. 3. Despicable weapons or instruments doth God use to abase powers. Rod.

D. 4. Experienced instruments of wonder, are best in Gods account to be used. Ver. 15.

D. 5. God will's the address, and speech of his messengers to his enemies.

D. 6. In Jehovah's name his Embassadors are to demand his rights from Princes.

D. 7. God by his poor messengers reprooves Kings for their refusal. Ver. 16.

D. 8. God will have wicked powers of the earth to know that he is Jehovah.

D. 9. The smiting of the enemies with vengeance manifests God to be Jehovah, acting his threatnings.

D. 10. God threatens blood for water, death of creatures, and vexation on men, to turn them. Ver. 17. 18.

D. 11. God doth command his servants not onely to threaten but to execute vengeance. Ver. 19.

D. 12. Gods instruments, men as well as Angels, are ready to execute his will.

D. 13. Signal smiting upon one part at Gods word brings the curse upon all waters.

D. 14. At Gods word, blood for water death on fish, fowl, and drought on men, avenge his quarrel. Ver. 20. 21.

4. The opposition of Pharaoh by his magicians now followeth, And the Magicians of Egypt did so with their enchantments, Sam. same, — The enchanters with their forceries. Sept. — The witches with their enchantments, Onk. Vulg. — The witches with their witchcrafts. Syr. — The magicians by their secrets. Ar. This also doubtles was done by Pharaohs command, wherein may be observed,

1. The term connecting, strictly joining this work of delusion to Gods precedent miracle. The devill makes halt to opposition;

2. The work annexed, wherein.

1. The agents are the same Char-tummei, as before Astrologers that by their wicked acts conversed with the devills, such are stiled witches; &c.

2. The act, they did so, that is as Aaron in turning water into blood.

3. The means whereby they wrought it are their enchantments, or forceries or spells.

Quest. Whether did these turne waters truly into blood?

Answ. 1.

Ans. 1. Some assert that it was only by phantasm, but they did not so as Aaron. 2. Others imagine the Devil only shifted in blood for water, which seemed to be turned into blood to Pharaoh and the Egyptian spectators. 3. Neither is it to be meant as if these magicians should work a true miracle as Aaron did from God, that could not be done by creature power.

Quest. 2. But where had they water if Aaron turned all the water of Egypt into blood?

Ans. 1. They that conceive this only a phantasm, easily answer it was but such in shew. 2. But others who conceive a more real work, conjecture that they had it either by digging or that Satan under Gods permission brought it to them: It is not determined; but the more probable conjecture and the best which is that they might have it out of Goshen.

Quest. 3. Could they give Pharaoh and the Egyptians water to drink?

Ans. No, for it is expressly said that the Egyptians digged about the river for water; neither did they afflict the Egyptians with their water turned into blood as Aaron did.

We may observe.

D. 1. The Devil is quick by his instruments to crosse Gods miracles with his delusions.

D. 2. Under Gods permission the Devil may do wonders by imitation but no true miracle.

D. 3. Incantments are sometimes not only imitating, but undermining the miracles of God to save.

5. The next special head is the events which follow upon this miraculous judgment and its opposition, which is twofold.

1. Upon Pharaoh, and that in these particulars,

Ver. 22. 1. In hardning of his heart, And the heart of Pharaoh strengthened itself, he made strong, neither did he hearken unto them as Jehovah had said. Sam. same. Was hardned Sept. Syr. Obeyed not. Ar. Acquiesced not, Onk. Heard not the Lord.

1. The root sin is more hardnes of heart then before.

2. The effect is stopping ears through unbelief.

3. The scope of it to make good Gods word. Ver. 22.

Ver. 23. 2. In his aversion from Moses, &c. And Pharaoh turned and lookt backe and went into his house. Readings most to the same. Turning went, Sept. —

Turned away. Onk. Ar. — Returning, &c. this notes,

1. An aversion from God and his workes.

2. A conversion to his own to consult with them.

3. In casting out the thoughts of Gods miracles from his heart, Neither did he set his heart also to this, Readings to the same. — His mind. Sept. Ar. — This carries in it,

1. An addition of rebellion, And, &c.

2. The act. He put not his heart to consider this miracle, and plague which God sent upon him, it is as much as to say his heart was set against God in all this miraculous vengeance, this is the fruit of the first plague upon him. Ver. 23.

2. Upon the Egyptians, wherein note, 1. Their imploiment upon this miraculous judgment, And all the Egyptians digged round about the river water to drink. — To drink water, or that they might drink. Sep. Onk. — Waters drinkable. Sam. — About Nilus wells to drink, &c.

Ar. Where,

1. The term of connection knits their work to Gods judgment immediately, when all their waters were turned to blood, they never thought of praying but of digging; they trusted to their own hands.

2. The work connected; wherein we may note,

1. The subject set out by nation, Egyptians, and by universality, all the Egyptians, supposed all able to digge and to the generality of them being ready to perish for thirst.

2. Their work, digging about the circuits of the river, which notes their looking downward unto earth to help them, and carryeth in it a denial of looking unto God.

3. The end or scope of it, To get water to drink, their necessity pressed them, therefore they spare no pains to get a little water.

4. The reason enforcing thereunto, Because they could not drink of the waters of the river, All readings to the same. — Of Nilus. Ar. Gods judgments in cursing the rivers hath no other effect, but to make them seek water in the earth. The Magicians could not help now.

Quest. Were all these hardned as Pharaoh was?

Ans. It seemes to be no otherwise.

1. There is no mention of sense of sin, or looking unto God by any of them.

2. None are expressed to mind Pharaoh of his duty.

3. All run to creature helps, and forsake God, these are sad symptoms.

And instruct us that,

D. 1. Vyng incantments with miracles acles is the next way to harden hearts.

D. 2. Hard hearts stop all eares against God.

D. 3. Wicked men will harden themselves though God hath given forewarnings of it. Ver. 22.

D. 4. Sinners offended with Gods word & judgments turn from him into their own wayes.

D. 5. Unbelief will not let a man set his heart either to miracles persuasive or vindictive. Ver. 23.

D. 6. In midst of straightning judgments, unbelief will rather dig in earth, than beg of God relief.

D. 7. It is usual, that universal hardning foregoeth universal distraction.

D. 8. Necessity pressing sinners near death, turns them to creature helps rather than to seek Gods.

D. 9. The devil may delude into straits but cannot help out of them. Ver. 24.

Ver. 25. 6. The last thing recorded about this first plague is the duration of it, And seven dayes were fulfilled after that Jehovah had smitten the river. Readings agree.

1. The term of connection knits this duration to the plague on the waters, and the Egyptians digging and toilsome labour.

2. The space of time for the first plague 7 dayes were completed in it.

3. The term whence the 7 dayes begin, after that Jehovah had smitten the river; wherein, that which was before expressed, that Aaron smote the river, here Jehovah owns it. Aaron did it visibly, but God powerfully turned all into blood.

Quest. Did this plague cease at 7 dayes end?

Ans. In all probability it might, however the sad effects continued after, and however neither Pharaoh did cry, nor, as we read, now Moses pray God to take away the plague; yet at the coming of the second plague, it was Gods will the first should cease.

We observe.

D. 1. Times of temporal judgment have their sint from heaven.

D. 2. God himself smites in all plagues what ever instruments he may use, Ver. 25. Moses and Aaron may smite with the rod but God effects it.

CHAP. VIII.

This Chapter continueth the history of the successive plagues, and prodigious works of God on Egypt, and the contents are a record of three plagues more, which divide the Chapter naturally into three parts.

1. The history of the second plague of Frogs from the waters. Ver. 1. 15.

2. The history of the third plague from the earth in lice. Ver. 16. 19.

3. The history of the fourth plague in flies swarming. Ver. 20. 32.

In the first general which contains the second plague, these three particular heads are obvious,

1. Gods warning of this plague coming. Ver. 1. 4.

2. Gods execution of it on them. Ver. 5. 6. 7.

3. The events of this plague various. Ver. 8. 15.

In the first head, of warning, we have,

1. Gods dispatch of Moses again unto Pharaoh after the 7 dayes ended, And Jehovah said unto Moses go unto Pharaoh. Readings are the same. And it is no more than God charged in former times, and afterward again; no difficulty in it.

2. Gods demand by Moses, And thou shalt say unto him, thus saith Jehovah, send away my people that they may serve me, that they may serve or Worship. Readings agree. This is the same given in fifth Chap. Ver. 1. And seventh Chap. Ver. 16. All is plain in this Ver. 1.

3. Gods threatening of him, wherein we have,

1. His sin supposed foregoing, And if thou refuse to send them away. Ver. 2.

If thou wilt not, &c. Sept. Onk. Syr. — Or refuse as Sam. Ar. &c. here.

in are supposed,

1. His unbelief.

2. The fruits of it in denying dismissal to Israel.

2. The plague threatened, about which observe.

1. The nature of the plague, Behold I will smite all thy borders with frogs, I am smiting. All readings agree. Herein.

1. A note of demonstration. Behold see, this is no phantasy that I declare.

2. The author of it, Jehovah himself, I will smite, or am smiting.

3. The object of it, the Egyptian territories.

4. The plague itself a smiting with frogs, A a a a frogs, creatures odious and loathsome to man; to cast contempt on Egypt. Ver. 2.

Ver. 3. 2. The rise of this plague, And the river shall abundantly bring forth frogs. Onk. and Syr. same. — Shall belch out or bubble up frogs, Sept. Sam. Herein note,

1. The rise is from the river, that is Nilus, in waters such creatures mostly live, so that this second plague was from the waters also.

צפרדעים 2. The increase, the word notes an abundant production, excessive. — Frogs shall abound out of Nilus, Ar. The word is used in the creation for a blessing. Gen. 1. 20. But here for a curse to Egypt.

3. The product frogs, great, ugly filthy creatures to plague that proud oppressing people.

3. The noisomnes of this plague and the hurtfulness of it, with its extent to plague the Egyptians, & that is observable in these steps and degrees.

Ver. 3. 1. They shall ascend and come into thy house. Readings agree. Now this was prodigious that such creatures which usually leap away from men, should now in an army come up out of the river and assault houses, and infect them with their noisomnes.

2. And into thy bed, chamber, and upon thy bed. Readings agree. Some only use the plural.

3. And into the house of thy servants. Readings agree. — Of thy Captains or chieftaines. Ar.

4. And upon thy people. Universal is the plague.

5. And into thy ovens, and into thy kneading troughs, or troughs of dough. Readings mostly to the same, — Bakers vessels. Ar. That is, these odious creatures came upon all their meat which they should eat to infect and make it noisome. Ver. 3.

Ver. 4. 6. And the frogs shall come upon thee, and upon thy people, and upon all thy servants. Readings are most to the same purpose. This last degree is most formidable, that such ugly creatures should attempt to crawl upon the very persons of men; whom otherwise they would fear and shun. V. 4.

Quest. Wherein was the grievousness of this plague above the former.

Ans. In several particulars.

1. In the addition of this unto the former.

2. In a general corruption of all meat and drink, the former were upon waters only.

3. This affected every sense, that but some only.

1. This afflicted the sight, to see such multitudes of noisome creatures.

2. Their hearing, with noise of croaking.

3. Their smelling, with their stench.

4. Their taste, in corrupting all their bread and meat.

5. Their touch, by crawling on them night and day, that they could neither lie down nor arise, nor walk, but these frogs would be leaping on their bodies.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Jehovah orders new dispatches unto his enemies upon their stubbornness.

D. 2. God doubles and troubles his demands upon his enemies to persuade them. Ver. 1.

D. 3. God items his adversaries against refusing his word or message.

D. 4. Gods goodness warneth sinners evidently before he brings vengeance on them.

D. 5. It is Gods worke to smite with frogs and plague sinners by his creatures. Ver. 2.

D. 6. At Gods word the waters which produce creatures to nourish, abound with creatures to destroy.

D. 7. Prodigious are the armies of frogs when God raiseth them. Houses and persons are easily overcome by poor frogs when God commands them. Ver. 3. 4. All this is thus farre threatned.

2. Gods command for execution now followeth, Ver. 5. 6. 7.

Wherein we have to note,

1. The command itself for execution, And Jehovah said unto Moses, &c. Readings mostly agree. Onk. Syr. same. — Bring forth frogs, &c. Sept. Sam. — Against the streams, &c. Ar. Herein observe.

1. The power commanding, Jehovah who would do it.

2. The instruments commanded, Moses unto Aaron.

3. The work commanded, to stretch forth his hand over or against the streams, &c.

4. The effect annexed, And because frogs to come up over the land of Egypt.

2. The execution, And Aaron stretched out, &c. Most readings agree. Sept. add's he brought forth, &c. Ar. wants (the frogs came up,) &c. Wherein are notable, 1. Aarons obedience. He stretched out, &c.

2. The event.

1. The frogs came up.

2. They

2. The y covered all the land of Egypt, as 70 read.

3. The opposition unto this by Pharaohs magicians which helped on the plague on Egypt but eased it not; And the magicians did so, &c. Syr. same. — Inchanters 70 Witches. Onk. — Doctors with their secrets. Ar Herein we have to note.

1. The actors, magicians as before.

2. Their work, they did so with their enchantments as Aaron did.

3. The event, frogs came up; &c. Quest. Were these really frogs raised by the magicians?

Answer. 1. Some deny it, and say they were but in shew, but then they did not so as Aaron did. 2. It is conceived by others that they were true frogs, which under Gods permission Satan might bring unto them, for this is possible and probable, and in nature as well as name they were frogs, so Moses calleth them.

Quest. Where did these magicians bring up frogs, seeing the land was covered already with them; or how could these be discerned from the rest?

Answer. 1. It is conceived that it must be in a place where none were; therefore it is supposed to be in Goshen. 2. In the manner, way, and place of production, these frogs might easily be discerned among the rest.

Quest. Did these frogs annoy Israel as the other the Egyptians?

Answer. No, for these plagues none of them can be thought to hurt Israel, but it is probable they added to the plague of the Egyptians with the rest, and they who raised them possibly could not remove them.

Quest. How might Gods work by Aaron be discovered from the devils by the enchanters?

Answer. 1. In priority of time God wrought first, the devil came after.

2. In manner of working, Aaron did it by stretching out his hand at Gods word, but the Egyptians by mutterings with the devils, such as their enchantments were.

3. By the powerful effect of Gods work on Egypt for vengeance; theirs could not hurt Israel.

4. God by his instruments did heal where he did hurt, so could not the magicians do.

This inform's us.

D. 1. Gods command for execution surely followeth that of his threatening. He dasheth not.

D. 2. Gods word is true in his vengeance, to make Moses a God, and Aaron an inflictor of it to Pharaoh.

D. 3. At Gods word execution of vengeance hath its extent and bounds. Ver. 5.

D. 4. Gods executioners are ready and obedient.

D. 5. Aarons arm stretched out with Gods word works mighty plagues.

D. 6. Ascend of loathsome creatures to the covering of the land of his enemies God effects to make them odious. Ver. 6.

D. 7. The devil by his instruments may find frogs, but can make none.

D. 8. God makes magicians (the devils instruments) to afflict his enemies, but not to ease them. Ver. 7.

3. The events now follow upon this plague from V. 8. to 15. Which are three.

1. Pharaohs intreaty of Moses. v. 18.

2. Moses his discourse by reply to Pharaoh. ver. 9. 10. 11.

3. Moses his intercession to God with its success. ver. 12. 13. 14.

4. Pharaohs further hardning. ver. 15.

In the first we have these particulars occurring.

1. Pharaohs call to Moses and Aaron, And Pharaoh called to Moses and Aaron, or Ver. 8.

for, and said, Readings are all to the same purpose. Herein.

1. The term of connection which knits this act unto the former judgment, And or then, that is, when Pharaoh saw that no dores nor locks could keep the frogs from crawling upon his meat and his body, that they came into his bed, and were ready to crawl into his mouth; this plague did so terrify, that now he yeelds to some terms of treaty; unto which formerly he was averse. He drove away Gods messengers before, now he calleth for them.

2. The matter connected which is the call, wherein,

1. The person calling, Pharaoh, now somewhat afflicted and awed by Gods judgments.

2. The persons called, Moses and Aaron, formerly despised and brow-beaten.

3. The call itself, which was likely by a messenger to hasten them to him, and so to cure him from the frogs. He called them or called for them.

A a a a 2

Pha

Ver. 8.

2. Pharaohs desire to them, supplicate or intreat Jehovah that he may (or) he will remove the frogs from me and my people. Readings agree. — Pray the Lord and let him take away round the frogs, &c. ἡ ἀφαιρέσις. Sept. Herein we have to observe these particulars.

1. Some sense of the judgment on him by frogs.

2. Some acknowledgment of Jehovah to be the cause of it. Therefore he desires them to go to him.

3. Some submission to his hand afflicting.

4. Some kind of faith that Jehovah could help him.

5. Some kind of prayer by others to him, that he and his people might be saved from the frogs.

Ver. 8.

3. Pharaohs promise to them upon the granting of this desire, And I will send away the people, and they shall sacrifice unto Jehovah. Readings do agree. Wherein he promiseth fairly the two things which God by Moses and Aaron demanded.

1. The liberty of their bodies and families to go out of his jurisdiction.

2. Liberty of conscience to worship God for time, place and manner according to his will. So that now God shall have his own inheritance, which formerly he denied; and here he doth but hypocritically grant it. Ver. 8.

Note hence.

D. 1. Where the first judgment moveth not, the second may make sinners yield.

D. 2. Vengeance makes wicked men call for Gods messengers, who have despised them.

D. 3. Gods judgments may work scornful oppressors to intreat the despised ministers of God.

D. 4. Jehovahs judgments may and will make proudest Potentates to acknowledge him.

D. 5. In the confession of the wicked God only can take away their judgments.

D. 6. Wicked oppressors themselves do acknowledge that mercy from Jehovah cometh by the prayer of his.

D. 7. Under sense of judgment persecutors may promise liberty of persons and consciences to the Church.

D. 8. Such forced promises are seldom made good by such oppressors. Ver. 8.

2. The next event is the discourse of Moses by way of reply unto Pharaoh. Ver. 9.

1. The concession of Moses unto him, And Moses said to Pharaoh glory over me. — Ver. 9. Appoint me when, &c. Sept. Vulg. — Aske for thee a miracle and set thee a time &c. Onk. — Make thy self judge over me. Conditio. — Desire for thee a time, &c. Syr. — Chuse for me, when, &c. Ar.

1. The connection notes the readines of Gods servants to answer the desires of their enemies.

2. The replier is Moses, who was made a God and set over Pharaoh by Jehovah, and under the almighty to order good or evil to him.

3. The reply itself. Glory over me, Which phrase hath perplexed interpreters. It is used in a bad sense against God, noting the creatures vaunting or boasting against him. Judg. 7. 2. Iſai. 10. 15. Yet most agree that it is a serious advice unto Pharaoh, though to severall senses. Some say, Take the honour to appoint when I shall pray. Others, glory that the froggs shall dye. Others, I will do thee this honour that God shall take away the frogs in the day, when thou shalt desire it. But these open not the phrase plainly. If it be carried in the way of serious advice, the sense seems more plainly this, Glory over or upon or in me. That you have an intercession to God, you have boasted yourself against Jehovah, and gloried in your magicians and despised me and Aaron Gods servants; now it is better for you to glory in God, and in any medatour that may go to God for you, glory therefore in me upon this account.

Quere. Whether this may not better be understood to be spoken ironically, glory over me to give him a sharpe item of his boasting against Jehovah and his instruments heretofore. Now vaunt yourself against me. The force of the phrase carrieth it to the worst sense.

2. The expostulation of Moses doth follow. When or against when shall I intreat for thee, and for thy servants and for thy people, to cut off the frogs from thee and from thy houses? Only in the river they shall remain. Readings are much to the same purpose though varying in some words.

In this expostulation which is read positively by some he giveth Pharaoh his choice.

1. Of the time for the frogs removal, and Israels dismissal; for this was promised to that, Israel should go, if the frogs were gone.

2. Of the means and extent of the mercy desired. When will you have me

וְיָגֵד

Ver. 9.

pray, and how farre to remove this plague.

3. He add's a limitation unto this cutting off the frogs, that they should be in the river only, even Nilus in stead of their fish. V. 9.

Ver. 10. 3. Pharaohs answer to Moses, And he said to morrow. All agree, Pharaoh sets the time to be on the morrow following.

Quest. Why did he put off the deliverance until the morrow?

Ans. Doubtles his desire was quickly to be delivered, but this delay seems to be about his promise of Israels dismissal.

2. Providence so ordered time that the work might appear to be more his.

4. The determination of Moses hereupon, where,

1. The desire granted. And he said be it according to thy word, which differs not in readings. — As thou hast said. Sept. Here are imported,

Ver. 10. 1. A divine determination to remove the plague.

2. A divine injunction as to Israels dismissal at the same time.

Ver. 10. 2. The end of the grant is proposed, That thou mayst know, that there is none like Jehovah our God. Onk. same. And others to the same sense. — There is not another besides the Lord. Sept. In this expression of the end are carried.

1. Pharaohs instruction to make him know better who Jehovah the God of the Hebrewes was.

2. Gods exaltation that he was an unparalleled being, and therefore only to be feared. Ver. 10.

Ver. 11. 5. The promise of Moses as to the event. And the frogs shall depart from thee and from thy houses, and from thy servants, and from thy people, only in the river they shall remain. Readings herein agree. A nd we have nothing here, but the same spoken before, now given under promise.

Quest. How could Moses so peremptorily say this?

Ans. 1. Not from any power or foresight of his own. 2. It was doubtles upon either the general or special discovery of God unto him that he would do this thing. Ver. 10.

We note.

D. 1. Gods servants are ready to help their oppressors in their misery.

D. 2. In doing good to the wicked it is but just to call them from vaunting against God to glory in him.

D. 3. Great sinners may have a time to have their boasting against God turned to their reproach. Ironically. Glory, &c.

D. 4. God in his providence may offer time and means of deliverance to his enemies to choose.

D. 5. In his removal of plagues from the wicked God makes his own limitations. Ver. 9.

D. 6. Under providence wicked men may choose such time of mercy that may justify God and condemn them.

D. 7. God condescends sometimes to the wicked to give them their desires.

D. 8. The end of such condescension is to make them know and glorify Jehovah above all. Ver. 10.

D. 9. From Gods mouth his Ministers may assure soules of the certain event of his promise.

D. 10. Deliverance for extent and limitation must be according to Gods promise. Ver. 11.

1. Now followeth the third event of the intercession of Moses and Aaron with God for Pharaoh, here note.

1. The egress from Pharaoh, And Moses went out and Aaron from Pharaoh. Readings to the same. The words are plain and note nothing but the departure of Moses and Aaron from Pharaoh. Ver. 12.

2. The intercession of Moses for him, And Moses cried unto Jehovah about the matter of the frogs which he had put upon Pharaoh. — For the end of the frogs or the determination of them as Pharaoh appointed. 70. — For the frogs. Syr. Ar. — For the frogs which he had agreed with Pharaoh. Vulg.

3. The nature of his intercession is a mighty cry unto Jehovah by faithful prayer which is the prevailing way.

2. The matter of his intercession, for the removal of the frogs which were set upon Pharaoh to plague him, as was formerly promised. V. 12.

3. The success of this intercession, see out.

1. Generally, And Jehovah did according to the word of Moses. Readings agree. Moses did according to the word of Pharaoh, and God doth according to the word of Moses in answering his desire. Ver. 13.

2. Specially, in these steps.

1. And the frogs died out of their houses. A a a a 3 2. Out

2. Out of the villages.
3. And out of the fields. Readings to the same. courts habitations, as some. The meaning is, they generally died upon the land. Ver. 13.

Ver. 14. 3. The issue of this, twofold.
1. And they gathered them together upon heaps. Heaps heaps. Hebr. Sept. Onk. Into many heaps. Syr.

2. And the land stank. They stank upon the land. Onk. Readings agree to the same sense, no difficulty.

Ver. 15. 4. The last event is Pharaohs further hardening, And Pharaoh saw that there was a breathing and he made his heart heavy and did not hearken to them as Jehovah had spoken. Readings to the same. Refreshing. Sept. Relation. Ar. Respite from that plague.

1. The occasion of this event. Pharaohs sense of the respite from the plague; how mercy and judgment may be abused!

2. The event itself, and that is a further hardening of his heart against God than before, now he grew more dull of hearing to God and his message, neither would he yield to make good his promise.

3. The end of this, it was to make good that which the Lord had spoken, he told Moses the issue beforehand, that he might not be offended. Ver. 15.

Quest. Why did not God remove all the frogs?

Answer. 1. His pleasure is the highest cause. 2. His wisdom was to keep in Pharaohs mind the judgments by the remnant left in the river, and the stink of the dead frogs in their nostrils.

Quest. What application doth the Spirit of God make of these frogs for our use?

Answer. To set forth the loathsome condition of those Romish emissaries which delude souls to bondage under spiritual Egypt. Revel. 16. 13. 14.

Observe We.

D. 1. Instruments of seeking God for the wicked had need to depart from them.

D. 2. Prayer may be made for those that are wickedly bent against the Church, not with them.

D. 3. Gods instruments do faithfully intreat for sinners according to promise to remove judgments. Ver. 12.

D. 4. God doth hear the prayer of them that for his glory are engaged. God doth the word of Moses.

D. 5. The death as well as life of judgments are at Gods dispose.

D. 6. Gods healing is as large as his judgments according to his word. Ver. 13.

D. 7. Heaps of memorials may be left to sinners after plagues removed.

D. 8. The stinke of plagues may remain, when the evil may be gone.

D. 9. A breathing from judgments pursuit God may allow the worst of enemies.

D. 10. Sense of such breathings hath occasioned sinners to abuse them.

D. 11. Neglect of every special judgment and deliverance works greater hardning.

D. 12. The word of the Lord is made good in the very hardning of sinners under judgment. Ver. 15.

2. The next general of this Chapter containeth the history of the third plague of Lice from ver. 16. to 19. Wherein we have to note,

1. Gods command for it, And Jehovah said unto Moses, say to Aaron stretch out thy rod and smite the dust of the land, and let it become lice in all the land of Egypt. Readings mostly agree. Only the word rendered Lice is variously translated. exipis — Sept. Ciniphes. Onk. Seyniphes. Sam. Vulg. pediculus. Syr. pediculi. Ar. Here in note,

1. The term of connection knitting this unto the former plague, without intermission or the giving warning of it, as in the former plagues, immediately upon Pharaohs hardning God commanded Moses to fall upon him again with another plague. And or then, &c.

2. The matter connected is Gods command for a third stroke at Pharaoh. Wherein,

1. The prime authority, Jehovah to Moses.

2. The substitute authority, Moses to Aaron.

3. The execution commanded, Aaron.

4. The matter enjoined him.

1. A signal act stretch forth thy rod. With thy hand 70.
2. The literal act, smite the dust of the land, that must be in the place where he stood, which should have influence over the land.

5. The issue of this injunction, And let it be Lice, or it shall be turned into Lice &c. This is the scope of this command.

Ver. 17. 2. The execution of this command, And they did so, and Aaron stretched out his hand with his rod, and smote the dust of the land, and there was a multitude of lice upon man and upon beast, all the dust of the land became lice in all the land of Egypt. Readings mostly agree in the letter. There were lice in the dust of the land. 70. In these the execution of Gods command is recorded, and immediately annexed thereunto.

1. It is generally reported, and they did so, that is both Moses and Aaron, did according to Gods injunction on them severally.

2. In special the execution by Aaron is here reported.

1. That he did stretch out his hand with his rod.

2. That he smote the dust of the land.

3. That it was turned into lice upon man and beast.

4. That this plague was universal throughout all the land of Egypt.

Quest. Whether this plague were of lice?

כנס Answer. The various conjectures about the word, Cimim and Cimem raiseth this queere, some rendering it Fleas, Gnats, worms, &c. But the best among the Hebrewes render the plural word Lice, and the singular a multitude of lice, we therefore pitch upon this, that these creatures were lice indeed, by which God plagued them, yea and strange ones too, in all probability being miraculously created.

Quest. Was not this ordinary that such creatures swarmed from the slime after the overflowing of Nilus?

Answer. Some Epicurean jettors at Scripture, suggest this from some historians, that it was ordinary in Egypt, therefore no miracle now; but this is fully answered.

1. In these customary annoyances several sorts of vermin came out of the slime, here but one.

2. In those, usually numbers of them, but in these infinite and extraordinary heaps.

3. In those the generation was from slime, in this the stretching out of the hand.

4. In those they came at the ordinary time and no otherwise; but these at another extraordinary season of the year.

Quest. Why did God plague them with lice?

Answer. 1. It is granted God might have created other creatures out of the dust now to plague them, but he will not.

2. To abate a proud Tyrant by the predominancy of so vile a creature.

3. To shew his power and providence in the being and use of such low creatures, not a louse can be, or crawl, or bite without his word, God made them odious with a lousy disease.

Quest. Why is it brought about by the stretching out of Aarons rod,

Answer. 1. It is Gods prerogative to use such signals. 2. It was to honour his despicable servants before Pharaoh. 3. It was arbitrary with God, for three other plagues came without stretching forth any hand either of Moses or Aaron, as in the 4th plague of swarms, ver. 24. The murrain. Exod. 9. 3. and the death of the first born. Exod. 12. 29.

Quest. Why did not God give them warning of this plague?

Answer. 1. He had warned in the first and second plagues. So again he doth in the 4th and 5th 7th and 8th, but of this third and sixth and 10th he warneth them not. 2. Gods justice herein is clear. He was bound to give no warning, yet he doth as he pleaseth to leave them without excuse.

It inform's us.

D. 1. Heart-hardning against Gods word foretelling, hastens Gods command for more plagues without warning.

D. 2. Jehovah sometimes commands his judgments to be wrought in order by his servants.

D. 3. God sometimes commands his signal acts to produce instruments, though he need none.

D. 4. Gods command for smiting dust is enough for his servants to smite men.

D. 5. At Gods word dust shall become lice to torment proud sinners. Ver. 16.

D. 6. Gods servants are obedient in executing his commands for vengeance.

D. 7. Upon obedience of faith God produceth the effects promised.

D. 8. All creatures are at Gods command to plague his enemies.

D. 9. The poorest creature armed by God hath power enough against greatest potentates.

D. 10. Prouddest persecutors may be subjected subjected to the power of lice to be destroyed. Ver. 17.

3. The event of this plague followeth, threefold.

Ver. 18. 1. The frustration of the magicians, And the magicians did so, or attempted so by their enchantments to bring forth lice and they could not; and there was a multitude of lice upon man and upon beast. Readings most agree. — They could not drive away the louse. Syr.

Two things are recorded here by Moses.

1. The impotency of Pharaohs magicians.

1. In their attempt, they also went with their rods to bring forth lice, as they had done frogs; by all their confederacy with the Devil, and worship of him by their enchantments.

2. In their frustration, when they had called up the Devils help, they could do nothing, so it is expressly said, they could not bring forth a louse.

2. The potency of Gods judgement, There was still a multitude of lice upon man and upon beast. Ver. 18.

Ver. 19. 2. The confession of the magicians unto Pharaoh, And the magicians said unto Pharaoh this is the finger of God. Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. same. — This plague is the face of God. Onk. — Such a strange thing is from God. Ar.

1. The subjects confessing, magicians astrologers.

2. The subject to whom, Pharaoh their Lord.

3. The confession, that the plague of lice was the finger of God; wherein they say.

1. That they had bin hitherto striving against God, and counterworking him, and he them.

2. That his finger was too hard for all their toins, that he was above them.

3. That they were superseeded and could do no more against him.

Ver. 19. 3. The last event is Pharaohs further hardning, And Pharaohs heart strengthened itself, and he hearkned not unto them as Jehovah had spoken. Readings mostly agree. — He heard not God. Sam. — As the Lord commanded. Vulg. This is the threefold hardning more under the third judgement.

1. The subject of it was Pharaoh, though God prevailed, and his magicians yeilded.

2. The work is hardning or making his heart strong against God, and Moses, though thus convicted.

3. The orderer is Jehovah, who foretold this would be the issue. It is corruptly translated by the Vulg. That the Lord commanded this hardning, then must he be the author of it.

Quest. Why could not the magicians produce lice as well as frogs?

Answer. 1. The lesse doubtles might have bin done as well as the greater in the same way under Gods permission. 2. God would not let Satan help them any further, but however he suffered and ordered them so farre; yet now he superseedes, other vain answers are suggested to no purpose.

Q. Why did not Pharaoh believe his own ministers?

Answer. 1. The root of bitterness within, which keeps its nature not withstanding strongest convictions. 2. The judgment of God upon him. 3. The fascination of him by Satan.

Quest. Why do the magicians call it Gods finger?

Ans. 1. Not out of any good understanding of him or respect to him. 2. They heard his name vouched by Moses and strove against him, therefore are now forced to confess the least of his power as the Philistines sometimes, and Pharaoh in the sea. 3. The Church confesseth Gods finger otherwise.

We observe.

D. 1. The Devil will try his utmost to counterwork God.

D. 2. The Devil is impotent upon the least check from God.

D. 3. Gods power sets on his judgments when the power of Satan fails. Ver. 18.

D. 4. The devils instruments are forced at last to say they are against God, and be against them.

D. 5. Gods finger or the least of his power makes the devil and his instruments fall.

D. 6. Innate unbelief loves to be kept up by liars, but will not yield, when they fall.

D. 7. Treble hardning comes on the wicked by treble judgments.

D. 8. Gods word faileth not which he hath spoken of the sin and judgement of wicked persecutors. V. 19.

3. The last general head of this Chapter now followeth from ver. 20. to the end containing the history of the 4th plague upon Egypt, which is stiled the plague of flies. Herein note,

1. The warning of it Ver. 20. 23.

2. The execution of it. Ver. 24.

3. The

Ver. 20.

3. The events of it various. V. 25. 32. in the first of these we have observable,

1. Gods command of Moses to prepare, in this passage, And Jehovah said to Moses rise early in the morning and stand before Pharaoh. Hev. morning it in the morning, behold he commeth out to the waters. Readings generally agree. Antevorte diluculo Syr.

1. The term of connection here knits this word of God to Pharaohs former hardning, God follows him close upon his sin.

2. The matter connected is Gods word to Moses, in all that followed. In this for preparation,

1. The authority commanding, Jehovah,

2. The subject commanded, Moses,

3. The matter of command injoy-ned Moses

השם
בבקר
1. His season, morning it very early, this word doth not properly signify to rise in the morning only; but all actions preparatory fit for that season.

2. His posture, stand or set thy self before Pharaoh.

3. The place pointed out to this preparation, behold he commeth to the waters. Hither, it seems, he made his morning walk, but thither Moses must go at Gods word.

2. God giveth him his instructions for his message, what he shall say to him.

Ver. 20.

1. By way of demand as formerly, And say thou to him, thus saith Jehovah send away my people that they may serve me. V. 20. All readings agree, only some read, Worship me. This is repeated here as before to require Gods right in Israel from Pharaohs usurpation. — In the wilderness. Sept. Ver. 20.

Ver. 21.

2. By way of threatening, Else or but if thou wilt not send away my people behold I will send upon thee and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, a mixt swarm a mixture of noisome beasts (as some) and the houses of the Egyptians shall be filled with the mixed swarm and also the land upon which they are. All readings agree in every thing beside the word ערב which notes mixture. — The dog-fly. Sept. — A mixture of beast. Onk. Ar. — All kind of flies. Samar. — Flies of all kinds. Syr. vulg. from Septuag. Aquila. λαμνα Hieron. Here note,

1. The sin supposed, But if thou wilt not, &c.

2. The plague hereupon threatned, about which,

1. The demonstration of it, Behold, see this.

2. The subject of it. 1. Thee. 2. Thy servants. 3. Thy people. 4. Thy houses. 5. The land.

3. The plague itself set out two ways.

1. In nature, a mixt swarm.

2. In measures, houses shall be full.

Quest. Why did Moses go to meet Pharaoh at the waters? as Ch. 7. v. 15.

Answer. 1. It is certainly Gods direction to him, therefore he must goe thither.

2. Probably it might be for more convenient speaking with him.

3. It might be to meet him in his sin as is conceived, that he resorted thither, either for his idolatry, or to exercise sorcery. However thither he was sent.

Quest. What is meant by this mixt swarm, which was the plague itself?

Ans. 1. The word signifieth any mixture, sometimes of things inanimate by which mixing, things are made savory; so it notes sweetnesses.

2. Of rational creatures, so it signifieth mixtures of several sorts of people. Whence Arabia. Ex. 12. 38. was thought to be named, as being a place where a mixed people dwelt.

3. Mixture of irrational creatures; in which sense it is taken here; but some understand it of greater beasts, as lions, bears, leopards, wolves, &c. Which is not so probable that their houses should be full of these, which doubtles would have devoured them, but more rationally it is meant of smaller creatures; and therefore conceived to be swarms of all sorts of flies, wasps, gnats, hornets, &c. By which God tormented Pharaoh and his servants at this time. Psal. 78. 45.

Ver. 21.

3. By way of discrimination. V. 22.

23. Wherein,

1. God promisseth these two gracious events to his.

1. Sequestration of the habitation of Israel from their plagues, and therein two particulars occur,

1. The promise itself, And I will greatly glorify the Land, &c. Wherein there shall not be a dog-fly. Sept.

— I will divine in that day, &c. Wherein my people dwelleth, &c. Onk.

— There shall not be there all kinds of flies. Sam. — I will distinguish the land, &c. Syr. — I will make the land of Goshen wonderful. Vulg.

the nature of the promise is a marvellous separation of grace selecting and setting apart from evil; the word is emphatical.

2. The object of it, the land of Goshen, wherein Israel dwelt, all their habitations, where they stand, which word here and Ch. 9. 28. notes to stay by Pharaoh, and a dwelling.

3. The event of this separation

Bbbbbb that that no flies should be found there to afflict Israel.

2. The end of making this promise, Ver. 22. To the end that thou mayst know that I am Jehovah in the midst of the earth. Sam. Syr. same. Lord of all the earth. Septuag. Lord ruler, &c. Onk. God the Prince, &c. Ar. That I am Lord in the midst, &c. Vulg. In this general proposal of the end note,

1. The subject to whom it is directed, Pharaoh an obstinate and unbelieving persecutor to convince him or make him know something of God by this act.

2. The end itself, the making known of him to be Jehovah, that is, he that can make judgment and mercy to be where he pleaseth, though out the earth, such discriminating providences as these do clear it up. Ver. 22. Earth is better then the single land of Egypt.

2. God promiseth the redemption of his people, And I will set redemption between my people and thy people. Sam. the same. And I will give a distinction, &c. Sept. Syr. Vulg. Redemption on my people and upon thy people. I will bring a plague. Onkel. I will cause liberty for my people, &c. Ar.

פְּרָטָה 1. The matter promised Redemption; the word notes freedom from guilt and plague. And this redemption should be as a wall between Israel and the Egyptians. Some take the word, metonymically for the sign of redemption in the visible work; but it may well be taken in propriety, for redemption itself from that plague. Psal. 111. ver. 9.

2. The stating of it, I will put or set it, that is firmly effect it.

3. The subject of it, Gods own people with the exclusion of all the Egyptians; Israel alone is here singled out.

2. God stateth the time, when this plague on Egypt and mercy on Israel shall be executed, By tomorrow shall this sign be. All readings agree here, Wherein we may note,

1. Respite given to Pharaoh until the morrow.

2. Determination of the plague, then without farther delay.

3. The whole event foretold. This sign or miracle in plaguing Egypt & redeeming Israel shall be surely at this time. Ver. 23. All this is Gods warning by Moses.

Quest. Did not God distinguish between Israel in Goshen and the Egyptians before this time?

Ans. 1. It is safely so presumed that he saved them in all, for by all these he wrought their deliverance. 2. In this and some other plagues this distinction is made more expresse; that all the Egyptians might observe the discriminating providence of God and be left without excuse.

Whence we conclude.

D. 1. Retterated unbelief and hardning, God followeth close with renewed plagues.

D. 2. God will have all his ministers early stirring to meet his adversaries.

D. 3. God fits time and place best to deal with and reprove his enemies.

D. 4. Multiplied demands doth God make of his right to his Church to oppressors. Ver. 20.

D. 5. God repeats threatnings as often as sinners doe their rebellions.

D. 6. Mixt swarms of flies, or armies of venomous creatures God hath to set against persecutors.

D. 7. Kings and people, houses and lands shall suffer together in their rising against God.

D. 8. Fulnes of vengeance falleth on houses and people that are full of sin. Ver. 21.

D. 9. It is Gods only prerogative in pouring out judgments to discriminate between men and men.

D. 10. The habitations of Gods own people are sequestred from judgments sometimes when others perish.

D. 11. Neither fly nor creature shall touch them for hurt whom God secures.

D. 12. Such discrimination God makes that his enemies may know him to be Jehovah; to put in being mercy and judgement in the earth. Ver. 22.

D. 13. In the day of Gods discrimination, redemption shall be set for his people, and destruction for his enemies.

D. 14. The people of God and people of worldly powers are at a great distinction. D. 15.

D. 15. Gods goodness may give to the worst of sinners here space to repent.

D. 16. The day of their judgment is set, and cannot be defer'd. Ver. 23.

Ver. 24.

2. The execution of this plague now followeth, And Jehovah did so, and there came a grievous mixt swarm into the house of Pharaoh, and into the house of his servants, and into all the land of Egypt; the land was corrupted by reason of the mixed swarm. The land was destroyed, &c. Septuagint. The Samaritan makes a long preface to this, that Moses and Aaron came to Pharaoh and delivered all this message which God sent before the plague was executed; but it is not so in the Hebr. Onkel. is as the Hebr. Very many beasts and the whole country of Egypt was corrupted with beasts. Ar. grievous flies, &c. Syr. and Vulg. No real difference about the matter in reading. Here we may note these particulars,

The execution, and therein,

1. The agent himself Jehovah, here is no Moses and Aaron with their rod, no signal act at all.

2. The act, he did so, that is, by his word effect all that he had threatned by Moses, he commanded these swarms to come, and they came at his word. Psal. 105. 3.

2. The event is twofold.

1. The irruption of all these mixed swarms. And there came a grievous mixed swarm. All sorts of flies, wasps, hornets, gnats, &c. These fell upon the house of Pharaoh and the houses of his servants, & all the land of Egypt; these doubles stung and annoyed man and beast.

2. The corruption of the land by reason of them, The land was corrupted or destroyed by reason of the mixed swarm; that is men and beasts were hurt, and destroyed by them; or from the face of the mixed swarm.

Quest. Why did not God bring this plague by the hand and rod of Moses and Aaron as before?

Answer. 1. To shew that however God at his pleasure use means, yet hereby he would shew that he is not bound to them. 2. He deal's here immediately, as in two other following plagues; to let Pharaoh know that he strove with God and not with men, murrain. Ex. 9. 3. Death of first born. Exod. 12. 29.

D. 1. Jehovah himself pleads sometimes in vengeance against his enemies without instruments.

D. 2. The Lord effects the judgment foretold upon the wicked in its time, manner and measure.

D. 3. When God speaks the words, swarms of flies shall set upon Kings and servants houses.

D. 4. It is a grievous plague when God armes flies against Princes & powers. Wis. 16. 9.

D. 5. Corruption and destruction follow upon man and beast from the irruption of Gods swarm.

D. 6. Towers of the world perish from the face of a fly when God giveth commission.

3. The events of this plague do now follow,

1. A partial yeelding of Pharaoh. Ver. 25. 29.

2. A cessation of the plague by Moses. ver. 30. 31.

3. A further hardning of Pharaoh. Ver. 32.

1. as to Pharaohs partial yeelding we have recorded two steps of it here by Moses.

1. He yeeld's them liberty of conscience to serve their God in the land, against which Moses excepted.

1. His proposal, wherein occurre these particulars,

1. His call for Moses and Aaron. And Pharaoh called for Moses and Aaron. Ver. 25.

He called Moses and Aaron, Sept. Onk. and the rest the same. Here,

1. The connection knits this close to the execution, when Pharaoh feel's the sting of the flies, immediately he calls out.

2. The matter here connected which consists,

1. In his accession for Moses and Aaron, he calleth earnestly for them.

2. In his permission of them to serve God, And he said go ye, sacrifice to your God in the land. Readings agree. Here note,

1. Their liberty yeelded, go sacrifice to your God, here he gives liberty of conscience.

2. Their limitation prescribed, as to the place. Do it in the land of Egypt. Ver. 25.

2. The answer of Moses to him, which is,

1. By urging the irregularity of such service, And Moses said it is not meet to do so for we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians to Jehovah our God. It is not possible so to be done. Sept. Abomination. We cannot do so. Sam. and Ar. same. We shall slay the creature which the Egyptians worship &c. Onk. Herein,

B b b b b 2 crea.

1. The iniquity of that license is urged, it is not right, or meet, or just, nay not pollible for us, we cannot rightly do so.

2. The reason of that reply we shall sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians.

1. Actively taken i. notes the abomination of the Egyptians unto God; their rites.

2. Passively, that which is abominable to the Egyptians, we shall offer to Jehovah, as oxen and sheep, &c. Now either of these it is not meet for us to do; we cannot do it, both manner and matter of sacrifice is here meant.

Ver. 26. 2. By urging the danger of doing this in the land. So shall we not sacrifice the abomination of the Egyptians before their eyes and will they not stone us? Sam. Onk. Ar. same. — We shall be stoned. Sept. — They will stone us. Syr. and Vulg. Herein.

1. The term of demonstration holds out the danger.

2. This act granted, is supposed, if we shall sacrifice so in the land.

3. The danger feared, will they not stone us? They will surely stone us and we shall expose ourselves to this danger. Ver. 26.

Ver. 27. 3. By giving a peremptory resolution, We will go three days journey into the wilderness and sacrifice to Jehovah our God as he shall say unto us, or hath said unto us. All readings are to the same purpose.

1. The resolution of Moses is twofold.

1. As to their place and motion, We will go, &c.

2. As to the work, we will sacrifice there &c.

2. The reason of it is Gods word and prescription for his work, which he had given already, and which further he should give unto them. Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 2. He yeelds them liberty of their persons with some limitations also, wherein notes,

1. His grant And Pharaoh said I will send you away and ye shall sacrifice to Jehovah your God in the wilderness. Readings agree.

1. The form connecting knits this grant to the resolution of Moses, while Pharaoh was under this plague; he had thought to satisfy God to let Israel worship him with pollution in his land, but when he seeth that will not serve, and the plague lieth hard on him, he yeeldeth further to Moses.

2. The matter connected, his concession.

1. Their dismissal promised.

2. Their work indulged, ye shall sacrifice.

3. The place also allowed which was required, even the wilderness.

4. The limitation of this grant. Only or yet ye shall not remove farre in your going, i. e. ye shall not remove very farre away. Sept. Readings do most agree, That they must not go farre in the wilderness; he would still hold them within his reach.

2. His request. Intreat ye for me. Readings agree. — To the Lord. Sept. Herein he declares himself overcome, and therefore, under the plague, intreats intercession from Moses unto God for him; All was to take away the plague, but not his sin. Ver. 28.

3. The reply of Moses unto this grant of his,

1. By way of promise. And Moses said behold I go out from thee, and I will intreat Jehovah, and the mixed swarm shall depart from Pharaoh, from his servants and from his people to morrow. Readings differ not, but as before about the word swarm, &c.

1. The undertaker here is Moses, so warranted by God.

2. The undertaking for Pharaoh by promise, which is,

1. His egress, behold I go forth from thee. See I am ready to dispatch your desire.

2. His intercession promised, I will intreat Jehovah, by prayer for thee.

3. His successe, The mixed swarm shall depart from Pharaoh, &c. to morrow.

1. The remedy assured, They shall depart.

2. The time stated, To morrow.

Quest. How could Moses set that time?

Answ. 1. Not vainly from his own Spirit. 2. But by a clear and full discovery of Gods mind to hear and answer him.

2. By way of caution unto Pharaoh. But or only let not Pharaoh adde to deceive in not sending away the people to sacrifice to Jehovah. — Do not adde to deceive, &c. Sept. — To lye any more. Onk. — Repeat his mocking. Ar. do not thou further deceive, &c. Vulg. Sam. and Syr. as Hebr.

1. The solemnity or seriousness of this item, but, yet only, a term admonishing.

2. The matter of the item, against deceiving, lying, and mocking God, about the dismissal of his people; this was given before the plague was removed. Thus farre is declared the first event, which was Pharaohs concession with the accessories to it. Ver. 29.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Incumbent destination upon the wicked from God, makes them hastily hastily call to Gods servants for help.

D. 2. Wicked wretches yeelding to God under his plagues are loath to give him all his desire.

D. 3. Persecutors in allowing liberty of Conscience to Gods Church, eye it to some desilements, as Pharaoh Israel to Egyptian pollution. Ver. 25.

D. 4. It is iniquity to act Gods worship in place or manner inconsistent with Gods will.

D. 5. Gods worship must not savour of the abomination of Idolators.

D. 6. Idolators abominat the true worship of God.

D. 7. Idolators do not only abhorre Gods true worship, but persecute it unto death.

D. 8. Justly do Gods servants refuse to expose Gods worship to such scorn and cruelty of men. Ver. 26.

D. 9. It becomes Gods ministers to be resolute for Gods worship after Gods mind.

D. 10. Gods Word and command is the only rule of worship to be observed, not the will of powers on earth. Ver. 27.

D. 11. Will they nill they God will make persecutors yeeld to his demands for worship.

D. 12. In Gods over-powering plagues, yet the wicked would limit him in his demands.

D. 13. Persecutors would not have the Church farre out of their power.

D. 14. Plagues make the wicked beg the prayers of Gods servants whom they do oppresse.

D. 15. Removal of plagues and not of sins is the desire of the wicked. Ver. 28.

D. 16. Gods servants are ready to help the persecutors in their misery.

D. 17. Intercessions and prayers do the righteous make to remove plagues from the wicked.

D. 18. Gods gracious ones do not seek the face of God in vain for removing plagues from sinners, when ever God promiseth it.

D. 19. Gods faithfull ministers do not only pray for the wicked, but give items to them against sin.

D. 20. Where prayers are heard, items against sin must be observed. Ver. 29.

2. The next event is the cessation of the plague upon the intercession of Moses. Ver. 30: 31. Here,

1. The work of Moses. And Moses went out from Pharaoh and prayed to Jehovah or intreated Jehovah. Readings are to the same purpose, only some read God, some Lord, some Jehovah. Here only are recorded,

1. The dispatch of Moses to perform his word, He went out.

2. The work performed, He intreated the Lord, doubtles in faith and with efficacy.

2. The answer of God. And Jehovah did according to the word of Moses, and he removed the swarm from Pharaoh, from his servants and from his people, there remained not one. Readings agree, but only about the word swarms, the summe of Gods answer is the removal of the plague expressed.

1. Generally, God did according to the word of Moses.

1. The word of promise which he made from God.

2. The word of prayer which he made to God.

2. Specially, wherein are enumerated,

1. Help to Pharaoh.

2. To his servants.

3. To his people.

3. Totally, the cure is expressed, there was not aly left at that time in Egypt of all these swarms which were upon them. Ver. 31.

Whence we note.

D. 1. Gods servants do not only promise but perform to the worst of men.

D. 2. Gods gracious ones are mighty intercessors to God for sinners. Ver. 30.

D. 3. God sailes not to do according to what his servants speak from him, and to him.

D. 4. God removes swarms of judgments

Bbbbb 3

mms

ments when his servants pray to him.

D. 5. Princes and people are healed as well as plagued together.

D. 6. Wonderful healing God giveth, as wonderful vengeance, according to the word of his Prophets, not a fly left of all these swarms. Ver. 31.

Ver. 31. 3. The last event is Pharaoh's four-fold hardning. And Pharaoh made his heart heavy at this turn also and he sent not away the people. Readings agree, onely some read hardned, some made heavy, which are to the same.

1. The term of connection knits this to Gods healing.
2. The matter connected is,
 1. His hardning, where,
 1. The agent, Pharaoh.
 2. The act, made heavy.
 3. The object, his heart.
 4. The reason, this time or turn also which was the fourth plague removed.
2. His rebellion: He sent not the people away as he had promised; but did keep them captive.

Learn we.

D. 1. Fourfold plagues occasion fourfold hardning on the wicked.

D. 2. The wicked harden themselves at all times.

D. 3. Rebellion against God in his people is the perpetual consequent of heart hardning. Ver. 32.

CHAP. IX.

In this chapter Moses proceedeth to the history of other judgments executed on Pharaoh, which are three more here contained, and these divide the chapter into three parts.

1. The history of the plague upon beasts. Ver. 1, 7.
2. The history of the boil upon man and beast. Ver. 8, 12.
3. The history of the plague of hail. Ver. 13, 35.

In the first of these we have to observe,

1. The warning of the fifth plague. Ver. 1, 5.
 2. The execution of it. Ver. 6.
 3. The events following. Ver. 7.
- In the first of these we have to observe,

1. Gods demand by Moses from Pharaoh. And herein may be considered.

1. The commission, And Jehovah said to Moses. All readings agree, Go into Pharaoh and speak to him. Here all is plain.

1. The power authorizing, Jehovah.
2. The subject authorized, Moses.
3. The commission, go in to Pharaoh and speak, &c.

2. The charge given to him again to make Gods demand of Israel from him, Thus saith Jehovah the God of the Hebrews send away my people that they may serve me. Not to the waters here, but where ever he was. Readings are to the same purpose.

God of the Jews. Onk. — And they shall worship. Syr. — Adore. Ar. — Sacrifice. Vulg. God owns the despised Hebrews.

This is the same demand which God made by plagues before, and now he repeat's it with a 5th to make an obstinate sinner yield God his own, if yet he will hearken.

Note we.

D. 1. God followeth the proudest sinners with new messages when they break faith with him.

D. 2. Gods powerful works giveth entrance unto Kings, and is not resisted.

D. 3. God still owns his despised Church.

D. 4. God doth demand his right in his Church as often as persecutors do deny it. Ver. 1.

2. Gods threatening of him, wherein we have,

1. His sin supposed, For if thou refuse to send away, and still thou do hold them, or keep thy hand yet upon them. Readings to the same. The sin supposed is the denial of Gods demand.

1. If thou deny dismissal of them.
2. If thou hold them, and have them in bondage still. Ver. 2.

2. The plague threatened. Behold the hand of Jehovah upon thy cattle, which are in the field, upon the horses, upon the asses, upon the Camels, upon the Oxen and upon the Sheep a very grievous murrain, or Plague, Onk. Sam. Vulg. same. — A very great death. Sept. a very grievous mortality, Syr. Pestilence, Ar. Wherein note,

1. The term of demonstration to notify the evil coming upon Egypt.
2. The evil itself demonstrated, set out,
1. In its cause. The hand of Jehovah vah and that in vengeance and indignation. An almighty hand making evil to come on sinners. No hand of Moses.

2. In the effect, a very grievous plague, or murrain, as it is rendered, with respect to beasts; it is styled a pestilence among them, which brought a very grievous mortality on them.

3. In its object, which is all sorts of cattle.

1. Generally so named.
2. Specially noted. Horses, asses, camels, oxen and sheep. Ver. 3.

We observe.

D. 1. Gods goodness abounds in letting obstinate sinners know the danger of keeping sin.

D. 2. Gods security is great, threatening such as refuse his word and hold their sin. Ver. 2.

D. 3. God declares to the wicked what evil they must expect persevering in their obstinacy.

D. 4. Gods hand immediately is put forth in vengeance at his pleasure to terrify enemies.

D. 5. The sins of persecutors sometimes God plagueth in their very cattle.

D. 6. Murrain or deadly plagues among beasts is the dreadful work of Gods own hand. Ver. 3.

Ver. 4.

3. Gods discrimination of his people from the Egyptians in this plague also, And Jehovah shall wonderfully divide between the cattle of Israel and between the cattle of the Egyptians, and there shall not any thing dye of all that is the sons of Israel. Readings to the same purpose. Onk. Sept. not one of the sheep. Syr. — The Lord shall do wonderful things. Vulg.

1. The act of providence is here set out, both in the nature of it, discrimination between cattle, and in the wonder of it, so the word notes, God shall do wonderfully in this discrimination.

2. The effect in grace upon Israel, not one sheep, nor any thing that could be spoken of died among them. All was kept alive.

Quest. Doth God always so discriminate between his enemies and people in his judgments.

Ans. 1. It is safely presumed that God did make this difference in all these plagues on Egypt. 2. As to the matter of judgment for killing cattle, &c.

God separates at his pleasure, so he tried Job. 3. as to the form and end of affliction, God always makes a difference, it is to one to salvation, to the other to destruction. This God doth to this day.

Whence we learn.

D. 1. Signal judgments of God to the wicked are set with discrimination to Gods people.

D. 2. Gods work's wonderfully sometimes to secure his from the plagues of the wicked.

D. 3. God hath his election and reprobation among beasts, securing one, and destroying another.

D. 4. Such severing among beasts by God is upon the account of men chosen or rejected.

D. 5. Israel and Egypt are the subjects of Gods discrimination in the world.

D. 6. Life and death of all creatures is in Gods hand.

D. 7. Not the life of a beast is in danger, when God takes the protection of it. Ver. 4.

4. Gods determination of the time of this judgment is the last thing in the warning piece, And Jehovah put a set time saying to morrow will Jehovah do this thing in the land. This word. — God gave a bound, Sept. Readings are to the same purpose, onely some read word and some thing; it notes the effect which God was resolved to work.

Ver. 5.

1. Here is recorded a generall narration. Jehovah set a fixed time for the plague.

2. A special determination, To morrow, &c.

Quest. Why did God give this time to one who he knew would not obey him?

Answer. 1. To leave sinners without excuse. 2. To glorify his justice in his proceedings; that he gave space to repent, but Pharaoh would not.

Note we.

D. 1. The patient God at last sets a time for sinners, when he will bear no longer.

D. 2.

D. 2. The morrow hath bin the time for Gods reckoning with sinners and may be now. Ver. 5.

In the second head which is the execution, these particulars occur to observation.

Ver. 6.

1. That Jehovah did as was foretold, And Jehovah did this thing on the morrow. Readings agree. Onely the Samaritan repeats all the former words as spoken by Moses and Aaron to Pharaoh, before the execution, which doubtles they did, though in the Heb. it is not. Here are these particulars.

1. The agent, Jehovah himself immediately.

2. The act, he did, or executed what he said.

3. The object, the very thing threatened, which was the bringing of the deadly plague on their cattel.

4. The time, on the morrow as was foretold.

2. The consequent was as formerly spoken.

Ver. 6.

1. And all the cattel of the Egyptians died. All readings to the same purpose, no difference in the words.

Ver. 6.

2. But of the cattel of the children of Israel died not one. All readings to the same sense, no difficulty in the words.

Quest. Why did God now plague the Egyptians in their cattel?

Ans. 1. It is conceived by some that they had formerly destroyed the Israelites cattel. 2. It was certainly to smite the Egyptians in their helps, which were to sustain them. 3. It was in order to shew, that if this did not work, God would come upon themselves, and this was an earnest of it.

Quest. How could all the cattel of the Egyptians dye?

Ans. No more is intended by that universal particle all the cattle, then genera singulorum, not singula generum, some of all kind or sorts of cattle, but not every individual.

Note.

D. 1. God faileth not to execute judgment as well as mercy as he hath spoken.

D. 2. God keeps his stated time for judgment on the wicked as was foretold.

D. 3. Where God smites according to his word creatures shall dye.

D. 4. Where God puts difference creatures shall live.

D. 5. Gods word for mercy is exactly fulfilled as for judgment. Ver. 6.

In the third head are the events following this execution of the 5th plague on Egypt, which is twofold.

1. Pharaohs inquiry into the truth of the event on Israel, And Pharaoh sent and behold there was not one dead of the cattel of Israel, even unto one. The readings are to the same sense, only the Sept. Pharaoh seeing that none of the cattel of Israel was dead, the heart, &c.

1. Pharaohs inquisition. He sent messengers doubtes to see and inquire.

2. The return, there was not a beast dead which belonged to the children of Israel.

2. Pharaohs hardning hereupon, And the heart of Pharaoh made itself heavy, and he sent not away the people. Readings agree.

1. Hardning is the prime event or making his heart heavy upon this discriminating judgment.

2. Rebellion against Gods demand, he sent not away the people.

Quest. Did Pharaoh never send before?

Ans. 1. Probably he might not, either out of his blindness or wilfulness; 2. If he did, this add's more to his condemnation, that after sight of discriminating judgments so often, yet he persists in hardning against God.

It instructs us.

D. 1. Providence orders wicked men to inquire whether Gods word be true in judgment and mercy.

D. 2. Providence answers mens inquiry, that his word shall stand in life or death.

D. 3. Such demonstrative providences are occasion of greater hardning to sinners.

D. 4. Malignous wickednes hardens men against such eminent works of God.

D. 5. Aggravated rebellion followeth such heart hardning in the wicked. Ver. 7.

2. The next general is the history of the 6th plague sent upon Pharaoh after his 5th fold hardning of his heart against Gods judgments. And this is of the boil upon man and beast wherein these 3 heads are observable.

1. Gods preparation for this by his command. Ver. 8. 9.

2. The

2. The execution of it by his instruments. Ver. 10.

3. The events following on magicians and Pharaoh. Ver. 11. 12.

In the first are considerable these two heads,

1. Gods command to his instruments. Ver. 8. Herein,

1. The term connecting, And or then, that is upon his former hardning without any more warning, God giveth order for another plague immediately to follow upon the former, see Exod. 8. 16.

2. The matter connected, wherein also,

1. The authority bespoken, Jehovah.

2. The instruments bespoken, Moses and Aaron.

3. The speech itself which is a double command.

Ver. 8.

1. Take to you your handfulls of the ashes of the furnace. No real difference in readings. Some read ashes of the furnace, some of the Chimney. So some render your hands full, others as much as your hands can hold, to the same purpose. This command concern's them both, they were to fill all their hands with ashes of the furnace. No difficulty.

Ver. 8.

2. The next command, And let Moses sprinkle it towards the heavens, in the eyes of Pharaoh. Readings agree. The 70 adde, And before his servants.

1. Here Moses is commanded only, so God will do.

2. His worke, to scatter the ashes heaven-ward, which might note whence this plague was to come.

3. His special order, to do it in the sight of Pharaoh. The words are plain, God will have Pharaoh see what Moses could do from him. Ver. 8.

Ver. 9.

2. Gods prediction of the event hereupon, twofold.

1. And it shall be small dust upon all the land of Egypt. Readings the same, onely some read this in the former verse, others in the beginning of this 9th, as in the Hebrew, this is the first transmutation of the ashes, the issue of fire, into dust.

Ver. 9.

2. And it shall be upon man and upon beast to a boil breaking forth with scalding blains in all the land of Egypt. Readings much to the same. Onely about the phrase noting the plague, the 70 read boils, soars, or botches.

A mangee bringing forth swellings. Onk. —. An ulcer breeding tumors. Sam. —. Breaking forth and boiling. Ar. —. An ulcer of tumors. Syr. Boils and rising botches, as Vulg. A boil breaking forth with scalding blains or blisters or bringing forth tumors, swellings. This word is noted to be used no where but about this plague of Egypt, conceived to be an extraordinary and incurable boile. Deut. 28. 27. We have here to note,

1. The plague, a dreadful botch or swelling.

2. The object of it, man and beast, therefore all the beasts were not formerly destroyed.

3. The extent of it thorough all the land. E'ak. —. Revel. 6. 2.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Vpon former warnings despised God falls suddenly on the wicked with vengeance unawares.

D. 2. Though God can plague his enemies without instruments, yet sometimes he will use them.

D. 3. God gives command out of the ashes to bring sferie plagues on the wicked sometimes, at his pleasure.

D. 4. Hands full of ashes are to note full measure of vengeance on Gods enemies.

D. 5. Signal actions (as here the sprinkling ashes) God sometimes useth for men to see and fear.

D. 6. God can make ashes dust, and dust boils, to plague his enemies.

D. 7. God foretells his servants that his command obeyed shall not be in vain.

D. 8. Man and beast are joined together in plagues, when sinners are not warned by smiting beasts alone.

D. 9. God giveth out threatnings of judgment for manner and measure as he will.

D. 10. The botch or blain on Egypt is a memorable plague. God appropriats it. Ver. 9.

In the second head which is the execution, note,

1. The obedience of Moses and Aaron in these particulars.

1. And they tooke ashes of the furnace. Ver. 10. Readings agree and the words are plain. This answers Gods first command unto them. He took. Sept.

2. And they stood before Pharaoh. All Ver. 10. readings have this, but onely the 70. This answers Gods word to do his work before Pharaoh himself.

3. And Moses sprinkled it toward the heavens. Readings concur, this answers Gods command also expressly.

C c c c c

2. The

Ver. 10.

2. The issue in the execution of the plague. And it was a boil bringing forth blains upon man and upon beast. — Burning on men and beasts. Sep. — Breaking out upon, &c. Ar. — It fled upon men, &c. Syr. — And there were made boils swelling in man, &c. Vulg. This issue answers Gods former prediction of the plague in all particulars noted before.

And instructs us.

D. 1. Exact obedience must Gods instruments give as to matters and actions in executing Gods plagues.

D. 2. Exact performance doth God make of his word upon obedience of his servants in plaguing his enemies.

D. 3. Man and beast in Egypt are the memorials of Gods faithfulness in his vengeance. Ver. 10.

In the third head we have these two events.

Ver. 11.

1. Upon the magicians thus expressed, And the magicians could not stand before Moses because of the boyl, for the boyl was upon the magicians, and upon all the Egyptians. Readings agree to the main, only the several naming of the magicians, which are rendered forcerers; witches, doctors, wizards, &c. The names have bin touched here before.

1. It is supposed that Pharaoh tried still to counterwork God by forcerers.

2. It is expressed that the plague of boil and ulcer fell upon them & upon Pharaoh; now God toucheth him and his servants in their flesh.

3. It is evident that none of them were able to stand before Moses, nor work any longer, no not by the help of the Devil himself, Gods hand was now so heavy upon them. This is the event on them, they are vanquished. Ver. 11.

Ver. 12.

2. The other event is on Pharaoh, And Jehovah made strong the heart of Pharaoh and he hearkned not unto them as Jehovah had said unto Moses, or spoken. — Ordered to Moses, Sept. All other readings to the same scope. This event is a sixfold hardening of Pharaoh.

1. The author of it is Jehovah in vengeance giving him up to his own lust.

2. The event, his heart grew fixe times stronger and more stubborn against God.

3. The consequent, he hearkned not to Moses and Aaron for dismissing Israel.

4. The rule of this proceeding, Gods word to Moses, God so foretold and so it came to passe. Ver. 12.

Learn we.

D. 1. Expertence of the Devils helplesnes against God, will not perswade the wicked to desist from him.

D. 2. Gods boyl shall come upon these wicked instruments, do the Devil what he can against it.

D. 3. All Satans instruments are vanquished at the appearance of Gods plague. Ver. 11.

D. 4. The great God observes and judgeth to obdurate sinners, who harden themselves against his judgments.

D. 5. Obduration from Gods giving men up to their own lusts makes them more to stop, their ears, and turn their hearts, from his word.

D. 6. Gods foreseeing, and foresaying, order (or limit) the issues of rebellion in the wicked against himself. Ver. 12.

To this the Spirit alludes as to spiritual Egypt. Revel. 16. 11. — There is the like effect upon those forcerers of Rome spiritual, boyles come upon them whence they blaspeme the Spirit of God.

The last head general of this Chapter is the history of the seventh plague which God sent upon Egypt. Whereabout three particulars considerable.

1. The word of warning about it. ver. 13. 21.

2. The word of command for execution. Ver. 22. 26.

3. The events following thereupon. Ver. 27. 35.

In the first, which is the warning word are three things.

1. A word of demand, requiring Pharaoh on the seventh plague and before it come, to dismiss Israel out of bondage. Here we may note,

1. The authority charging, Jehovah. Ver. 13.

2. The person charged, Moses.

3. The charge itself.

1. To be early up.

2. To present himself to Pharaoh.

3. To deliver his message. Thus faith, &c. The same have bin opened. Ver. 1. Of,

Of this Chap. and ver. 20th of the former, and therefore no need of further dealing on them here, only from the connection of this to the former, and from the order of time something may be noted. As,

D. 1. God pursueth persecutors early, in multiplyng his plagues upon their rebellions against him.

D. 2. Seven times, yea and seven, will God demand his Church out of oppressors hands, untill he deliver them. Ver. 13.

1. A word of threatening, to second his demand. Ver. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. Wherein also occurre.

Ver. 14.

1. A general menacing. Ver. 14. For at this time I send all my plagues upon thy heart, and upon thy servants, and upon thy people, that thou mayest know, that there is not any as I am in all the earth, who may contend with me. All my crosse meetings with thee together. Sept. — No ruler like me. Onkel. Sam. Ar. Vulg. to the same. — My scourge, &c. Syr. Here I shall note,

1. The threatening itself, wherein are these terms.

1. The season of it, instant, at this time and turn, when I now come to deal with thee.

2. The evil threatened, I will send, or I am sending all my plagues, my violent strokes or contrary works altogether, where,

1. The menacer, Jehovah I myself.

2. The act, I send immediately.

3. The evil in the nature of it, plagues, strokes scourges, and in the universality, all my plagues, a full number and measure, they were all these that follow Pharaoh in his sin, untill he was destroyed.

3. The object of this evil threatened in 3 sorts of persons.

1. The King himself.

2. His immediat servant, Nobles and Captains, as the Arabick.

3. His people of lower rank. And again the more special object was the hearts of them; On thy heart, and so subtly on the hearts of thy servants, &c. Which noeth to us,

1. The scorn of the plagues, that they should grind the very heart and soul of them. Or,

2. The kind of plagues, not only external but spiritual plagues & curses on the soul.

Ver. 14.

2. The end of this threatening. That thou mayest know that there is not any as I am in the earth, or none like unto me. The summe is,

1. The manifestation of the singleness of God in his being and powerfull working unto Pharaoh and the Egyptians, the shall know that he is Gods, and none els.

2. The knowledge of the universality of his dominion even through all the earth.

We conclude.

D. 1. God usually taketh an account of his demands by his threatnings.

D. 2. God hath a time of mustering up all his plagues together, when single ones are despised.

D. 3. God makes hearts sicke with smiting, when blowes will do no good upon the outward man.

D. 4. Heart evils are most grievous plagues from God upon men.

D. 5. In general, sins of the hearts of Kings and nobles and people are plagued together.

D. 6. Heart plagues are signals to make proud sinners acknowledge God to be above them.

D. 7. God will be known by his judgment to be the one Lord in all the earth. Ver. 14.

2. The reason of the threatening of these plagues at this time, which seems here to be 3 fold.

1. Gods dealing with him for times past. Ver. 15.

2. Gods purpose in contesting with him further. Ver. 16.

3. Pharaohs pride notwithstanding. Ver. 17.

1. The first reason doth appear in reading the words, Ver. 15. with respect to time past; however ours and some others read it in the future; in the letter thus, For

I have already sent forth my hand, And I might have smitten thee and thy people with the plague, and thou wouldest have bin cut off from the earth. Thus I have done, I have plagued beasts and spared you, and this works not, therefore this time I will deal with thee once for all, in bringing all my succeeding plagues upon thy heart. Thus the reason is strong and the reading natural. Most of the readings are in the future, as if they aggravated the former threatening. But the Ar. Calvin. Iunius, render the first part of the verse in the time past, by which the other must be understood. The 70 read For having now or already sent my hand. I will smite thee and thou shalt be worn out of the earth Or washed. — For now it is neer before me to send the stroke of my strength, &c. And thou shalt be consumed, &c. — Syr. reads all in the future, and so Vulg. — And thou shalt perish, &c. I choose rather to read it as Gods act past, and so it giveth the reason of his present judgments, because God had spared him in the former threatening, even to the cutting of him from the earth. B. Uzziel read all as past. And the word rendered here plague is that which was used to note the murrain upon beasts; but here was no pestilence executed at this time, but the judgment of hail and its adjuncts. Thus reading, we note,

Gcccc 2 my

1. Gods remembering Pharaoh of his own hand, work upon the beasts, as Ver. 3.
2. Gods minding him what he might have done upon him and his people smiting him with the same pestilence to destruction and cutting off from the earth. But all this judgment and mercy did no good upon him. This seems to be the plain sense of this verse.

Note we have.

- D. 1. God remembers former judgments inflicted though men forget them.
D. 2. God minds his enemies sometimes of plagues and destruction which they have escaped.
D. 3. Wicked mens forgetfulness of judgment makes God to mind them.

These from the reading in the time past.
At we read in the time to come, observe.

D. 4. Where Gods former judgments prevail not on enemies, he will plague at last to cutting off V. 15.

2. The next reason is Gods purpose and scope in all these dealings with Pharaoh, why he would send all his plagues upon his heart, in these words, But in very deed for this very cause have I made thee stand, that I might make thee see my power, and that my name may be declared in all the earth. Sam. Ar. Syr. — And for this cause hast thou bin preserved, that I might shew in thee my power, &c. Sept. — Yet for this have I sustained thee, that I might shew to thee my strength, and they might shew the power of my name; &c. Onkel. — Posui te. Vulg. This renders a reason why God spared him all this while, and now was resolved fully to plague him; it was his purpose concerning him, where- in note,

1. A narration of what God had done,

But in very deed for this cause have I raised thee up.

1. The form of this expression is solemn. But in very deed or truly, so God bespeaks men.

2. The matter declared. I have made thee stand or raised thee up, which word is referred, either to Gods promoting of him to be a King, or Gods keeping him from falling by other judgments; or els Gods appointing him by secret purpose or determination to be the mark of his judgments; as the Apostle doth apply it. Rom. 9. God would bring him forth upon the stage of all the world to deal with him.

2. The end of this Gods letting him up, is,
1. To shew in him, or make him see his power both prerogative, and arm to deal with sinners.

2. To make his name to be declared in all the earth, that is, that his power, wildom, patience, and justice towards sinners may be known and admired in all the earth.

Which teacheth us.

- D. 1. Though God spare sinners a time, he will order them in the mark at last.
D. 2. Gods als as truly with the wicked in judgment, as with his people in mercy.
D. 3. God sets up some in his purposes and reserves them from some plagues, to keep them unto worse.
D. 4. Whom God appoints to destruction, it is to perish in their sins.
D. 5. God will make sinners see his power glorified in their ruine.
D. 6. God will have the whole earth know his name in his judgments. Ver. 16.

3. The next reason of Gods threatening is the pride of Pharaoh notwithstanding, And yet exaltest thou thy self against my people, that thou wilt not send them away. Some read positively this verse, others interrogatively; both tend to the same purpose, but the expostulation is more emphatical, whereby the check seems the sharper. — Retardes. Arab. qumti. Sept. reinas. Onkel. — Insurges. Sam. — Dr. times. Syr.

1. The manner of speech is keen by way of expostulation.
2. The matter is a crimination of Pharaoh of two evils, notwithstanding Gods severity and mercy to him.

1. That

1. That he insulted and lifted up himself against Gods people Israel. This he had done by word and deed scorning them and their God.

2. That he refused to listen to them after so many demands of God, he would not send them away.

Learn hence.

- D. 1. God expostulates with highest powers on earth for insulting over his Church.
D. 2. Oppressing Gods people after his severity and goodness is a great provocation. Yet.
D. 3. Such provocations draw on more vengeance upon proud persecutors. Ver. 17.

2. The more special threatening followes, Behold I am making it to rain by the time to morrow a very grievous hail, such as hath not bin like it in Egypt, from the day it was founded, even until now. Sam. Onk. the same. — very much hail, &c. Since it was created, &c. Sept. — At the like time to morrow too great hail, &c. Ar. — To morrow by this time a very vehement hail, &c. Syr.

1. The term demonstrating this threat, Behold. so, see what I will do next, look, and slight it not.

2. The power threatening, Jehovah. Behold is I that am coming with another plague.

3. The plague threatened, here expressed.

1. In the nature of it hail, which carrieth the adjuncts with it, storms, tempests, thundring, lightning and fire mingled.

2. In the greatness of it, set out by the highest superlative in Hebr. and by Sept. &c. Overgrown hail, as Revel. 16. 12.

3. In the unparalleled state of it, such as was not in Egypt, since it was founded to that day.

4. In the time of it, according to this time to morrow; and it was very early, when Moses spake now with Pharaoh.

We observe.

- D. 1. God demonstrates judgments sometimes to the wicked before he sends them.
D. 2. Jehovah is the Father of rain in judgment as well as mercy.
D. 3. God can greatness hail to make his plague grievous upon sinners. Rev. 16. 2.

D. 4. God hath time in his hand to determine events of judgment at his pleasure.

D. 5. The morrow events for judgment are only in Gods hand.

D. 6. Unparalleled judgments doth God inflict upon unparalleled sinners. Ver. 18.

3. In Gods warning a word of advice is sent to Pharaoh, and his servants also, besides those of demand and threatening. Ver. 19. 20. 21. Herein note,

1. The word of advice given upon the former threatening, And now send, gather thy cattle, and all that thou hast in the field, every man and beast which shall be found in the field, and shall not be gathered into the house, the hail shall even come down upon them, and they shall dye. — Send speedily, Sept. — And the hail shall upon them, &c. Sept. Onk. Sam. — Defend thy beasts and all, &c. Ar. — Drive together thy cattle and whatever thou hast in the desert. Syr. Herein we have to note,

1. The advice given Pharaoh, which is twofold.
1. To send away and dispatch his messengers.
2. To gather all men and cattle into houses.

2. The reason of this advice, which was the certain death of man and beast left abroad in the field.

1. The supposition of all these, left abroad.

2. The position of judgment, they shall dye.

Learn we.

- D. 1. Gods advice to escape judgment goeth along with threatnings of it to some sinners.
D. 2. God teacheth men providence to hide themselves and cattle from the stroke of judgment.
D. 3. God foretells that all despisers of providence, and presumers on God, shall perish. Ver. 19.

3. The success of this advice appears in a twofold event upon a double subject, or two sorts of men.

1. Upon such as feared God, He that feared the word of Jehovah among the servants of Pharaoh, made his servants and his cattle flee into the houses. Sept. and Onk. gathered. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. more to the Hebr. made to fly or drive, &c. Where note, Ccccc 3 1. The

Ver. 20.

1. The subject of this event. Such of the Egyptians who feared the Lord, which is not to be taken of the true fear of God, but slavish trembling at his threatenings, having called of former plagues.

2. The worke consequent upon this fear, they made servants and cattle flye to houses, that is, to make all speed, they had but a little time, the next morning was hastning, and the plague was up early, good cause then for them to make halt.

Ver. 20.

Ver. 21.

2. Upon Atheistical Spirits, And he who set not his heart to the word of Jehovah he even left his servants and cattle in the field. Onk. same. Sept. omit's servants. In his mind attend. — He that laid not the word to heart or to his mind. Syr. — He that neglected. Vulg. Sam. and Ar. as Hebr.

1. The subject here was the unbelieving sort of Pharaoh's nobles, who heard the threatening, yet laid none of Gods threatenings to heart, but made a jest of them, or slighted them.

2. The fruit of their unbelief, they left servants and cattle to perish by the hail, cruel masters to men and beasts, when they might have saved them.

It instruct's us.

D. 1. Humane faith of Gods threatenings may make men fear and tremble at Gods word. (Humane it may be called in respect of the principle though the testimony on which it was grounded were divine.)

D. 2. Such fear may make men careful to shun temporal judgments.

D. 3. Wicked men through fear may flee from temporal plagues but not eternal. Ver. 20.

D. 4. Among wicked men some may refuse humane faith, which some embrace.

D. 5. Unbelief will not suffer men to lay any of Gods words to heart.

D. 6. Regardlesnes of Gods threatenings maketh men leave them and theirs to vengeance. Ver. 21.

Now followeth the word of execution, which is the issue of it. Ver. 22. 26. Wherein note,

Ver. 22.

1. Gods word to Moses commanding him to his work, And Jehovah said to Moses, stretch forth thy hand to the heavens, and there shall be hail in all the land of Egypt, upon man and upon beast, and upon every herb of the field in the land of Egypt. Readings all agree, the words are plain. Herein,

1. The word of command to Moses for this signe, Jehovah said, &c. Stretch forth thy hand, Here again God makes use of his instrument, to make Moses dreadful to Pharaoh as well as himself; the hand of Moses, as the hand of God.

2. The word of predition for the event. And there shall be hail, &c. wherein read,

1. Gods command carried certainty of effect in the judgment to come.

2. The particulars of the plague enumerated, thus.

1. The nature of the plague. Hail, this is put for all other the prodigious adjuncts, sent therewith as after is expressed.

2. The object of it set forth under three names,

1. Men, such as were abroad.

2. Beasts also, such as were left out.

3. The herb and trees of the field.

3. The extent of this plague, threatened, which is twice expressed in this verse. In all the land of Egypt throughout the land of Egypt.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Gods warnings of judgment being not regarded, he quickly gives the word for execution.

D. 2. To encourage faith, God calleth his servants to assist in working vengeance.

D. 3. God makes use of signals to induce judgments sometimes by the hand of his instruments.

D. 4. Gods word maketh such signes effectual that they may be feared.

D. 5. Gods word creat's hail for vengeance, as sometimes in mercy.

D. 6. Man and beast, herbs and all to the utmost extent, are subjected to Gods hail, at his command. Ver. 22.

2. The obedience of Moses to this word of Jehovah, wherein we have to consider,

1. The worke of Moses, And Moses stretched forth his rod to heaven. Ver. 23.

Sept. his hand. All other readings agree, his rod or staffe. The worke of Moses was onely signal, to lift up his hand with his rod toward heaven.

1. The term connecting knits his obedience to the command of God. Immediately he doth Gods will.

2. The

2. The obedience itself is the signal act, where,

1. Moses the agent.

2. The act, stretching forth or lifting up his hand with his rod.

3. The rule of action, it was toward heaven, the air or middle region, from whence the plague was to proceed, as others were brought from earth, &c.

2. The worke of God, which was the execution itself, Moses did the sign, but God effected the thing intended, wherein we have to note,

1. The matter of execution set out in part. Ver. 23. and Ver. 24. And Jehovah gave voices, and hails, and the fire walked on the earth and Jehovah rained hail upon the land of Egypt. Ver. 23. And there was hail and fire betaking itself in the midst of the hail, ver. grievous, such as was not as it, in all the land of Egypt since it was a nation. 24. The readings in Ver. 23. agree, onely some read thunders for voices, which was the meaning of that word, and that the fire did run upon the ground in flood of going or walking. In the 24th verse readings change not the sense, but in variety open each other, as fire was flaming in the hail very much, &c. From the day that a nation was in it. Sept. — A people in it. Onkel.

2. Mingle with fire, or in the midst. Sam Ar. — And the fire burnt with in the hail. Syr. — It was of so great bigness as, &c. vulg. In all this these special terms are considerable.

1. The inflictor Jehovah himself, twice named.

2. The plague inflicted, expressed in several terms.

1. Voices, which were terrible thunder-claps. Rev. 10. 3.

2. Hail very great, and grievous superlatively. Job. 2. 10. 11. and 1. 19. Job. 38. 22. 23.

3. Fire catching in the midst of the hail, mingled with it, burning in it; so the phrase is, and walking or running as balls of fire on the ground.

3. The infliction itself, God gave it, and rained down violently in storm this plague.

4. The unparalleldness of it, none was ever seen the like, an unheard of plague and vengeance.

5. The object where on it was inflicted, Egypt.

2. The effect of this execution, which is twofold.

1. Destroying upon Egypt. Ver. 25. Thus written, And the hail smote in all the land of Egypt all that was in the field, from man even to beast, and the hail smote every herb of the field, and brake every tree of the field. Readings all agree here. Wherein note,

1. The effect produced, which is smiting and that to death and destruction; breaking.

2. The object of it, man and beast, trees, all that were in the field, that is, not singularly all trees, but some of all sorts. It was a great stroke for ruin. Exod. 10. 5.

3. The extent of this, it was universally in all the land of Egypt; this was a direful plague, and the like is threatened upon spiritual Egypt. Revel. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21.

2. Discriminating upon Israel. Ver. 26. Only in the land of Goshen, where the sons of Israel were, there was no hail. All readings agree here; onely one read's, no hail fell, others, there was no hail, to the letter. Here note,

1. The exceptive or discriminating term, with respect to this execution, yet, onely, as it is read.

2. The subject excepted or discriminated, Goshen where the Israelites dwelt, with all the sons or children of Israel, when they walked abroad without fear.

3. The exemption or discrimination itself, there was no hail, nor fire, nor tempest with them, when their neighbours were thus destroyed. They had calm and quiet weather and safety in their houses. Ver. 26.

Quest. Might not this hail be natural? Answ. 1. It is noted that Egypt generally was a stranger to hail. 2. In kind it might be the same. 3. But in its sudden creation, greatness, terrible execution, to such destruction, with such an eminent discrimination of Gods Church from Egypt, it was no natural event, but a miraculous act of vengeance upon Pharaoh and his conspired people.

And inform'es us.

D. 1. Gods servants are ready with hand and signe to prosecute his commands exactly.

D. 2. Gods hand is with the hand of his servants to effect the work which they signify.

D. 3. Jehovah alone hath thunder, & hail and fire at command to give and send on enemies which he pleaseth.

D. 4. Showers of hail and fire God can command to come and run upon the earth at his pleasure. Ver. 23.

D. 5. Contrary elements God useth together to make his judgments more terrible. Fire and hail.

D. 6. Most grievous and unparalleld vengeance vengeance God hath determined on Egypt literal, and spiritual.

D. 7. The posterity of sinful nations may see greater plagues than all their fathers from the beginning of them. Ver. 24.

D. 8. Gods avenging hail is smiling hail even to destruction.

D. 9. Man, beast, herb, trees, shall perish by hail and fire when he command it.

D. 10. Smiting and breaking are Egypts portion by Gods hail and fire, and that general. Ver. 25.

D. 11. Discrimination of persons in judgement is Gods peculiar prerogative.

D. 12. No avenging hail or fire shall hurt Gods Israel.

D. 13. Gods portion are kept in peace and safety, when his hail and fire fall upon the world. Ver. 26.

3. The last thing in the history of the seventh plague is the events following which are various.

1. Pharaohs yielding once more to Moses. Ver. 27. 28.

2. The reply of Moses unto Pharaoh. Ver. 29. 30.

3. The hurt done by the hail described. Ver. 31. 32.

4. The cessation of hail by the prayer of Moses. Ver. 33.

5. The further hardning of Pharaohs heart. Ver. 34. 35.

1. Pharaohs yielding upon this plague is reported. Wherein,

1. His acceſſion or calling for Moses and Aaron, And Pharaoh ſent and called for Moses and Aaron. All readings agree, herein we may note,

1. The occasion of this call to them, in the term of connection, he saw and heard terrible destruction on Egypt by thunder, fire, and hail, and none of these upon Goshen, hereupon he crieth out for Moses and Aaron once more to come to him.

2. The call itself, he doubtless speeded messengers to them to bring them to his presence, having no other means to help him but these, to whom he did the greatest wrong.

Ver. 27. 2. His confession to them, And he said unto them, I have sinned at this time. Jehovah is the just one, and I and my people are the wicked ones. Ungodly. Sept. All readings to the same. Here we have as fair a confession in word as a sinner could make in order to repentance, but it was in word only, and not in truth as the event proved.

1. He justifies God as due is, Jehovah is righteous or the just one. An emphatical letter seem's to note, that he was eminently just, that is, in this and in all other judgments which he inflicted on him.

2. He condemneth himself and his people for the most eminently wicked ones who did provoke God to this by hardness of heart, the same letter (H) notes, that all this is spoken like a penitent, but they were vain words as in the issue is evident. Ver. 27.

3. His supplication unto them. Intreat ye or pray ye unto Jehovah, it is even much or enough, that there be no more voices of God and hail. Let them cease, Sept. Fire added. That there be much refreshing for us from his presence, and that there be no more thunder of the curse and hail upon us. Onk. and Ben. Uz. There is much delay of long suffering with him. Syr. Herein note,

1. He begs their intercession by way of deprecation, that the voices of God, or the mighty thunders, and hail might be no more, but some refreshing yet granted to them; he deprecates only the plague incumbent, but not Gods displeasure nor the wrath provoked.

2. He suggests a reason of his own, for it is much, or it is enough of this hail and thunder, so sinners judge a little of vengeance much or enough, but much of sin but a little.

4. His promise to them hereupon, And I will send you away, and ye shall add no more to stand, or ye shall stay no longer. Readings to the same. Here he promiseth two things to them.

1. Certain dismissal.

2. Speedy dismissal, I will surely send you away, and I will retain you no longer, as Onk. Ye shall not add to remain or abide any more, Sept. That is, ye shall depart presently. Ver. 28.

Observe we.

D. 1. Gods discriminating vengeance considered, maketh the vilest sinners seek out for help.

D. 2. The cruellest persecutors are sometimes forced to call in the persecuted for their helpers.

D. 3. Lip-confession of sin may be extracted by judgment from the greatest sinners.

D. 4. Justification of God in judgment is wrestled out of the mouths of his bitterest enemies.

D. 5.

D. 5. Self-condemnation for sin is wrought by Gods vengeance upon most hardened sinners.

D. 6. Such works in order to repentance may be upon those souls, which never truly do repent. V. 27.

D. 7. Prayers from the righteous to God may be desired by the wicked in their straits.

D. 8. It is the character of a wicked soul to think judgement much, but sin little.

D. 9. Deprecation of plagues, but neither of sin, nor wrath, is the care of wicked souls.

D. 10. The voice of God in thunder and hail is terrible to make proudest Totenists to tremble.

D. 11. Under judgement wicked souls promise much, truly and speedily to depart from evil.

D. 12. Churches liberty will be granted, when God oppresseth the oppressors. Ver. 28.

2. The next event is the reply of Moses to all this which carrieth in it these particulars.

Ver. 29. 1. His grant immediately to go and pray for him. And Moses said unto him, In my going out of the city, I will stretch forth my hands to Jehovah, Readings mostly agree.

When I am gone out, &c. I will stretch forth my hands in prayer. Onkel. Here,

1. The season expressed, immediately upon his going out of the city; the place and time at that instant were not convenient for that work.

2. The act itself promised, which was the stretching forth of his hands, a signal of prayer, the Caldee paraphrase expresseth it a stretching out of hands in prayer unto God upon the account of removing the plague from Pharaoh.

Ver. 29. 2. His assurance of the effect. The thunder shall cease, and the hail shall be no more, that thou mayst know that the earth is Jehovahs. All readings are to the same. Herein observe,

1. The promise of assurance, the thunders shall cease, and the hail shall be no more; this doubtless he spake by revelation from God, otherwise he could not.

2. The reason of this issue, the manifestation of Jehovahs propriety and sovereignty, not only over Egypt, but over the whole earth, and by this work of mercy upon the prayer of Moses Pharaoh himself should know this power of God over all creatures. Ver. 29.

3. His prediction of the sad event of mercy upon Pharaoh, But thou and thy servants I know, that ye will not as yet fear before Jehovah, God. Sep. to the same.

Have feared, one copy of the 70. that ye are not humbled, &c. Onk. That ye have not as yet feared the Lord, Sam. Know thou and thy servants that before ye feared the Lord, the flame, &c. Ar.

There is one word נחם which maketh divers translations, some read by understanding the word (I pray) I know before I pray, you and your servants fear the Lord, but afterward when I have prayed and the thunders cease, then ye will be hardened; but, the term is better read not as yet; so the sense is plain without defect. Wherein note,

1. Moses informeth Pharaoh that he was well acquainted with him and his servants what frames of Spirit they had by former trials.

2. He tells them what they would be after this judgment was over, that they would not fear God, nor yield, whatever Pharaoh had promised.

Quest. How did Moses know this of Pharaoh?

Ans. 1. By former experience of his mockery with God. 2. By Gods own revelations to him that this plague would not yet prevail with them.

Observe we from it.

D. 1. Gracious souls are willing to yield to vilest persecutors to help them though they deceive them.

D. 2. Time and place convenient, Gods servants take to answer the desires of the wicked.

D. 3. Heart and hand do Gods saints lay out in prayer to God for their enemies.

D. 4. Under Gods revelation his ministers may assure the wicked of his mercies.

D. 5. Such discoveries are made to wicked men that they might acknowledge his propriety and sovereignty over all. Ver. 29.

D. 6. Though Gods servants know how the wicked will afterward behave themselves, yet they may pray for them.

D. 7. God doth foretell by his servants sometimes the incorrigibility of the wicked under judgment and mercy.

D d d d

D. 8.

D. 8. Wicked men may tremble under vengeance, but never fear the Lord God when it is removed. Ver. 30.

3. The next event is the hurt done by the hail on the herb of the field recorded, and that two ways.

Ver. 31.

1. By what was smitten, And the flaxe and thurly was smitten, for the barley was green (or eared) and the flaxe was bolted or ept. As the word noteth. The barley sprouting, and the flaxe seed-bearing. Sept. — The flaxe gave out leaves. Onk. Sam. — Barly was almost ripe. Ar. — The barley yielded a firm bafe, and the flax gave seed, Syr Wherein we have to note,

1. The creatures destroyed, flaxe and barley, these were smitten, i. e. Unto destruction.

2. The reason given, for the barley was in the ear as ours, and others, or green as the word is, which notes the first moneth with him, even March, wherein all seeds grow green. Again, the flaxe was cup't or bolted, come to that head which perfected seed, ready almost to yeeld it as some read.

Ver. 31.

Ver. 32.

2. By what escaped the plague. But the wheat and the rye were not smitten, for they were hidden or dark; That is kept under ground. — They were latter seed. Sept. and Onk. All readings agree with these; and our translatours expresse it well, they were not grown up. Here note,

1. The creatures exempted from destruction, wheat and rye or spelt Sept. 70. Zea by some. Of the former there is no controversy; of the latter much, but rye is most probably intended, as a grain between wheat and barley, and most contemporary with wheat.

2. The reason natural under providence of this preservation, they were hid or in the darke, that is, they were kept yet under ground. Ver. 32.

Quest. How could the barley be up before the wheat?

Answer. It was the custom there, that wheat and barley were sown about the same time; and wheat usually lyeth longer under ground than barley. The same counse is reported in some parts of our own country in England. This being so, there is no difficulty in this case.

But it teacheth us.

D. 1. God in his own prerogative determines what creature to destroy for the punishment of sinners.

D. 2. When creatures grow neereſt for mans comforth, he takes them away for mans sinne. Ver. 31.

D. 3. God orders any creature on the ground to be preserved at his pleasure.

D. 4. Providence appoints the way and means for their preservation. Ver. 32. To be hid.

4. The next event is the performance of Moses his promise unto Pharaoh, wherein note,

1. His egress from him, And Moses went out from being with Pharaoh in the city. Ver. 33.

He went from Pharaoh out of the city, so most readings agree. — From the sight of Pharaoh out of the city. Ar. Here is nothing related but the departure of Moses to this place from Pharaoh and his city.

2. His attempt on God, on his behalf, And he stretched forth his hands to Jehovah. Readings mostly agree. In prayer. Onk. Here is the performance of his promise, where,

1. His truth and fidelity is evident unto Pharaoh.

2. His servency in the worke, noted by his action, he sets heart and hand to it.

3. His success, And the thunder ceased and the hail, and the rain was not given upon the earth. Or poured out. — Stilled not Sep. — Came not. Onk. — Not showed. Ar. Syr. Sam. This was the making good of the word of Moses by God himself. That upon his prayer the plague ceased.

Ver. 33.

We Learn.

D. 1. Gods servants set about the work to do what they ingage to the very wicked.

D. 2. Mightily do Gods servants intreat him even for their enemies.

D. 3. God doth give successe to the prayers of his own sometimes, and spares the wicked. Ver. 33.

3. The last event is the further hardning of Pharaohs heart, reported. Ver. 34. 35. Wherein observe,

1. Pharaohs sense of the plague ceasing, And Pharaoh saw that the rain ceased, & the hail & voices or thunders. Readings to the same. In this we have this occasion of his future hardning, which was sense of mercy, without faith in Gods word sent with it.

2. His practise thereupon, And he added

Ver. 34.

added to sin and made his heart heavy, himself and his servants. Onk. Sam. Ar. — His heart was hard. Vulg. Syr. — He hardened his own heart and his servants. Sept. The issue is a seventh time more hardning of himself and his servants against God. Note,

1. He hardens himself.
2. He is the means of hardning others also, such as followed him. Ver. 34.
3. Gods judgment spiritual upon him, wherein note,

1. His sin set on him, And the heart of Pharaoh waxed strong, and he sent not away the sons or children of Israel. Most readings the same. — God hardened the heart of Pharaoh. Ar. Here vengeance seals up a soul in his own obduration; the cause of his hardning, and the effect, which is, his oppression of Gods Church are still joined together.

Ver. 35.

2. Gods word verified, As Jehovah spake by the hand of Moses. All readings to the same purpose. God had foretold his hardning, and so it fell out.

We conclude.

Ver. 35.

D. 1. Sense of judgment and mercy without faith worketh more evil in sinners against God.

D. 2. Mercies may proove occasions of hardning unto wicked souls; but no causes of their sin.

D. 3. Wicked powers by unbelief harden themselves and others. Ver. 34.

D. 4. God sets on hardning when sinners chuse to be stubborn against God.

D. 5. Breach of promise with God is nothing with sinners.

D. 6. Gods foretelling of sinners wayes aggravates that sin abundantly. Ver. 15.

PPP. The 55 Section Hebr.

CHAP. X.

In this Moses continueth the history of Gods proceeding in his plagues with Egypt. And we have two more here related, which divide this Chapter into two heads.

1. The history of the 8th plague in locusts. Ver. 1. 20.

2. The history of the 9th plague in darkness. Ver. 21. 29.

In the first we have these particulars considerable,

1. Gods word for warning. Ver. 1. 11.
2. Gods word for execution. V. 12. 15.
3. The events of this plague. V. 16. 20.
In the former these particulars occur in special.

1. Gods charge unto Moses. Ver. 1. 2.
2. The address of Moses and Aaron to Pharaoh. Ver. 3. 6.
3. The fruit of this address. Ver. 7. 11.

1. In that which is Gods charge unto Moses note,

1. His command for entrance unto him, And Jehovah said unto Moses, go in unto Pharaoh. Readings agree, only here observe,

Ver. 1.

1. The connection of a new command unto Pharaohs former rebellion, and or then, immediately upon his treacherous dealing, God will not let Moses sit still, but dispatcheth him again with an 8th message.

2. The matter connected, which is a charge to go in unto Pharaoh for discovering further his mind, although Pharaoh did not send for him. Go in unto him. Pursue the tyrant.

2. The reason of this command, in what followeth, For I have made heavy his heart, and the heart of his servants that I may set these my signes in the midst of him. Ver. 1.

— Yet, or hereafter my signes may come upon them, Sept. — That I may set these my signes in the midst of them. Onk. — Send upon them. Ar. — That I might do these my signes among them. Syr. — These signes in him. Vulg. Sam. as Hebr.

1. The term rational is considerable for, to this sense, go to him, because I have made heavy his heart, &c. Others read it, although I have made heavy his heart, &c.

2. The reason inferred, wherein are two things,

1. Gods judicial act now past, I have hardened or made heavy his heart, not by infusing such an evil, but by withholding his work of grace, and giving him up to be hardened by Satan. Herein,

1. The agent, God.
2. The object, the hearts of Pharaoh and his servants, his neereſt retinue.

3. The act making heavy, or dull to hear, which is rightly paraphrased by hardning.

2. The end of this judicial act, 1. On Pharaoh. That I may set these my signes D d d d 2 nos ness in the midst of him or of them, as most read. Wherein,

1. The work aimed at is signes, or wonders.
2. The posture of them, and that is Gods sitting them fast.
3. The place of their fixing, in the midst or inwards of him. So to the letter, and if so, these signes are set upon his heart to plague him. Our translators read before him; others, in the midst of them, or among them, that is, in their view and sense, as the plagues were general.

Quest. Why doth God send meane to any that are hardened whole hearts are heavy?

Ans. 1. It is rendred by some, Although, and so it seemes more reasonable. Go to him though I have made his heart heavy. But this alters not the matter much. 2. It is therefore Gods mind herein to aggravate Pharaohs sin, go, for I have made his heart heavy and by thy comming he will take occasion to make it yet more hard, go therefore for I will set my wonders of judgment on his heart. ver. 1.

Ver. 2.

2. The next concern's Israel, And that thou maist declare in the ears of thy son, and of thy sons son, what things I have wrought in Egypt, and my signes which I have put among them, and that ye may know that I am Jehovah. How much I have mockt the Egyptians. Sept. and Sam. How hardly I have handled the Egyptians. Ar. How often I have broken the Egyptians. Vulg. Onk. as Hebr. This end with respect to the Church carrieth in it these 2 branches.

1. A declaration to successive generations of Gods prodigious plagues on Egypt to sons and sons sons, &c.
2. An acknowledgment of him to be Jehovah alone, who make's all events to be according to his own pleasure. viz. judgments on his enemies, and mercies on his people. Pf. 78. 5. 6. 7. Ver. 2.

Learn we.

- D. 1. As Gods words are verified by sinners obstinacy, so his charge is renewed to stop their fury.
- D. 2. God doth send his Ministers unto hardened souls so often as it seemes good to him.
- D. 3. God doth send meane sometimes to aggravate the sin of hardened spirits.
- D. 4. God sometimes hardens hearts of Kings and servants together.
- D. 5. Gods end toward the wicked in hardning, is to make his judgments wonderful.

- D. 6. Grievous plagues are they which are not onely in sight, but in the very hearts of sinners. Ver. 1.
- D. 7. Successive declaration of Gods plagues on the wicked is the main end of his executions.
- D. 8. The acknowledgment of God to be Jehovah in his Church in the end of his wonderful plagues on their enemies. Ver. 2.

2. The obedience of Moses and Aaron to Gods charge for going in unto Pharaoh now followeth, wherein are these particulars observable.

1. Their ingresse into his presence, And Moses and Aaron came in unto Pharaoh. Readings agree, only the Samarit. reads this verbe also as a part of Gods charge to Moses, but the Hebr. determines it to be his act and Aarons, there is nothing of difficulty here; the dispatch of Gods charge by Moses and Aaron is the onely thing here observable. They delay not to do Gods commandment.

Ver. 3.

2. Their message which they deliver unto him from God consists of several heads.

1. Of expostulation with him in Gods name, And they said unto him, thus saith Jehovah the God of the Hebrewes, how long wilt thou be humble thyself, or be humbled before me? Wilt thou not fear me? Sept. The God of the Jewes. Onkel. To obey. Ar. Wilt thou not be subject? Vulg. Sam. as Hebr.

Ver. 4.

1. Their authority urged is the same Jehovah the God of the Hebrewes, as before.

2. Their first word from him, is by sharpe expostulation to convince him of

1. Delay, how long?
2. Of denial to stoop or yeeld to Gods command, and be humbled for his sin.

3. Of impudence in denying this to Jehovah, wilt thou not fear me? Such is the sense of this expostulation.

2. The word of demand, Send away my people and let them serve me, or that they may serve me, Sept. Onk. Sam. to the same. That they may worship. Ar. Syr. Sacrifice. Vulg. This demand is now made again before the 8th plague.

Ver. 5.

1. The word is from God, challenging the diffision of his own people.

2. The end of it, that they may serve God. Of these mention hath bin before. Ver. 3.

3. The

3. The word of threatening followeth if Pharaoh yeeld not Gods demand, where two things are to be noted.

1. The evil or plague itself threatened, For if thou refuse to send away my people, behold I bring to morrow the locust into thy coast, or upon thy borders. Readings agree. Here,

1. The sin suggested, a continued denial to dismisse Gods people, though demanded.

2. The demonstration of the plague threatened, Behold I am bringing to morrow the locust into thy coast. Herein occurre,

1. The term demonstrating, Behold, look to it.
2. The immediat act, I am bringing now.

3. The evil itself, The locust, the grasshopper some make it, it comes from a word that notes multitude, and the 70 read אקידה אקידה, and they are noted to go forth in heaps or bands. Pro. 30. 27. Wist. 16. 9. Their condition and mischief followeth.

4. The time stated. To morrow will I do this thing. About this houre to morrow. Sep. Ver. 4.

2. The consequents of this plague threatened are

Ver. 5.

1. The very darkning of the earth with them, And they shall cover the eye of the earth and one shall not be able to see the earth. Thou shalt not be able to see earth, 70. That the sun, beames shall not come to the earth. Onkel. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. much to the Hebr. This was a sad event, that not so much as an inch of ground should be visible, by reason of the multitude of locusts covering it. Nay as the Cald. the sun-beams should not pierce thorough them unto it. A dismal plague.

Ver. 5.

2. The devouring of every green thing that was left. And they shall eat the residue of that which escaped which remaineth unto you from the hail, & shall eat every tree which groweth for you out of the field. Readings are to the same sense. Some words onely varied. Grammatical difference is little but in the preposition belonging to the last word in which variab. makes to be from 2. From, for in the field, but the sense is good either way. Here note.

1. The worke of these locusts devouring.

2. The object devoured set out. 1. It is the residue left from the hail, that is of herbs and grasse.

2. A very tree which grew in the field; some say that they eat the very body of the trees, but all agree that they eat all that was green, leaves and rind and so destroyed all the trees of the field. Ver. 5.

Ver. 3.

3. The mischief done to men in their houses. And they shall fill thy houses and the houses of all thy servants, and the houses of all Egyptians; which thy fathers & thy fathers fathers have not seen from their day of being upon the ground unto this day. Onk. Sam. Vulg. same. Sep. Ar. Syr. Thy houses shall be filled with fathers. Here note.

1. The oppressours, locusts, huge, hideous creatures, worse than an host of armed men; that could not be resisted.

2. The act of annoyance, they filled all places, and fell upon men and bit and slew them; all these pernicious effects are aggravated from that word They filled, that is abundantly they thus annoyed and killed.

3. The object, houses of three degrees.

1. The kings houses.

2. The nobles houses which were his nearest servants.

3. The houses of all the Egyptians, which are not meant of the fabricks of building, but of all that dwell in those houses, families and households.

4. The unparalleled adjunct, such a plague of locusts, that neither fathers nor the grand-fathers to many generations had ever seen from their day of being.

Ver. 6.

3. The egress of them after this message done, And he turned himself or his face and went out from Pharaoh. Onk. Ar. Vulg. same. — Moses turning away, 70. — They returning back, &c. Syr. The Samaritan repeats all foregoing and then reads, Afterward he returned, &c. The whole carriage casteth disrespect on Pharaoh.

1. Not to look upon him.
2. To fling out from him, and leave him to think upon this message sent him, God in all this carriage of Moses and Aaron casteth contempt on a proud persecutor, as leaving him to feel what he would not believe. Ver. 6.

And by it teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods true servants make no delay in keeping his commandments. Psalm. 119. 6.

D. 2. Gods instruments vouch his name in their message which the wicked make a reproach.

D. 3. God by his ministers expostulates bitterly with stubborn sinners for their delay of humbling themselves under judgment.

D. 4. God will never leave demanding his Church from the wicked world till it be freed. Ver. 3.

D. 5. God foreseeth and suppresseth some some wicked oppressors will not yeeld to his demands.

D. 6. Vpon such fore sight God threatens his eightfold plague, at his morrow time and fails not. V. 4.

D. 7. The plague of locusts is very grievous in burdening the earth, devouring the fruit, and destroying houses at Gods word. V. 5. 6.

D. 8. The latter ages for their wickednes may see those plagues, which their fore fathers never saw.

D. 9. God orders his servants when they have done his message, to turn from sinners who hear not.

D. 10. God casts contempt upon wicked powers, when he turn's the face of his servants from them. Ver. 6.

3. In this word of warning we have to note the fruit and issue of it. Ver. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. Wherein,

1. The resentment which Pharaohs servants have of it. Ver. 7.

2. The recalling of Moses and Aaron unto Pharaoh with his quere to them. V. 8.

3. The reply of Moses unto his question. Ver. 9.

4. Pharaohs answer and discharge of them. Ver. 10. 11.

In the first which is the resentment of Pharaohs servants, we have to observe these particulars,

1. Their serious application unto Pharaoh by way of question, And the servants of Pharaoh said unto him, how long shall this man be for a snare unto us? Sam. same. Ar. — Moses. — This thing be a scandall. Sept. Onk. Ar. Syr. Vulg.

1. The term connecting knits this to the word of warning very closely, there was a present impression doubtles, which the word of threatening made.

2. The subjects affected, and applying themselves were Pharaohs servants, his nobles, his captains, or chiftains, or some of them as Arab. reads.

3. The object of their application, Pharaoh hardened beyond sense, he was not toucht at all with the word of threatening.

4. The application made, was by speech to him, as is presumed after they had heard the threatening of Moses then they said, How long shall this man be for a snare unto us, wherein they suppose him the cause of all their evil.

1. That he had bin a snare to destroy them in great part already; as a snare to birds.

2. They complain that he had bin so too long.

3. They imply a desire that he might be so no longer, they having suffered so much by him, and now he had threatened the speeding of another snare to greater destruction. A snare is but an instrument to destroy. Pl. 11. 6.

2. By way of petition or request, Send away the men that they may serve Iehovah Ver. 7. their God, Sept. Onk. Sam. same. — That they may worship the most high. Ar. Syr. — That they may sacrifice, &c.

1. Their petition is for dismissal of Israel, being so much plagued for holding them.

2. Their end is, that they might have liberty of conscience to worship God as he required them.

3. By timely caution against future ruine, Wilt thou not as yet know that Egypt is destroyed? Sept. same. — Or dost thou not know yet? &c. Syr. Sam. — Dost thou not see? &c. Vulg. — Before we see Egypt overthrown. Ara. Wilt thou not know before Egypt perish? Wherein they suggest,

1. That Egypt in great part was destroyed already.

2. That further ruin was at hand on the morrow.

3. The stupidity of Pharaoh that he would not yet take notice of it; nor know Gods hand; this they speake out of a slavish fear of further plagues threatened, not out of any true respect to God, or love to Israel, as may appear in their carriage.

We observe.

D. 1. Threatning from God may touch hearts of servants and not of rulers.

D. 2. God useth Kings own servants to moove them, when his ministers can avall nothing.

D. 3. Fear of plagues may moove wicked ones to yeeld, where the feare of God is not.

D. 4. It is usual for wicked men to charge Gods servants to be snarers, when their sins make them.

D. 5. When God makes his servants Ministers of wrath, the wicked are willing to be rid of them.

D. 6. Idolatrours persecutours may tolerate Gods Church to serve him, when vengeance forceth them.

D. 7.

D. 7. Experience of destruction past, and fear of more to come, may cause enemies to moove for the Churches liberty.

D. 8. Persecuting powers are apt to be stupid and willingly ignorant of such destructions. Ver. 7.

In the second which is the recal of Moses, &c. note,

Ver. 8. 1. Their reduction, And Moses was brought back and Aaron unto Pharaoh, Onk. Ar. same. — And they brought back or turned back, Sept. Sam. — And they called back Moses, Syr. Vulg.

1. The connection notes a prevailing of their motion.

2. The parties bringing back, &c. were the servants of Pharaoh.

3. The parties reduced, Moses and Aaron.

Ver. 8. 4. The terme of reduction, Pharaoh. 2. Pharaohs concession to them, Go serve Iehovah your God, Sept. Onk. Sam. the same. — Go worship, &c. Ar. Syr. go sacrifice. Vulg.

1. The authority gratifying is Pharaoh the King.

2. The grant itself, Go serve Iehovah your God. It was as much as was desired, if he had said no more,

Ver. 8. 3. Pharaohs capitulation upon this grant to Moses by way of jeere, Who & who are going or shall go? All readings concur. This question bounds his grant as if he had said, I will let you go, but I mean not all of you, therefore tell me who, and who will ye have to go? A limiting denying quere to his grant. Ver. 8.

Note we from it.

D. 1. Vpon importunity of men, wicked powers may be mooved to recal and treat further with Gods ministers, when his own word is slighted by them.

D. 2. Vpon carnal considerations powers may license the Church to serve its God.

D. 3. Such wicked powers bound their grants of liberty with provisoes destructive to Gods will. Ver. 8.

In the third which is the reply of Moses we may note,

Ver. 9. 1. His answer to the quere, And Moses said, with our young and with our old will we go, with our sons and with our daughters, with our flocks and with our herds will we go, or with our sheep and oxen. Readings agree. Herein we may note,

1. His faithfulness unto God and his charge, he leaveth not out any whom he had in charge to deliver; so God commanded him to bring forth all, old and young, son and daughter, sheep and oxen and all their substance.

2. His boldnes to Pharaoh, that he should keep no reserves of Israel, neither man nor beast, but all must go, for God had so commanded.

2. His reason of this resolution, For we have a feast to Iehovah. Readings agree in sense. Onely some read Feast, Sept. Some a solemnity. Onk. Some a holy-day. Syr. But the festival, as for Gods service is the ground, where young and old, little and great, who were in covenant with God, were to appear, and for materials, their flocks and substance must go with them, Gods worship was their festival.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. Captious questions from wicked are answered with plain answers by Gods servants.

D. 2. Faithfulness to God, will not suffer his servants to hide his mind to the wicked.

D. 3. Gods instruments have encouragement from him to deliver his demands to greatest powers.

D. 4. Little ones as well as great must be carried along with the Church of God to their rest.

D. 5. The Churches portion in this life as to outward estate God is pleased to have free as well as themselves, that they may comfortably serve him there-with.

D. 6. The Churches work after redemption is to serve Iehovah, or keep a feast to him. Ver. 9.

In the 4th which is Pharaohs peremptory answer.

1. A scornful reflection upon Iehovah and Moses for this demand of all to go. So we may read, So shall Iehovah be with you as I shall send you away and your little ones. Sept. Sam. Ar. the same. — Let the word of the Lord be your help, &c. Onk. various conceits have made these words difficult.

1. Some read it literally and plainly as a wish, that Iehovah would be with them, even as he would dismiss them, that is, not at all.

2. Others figuratively or ironically, which is most proper here, to this sense, shall shall I send away you and your little ones? Jehovah shall be with you to do it, before I send you and them away, which doth sure with what follows of his threatening and denial, best of all. See if your God can bring about that, it is an abrupt speech coming from an angry soul, and carrieth indignation in it toward God and his people.

Ver. 10. 2. An upbraiding threat, See for evil in before your faces. Wickedness Sept. The evil which you think to do stands against your faces. Onk. Evil against your faces. Samar. Least evil meet your faces. Syr. Lo I see evil before your faces. Ar. Who doubts but that you mind the worst. Vulg.

Two senses are made of this word evil.

1. Evil of sin which he chargeth on them and upbraids them withall, that they meant to steal away with their little ones, and to deny allegiance.

2. Evil of judgement, as of some plague to meet them in their way, for this contrivement to take away their little ones and flocks, so it is by way of threatening to them, both may stand. Ver. 10.

Ver. 11. 3. A denial of the demand of Moses, Not so, ye men and serve Jehovah, for this you did seek. Most readings agree. Ye seek idleness. Syr. Where notes,

1. An absolute denial, Not so, your little ones shall not go, they shall be pledged behind.

2. A false ground suggested, that this was the only thing at first demanded, which was false, for God required all his people.

4. A driving them away with this answer, And he drove them out from the face of Pharaoh. Onk. Ar. same. They cast them, or led them out. Sept. Syr. Or they were cast out. Vulg. Here is course of usage as well as bad answer to Gods command.

1. The agent, likely some of Pharaohs servants.

2. The patient, Moses and Aaron, who were recalled.

3. The term from whence, from Pharaohs face. And that with indignation as those that had offended in delivering Gods will to him.

Learn we.

D. 1. Proud persecutors terrified with judgements though they yield a little to God, yet scorn to give him his terms; let Jehovah be with you to help you as he can, otherwise than as I will dismiss you.

D. 2. It is the policy and cruelty of persecutors to keep in thralldom the little ones of the Church.

D. 3. Wicked Powers charge sin to Gods servants upon their demands from him. Ye intend evil.

D. 4. Persecuting powers threaten the Church with evil, as God threatens them.

D. 5. What ever persecuting powers seem to yield to the Church, they resolve it shall not be so, as God would have it.

D. 6. Persecuting powers will tell God who shall serve him and allow no more.

D. 7. Unjust powers care not to falsify Gods demands to take occasion against his people.

D. 8. Gods servants are driven out with contempt from powers when they serve not their turn. Ver. 11.

2. The next particular in the first head of this Chapter is Gods word for execution, & the effect thereupon. Ver. 12. 13. 14. 15. Wherein we have to note,

1. The word to Moses for giving the sign. Ver. 12.

1. The Authority is declared, And Jehovah said to Moses. Readings agree. Onely observe,

1. The immediat connection of this word to the driving out of Moses, God presently giveth it forth to Moses, he followes Pharaoh close.

2. The Authority is Jehovahs word, who doth his pleasure and cannot be resisted.

2. The sign is commanded, stretch forth thy hand over the land of Egypt for the locust. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. to the same. Let the locust come. 70. —

That it may come. Onk.

1. The work enjoyned was but to give the sign, to stretch forth his hand over the land of Egypt, that is to put forth hand with rod, in the place where he was, which signally reached all Egypt.

2. The end of this signal was to bring the plague of locusts, which is singularly expressed, for the plural, for the locust is here taken for a noen of multitude; the word notes so much.

3. The event expressed, And they shall come up over the land of Egypt, and shall eat every herb of the land, all which the hail hath left. Readings agree; onely some adde, fruit of the trees, and all things els. Sept. Onk. Herein is Gods promise that the thing thing threatned shall follow the signe; and it shall not be empty.

1. The locusts shall come.

2. They shall devour all green things left, besides the annoyance and mischief done to men. Ver. 12.

Which informeth us.

D. 1. When persecutors drive out Gods servants, he hastens determined plagues on them.

D. 2. The hand of man, stretched out at Gods word for plagues is a terrible signe to his enemies.

D. 3. The plague signified shall come by Gods word to verify the signe given.

D. 4. The plague coming shall do full execution upon Gods enemies, and creatures for their sakes.

D. 5. God can make a latter plague finish, that which a former plague onely began to destroy. V. 12.

2. The obedience of Moses: whereabout note,

Ver. 13. 1. The act of Moses, And Moses stretched out his rod over the land of Egypt: all readings agree, onely the 70. He stretched out his rod to Heaven which was over the land of Egypt, though acted but in one place, where Moses stood. No difficulty is here. The ready and exact obedience of Moses onely is herein observable.

2. The act of God assisting Moses is obvious, whereabout also we may observe,

Ver. 13. 1. The production of the cause of this plague, And Jehovah brought an Eastwind upon the land all that day, and all that night, Onk. same. A Southwind, Sept. That burning wind, Syr. vulg. In which,

1. The first cause is Jehovah.

2. The second, the Eastwind, which is said upon this occasion to be hot; therefore some read the Southwind.

3. The continuance, all that day, and all that night before the morrow.

Ver. 13. 4. The act, he brought, the word is he lead and ruled as a Captain.

2. The production of the effect by this second cause, It was morning, and the Eastwind brought up the locust, Onk. Sam. same, South, &c. Syr. Arab.

The burning rushing wind lifted up the locusts, Syr. Vulg. Not to discourse curiously about the wind, it is certain, that it was such, as was fully disposed to bring forth these effects. Secondary causes so God useth to produce his plagues, though supernatural, on his enemies.

3. The evil of this effect, of the locusts produced.

1. In the extent, And the locust ascended over all the land of Egypt, and rested in every border of Egypt. Readings differ not much. They rested, so Hebr. & Sept. They remained, Arab. Stayed, Syr. Sat down in the coasts of Egypt, vulg. Here note,

1. The space possessed, all that land and coasts of Egypt.

2. The possession of these locusts.

1. By ascending or coming upon the land.

2. By resting in it as the quiet habitation.

2. In the description of their nature, Very grievous was it, before it, there was not such a locust as it, and after it there shall not be such. Readings alter not the sense though they have various expressions. Some read, very many, very great, innumerable; such locusts they were unparallelled in that present & future ages. Some adde that clause, very grievous, to their sitting or resting on the land; but it is distinctly read, no difference will be about this. Onely note,

1. They were a very grievous plague.

2. That they were unparallelled.

Ver. 14. 3. In the darkening of the very land, And it covered the eye of the whole land, and the land was darkened. Land was corrupted, The sun-beams could not pierce, Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. as Hebr. Here are recorded,

1. Their covering the land all over, that not the sun-beam could pierce to it.

2. Their darkening of the Land, that it became black with them. This was an heavy plague.

Ver. 15. 4. In the devouring of the land by them, And it devoured every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the tree, which the hails had left, and there remained no greens in the tree, and in the herb of the field through all the Land of Egypt. Readings most agree. And there remained not a leaf on the tree, nor an herb in the field, &c. Syr. Apples, Vulg.

1. Here is a totall destruction of all the fruit of the earth, none was left.

2. A killing of the very plants, for nothing green was remaining. This was the 8th plague.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. At Gods command of signals to denote his word, his servants must use them.

D. 2. Gods true Ministers shew readiness and exactness in giving forth forth signes commanded by him.

Eeece forth

D. 3. The virtue of Gods signalls is larger then the sign itself exhibited; Over all the land is the plague to be.

D. 4. God himself works, that which signes do but signify unto us.

D. 5. God creat's second causes to produce his heavy judgements on sinners.

D. 6. The second causes are continued by God until the effect of evil be produced.

D. 7. As Gods set time his plagues do come and are not delayed. V. 13.

D. 8. Locust-plagues as well as others, extend themselves, and rest where God will have them.

D. 9. Incomparable vermin God can create to plague persecutors of his Israel. Ver. 14.

D. 10. Locust-plagues & the like cover over and transform the face of the earth at Gods word.

D. 11. Devouring and killing plagues to creatures, God sends upon bloody persecutors. Ver. 15.

3. The last head in the history of the 8th plague containeth the events after execution, which are 3.

1. Pharaohs partial yeelding upon this execution of the locusts, which is expressed.
1. By his accession of Moses. And Pharaoh hastened to call for Moses and Aaron. All readings agree. Here we may note,

Ver. 16.

1. The connection of this hast to the execution of vengeance, present terrors puts him upon present hast to have them removed.

2. The act connected. He hastened to send for Moses, he drove them away in haste but erewhile, and now in as great haste he calls for them; he feels their threatenings true; hasty judgments work in him hasty passions.

Ver. 16.

2. By his confession. And he said, I have sinned against Jehovah your God and against you. All readings agree. Where see the shape of an hypocrit.

1. Here is a second confession of his sin, as Ch. 9. 17.

2. The confession is enlarged, that their sin was not onely against God, but against Moses and Israel.

3. By his request and supplication,
Ver. 17. And now take away, or forgive, I pray thee, my sin onely this once, and pray to Jehovah your God that he remove from me this death onely. Forgive, is singular, pray ye is plural. Onkel. same. Sept. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. read all plural.

Take up or away, tolerate ye. Ar. Forgive; so all the rest; here are two p. tions made to them;

1. That they would pardon him for his denial and cruel dealings, and that but this one time more, and then he would never do so again; this is understood.

2. That they would pray Jehovah to remove this plague, which he calleth, this death onely. As if he had said, let God give me my life but this time onely, and I shal beg no more; pittifull was his intreaty now, but all hypocritical, intending onely his self-preservation. He makes no promise here expressly of sending Israel away hereupon, but it is all implied.

We learn from it.

D. 1. Gods hasty judgments may work hasty passions in sinners, though no repentance.

D. 2. Vengeance may make persecutors call in Gods servants for help as hastily as they drove them out.

D. 3. Double confession of sin may Hypocrits make under plagues, yet not in truth.

D. 4. Proud persecutors may be forced to confesse their guilt against men as well as against God. V. 16.

D. 5. Hypocritical oppressors may desire forgiveness of Gods people under plagues, as if they would sin no more.

D. 6. Wicked persecutors under judgment are earnest with Gods servants to intercede earnestly for them.

D. 7. It is onely death which wicked sinners deprecate.

D. 8. Hypocrits pretend upon deliverance from death, as if they would sin no more, or desire no more mercy. Ver. 17.

2. The next event is the concession of Moses to his desire, where we have to note,

1. His egress, And he went out from Pharaoh. All readings agree in the main.

They went out. Ar. He leaveth him as not to be prayed with, but goeth out to pray for him unto God.

Ver. 18.

2. His

2. His answer to Pharaohs request, And he intreated Jehovah. All readings to the same. They prayed. Ar. Moses doubts in the power of Gods Spirit mightily called on God to take of this plague also. Ver. 18.

Ver. 19.

3. The issue of prayer followeth, And Jehovah turned a very strong sea-wind, and took away the locust, and fastned it in the red sea, there remained not one locust in all the coast of Egypt. All readings agree. A westwind. Onk. and others. Opposit to the wind that brought them, pitched them, cast them, &c. In this effect of prayer note,

1. God create's the second cause. He turned the points of the wind from east to west, and makes it very mighty or vehement to do the worke.

2. God produceth the effect, he took away the locusts and fastned them in the red sea called Suph in Hebr. from sedg growing by the banks of it. By the Greeck. Aët. 7. 36. it is read, λευκή θάλασσα. There God pitched them and fastned them as any thing with a nail, not to be moved; in which sea afterward Pharaoh perished.

3. The evidence miraculous of this effect, there was not left one locust in all the coasts of Egypt. This is all miraculous. Ver. 19.

And instructs us, that,

D. 1. By Gods leave his Prophets may yeeld to the desires of the enemies, and go about to perform them.

D. 2. Under the same grace they deprecate mightily vengeance from the wicked. Ver. 18.

D. 3. Jehovah hear's the prayer of his and yeelds to spare the wicked sometimes. Ps. 30. 4.

D. 4. The winds are in Gods fists to turn them.

D. 5. God can make winds take away plagues as well as bring them.

D. 6. Miraculous is Gods healing, as well as plaguing, at the desires of his servants. Ver. 19.

Ver. 20.

3. The last event is the 8th time of hardning Pharaohs heart, And Jehovah made strong the heart of Pharaoh, and he sent not away the sons of Israel. All readings agree. Herein are related by Moses two things.

1. An act of judgment from God on Pharaohs heart annexed to the answer of mercy given in unto the prayer of Moses for him; the locusts are gone, and his heart is hardened. this judicial act of God followeth Pharaohs 8th obduration of himself under all these plagues.

2. A further act of sin from Pharaoh. He sent not away the children of Israel. Though he desired onely to be tried this one time, yet the plague being over, he returned to his former oppression of Gods people, and would not diminish them.

Which Learn's us.

D. 1. Judgment of removing and heart hardning from God may be coupled together in the wicked.

D. 2. God justly hardens sinners so often as they harden themselves.

D. 3. Multiplied hardning worketh multiplied rebellion against God, and oppression of his Church. Ver. 20.

2. The next general head of this Chapter contains the history of the 9th plague upon Egypt even that of darknes, wherein note,

1. Gods word for execution. Ver. 21.

2. The obedience of Moses in the execution. Ver. 22. 23.

3. The events of this plague. Ver. 24. 29.

1. The former is thus expressed to the letter, And Jehovah said to Moses, stretch out thy hand toward the heavens, and there shall be darknes over the land of Egypt, and one shall feel the darknes. Or that one may feel, &c. Let there be darknes, palpable darknes, Sept.

Ver. 21.

even after the darknes of the night is gone. Onkel. Ar. Darknes shall be felt. Sam. The darknes shall be darkened. Syr. So thick that they may be felt, Vulg. Herein we have to note,

1. The authority commanding, Jehovah.

2. The subj. t enjoined, Moses.

3. The word of command, to give the sign, stretch forth thy hand, as in some former plagues. Here God giveth Pharaoh no warning as sometimes he did.

4. The word of predication annexed to the signe, Wherein,

1. The certainty of the event, And there shall be darknes,

2. The extent of it, over all the land of Egypt.

3. The greatnes of the evil. Even palpable darknes, such as may be felt.

Quest. Is not darknes peculiarly discernable by the eye, how then could it be felt by touching?

Ans. 1. Darknes, taken simply, as a privation of light, is only to be Eccce 2 per-perceived by the eye; but 2. Herein it is not so barely to be considered, but as accompanied with thick mists or fogs, whose moisture and weight were tangible; therefore here needs no interpretation by hyperbole, as elsewhere must be granted that the Spirit useth. 3. Another sense is suggested from the signification of the verb in the Caldee, to remove, after the darknes of the night was gon; darknes should be instead of day; but in the Hebr. the sense is to feel, and no difficulty is in the reading.

Note we.

- D. 1. God falls upon sinners without warning where they deal falsely with him. Connection.
- D. 2. The same signal God may command for several uses.
- D. 3. Gods word determin's the end unto which all signals are appointed.
- D. 4. Mens hand lifted up to heaven God may make use of to bring evils on the earth.
- D. 5. It is Gods word to make a Kingdom the land of darknes.
- D. 6. Palpable darknes is a judgment of Gods own making. Ver. 21.

2. The obediential act of Moses unto Gods command brings on the execution, wherein observe,

1. His act, And Moses stretched out his hand towards the heavens, Readings agree. Herein onely doth Moses give the sign commanded.

2. The execution consequent, And there was, &c.

In the description whereof we may note,

1. The evil now put into being, And there was darknes, or obscure darknes. Onk. Darknes and blacknes. Syr. Darknes, blacknes and tempest. Sept. Horrible darknes. Vulg. Where,

1. The nature of it is darknes which is a privation of light, the sweetest thing that man can enjoy, it is pleasant to see the light. Ecclef. Therefore darknes must be very tedious.

2. The adjunct of it is darknes of darknes, which is expressed by extremity of darknes, darknes that may be felt, it was darknes unparallel'd, which is a paraphrase to set out the greatest misery. Jer. 13, 16, &c.

3. The suddenesse of it, at the lifting up of the hand of Moses, God formed this darknes to fall upon his adversaries.

4. The event of this evil, Over all the land of Egypt. It did universally possess the Egyptians houses and places where they were, not a corner had any light at all.

3. The duration of this plague; it was for three dayes that God continued this torment. Readings all agree. Neither is any difficulty in the letter, Ver. 22.

4. The sad effect of this plague produced.

1. They saw not any man his brother. Ver. 23. Sept. Onk. Syr. Vulg. fame. One another. Sam. A man his neighbour. Ar. This was a sad case, to be all in a house or room, and not one man see another.

2. Neither did they arise any one from that which was under him, for three dayes. Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. fame. Out of his bed. Sept. Hence it is evident that they were chains of darknes wherewith the Egyptians were bound to their places. And this was a very grievous plague to be fastned and bound up by darknes from moving.

Quest. Had they no help by artificial light?

Ans. According to the letter of Scripture they had none, for then they might have seen and moved from their places, but so they did not, therefore it is certain that the darknes by its moisture & thicknes did put out the candle and fire, that they could not be serviceable unto them.

3. The discrimination or distinction made in this execution is considerable so noted, But to all the sons of Israel there was light in their habitations. Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. fame. In all places where they were; Sept. Where they dwelt Vulg. In which note,

1. The discretive particle, makes difference between Egypt and Israel.

2. The Author of this difference is God, and so here implied.

3. The subject, the sons of Israel, whom God owned.

4. The matter of discrimination, light, contrary to Egyptian darknes, and all comforts of it, which the Egyptians wanted. Thus God shewed his prerogative over light and darknes, for his Church, and against his enemies.

Quest. Why did not Israel now escape when the Egyptians could not see them, and they had three dayes space?

Ans. 1. Gods time of deliverance was not come. 2. Pharaohs sin was not yet full. 3. Gods judgments were not yet compleat on Egypt. 4. God would not have them steal away, but go out with victory.

Ver. 23.

We

We observe here.

D. 1. Obedience to Gods signal commands must be given by his servants.

D. 2. Signal obedience by Gods Ministers is not in vain. God giveth the effect.

D. 3. Horrid darknes can God send upon souls darkned thorough sin.

D. 4. Egyptian darknes is Gods exemplary vengeance to the World.

D. 5. The place and duration of darknes are at Gods appointment. Ver. 22.

D. 6. Dismal darknes is that, which takes from men the use of sense, and motion.

D. 7. Chains of darknes can God make to hold fast sinners in prison.

D. 8. God executes his judgments on the World with discrimination to his people.

D. 9. Egypts darknes is Israels light. Ver. 23.

3. The events of this plague now follow,

1. The impression made upon Pharaoh, Ver. 24.

2. The dissatisfaction of Moses, Ver. 25, 26.

3. The obduration of Pharaoh hereupon, Ver. 27, 28.

4. The last reply of Moses about this, Ver. 29.

In the first you may see what impression this plague made upon Pharaoh by these effects,

1. By his calling again for Moses, And Pharaoh called for Moses, all readings the same. Here,

1. The term of connection, and or then.

2. The act connected is to be observed. One question.

Quest. How could Pharaoh call for him, when no man stirred out of his place for three dayes, or when was this done?

Ans. To solve this doubt several men walk several ways.

1. Some thinke that Pharaoh sent for him while the darknes was upon him, and this conjecture wants not a reason, for it is supposed if the plague had bin gone, he would not have called for him at all; therefore these grant an hyperbole in the darknes, to note it great, but not so but some meanes might be used to send for Moses.

Ver. 24.

2. Others think it to be done at the three dayes end, and that some light was restored, and then so soon as he could, he sent for Moses, fearing it might prove an everlasting darknes; this also hath its probability from the time of the plague, and its sad effects for three dayes, that there was no way to send to him before.

3. Between these it may be said, that however the Egyptians saw not one another; yet they might hear one another, and so meanes might be made for Moses to come who wanted no light to bring him. However the matter is not great. This is certain, that Moses was now called unto Pharaoh.

2. By his granting to him, And he sayd, Ver. 24. go ye serve Jehovah, only your flocks; and your herds shall be staid, your family, or your little ones also shall go with you. Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. to the same, Let your flocks run, &c. Sept.

1. His grant is for themselves and families, let the little ones, and all, go, & serve the Lord.

2. His limitation is upon their sheep and oxen, which were necessary materials for their feast, Ver. 24.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Frequent plagues may cause frequent applications of the wicked to Gods servants.

D. 2. Persecutors may upon Gods plagues give leave to the persons of Gods people to go free, and serve God.

D. 3. Hardned oppressors deny meanes of serving God, when they grant liberty to do it. Ver. 24.

In the second the dissatisfaction of Moses appears.

1. In his demand with the end of it, And Moses said thou shalt give also into our hands sacrifices and burnt offerings or ascensions. And we shall, or that we may do, or offer them to Jehovah our God. Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. Onk. Vulg. to the same. Holy sacrifices. Onk.

1. His demand from Pharaoh is, to have meanes of worship, as well as leave, which must be sheep and oxen, the matter of their sacrifices.

2. The end, that they may do to Jehovah their duties, and worship according to his will. Ver. 25.

2. In his resolution with the reason of it. And our cattel also shall go with us, there shall not be left an hoof, for thereof shall we Eccc 3 take take to serve Jehovah our God, and we know not with what we shall serve him before we come thither. All readings to the same purpose.

Ver. 25.

1. His resolution is in two points,
 1. That their flocks and herds shall go with them.
 2. That not an hoof shall be left behind. Things are clear.
2. His reason is twofold,
 1. The necessity of them for sacrifice to serve the Lord.
 2. The present ignorance of what would suffice until they came to the place whereunto God called them. Therefore he was resolved to have all.

Observe we here.

- D. 1. Gods instruments of redemption seek not onely liberty of persons but of means to serve him.
- D. 2. Due worship and true sacrifice to God are the scope of all Gods redeemed. Ver. 25.
- D. 3. Gods Ministers must be resolute for all, and not bate a jot of what God requires. Not a hoof.
- D. 4. All the exactions of Gods instruments must be aimed at Gods service truly.
- D. 5. Gods servants know not themselves, but depend upon his discovery for what they must offer to him. Ver. 26.

In the third we have to note these particulars,

- Ver. 27.
1. Gods spiritual vengeance upon Pharaoh this 9th time, And Jehovah made strong the heart of Pharaoh. Hardened or made strong and obstinate, all readings agree. Which is Gods judicial act as before, upon Pharaohs making himself obstinate.

2. The effects of this spirituall judgment, are two,

- לא אנה
1. A denial to dismiss Israel, And he would not send them away. Readings concur. Here is a word would not, never used in this matter before, it note's he desired not, neither had any inclination to dismiss Israel, notwithstanding these 9 plagues past; it note's his wilful obstinacy. V. 27.
 2. A threatening of Moses upon the close, And Pharaoh said unto him, get thee from me take heed to thy self, add not to see my face; for in the day thou shalt see my face thou shalt dye. All readings agree in this, some read, Thou shalt be slain. Herein see the wretchedness of Pharaoh.

- Ver. 28.
1. He rebids him his presence, Be gone, be gone.

2. He items him maliciously, Look to yourself.

3. He inhibits him any more to looko him in the face, Add no more to see my face, 4. He threatens him bloodily, In the day thou shalt see me thou shalt dye; no mercy shall be shewn thee; see the desperate madness of a man hardened unto perdition. Ver. 28.

And observe.

- D. 1. Gods discontenting demands from sinners by his servants, occasions them to harden themselves.
- D. 2. God in justice giveth up to 9 times more hardness where sinners resist his judgments.
- D. 3. The more Persecutors are hardened, the more they oppress Gods Church. Ver. 27.
- D. 4. Desperate hardness makes men command Gods Ministers from them, when they faithfully speake for God.
- D. 5. Dogged items are the usual farewells of the wicked to Gods Servants.
- D. 6. Expulsion from their presence & threats of death are the usage of hardened sinners against Gods faithful messengers. Ver. 28.

In the fourth is the last reply of Moses in part, but not in whole, for before he leaveth him he gives him notice of the tenth plague at hand, which would get victory over him, Chap. 11. But here he onely complieth to his threats, yet in order to a further message which God gave him while he was standing there. We may note herein,

- Ver. 29.
1. An ironical commendation of his speech, And Moses said, thou hast spoken well, or right, Onkel. Sam. to the same, — So thou hast said, 70. It is well that thou saidst, &c. Ar. — Very well hast thou spoken, Syr. So let it be as thou hast spoken, Vulg. It is a sarcasm, or ironical scorn to him, it is very well said, agreed.

2. His bold resolution, I will not add more to see thy face, All readings concur. In this God confirms by Moses the word of Pharaoh, as a Prophecy, for he would not, and did not see him any more, unless when perished in the sea. And thus the Apostle writes of him, that he feared not the wrath wrath of the King, being so encouraged by faith in God.

And instructs us.

- D. 1. Under Gods directions Gods Servants may scorn the taunts of persecutors.
- D. 2. In justice God gives wicked men their desire sometimes, that his Servants shall not see them.
- D. 3. Undaunted courage doth God give by faith to his, against threats of proudest persecutors.
- D. 4. It is a sad farewell when God in his Ministers refuseth to see the face of the wicked, Ver. 29.

CHAP. XI.

Herein is continued the further reply of Moses unto Pharaoh before he went from him, concerning the tenth plague. Wherein must be observed,

1. The warning which God gave of it, Chap. 11. ver. 1, 8.
2. The issue of that warning foretold in a threefold event,

Concerning { 1. Phar. servants.
2. Moses.
3. Pharaoh.

3. The disposition of Israel to prepare themselves to be gone at the tenth plague, Chap. 12. ver. 1, 28.
4. The execution done, ver. 29, 30.
5. The events following, ver. 31, &c.
1. In the word of warning we have to consider,

1. What God spake to Moses, Cha. 11. ver. 1, 2, 3.
2. What Moses spake to Pharaoh, ver. 4, 8.

1. That which God spake to Moses about the tenth plague is in two particulars, 1. The prediction of the plague, ver. 1.

2. The direction which God gave him thereupon, ver. 2, 3.

1. The prediction which God gave Moses about the last plague runs thus, And Jehovah said to Moses, yet one plague will I bring upon Pharaoh and upon Egypt, afterward he will send you from hence; when he send you away, he shall thrusting thrust you out altogether. Sept. Onk. Sam. to the same, — There remains one calamity, &c. — They shall expel you hence. Syr. — with one plague I will touch, &c. And he shall compell you to go out. Vulg. Wherein note,

1. The prediction of the stroke, and therein,

1. The Author of it, Jehovah.

2. The subject to whom it was given, Moses.

3. The matter foretold, Yet I will bring one plague more upon Pharaoh and upon Egypt.

1. The inflictour, I, Jehovah.

2. The subject, Pharaoh and Egypt.

3. The infliction, One plague more.

Here it is expressed indefinitely, but afterward Moses tells it in special,

2. The prediction of the effect, two wayes,

1. Generally, after that he will send you hence.

2. Specially, When he shall dismiss you, He shall thrusting thrust you out altogether.

1. The earnestness of their dismissal.

2. The thoroughness of it is here discovered. A total full deliverance of Israel shall follow upon this.

Quest. When did God reveal this to Moses?

Answer. 1. It is thought by some at his first appearance, but not so likely, for God did not reveal all particulars at one and the same time, but at their several seasons to keep him up in believing and expecting. 2. It is most likely God gave him this discovery upon his last coming to Pharaoh; whereupon he gave him that peremptory answer that he would see his face no more. Thus God could and did appear.

Quest. What means this hast in thrusting them out?

Answer. A ready and full discharge of them without any further capitulation.

Note we.

- D. 1. When God warrants his Servants, they may well refuse to see the face of tyrans. Connection.
- D. 2. God hath his plagues in reserve which shall do, what none had done before on sinners.
- D. 3. One plague determined of God shall do more then 9 foregoing on his enemies.
- D. 4. Combined persecutors are joined in Gods plagues. Pharaoh and Egypt
- D. 5. In Gods own time he will get victory over his enemies, they shall yeeld.

D. 6.

D. 6. At Gods word oppressours shall be forced to dismisſe his Church readily and fully. Ver. 1.

2. Gods direction now followeth unto Moses for a message unto the people of Israel, upon this last plague discovered, where note,

Ver. 2.

1. The word directing him what to do, Speak now in the ears of the people, and they shall or let them ask a man from his neighbour, and a woman from her neighbour, vessels of silver and vessels of gold. Onk. Ar. Syr. Vulg. fame. — Privily, &c. — Garments. Sept. Sam. Herein note,

1. A commission for Moses to speak in the hearing of the people, which he must needs do by others among so many thousands, and the matter of his speech was to order the people, to do what God foretold. Ch. 3. 22.

2. The obedience required which was that men from their companions, and women from their neighbours should aske vessels of silver and gold, which are read Jewels, but probably they were instruments of several sorts, some greater and some lesse, these they were to aske. Ours, and most say by borrowing, and it may be so, yet it is not so necessary, for the word signifieth asking in several ways; and God had said before they should spoil the Egyptians, which might be by another kind of asking at that time. But take it as it is ordinarily conceived.

Quest. Was this a righteous act?

Ans. 1. It was Gods command, who can call that unjust? 2. God was disposer of all the earth, and therefore justly might appoint his people to demand and have. This can be no unrighteousness from the Lord of all.

2. The success attending this word is twofold,

Ver. 3.

1. Concerning the people, And Jehovah gave the people favour in the eyes of the Egyptians. Most readings agree. — I will give. Sam. Herein note.

1. The power ingratiating, Jehovah.
2. The subject ingratiated, Israel.
3. The grace itself, favour in the eyes of the Egyptians, to give what they would ask of them, this was Gods word. Shall give, &c.

Ver. 3.

2. Concerning Moses, Also the man Moses was very great in the land of Egypt in the eyes of Pharaohs servants, and in the eyes of the people. Onk. Vulg. fame. — Before the Egyptians, &c. Sept. — Was honorable, &c. Syr. — Moses was a very great Apostle in the land of Egypt with Pharaohs Captains, &c. Ar. Here the Samaritan edition inserts all spoken from God which afterward Moses declared unto Pharaoh; in these is not reported any favour shewed to Moses but that he was great, and so feared by them, though they loved him not. Here

1. The term of connection also, notes this to be of a different nature from the former, God gave them favour, but made Moses great.

2. The matter connected is the narration of the state of Moses, wherein may be noted,

1. The subject spoken of, the man Moses, not a despicable but an honorable man.

2. The condition spoken of him, that he was very great, and indeed by greatness terrible.

3. The witnesses of this greatness, Pharaoh, &c.

1. The land of Egypt.

2. Pharaoh.

3. All his servants, for unto them is Moses sent, small and great were afraid of him.

Learn we.

D. 1. God at his pleasure doth not onely give freedom to his people but fulner.

D. 2. God may command his servants to ask and have of their very enemies.

D. 3. It is no wrong to aske and take what God commands his people.

D. 4. The silver and gold of enemies God can give to his Church at his will. Ver. 2.

D. 5. Where God giveth charge to ask he mooveth hearts of enemies to give.

D. 6. God can make his servants not onely favorable to some, but terrible to others. Ver. 3.

2. The word of warning, which Moses from God delivered to Pharaoh followeth. Ver. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. Wherein,

1. He declares Gods midnight-walk in Egypt. Ver. 4.

2. Gods midnight-judgment. Ver. 5.

3. The midnight-cry of the Egyptians. Ver. 6.

4. Gods discrimination of Israel from Egypt. Ver. 7.

1. Gods egress or walk in Egypt is foretold, And Moses said, thus saith Jehovah, about midnight I am going out into the midst of Egypt. Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. fame.

— At midnight I will make my Angel walk thorough the country of Egypt. Ar. here note,

1. The messengers readiness to expresse Gods revelation annexed to his command.

2. The

2. The word of Jehovah himself now manifested.

1. The speaker. Thus saith Jehovah, not Moses, but the mighty Lord himself speaketh all that followeth in the 4 next heads noted, so that there is no doubt of them.

2. The speech which is a propheticall warning in all the particulars forenamed, 25.

1. His walk, and herein,

1. The party mooving, Jehovah himself.

2. The place of his walk, the midst of Egypt, the whole country.

3. The motion itself, I am going, which carrieth doubtles the dismal end of it, a going out to kill, as that passage be- hold I come as a thief. Such a motion is it, and that to destroy.

4. The time of this walk, at midnight, which was after the same day (wherein Moses spake to Pharaoh the 14 day of the month Nisan), a more terrible visitation it was by being in the dead of the night, when all thought themselves secure in their beds. This is the first word of warning.

Note we hence.

D. 1. When God reveals his mind to his Prophets they must speak it, and are ready.

D. 2. Gods true Prophets tell onely that which the Lord said himself.

D. 3. When visitations by creatures will not moove the wicked, God will come himself.

D. 4. It is easy for God to visit a whole land at once thorough and thorough.

D. 5. God takes his time at midnight sometimes to visit his enemies.

D. 6. Gods midnight-walks are dreadful visitations unto sinners. V. 4.

2. The next word which God speak's by Moses to Pharaoh is about the midnight judgement, And every first born in the land of Egypt shall dye from the first born of Pharaoh who sitteth on his throne, to the first born of the bond woman which is behind the mill, and all the first born of beasts. Sept. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. fame. — First-born of Pharaoh which was to come to sit upon his throne. Herein is foretold the fatal issue of Gods midnight walk.

1. Generally, the death of all the first born in Egypt.

2. Specially,

1. The first born of the King who was to succeed in the throne and kingdom.

2. The first born of the poorest vassal of Egypt, set out by that proverbial phrase. A bondwoman or prisoner grinding in the prison house; this notes the lowest rank of all the Egyptians. Ex. 12. 29. Judg. 16. 21. Such is said to be behind the mill because she turned it before her.

3. The first born of the beasts; and all these universally were slain and dyed.

3. The next word of God speaks of the midnight cry, And there shall be a great cry in all the land of Egypt, such as there hath bin none like it, neither shall there be added any at that. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. to the same. Wherein,

1. God threatens a deep sense of this plague; implied.

2. A grievous horror and howling among the Egyptians.

3. An unparalleled character, none should be like it to come, neither was any past. Ver. 6.

Quest. Did Jehovah go forth and do this himself?

Ans. 1. He himself doubtles was the first cause and author of it. 2. This hindered not but by his Angel he might execute it. 3. Yea and by good Angels, for the redemption of the Church. See Genes. 19.

Quest. Was it just to kill the children and let the fathers live who provoked God?

Ans. 1. The righteous Lord cannot but do righteously. 2. The Children as well as fathers are known to him, and the cause of his dealing with them. 3. He hath threatened to visit sins of fathers on Children, as the race of wickedness. 4. God did but reserve their fathers to another destruction. Chap. 14. 27.

Quest. Why were the beasts slain with them?

Ans. 1. It is Gods prerogative over creatures to make and destroye, punish them which way, and with what circumstance he pleaseth. 2. It was to take greater vengeance on the wicked possessors of them, beasts being considerable helps, and thereby they were the more plagued.

Quest. Why did God strike the first born?

Ans. 1. It is at Gods liberty to choose his mark for judgment, none may aske him why? 2. Yet God had threatened this before, because they oppressed Israel, Gods first born. Ex. 4. 22. 23.

Quest. Was there a first born in every house?

Ans. 1. No need is of pressing that. 2. In all houses where they were, they Fffff slain slain. 3. Where were none it is likely the chief of the family were smitten.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods midnight visitation aims at the first born and choicest of the wicked.

D. 2. Heirs of Kings and peasants God takes away in his midnight walk.

D. 3. The generations of the wicked perish before them, or with them.

D. 4. The first-born and choise of beasts God culls out and kills for the sins of men. Ver. 5.

D. 5. The grievousness of plagues is in the deep sense of and bitter cries under them.

D. 6. Unparallel'd horrors and cries hath God allotted to Egypt literal and spiritual. Ver. 6.

4. The next word of God is for discrimination of Israel under this plague on Egypt. Here,

1. The privilege of Israel is expressed, But against any of the sons of Israel shall not a dog move his tongue, against man or beast, Sam. same, ——— Shall not snarle or bark w. h. his tongue, Septuag. ——— The barking dog shall not hurt any, Onk. Syr. ——— Apud eos, &c. non mutiet, &c. Vulg.

1. The subject of this privilege, the sons of Israel Gods Church and choise portion.

2. The privilege itself expressed in a proverbial speech, A dog shall not move his tongue against man or beast in Israels tents, i. e. They shall be all at peace and in quietness. The dog is the wicked man here properly, Hof. 10. 21. Pl. 22. 16. 20. It lures with that, Job. 5. 16.

2. The reason of this privilege, That ye may know Jehovah doth marvellously separate between Egypt and Israel, Onk. Sam. Syr. Vulg. same, ——— What great things God will make glorious, Septua. ——— In what matter God distinguisheth the sons of Israel from the Egyptians, Ar. Herein the end of this privilege is shewed,

1. Generally, that God puts a difference between Israel and Egypt.

2. That he works wonderfully for Israels peace.

3. That he wonderfully separates Egypt to destruction.

Thus farre God speaks,

And instructs us.

D. 1. Gods determining in the midst of the cries of the wicked, his people shall be quiet.

D. 2. The dog -barking of the wicked against Gods Israel is restrained upon Gods Word.

D. 3. The Church of God and all theirs are in security when enemies are in the midst of shakings. Their bowels are in safety under Gods commands.

D. 4. In executing judgments God makes a wonderful difference between his Church and enemies. Sometimes in present, but alwayes at last.

D. 5. Gods mind is that hereby men should know him to be the discernor between the just and unjust. Ver. 7.

2. The last thing noted in this warning is the event of it, and this is threefold, delivered in the words of Moses,

1. The event concerning the Egyptians, And all thy servants shall come down to me, and shall bow themselves to me, saying, Go thou out, and all the people that is at thy feet, and after that I will go out, Whom thou leadest, Sept. ——— Ask me which is with thee, Onk. Ar. ———

Worship me, Ar. Syr. Vulg. which sometimes to render the Hebr. word. Wherein,

1. He foretels the case will be altered, and that those Nobles of Pharaoh, who together with himself were taunting at him, and the God of Israel, and hitherto had dared 9. plagues, yet now at last should yeeld, and that in 4. expressions,

1. They should come down to him, he was resolved to come at them no more.

2. That they should cringe and bow to him, who were usually taunting and despising him.

3. That they should desire him and Israel to be gon out of their coasts having felt Gods hand.

4. That upon this he was resolved to go, and not before, Then will I go out.

2. The event concerning Moses, And he went out from Pharaoh in heat of anger, Onk. Sam. to the same, ——— With vehemency of anger raised for him, Arab. ——— With great anger, Sept. ——— To angry, Vulg. ——— Septuagint. Herein are related,

1. The

1. The departure of Moses having done his last message from God to Pharaoh, he now tells him before he departs, what would be the event of this last plague, and withall giveth Pharaoh his desire and goeth away from him.

2. The manner of his departure, it was with rage and burning anger against such hardened and incorrigible sinners; this meek man was iraged with these hardened persecutors, and flung away in fury.

Quest. Did Moses well to be so angry? Ans. Yea. 1. The principle of it was the zeal of God. 2. The object of it was the most milchievous pride, obstinacy and rebellion against God, and cruel persecution of the Church. 3. The end of it was Gods glory in in scorning the scorner.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Gods instruments having done his message in his name, may well mind the event to enemies & themselves.

D. 2. Divine vengeance will make them come to his servants, who have discharged them their fight.

D. 3. Brow-beating persecutors may be made to stoop and bow to Gods despised servants.

D. 4. Powers that hold the Church captive may be forced to desire their departure full and free.

D. 5. Gods instruments will go and lead his Church from bondage, when he commands, and that victoriously.

D. 6. Highest anger against sin becomes the best of Gods servants.

D. 7. God makes his despicable instruments victoriously to scorn the powers that scorn him, Ver. 8.

3. The last event foretold is concerning Pharaoh, and that by Gods own discovery to Moses. Wherein,

1. His sin is discovered, And Jehovah said to Moses, Pharaoh shall not hear you, Ar. Vulg. to the same, ——— Will not acquiesce in you, or yeeld to you, Onkelos.

1. The discoverer of this sinful event is Jehovah.

2. The subject to whom it is discovered is Moses, that he might not be discouraged.

3. The sinner and the sin discovered Pharaoh, shall not hear you, that is, so as to believe this plague will come upon his first born; he will regard none of your words, he will by unbelief reject you and me.

2. Gods end in suffering and ordering this sin is discovered, That my wonders may be multiplied in the land of Egypt, Sam. Ar. Vulg. to the same, ——— That I may multiply my signes, &c. Sept. Onk. Syr. In general, the end is the manifestation of Gods glory in his judgments upon such prodigious sinners,

1. The matter to be manifested, Gods prodigious and wonderful signes of vengeance, his monstrous plagues and unheard of judgments.

2. The manner of manifestation, by multiplication of them, sending one wave or billow upon the neck of another, even to tenfold partial plagues, and then the sweeping vengeance at the red sea.

3. The place of this manifestation, the land of Egypt, from Pharaoh on the throne, to the captive on the dungeon; this God was resolved to make the stage or theatre of his vengeance, for a memorial to unbelieving hardened sinners, Ver. 9.

3. The means of bringing such prodigious vengeance upon such sinners is reported, which was the ministry of Moses and Aaron, And Moses and Aaron did all the wonders before Pharaoh, Readings do agree: Wherein is related,

1. The Ministers by name, Moses and Aaron.

2. The work of their ministry, they did all these prodigious things commanded them from the first to the last.

3. The presence wherein they were done. In the eyes of Pharaoh: they did them signally before him, but God did really and effectually; yet all these done in the sight of such a sinner, are an occasion to him of greater unbelief.

4. The judgment spiritual, which God notwithstanding in justice bringeth on him, And Jehovah made strong the heart of Pharaoh, and he sent not away the sons of Israel out of his land, ——— The Lord hardened, &c. Al readings agree. Here,

1. The Judge, Jehovah himself.

2. The subject of the judgment, in general Pharaoh, and in special his heart.

3. The judgment itself hardening, stiffning, making it obdurate and stubborn, not by infusing evil, but in justice giving him over to his own hearts lust, and to be hardened by Satan.

4. The fruit of this judgment, the further oppression of Gods Church. He would not send Israel away, but hold them captive. Thus farre is the word of warning about the tenth plague, and the events thereof foretold.

Fffff 2 Which

Which teacheth us.

- D. 1. God foreseeth, and sometimes maketh known that wicked sinners will not hear his Ministers sent to them.
- D. 2. Such refusal of the wicked to hear Gods Word foreruns usually some strange plagues.
- D. 3. God sometimes aims at the multiplying of prodigious judgments upon multiplied unbelief.
- D. 4. God makes the Theatre of his vengeance where he pleaseth.
- D. 5. Egypt's prodigious sin and vengeance are made exemplary by God to all ages. V. 8.
- D. 6. Gods Ministers do but his work and deliver his word, and sinners harden themselves by the same.
- D. 7. Ocular demonstration of Gods strongest plagues will not persuade sinners to believe.
- D. 8. Vpon such wilful hardning against his word, God justly hardens to destruction.
- D. 9. Sinners hardened by God will do all the mischief they can against him and his people, Ver. 10.

CHAP. XII.

IN this Chapter is finished former head of the first general part noted in the first division of this Book; which was into 2 general parts,

1. The history of Gods acts in Israels deliverance from the first to the nineteenth Chapter.

2. The history of the Churches state in Covenant, &c. settled.

Hitherto we have received the history of many events and acts of providence tending to Israels deliverance, we have the last here recorded, which is about the tenth plague, whereabout from Chap. XI. we have noted,

1. The warning of it. Chap. 11. from Ver. 1. to 8.

2. The issue of that warning. Ver. 8. 9. 10.

Now in order should follow the execution, but Moses inserts before it the history of Gods preparing Israel for their deliverance, upon this last plague, from Ver. 1. of Ch. 12. to the 28.

3. Here then followeth, Gods preparation of Israel to depart, which is done,

1. By Gods charge to Moses thereabout. Ver. 1. 20.

2. By Moses his charge to Israel. Ver. 21. 28.

In the former we may again observe,

1. Gods order in stating to Israel, their proper account of the year. Ver. 1. 2.

2. Gods charge to dispose them for deliverance by instituting for them a double ordinance unto their sanctification.

1. That of the passover. V. 3. 14.

2. The feast of unleavened bread. Ver. 15. 20.

1. God takes occasion before Israels departure to instruct and settle them as to a special account of the beginning of their year, distinct from the Egyptian account, and that to carry the memorial of their deliverance, And Jehovah had said to Moses and to Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying. Ver. 1. This month shall be unto you the head of the months; this shall be unto you the first month of the year. Ver. 2. Readings agree. In this passage we may fitly consider,

1. The term of connection and, which is properly copulative to the order of the history related by Moses, but not denoting the order of time, as if it did immediately follow in event upon that which was last spoken; for so it did not, as we shall see hereafter.

2. The matter connected is Gods institution or renovation of the Churches account of the year distinct from that observed in Egypt. Hereabout we may note,

1. The authority instituting and declaring it. Jehovah himself, the author of all time, and just disposer of the points of it unto creatures.

2. The trustees to whom God communicates this institution to be made known unto his Church, these are Moses and Aaron.

3. The place whence this is first promulgated, it was in the land of Egypt, before Israel was departed thence.

4. The manner of discovery; it was by speech, Jehovah spake to them, saying, or indeed rather had spoken to them, in the preterpluperfect tense, noting some longer time past than the preter-tense.

5. The matter discovered by God to them, which is a double injunction concerning their new account of the year.

1. This month shall be order it be the head of months. Ver. 2.

Herein considers

1. The subject spoken of demonstratively, this month, the name whereof in the Hebrew is Abib. Ex. 13. 4. and in the Caldee Nisam. Neh. 2. 1. This was about the vernal equinoctial usually containing part of four March and April.

2. The

2. The attributes spoken of it, and fastned upon it by God, it shall be to you my Israel, the head of months; therefore let it be so accounted by you; the nation of heads, though it be rendered by the beginning, and so truly often, as if it should note the order of the years beginning; yet it seems to note primacy and excellency of time here, it is the head, that is the chief and choise and best of months; which was made so of God by this present deliverance from Egypt, it was the best time of the year to them. So it seems most proper to note, for the next attribution seem's to note the order of beginning.

2. This shall be the first of the months of the year.

1. The subject is the same as before.

2. The attribute here is a term of order, which is, that it shall be the first of all the months in the year, that from thence the beginning of the year shall arise, and be accounted, the first of the 12 months, as to the Churches account.

Some Queries arise here,
Quest. When did Jehovah say this to Moses?

Ans. 1. Not on that day when he left Pharaoh, for the slaughter of the first born was to be that night. 2. Moses seems to insert all this passage from Ver. 1. to the 28 by a parenthesis between the warning and the execution of the 10th plague, which so well he could not report before.

3. The injunction for preparing the Lamb for passover on the 10th day of this month which was 4 days before, plainly sheweth that God spake this to Moses about the beginning of the 9th plague that they might have the Lamb in readiness on the 14th which was the day wherein Moses parted away in wrath from Pharaoh, and so of great trouble in Egypt.

Quest. Was this the first time of making this the first month of the year?

Ans. About this interpreters are divided, some think this was the first institution of it as a memorial of Israels deliverance out of Egypt. Others judge it only to be the restitution of the old account from the creation which by Israels dwelling in Egypt was very much lost and forgotten. To this Junius and others incline, to the former many others. The matter may be undetermined without much prejudice, because computations of times are so uncertain among men and something obscure in sacred record. The reasons for a supposed restitution are,

1. Noahs opening the Ark the first day of the first month judged to be in the spring equinoctial. Gen. 8. 13. If so, the account was before.

2. It is conceived that the Hebrews kept the same account, as the Caldees from whom they came, who begin from the vernal equinox.

3. It stands with as great reason that God may restore a day or time for a memorial of mercy as well as make one; but this is certain, that God did make this month eminent for Israels deliverance out of the house of bondage, therefore puts a title on it, to that of creation; if this were the first month from thence. And Christ also suffered for mans redemption in this month, wherein the passover was kept, he being the truth of it. John. 18. 28.

It instructs us.

D. 1. The method of Gods Spirit is arbitrary in relating one thing before, and another after.

D. 2. Jehovah usually by his Ministers makes known his mind unto his Church.

D. 3. God is pleased to order the Churches reformation sometimes in the place of their corruption. Ver. 1.

D. 4. The ordering of months and years is proper to God.

D. 5. To set one time before another and make it eminent for good is Gods prerogative.

D. 6. God is pleased to set a special account of time unto his Church. Ver. 2. And this may be demonstrated both in the law and Gospel, that it may know when to Worship him.

Now followeth Gods charge to Moses about instituting a twofold ordinance to sanctify his Israel before its removal at this time,

1. That of the passover. Ver. 3. 13.

2. That of unleavened bread. Ver. 14.

20. Thus farre God speaks in the former of these, we have to consider generally the institution of the second ordinance Sacramental to the Jewes, even the passover, about which note,

1. The authority instituting, Jehovah himself, who commands his Ministers to speak his mind.

2. The ministers to whom this institution is first declared, Moses and Aaron, they receive it from the Lord.

3. The subject for whom this institution was made, and to whom it was now declared. The congregation of Israel, the Church of God, setled among them, with a partition wall to all other nations.

Ver. 3. 4. The commillion to the former Ministers, Speak ye to all the congregation of Israel, saying, Readings do most agree. The 70 read, Speak thou, &c.

5. The matter in commillion to be spoken is Gods will about the institution of the paschever in all the words following to the end of the 13th verse. Wherein Gods will is revealed.

1. About preparation of it. V. 3. 4. 5.
2. About administration and use of it. Ver. 6. 12.

In the former we have to note these particulars.

Ver. 3. 1. The time of preparation named, In the tenth of this month, that is the 10th day. Readings agree. This was the season now appointed to prepare the matter of this paschever, whence we may see, that if Israel must begin this preparation on the 10th day, then this was spoken by God to Moses and by him to the people at least 4 dayes before, therefore the order of words doth not here note the order of time. This day is memorable for Israels going thorough Jordan. Ios. 4. 19. And, as may be gathered, Christ, on this day entered Jerusalem, to make out the truth of this paschever. Joh. 12. 1. 12.

Quest. Why is it terminated to the 10th day here?

Ans. 1. For time to prepare for this ordinance. 2. To type out what Christ fulfilled in it.

2. The will of God is here revealed about the substance of preparation, which is here twofold.

1. The principal and chief that must prepare this, noted under that title A man, that is, the chief ruling man, or head of the house and family.

2. The accessories that must joine in this preparation, and for whom it is prepared, and that is expressed under the notion for an house or household. This is also specified with a double proviso.]

Quest. Why one for an household and not more?

Ans. 1. Not to multiply paschevers.
2. That the whole of it might be eaten that night. 3. Yet allowing enough for the greatest. 4. To fit the truth. Christ one sacrifice for the whole household of faith.

Ver. 4. 1. That one lamb should be for one household which were sufficient for the eating of it. Ver. 3.

2. That if the household were too little for the eating of the lamb, then the next neighbours family was to be joined, and that care taken, that according to so many soules as were, the paschever might be fitted for them. Ver. 4.

Quest. How many were enough for one lamb?

Ans. 1. Some say ten was the number appointed. It is likely. 2. Discretion was to guide in choosing a sufficient one. 3. The will of God is discovered about the matter of the paschever to be prepared, and that in respect,

1. Of the kind of the creature, a lamb, or kid, of the sheepe, or goats. Ver. 3. 5. A little beast.

2. Of the quality, without blemish, perfect.

3. Of the sexe, it must be a male. Quest. Why a male, and that without blemish?

Ans. To signify Christ the truth, who was perfect in all. 1 Pet. 1. 19.

4. Of the age, it was to be the son of an year, that is, of the first year; this is the more remote matter or remotely considered, for all this as yet makes it not a paschever.

4. The will of God about the acts of preparation, which are here two,

1. Of separation from the flocks Ver. 3. 4. 5.

2. Of reservation, it was to be kept to the 14th day. Ver. 6.

In the latter discovery of administration, note.

1. Gods will about the subject of it, The whole Church of the congregation of Israel. Onkel. same. All the multitude.

Sept. Vulg. Congregation of the Synagogue, &c. Sam. All the people. Syr. Turba cæus. Ar. They are much to the same purpose, but the whole Church of the congregation of Israel is to the letter. Where note,

That this universal subject must be distinguished according to the work of administration, as each was capable of its part; for all were not fit to kill, though all might have their several privileges about the killing of it, for it was killed for all the congregation of Israel, though not by every one of it; the Church therefore generally is the subjectum cui, not the subjectum quod. Not all did minister in killing. For the head was to do it.

2. Gods will about the administration of this ordinance which doth consist in divers actions.

1. In killing it.

2. In striking the blood on the posts.

3. In eating it.

1. About the killing of it God hath determined.

1. The time, Between the two evenings. Sam. Toward the evening or sun setting. Sept. Syr. Vulg. Between the two settings. Ar. The afternoon, so the Jewes divided because of several services which they were bound to do before sun set. This seems to be about 3 a clock with us in the afternoon; that is about the 9th houre of the day, at which time Christ the true paschever died also. See the agreement with the type and truth. Matth. 27. 46. 50. Quest.

Quest. Was this 4th day the necessary time for this ordinance?

Answer. Yea, but in this case noted, when God dispensed with it. Numb. 9. ver. 11.

Ver. 6. 2. The action, They shall kill it. That is, cut the throat of the lamb thorough & thorough, and let out the blood with the life of it, which was also in way of sacrifice, though not by the hand of a Priest, as afterward the law required. So Christ our paschever was sacrificed for us. 1 Cor. 5. ver. 17.

2. Gods will in this administration is about striking of the blood, And they shall take of the blood, and give it upon the two sideposts, and the upper dore posts upon the house where they shall eat it. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. and Vulg. same.

1. The action commanded is twofold.

1. To take of the blood with a bunch of hyssop out of the basin, where it was saved, as Ver. 22.

2. To strike or sprinkle the two sideposts, &c. This doubtles was to be done by the head of the family, or his order. This typed Christs blood sprinkled.

2. The place was the houses, every one of them, wherein the Israelites did eat the paschever, and the special parts were the posts supporting the dore, and the upper dore posts, not the threshold. No blood to be trampled under foot.

3. The next thing commanded in the administration is about eating the paschever after it was slain and the blood sprinkled on the frontispice of the house, and hereabout now God commands,

1. The reason of eating it, And they shall eat the flesh in that night. Readings agree, i.e. about midnight after they could prepare and dress it, the night after the 14th day; wherein God took his walk about Egypt.

2. The manner of dressing it to be eaten.

1. Negatively, Not raw nor sodden at all with water, or in seething sodden with water. Readings agree.

2. Affirmatively, Roast with fire twice recorded, ver. 8. 9. Well setting out Christ his hot sufferings, and their speed.

3. The adjuncts to it, And with unleavened bread and bitter herbs shall they eat it. Or cakes. Ver. 39. Unleavened upon bitternes's they shall eat it: Letter. Sept. Sam. Ar. Syr. Same. With wild lettuce. Vulg. no difficulty is in the words; in the letter these things are adjoined; of which the truth typed out was afterward manifested in Christ. 1 Cor. 5. v. 7. 8.

4. The portion of it to be eaten, The head thereof with the legs thereof, and with the purtenance or inwards thereof. Readings agree. The meaning is that the whole was to be eaten; And thereby is set out for us the whole Christ to be believed and enjoyed. Ver. 9. No peccemal injoying of Christ.

5. The proviso added.

1. Prohibitive, And ye shall let no thing remaine of it untill the morning. Readings agree. All must be eaten at that supper. It may note present injoyment of Christ.

2. Corrective, And the remainder of it till the morning ye shall burn with fire. Readings to the same. This kept that from pollution; and may note the spirit of burning to consume all in us dissonant from Gods truth. Ver. 10.

6. The manner of eating is with respect to the subjects partaking, and herein are two things,

1. The mode itself, And thus shall ye eat it, with your loins girded, your shoes on your feet and your staves in your hand, and ye shall eat it in haste. Readings agree. In the letter this noted readines and speed in this ordinance to do Gods will, as they were to be ready to depart from Egypt.

Quest. Why is it called a Paschever?

Answer. Not from Gods passing thorough Egypt but over Israel, sparing them in that judgment.

2. The reason added, It is the Lords Paschever. Readings agree.

1. Jehovah was the Author of it.

2. Jehovah was the end of it.

3. Jehovahs grace was the meaning of it. Therefore just was it that they should manage it according to his will. Ver. 11.

1. The subject is the lamb signal.

2. The attribute, the truth. Christ.

3. Gods discovery of the reason of this institution which is expressly threefold.

1. The work of justice threatned that night on Egypt. And I will passe thorough the land of Egypt in this night, and will smite every first born in the land of Egypt from man even unto beast, and against all the Gods of Egypt will I do judgment. Here is a double threatning,

1. Against the first born of Egypt man and beast.

2. Against the Gods and Idols of Egypt who had bin set up against him, death and destruction to both.

2. The being of God asserted, I am Jehovah. Which confirms the judgment foregoing and the promise following; and withall warrants the institution of this ordinance thereupon. Ver. 12.

3. The promise of Israels deliverance in Egypts destruction expressed.

1. Signally, And the blood shall be to you for a signe upon the houses where you are. Readings the same. This is promised as a token to them for their comfort and assurance;

2. Litterally, and that is expressed.

2. He passeth over in mercy his poor people.

Ver. 13.

2. Negatively, And the plague shall not be upon you to destruction in my sitting upon the land of Egypt. Sam. Sept. to the same. — Death to destruction. Syr. Onk. — Destroying plague. Ar. Vulg. This was Gods discriminating grace to Israel, whereupon this passeeover was made the constant memorial. Ver. 13.

Quest. Were all these prescriptions always requisite to the right administration in this Sacrament?

Ans. 1. It is certain they were now necessarily requisite, and therefore must be performed. 2. Several things were not afterward in the law established, and therefore were occasionally enjoined at this time; as the taking it up the 10th day; which the law afterward mentions not, neither these circumstances of eating it with loins girded, &c. For the law required them not; and Christ himself did not so observe all. 3. All therefore that by the standing law was required, that was necessary to make the lamb the proper matter of this ordinance and to keep the administration pure.

And teacheth us.

Ver. 14.

4. The last thing added to this administration is an injunction from God to perpetuate this service, And this day shall be to you for a memorial, and ye shall feast it a feast to Jehovah throughout your generations; it is an everlasting statute, ye shall joyfully keep it, or by a statute of eternity. Onk. to the same. Sept. eternum dominum. — Ye shall celebrate a feast, &c. By an eternal decree. Sam. — Make it an everlasting law. Syr. — Celebrate in it a solemnity to God, &c. By eternal constitution. Ar. Ye shall celebrate by a perpetual worship. Vulg. In these we have a double statute concerning this ordinance of the Passeeover.

1. The first respect's time past, And this shall be unto you for a memorial. All readings agree in this, wherein the use of this ordinance is made memorative to keep in remembrance the literal deliverance of the Church from the Egyptian bondage; and this figurative unto deliverance from Egyptians spiritual bondage and hell.

2. The second statute respect's time to come, Ye shall joyfully feast it. &c. Wherein note,

1. The injunction, ye shall feast the feast to Jehovah.

1. Subject, ye.

2. Act, feast.

3. Term, Jehovah.

2. The subject enlarged, ye in your generations.

3. The authority satting this, it is by statute.

4. The duration of it, is by an everlasting statute.

Quest. Was the passeeover to endure for ever?

Ans. 1. Not simply for ever. 2. It was for the ever of their generations, which had an end. 3. It was for the ever, until the true passeeover was revealed. 4. In him, as the truth it is perpetuated, so long as God hath a Church on earth, for in him it is perfected.

And by it instructs us.

D. 1. Sacramental times and ordinances are monuments of mercies past.

D. 2. Such ordinances are made for future observation and benefit of souls in Christ.

D. 3. Passeeover-ordinances are feasts and joyfull repasts with God.

D. 4. Jehovah is the end terminating all passeeover-festivals, signal and real.

D. 5. Succeeding generations should be made better by passeeover-injoiments.

D. 6. Gods statute giveth forth a durance of passeeover-comforts for ever. Ver. 14.

2. The next charge of God to Moses is about another festival ordinance, which, how ever neerly adjoynted to the passeeover, yet was an ordinance distinct from it. This was the feast of unleavened bread for 7 days, by the observation of which also, God would have Israel sanctified and their deliverance from Egypt perfected. Within the compass of them, for on the seventh day following, it is gathered, that Pharaoh and his host were drowned in the sea, and on the same day Israel sang to God, as Ch. 15. Fun. Anal.

In the whole tract about this, we may observe, from Ver. 15. to 20th these particulars,

1. Gods commandment about the matter of this duty expressed several times

1. Seven dayes shall ye eat unleavened (cakes) as is expressed. Ver. 39. Even the first day ye shall make to cease the old leaven out of your houses. Ver. 15. Sept. Onk.

2. In the first on the 14th day of the month, at even ye shall eat unleavened (cakes) unto the 21st day of the month at even. Ver. 18.

— The 14th day beginning, 70 which was at even before. — In the month Nisan. Onk.

3. Seven dayes old leaven shall not be found in your houses. Sept. Onk. Ver. 19.

4. Ye shall not eat any thing leavened in all your habitations, ye shall eat unleavened bread, or cakes. Ver. 20. Sept. Onk.

— Ggg gg The

Ver. 15.

Ver. 18.

Ver. 19.

Ver. 20.

The same. In all which we have the same law expressed; wherein may also be considered.

1. The law itself delivered two ways,

1. Affirmatively, Ye shall eat unleavened cakes. Ver. 15. 17.

2. Negatively, and that in two particulars,

1. That leaven be not found in the houses of any of them. Ver. 19.

2. That leaven be not eaten by any soul among them. Ver. 20.

2. The time and space of this observation, expressed also two ways,

1. Generally, seven days shall this be observed. Ver. 15. 19.

2. Specially, by the beginning and end, the first and last of those seven.

Quest. Why was this feast to be kept seven days?

Ans. 1. Gods will was sufficient to terminate it to this time. 2. In these days God wrought out full deliverance for them. 3. As their temporal deliverance from Egypt was by a weeks memorial; our deliverance from spiritual Egypt and hell deserves and requires, as this types out, all our time.

1. The beginning was the 14th day of the first month at even when they killed the passover, which was the entrance upon the 15th day as to their account.

2. The end was the 21 day of the same month at even; which begun the 22 from the first to the 7th was it to be strictly observed. Ver. 15. 18.

2. Gods command as to the form of this ordinance which was to be an holy feast, And in the first day there shall be a convocation of holiness, and in the seventh day a convocation of holiness, shall be unto you, no work shall be done in them: only that which shall be eaten of every soul, that only shall be done by you.

And the first day shall be called holy, and the 7th day shall be holy to you, no servile work shall be done in them, besides what things shall be done for every soul, &c. Sept. — An holy solemnity, &c. to the which. Hebr. Onk. Sam. agreeeth. — The first day shall be solemn, and holy, and the seventh, &c. Syr. — The first day shall be an holy name, &c. Ar. — Holy solemn and venerable, &c. Vulg. In general this feast in the whole was intended for sanctification, and therefore the two extreme days, the first & the last are specially sanctified. Herein we have to note these particulars,

1. The law affirmative for the sanctification of the two days, There shall be in them a convocation or assembly of holiness, that is an holy assembly as the adjunct, or an assembly to sanctify God, as the end, or an assembly for holiness to be sanctified in the use of holy ordinances, as the object.

2. The law negative, No servile work must be done therein. Not common services.

3. The law exceptive which provides that labour only to be admitted, which was to provide food for every soul. V. 16.

Quest. Why were these two days appointed holy?

Ans. 1. Gods will is sufficient reason for any of his appointments. 2. Yet as is probably conjectured, the first day which was the 14th the sons of Israel went out of Egypt, which was the first of their deliverance; and one the last day, which was the 21st, Israel passed through the red sea, and the Egyptians were drowned and then the deliverance of Israel was perfected, for which they sang. Ex. 15. So it is conceived that on the 15th day they came to Succoth, on the 17th to Etham, on the 18th to Pi-hahiroth, where they stayed; on the 20th Pharaoh and his host appeared; and on the 21st Israel passed thorough the red sea and the Egyptians were all drowned. Im. in Com. Hereupon therefore rationally, the times of the initiation and perfection of this deliverance for Israel were made holy days for memorial by God.

Quest. Was this liberty allowed only to these holy days, might they not provide meat on the weekly Sabbath?

Ans. 1. It is thought by some Jews they might not, from that of Exod. 16. 23. 2. It is true they were forbidden to gather Manna that day. 3. But they were not forbidden to dress it, for had the portion for the sabbath been baked the day before, it had bin no miracle to have the manna preserved from corruption; which was Gods signal work to discriminate times and duties. Ver. 16.

3. Gods will is revealed about the reason of this command and feast enjoined, Ver. 17.

*And ye shall observe the unleavened cakes (or the feast of them) because in the body of the day, or in the self same day, I brought forth your armies out of the land of Egypt, therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an everlasting statute, or statute of eternity, by everlasting covenant. Onk. — Ye shall keep this command, &c. I will bring forth your power, &c. Sept. Sam. Syr. and Ar. agree with Hebr. — Ritu perpetuo. Vulg.*

1. Here we have the same command for matter and time and form twice inculcated.

2. The reason of it, Gods present act of delivering the armies of Israel out of Egypt.

3. The subject to whom, Israel in all their generations.

4. The authority injoining, which is Gods everlasting statute as was expressed before about the passover; that is, it was Gods statute for them, so long as the Church was included within their generations Ver. 17.

4. God

4. Gods will is here annexed about the penalty of transgressing this command, For every one who eateth leavened bread even that soul shall be cut off from Israel. Ver. 15.

Ver. 19. For every one that eateth that which is leavened even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, in the stranger and in the home-born of the land. Ver. 19. Readings agree. — Perish, rooted out, cut off and the like, utterly destroyed. Sept. Herein are expressed,

1. The sin, eating leavened bread.

2. The subject, every soul, Israelite or stranger, that was a profelyte, and shared in the mercies of Israel.

3. The punishment, such must be cut off from Israel, and from the congregation of Israel.

Q. What is it to be cut off? כרתה.

Ans. 1. It is generally conceived by the Hebrews that it was a cutting off by death. 2. The word is rendered by some elsewhere a cutting off from communion, and here, V. 19. He shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, which word verse the sixth with another is rendered the Church of the congregation. 3. Yet in some causes of high contempt of God and his ordinances, as God hath sometimes cut off by death some with his own hands, so he hath commanded in some cases such presumptuous sinners to be taken away from the earth by the Magistrate.

Quest. Is not this too heavy a doom?

Ans. 1. God alone is the judge of proportions in penalty. 2. The life of creatures is dear to God. He is not expensive of them. 3. Sins of infirmity in this kind are not so dangerous. 4. Presumptuous contempt of God both after past mercies, and when future salvation is held forth, and deserves it, what man must not justify God upon this account?

D. 3. From first to last of Gods appointment, leaven must cease and unleavened works be done. Ver. 15. 17. 18. 19.

D. 4. Unleavened services are appointed as a feast to Jehovah. 1. Cor. 5. 8.

D. 5. Such festivals in type and truth are aimed by God to holiness.

D. 6. Holy convocations are purely to sanctify the name of God and his people by holy duties.

D. 7. None of mans own works must come in to interrupt God at any time.

D. 8. Gods strictest service denieth not daily food to his servants, but allows it. Ver. 16.

D. 9. Days of deliverance by God should be days of unleavened feasting to him.

D. 10. Memorials of such days are suitable to the generations of the Church.

D. 11. Gods statutes alone must make such time to be observed by his people. Ver. 17.

D. 12. Having, and eating of leaven are both forbidden of God in sign and truth.

D. 13. Its divineness to sense blames from being broken by penalties.

D. 14. Cutting off from the Church from life and from heaven may accompany sin against Gods command of unleavened feasting both in type and truth. Ver. 15. 19.

2. The next help for Israels preparation to depart from Egypt is the charge which Moses gave to them, which with the issue of it is contained from Ver. 21. to 28, Wherein these things occur,

1. Moses converse with Israel about it. Ver. 21. 27.

2. Israels deportment upon the same. Ver. 27. 28.

1. In the former, these particulars are obvious,

1. The charge about preparing and killing the Paschal lamb.

2. The charge about sprinkling blood. Ver. 22. 23.

3. The charge for perpetual observation. Ver. 24. 27.

To the first. In this charge we have to note,

1. The accension of the elders by Moses, And Moses called for all the elders of Israel. Sam. Onk. תקראו Sept. El- ders of the sons of Israel. Syr. Vulg. — Sons of Israel. Ar.

Ver. 21.

1. The

The same. In all which we have the same law expressed; wherein may also be considered.

1. The law itself delivered two wayes,

1. Affirmatively, Ye shall eat unleavened cakes. Ver. 15. 17.

2. Negatively, and that in two particulars,

1. That leaven be not found in the houses of any of them. Ver. 19.

2. That leaven be not eaten by any soul among them. Ver. 20.

2. The time and space of this observance, expressed also two wayes,

1. Generally, seven dayes shall this be observed. Ver. 15. 19.

2. Specially, by the beginning and end, the first and last of those seven.

Quest. Why was this feast to be kept seven dayes?

Ans. 1. Gods will was sufficient to terminate it to this time. 2. In these dayes God wrought out full deliverance for them. 3. As their temporal deliverance from Egypt was by a weeks memorial; our deliverance from spiritual Egypt and hell deserves and requires, as this types out, all our time.

1. The beginning was the 14th day of the first month at even when they killed the passover, which was the entrance upon the 15th day as to their account.

2. The end was the 21 day of the same month at even; which begun the 22 from the first to the 7th was it to be strictly observed. Ver. 15. 18.

2. Gods command as to the form of this ordinance which was to be an holy feast, And in the first day there shall be a convocation of holines, and in the seventh day a convocation of holines, shall be unto you, no work shall be done in them: onely that which shall be eaten of every soul, that onely shall be done by you.

And the first day shall be called holy, and the 7th day shall be holy to you, no servile work shall be done in them, besides what things shall be done for every soul, &c. Sept. An holy solemnity, &c. to the which. Hebr. Onk. Sam. agree. The first day shall be solemn, and holy, and the seventh, &c. Syr.

The first day shall be an holy name, &c. Ar. Holy solemn and venerable, &c. Vulg. In general this feast in the whole was intended for sanctification, and therefore the two extreme dayes, the first & the last are specially sanctified. Herein we have to note these particulars,

1. The law affirmative for the sanctification of the two dayes, There shall be in them a convocation or assembly of holines, that is an holy assembly as the adjunct, or an assembly to sanctify God; as the end, or an assembly for holines to be sanctified in the use of holy ordinances, as the object.

2. The law negative, No servile work must be done therein. Not common services.

3. The law exceptive which provide's that labour onely to be admitted, which was to provide food for every soul. V. 16. Quest. Why were these two dayes appointed holy?

Ans. 1. Gods will is sufficient reason for any of his appointments. 2. Yet as is probably conjectured, the first day which was the 14th the sons of Israel went out of Egypt, which was the first of their deliverance; and one the last day, which was the 21st, Israel passed through the red sea, and the Egyptians were drowned and then the deliverance of Israel was perfected, for which they sang. Ex. 15. So it is conceived that on the 15th day they came to Succoth, on the 17th to Etham, on the 18th to Pi-hahiroth, where they stayed, on the 20th Pharaoh and his host appeared, and on the 21st Israel passed thorough the red sea and the Egyptians were all drowned. Jim. in Com. Hereupon therefore rationally, the times of the initiation and perfection of this deliverance for Israel were made holy dayes for memorial by God.

Quest. Was this liberty allowed onely to these holy dayes, might they not provide meat on the weekly Sabbath?

Ans. 1. It is thought by some Jewes they might not, from that of Exod. 16. 23. 2. It is true they were forbidden to gather Manna that day. 3. But they were not forbidden to dress it, for had the portion for the sabbath been baked the day before, it had bin no miracle to have the manna preserved from corruption; which was Gods signal work to discriminate times and duties. Ver. 16.

3. Gods will is revealed about the reason of this command and feast enjoined, Ver. 17.

And ye shall observe the unleavened cakes (or the feast of them) because in the body of the day, or in the self same day, I brought forth your armies out of the land of Egypt, therefore shall ye observe this day in your generations by an everlasting statute, or statute of eternity, by everlasting covenant. Onk. Ye shall keep this command, &c. Sept. Sam. Syr. and Ar. agree with Hebr. Rm perpetuo. Vulg.

1. Here we have the same command for matter and time and form twice inculcated.

2. The reason of it, Gods present act of delivering the armies of Israel out of Egypt.

3. The subject to whom, Israel in all their generations.

4. The authority injoining, which is Gods everlasting statute as was expressed before about the passover; that is, it was Gods statute for them, so long as the Church was included within their generations Ver. 17.

4. God

4. Gods will is here annexed about the penalty of transgressing this command, For every one who eateth leavened bread even that soul shall be cut off from Israel. Ver. 15.

Ver. 19. For every one that eateth that which is leavened even that soul shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, in the stranger and in the home-born of the land. Ver. 19. Readings agree. — Perish, rooted out, cut off and the like, utterly destroyed. Sept. Herein are expressed,

1. The sin, eating leavened bread.

2. The subject, every soul, Israelite or stranger, that was a profelyte, and shared in the mercies of Israel.

3. The punishment, such must be cut off from Israel, and from the congregation of Israel.

Q. What is it to be cut off? נכרתה.

Ans. 1. It is generally conceived by the Hebrewes that it was a cutting off by death. 2. The word is rendered by some elsewhere a cutting off from communion, and here, V. 19. He shall be cut off from the congregation of Israel, which word verbe the sixth with another is rendered the Church of the congregation. 3. Yet in some causes of high contempt of God and his ordinances, as God hath sometimes cut off by death some with his own hands, so he hath commanded in some cases such presumptuous sinners to be taken away from the earth by the Magistrate.

Quest. Is not this too heavy a doom?

Ans. 1. God alone is the judge of proportions in penalty. 2. The life of creatures is dear to God. He is not expensive of them. 3. sins of infirmity in this kind are not so dangerous. 4. Presumptuous contempt of God both after past mercies, and when future salvation is held forth, and deserves it, what man must not justify God upon this account?

Learn we here.

D. 1. Passover mercies and unleavened duties are joined together by the Lord.

D. 2. Gods full time must be kept in unleavened duties toward him. 7 dayes.

2. The next help for Israels preparation to depart from Egypt is the charge which Moses gave to them, which with the issue of it is contained from Ver. 21. to 28, wherein these things occur,

1. Moses converse; with Israel about it. Ver. 21. 27.

1. The charge about preparing and killing the Paschal lamb.

2. The charge about sprinkling blood. Ver. 22. 23.

3. The charge for perpetual observance. Ver. 24. 27.

To the first. In this charge we have to note,

1. The accession of the elders by Moses, And Moses called for all the elders of Israel. Sam. Onk. וְכָל זְקֵנֵי יִשְׂרָאֵל Sept. Elders of the sons of Israel. Syr. Vulg. — Sons of Israel. Ar.

1. The

1. The term of connection here knits the obedience of Moses unto Gods command.

2. The matter connected immediately, is his call of assistants, wherein,

1. The power calling, Moses deputed of God, as we read before, V. 3.

2. The parties called, The elders of Israel, who were not so filed for age as for place, being the heads of the tribes.

3. The call itself was a convocation of them to come unto him.

Quest. Why did he call for these?

Answer. 1. For assistance in so general a work, as his orders before directed him. 2. For convenience he called no more but these, that might speak to all the families under them, which was not possible for Moses himself to do.

3. The charge which he giveth them about the Passover, which is twofold though here joined,

Ver. 21. 1. A charge for preparing it, Draw out & take for you the little beast, the lamb or kid for, or according to your families. Sam. same.

Go and take a lamb for your selves according to your kindreds, Sept. Vulg. — Of the sons of the sheep by your families, Onk. — Quickly take for your selves sheep, &c. Syr. — Arise and take to your selves sheep, &c. Ar. Here we have to observe these terms,

1. The act commanded, twofold,

1. Separation from others, Draw out,

2. Reception for Gods use, Take it, i. e. Sequester from common to spiritual use.

183 2. The object, a little beast of sheep or kids, here it notes not an individual, but the creature in its kind designed to his use. This lamb or kid spoken of, Ver. 3. 4.

3. The subject for whom this was to be taken, For your selves. All you seed of Israel.

4. The regulation of the work, according to your families, that is so fitted for the eating of it by a convenient number, as Ver. 4.

Ver. 21. 2. A charge for execution, And kill the passover, Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. the same.

1. The act here, is the first, about administration, which was killing or sacrificing, cutting the throat of lamb or kid, and letting out the blood into a basin.

2. The object of this act is figuratively express, the passover; now this was Gods act in passing over the houses of the Israelites in his slaughter of the Egyptian first born; this could not be slain; but this is metonymically applied to the lamb which was the signal of the promise, which God made to pass over them which is a sacramental expression and is usual with Gods Spirit in the Scripture, sometimes calling the sign by the name of the thing signified, as here; and sometimes attributing to the truth the name of the sign, as 1. Cor. 5. 7.

Quest. Were these actions of preparation and execution charged together?

Answer. Surely we must presume, and that on good grounds, that Moses gave his charge to Israel according to Gods charge unto him; which though given together at one and the same time; yet the work of preparation was to be done on the 10th and the execution upon the 14th day, which was the expresse charge of God to Moses, Ver. 3. 6.

We observe hence.

D. 1. Faithfulness in Gods Ministers binds them to present obedience and discharge of trust. Connect.

D. 2. Instruments called of God to rule and teach the Church may call others to assist.

D. 3. Multitudes of soules cannot be informed of Gods will, without order in some over them to guide them.

D. 4. Commands from God to heads of families reach to all under them. Eldership is needful.

D. 5. Preparation to and execution of Gods lawes for worship must be observed in his time.

D. 6. Passover-preparation and administration must be made by Gods rule. Ver. 21.

Now followeth the charge of Moses about the sprinkling of blood according as he received it, wherein we have,

1. The command from God repeated and amplified for their understanding. ver. 22. Herein,

1. The charge about sprinkling the blood, And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and shall dip in the blood which is in the basin or vessels, and ye shall make it touch or come to the upper dore post and to both the side posts of the blood which is in the basin. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. the same. — Of the blood of the dore, Sept. — Threshold. Vulg.

1. Here we have specified the instrument of sprinkling, a bunch of hyssop; however this word be controverted among the Hebrewes, the Apostle so expresseth it Heb. 11. 28.

2. The actions commanded.

1. Dipping the hyssop into the blood in the basin.

2. Striking it upon the upper lintel and two side posts.

2. The charge of keeping close within dores,

Ver. 22. dores, And none of you shall go out of the dore of his house until the morning. Readings agree. This was implied in Gods charge to Moses, but he expresseth it more punctually to Israel, that they might not rush upon the destroyer. Ver. 22.

Quest. Why doth God so confine them to the house now?

Answer. 1. God could save any where, his power is not limited. 2. God chooseth this course to save them, from the destroyer, as fit and rational when no more extraordinary course was necessary.

Ver. 23. 2. The reason of this charge he giveth, as God gave him, For Jehovah will passe through to smite Egypt, and he will see the blood upon the upper dore post, and on the two side posts, and Jehovah will passe over the dore, and will not grant the destroyer to come into your houses to smite. Sam. Vulg. to the same, Sept. same. &c. & after. And the Lord shall be revealed, &c. and will have mercy on the dore, &c. Onk. Syr. — On him that is gone into it. Ar. It is the same reason which God gave. Ver. 12. and 13. Herein note,

1. Gods passage over Egypt to destroy.

2. Gods passe over to Israel for salvation. This discrimination of Gods motion among his enemies and to his Church is the reason of his command for sprinkling blood. Ver. 23.

Learn we.

D. 1. In passover-sacrifice blood sprinkled must be used to apply its virtue.

D. 2. Faith is the true bunch of hyssop to sprinkle souls with passover-blood. Ps. 51. 7.

D. 3. Dore and posts are sprinkled onely with respect to souls within.

D. 4. Such as expect Gods salvation must keep in that place where God will give it. Ver. 22.

D. 5. God hath his passe of vengeance as of mercy, as he pleaseth, a thorough passe to kill, and an overpasse to save.

D. 6. Gods eyes are upon his signals of Covenant, when obediently observed for good.

D. 7. No destroyer can smite until God grant a commission to him. Ver. 23.

3. The next charge of Moses is for a perpetual observation of the passover-ordinance, and all its attendants such as he received from Jehovah. ver. 24. 27. Herein we may note,

1. The command for observation, and that two ways,

1. Generally to all Israel without respect to place, And ye shall keep or observe this word or thing for a statute to thee, and to thy sons for ever. Sept. same. Paktum. Onk. Sam. — And this law, Syr. — Keep this command. Ar. — Legitimum. Vulg. from Sept. Here occurs to observation these terms,

1. The subject of this charge, ye and your posterity, as the Church of God then surviving.

2. The injunction, which commands these particulars,

1. A duty, to observe this thing, i. e. the whole will of God about the least of passover, and unleavened bread, this must be kept.

2. The specification of it, by statutes, it is not a work to be done arbitrarily, but upon Gods statute, so it is said, keep it as an ordinance or statute; that which God command's.

3. The duration of it, for ever must this be kept, i. e. for the ever of that Church-state: for longer it could not continue. Ver. 24.

2. Specially is this commanded with respect unto a special place, And it shall be when ye come into the land which Jehovah will give you, as he hath spoken, then ye shall keep this service, Sept. Onk. Worship service. — This worship in this month, Sam. Syr. Ar. — These ceremonies. Vulg. Herein are obvious,

1. The accomplishment of a promise supposed.

1. The promise supposed, Jehovah spake it.

2. The performance supposed, Jehovah will give you.

3. The supposition supposed, When ye come to that land.

2. A duty enjoined thereupon. That ye shall keep this service, i. e. in that land ye shall observe this ordinance of worship.

Quest. Was all that to be observed which was here given in charge?

Answer. 1. Not these of sprinkling blood and keeping within dores, for these and some others concerned this time onely. 2. All other things about this ordinance confirmed by the law.

Num. 9. were observed in their generations.

Quest. Were they not to observe this until they came into the land of promise?

Answer. Yea they did keep it in the second year after they came out of Egypt by command. Num. 9.

2. After this it is not read of their keeping

G g g g g 3

ping

ping it untill their entrance into Canaan by Joshua. Chap. 3. 10.

3. Both this and circumcision were long intermitted, and the cause likely might be Israels temptations and Gods wrath as to the time appointed.

This informeth us:

- D. 1. Gods redeemed Israel are bound to observe his statutes.
 D. 2. All that Gods law require's must be returned to him without failing in any thing.
 D. 3. Posterity are engaged to observe Gods will, as well as surviving souls, for ever. Ver. 24.
 D. 4. Gods word is the rule of his performance to his Church for Canaan in type and truth.
 D. 5. Gods performance is exact according to the word that he hath spoken.
 D. 6. Gods promise performed in engaging souls to observe the duty commanded. Ver. 25.

2. Direction for observation of this in due manner as to posterity: where we have also to note,

Ver. 26. 1. A case supposed, And it shall be when your sons shall say unto you, what is this worship? Septua. Onk. Syr. Ar. Service, Sam. Religion, Vulg. Herein note,

1. It is supposed that posterity must be informed about this matter.

2. It is supposed that souls may question the service now enjoined, Ver. 26.

Ver. 27. 2. A resolution provided, And ye shall say, or then, It is the Sacrifice of the Passeever to Jehovah, who passed over the houses of the sons of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses, Sep. Vulg. Sam. fame. The Sacrifice for mercy, Onk. Of propitiation, Ar. Syr. When God was propitious, &c. Syr. Here note,

1. The nature of this ordinance described, It is the Sacrifice of the Passeever to Jehovah.

1. The general nature, a Sacrifice, herein was propitiation held out in type, Christ being the truth.

2. The special nature of the Passeever Sacrifice, which is a Sacrament as well as a Sacrifice.

3. The object of all terminating it, Jehovah.

2. The reason of it, which carrieth two branches,

1. Smiting the Egyptians, the Churches oppressors.

2. Saving Israel in the midst of all dangers, delivering them and their houses from the Destroyer.

Quest. Were parents to expect their children asking?

Ans. 1. That may not be conceived, for nature taught parents to instruct them first. 2. It imports children should be put in a way of inquiring after religion. 3. The summe is that parents should catechize children, and fit them for Gods worship.

Quest. Why was this answer ordered?

Ans. To join doctrine, word, and instruction to signals, which maketh such to be Sacraments.

Quest. Were all these children admitted?

Ans. Not all, but such as did understand the ordinance and reason of it; as may be reasonably gathered from hence, that God would have them instructed so soon as they were capable of observing these Ordinances of God.

Note we hence.

- D. 1. Gods wisdom foreseeth the succeeding generations of his Church, and provide's for their instruction.
 D. 2. It is accounted meet by God that children should aske and receive instruction about his holy Worship.
 D. 3. It is Gods mind that from infancy the children of the Church be taught to serve God with understanding, Ver. 26.
 D. 4. Parents are bound to know the nature of Gods ordinances, and to teach their children.
 D. 5. The doctrine of Sacraments must be declared, as well as the signals used to make them true.
 D. 6. In the Passeever was a Sacrifice for propitiation as well as a sacramental memorial.
 D. 7. Deliverance from wrath and destruction is the full blessing of the Passeever in type and truth.
 D. 8. Jehovah must terminate all Passeever Worship, legal and evangelical.
 D. 9. Not onely Worship, but the reason of it, must be known by all that that will give God reasonable service, Ver. 27.

2. The next thing obvious is Israels return to the charge of Moses, which is evident in two heads,

Ver. 27. 1. In their worship of God and thankfulness to him, And the people bowed the head; and bowed themselves, Hebr. Samar. Bowing down worshipped, Sept. Onk. Vulg. Bowed their knees, and worshipped the Lord, Ar.

1. The subject of this return is laid to be the people, that is, such of them who heard of this command of God unto them.

2. The return itself, which was the glorifying God upon the account of all these discoveries, Wherein note,

1. The matter of it was divine worship and adoration, expressed unto Jehovah.

2. The manner of performing it,

1. In faith, they eye God in it.

2. In humility, bowing souls and bodies.

3. In integrity, worshipping God with the whole man, Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 2. In their obedience, And the sons of Israel went away, and did as Jehovah commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they. All readings agree;

1. The term of connection knits obedience unto worship.

2. The matter connected, Israels obedience, where are,

1. The subject, the sons of Israel, Members of the Church.

2. The object of this obedience, Jehovah, who gave law and command unto Israel.

3. The rule of obedience, Gods command to Moses and Aaron, they went away with dispatch, and

4. The obedience itself, they did the will of God in all things commanded about the Passeever and unleavened bread fully.

We observe.

- D. 1. Worship of God in faith, humility, and integrity, is the fittest way of expressing thanks to him.
 D. 2. Gods revelation of grace in providences & ordinances deserve praise from his people.
 D. 3. Worship of God and obedience to him are well coupled, Ver. 27.
 D. 4. Dispatch in obedience is very requisite in Gods Israel.
 D. 5. Sons of Israel are fit to give worship and obedience, & Jehovah onely to receive it.

D. 6. Obedience and worship must be regulated by Gods Word onely.

D. 7. As God gives to Ministers, so the Church must receive, & do exactly, Ver. 28.

4. In this history of the tenth plague threatened to Egypt, we have the execution of it reported, Ver. 29, 30. Wherein we have to note,

1. The history of the execution itself, And it was at midnight, and Jehovah smote every first born in the land of Egypt, from the first born of Pharaoh, that was sitting on the Throne, unto the first born of the captive which was in the house of prisons, and every first born of the beast, S. pt. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. same, Killed, &c. Who was to sit on the throne of the Kingdom, Onk. The word of the Lord killed, Targ. Jonathan. In the house of prisoners, Onkelos. Here the execution answered the threatening as it was foretold, Chap. 11. ver. 4. 5. Wherein these terms are obvious, Ver. 29.

1. The time of execution, And it was in the midst of the night. The secure time for sleeping, the darke time, the unexpected time, Matt. 25. 5. 6. 1. Thess. 5. 1. 2. Job. 34. 20. Gods time of advantage it was, his midnight visitation.

2. The execution itself, wherein we may note,

1. The author of it, Jehovah by his destroying Angels; the action is here attributed to him.

2. The act of execution, which is a smiting unto death; he killed or slaughtered.

3. The object of this execution set forth,

1. Generally, every first born in the land of Egypt.

2. Specially, three sorts expressed,

1. The first born of Pharaoh, sitting on the throne, or who was to sit on it.

2. The first born of the poor beggar, the captive in the prison house.

3. The first born of beasts, all were slaughtered in one hour, Ver. 29.

2. The narrative of the evidence of it by the impression made on Pharaoh, and the Egyptians testifying it, And Pharaoh rose up in that very night or he and all his servants, and all the Egyptians, and there was a great cry in Egypt, for there was not an house where was not a dead. Readings agree. There lay not one dead; Vulg. Herein we have to note, Ver. 30.

1. The rousing of Pharaoh and the Egyptians at midnight; destruction giveth them an alarm, and their beds cannot hold them, King, Princes and people, a sad night waking.

2. Their cry and howling all over Egypt;

gypt; wo and alas to us, this is a doleful night.

3. The reason of it was, the evident execution universally made throughout Egypt, expressed exclusively or by way of denial, there was not an house, where there was not in that hour, one found dead, an unheard of execution evidenced by their cry.

Quest. Was there but one dead in an house?

Answer. There might be all the first born, men, women and children.

Quest. Might not this be usually by common plague?

Answer. No, this was miraculous by God himself.

1. In singularity of it. None but the first born and chief of men and beasts were slain Pl. 105. 16. Pl. 71. 51. Pl. 135. 8. Pl. 136. 10.

2. In the universality of the execution on these only; in every house this execution was done where they were, and not one excepted.

It instructs us.

D. 1. Gods vengeance is as surely executed on enemies as threatened, when he hath secured his own.

D. 2. Midnight-threatnings must have midnight-executions.

D. 3. Jehovah himself will see that his judgments threatened be executed.

D. 4. It is Gods miraculous distinguishing judgments to kill the first born only.

D. 5. King and beggar fare alike for sin in the time of Gods vengeance.

D. 6. Choice of beasts as well as men God striketh for mans sin. Ver. 29.

D. 7. Vengeance makes a terrible rousing to the wicked from their midnight rest.

D. 8. Gods wrath makes the wicked howl in their midnight wakings.

D. 9. It is Gods eminent stroke when no house escapes without the slaughter of some. Ver. 30.

5. The events consequent unto the 10th plague is the last thing noted in the history of it which begun with the 11th Chapter; now the events were these,

1. Israels egress from Egypt with the first dayes stage. Ver. 31. to 36. from Ver. 37. to the ver. 19. of Ch. 13.

2. Gods moving with them to the second stage.

3. Gods moving with them to their third stage. Ch. 13. Ver. 20. 22.

4. Gods ordering their fourth stage and events there. Ch. 14. Ver. 1. 14 To Pihahiroth.

5. Gods moving them thence through the red sea together with providences annexed, from Ver. 15. of Chap. 14. to Ver. 21. of Ch. 15. And also Gods conducting them from the red sea unto the wilderness of Shur and therein to Marah. Ex. 15. 22. 26. All was to one stage.

6. Gods conveying them from thence to Elim. Ver. 27.

7. Gods carrying them from Elim to the wilderness of Sin with events there; Chap. 16.

8. Gods directing their journey from Sin to Rephidim, with the providences there, Chapters 17. 18.

9. Gods guiding them from thence to the wilderness of Sinai, even to the mount of God with all the discoveries of God there, Chap. 19. and to the end of this book, wherein we have the delivery of Gods Covenant which was the second general part observed in the first division of this book. Of these in their order.

To the first event Israels egress out of Egypt to their first stage. Ver. 31. 36. Wherein,

1. Their full dismissal is given. Ver. 31. 32. 33.

2. Israels preparation to march. V. 34.

3. Israels spoil of the Egyptians at their departure. Ver. 35. 36.

In the former of these we have to note, 1. The call to Moses, And he called for Moses and Aaron by night, and said, Call them, &c. Readings agree. Where are obvious,

1. The connecting this call and the consequent thereof unto the dread execution and its impression it follows speedily.

2. The call itself. Wherein observe, 1. The party calling, Pharaoh not by himself, but by his servants, Nobles and the like.

2. The parties called unto, Moses and Aaron, whom he had forbidden his presence upon pain of death, yet now is he forced to seek unto them, though it is probable they saw not his face any more.

3. The time of calling, In the very same hour of the night when vengeance roused the Egyptians.

4. The manner of calling or license to depart. Wherein he giveth them,

1. Liberty for their bodies, Rise up, go forth from the midst of my people, both you and the sons of Israel. Readings agree. Here there their persons are set at liberty from bondage and slavery in Egypt from the greatest to the least; you and yours go hastily.

Ver. 31. 2. Liberty of conscience, And go serve ye Jehovah as ye have spoken. Or according to your words, or go Woship, Readings are the same. Now he begins to yield God his due, and let his people worship him according to his will; the terrors of the almighty made him yield. ver. 31.

Ver. 32. 3. Liberty of their estates is granted, Also take your flocks and your herds as ye have spoken, Your sheep and your oxen. Readings agree. As ye desired. Vulg. Nothing of difficulty is here, but a free licence is given Israel to go out with all their substance.

Ver. 32. 4. He makes petition for a blessing from them at their departure, And go and bless me also, Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. same. Pray for me, Onk. Cause me to obtain mercy. Ar. wherein note,

1. His connection of Israels interest in God.

2. His sense of injury in detaining them.

3. His hypocrisy in desiring a blessing from them, for he fought nothing but present deliverance from death, being now terrified by Gods mighty work. Ver. 32.

Ver. 33. 3. The urgency of them to haste out of Egypt, And Egypt was urgent upon the people, &c. Ver. 33. Wherein we have further to consider.

1. Their work, And the Egyptians were urgent or prevalent on the people, to speed or send them away out of the land. Readings are to the same purpose. Only variety of expressions; they forced, pressed, prevailed, put stress upon the people, even thrusting them out to depart from Egypt.

1. The parties urging, Egyptians, oppressors.

2. The parties urged, the people of Israel hitherto kept in slavery.

3. The urgency itself, they used a kind of violence by intreating and persuading.

4. The issue was to speed them out of the country. Ex. 11. 8.

Ver. 33. 2. The reason of this urgency, For they said we are all dead men. Readings to the same. Some Rabbinis adde; within an howre we shall die, if these be not gone; the reason implies,

1. That they were sensible the detaining of Israel was the cause of the slaughter in their houses.

2. The terrible impressions of the fear of death upon their Spirits. Pl. 105. 38.

3. The great desire of escaping this plague.

Which instructs us

D. 1. Vengeance from God can make his rebellious servants to be called for by his enemies.

D. 2. Persecutors may invite, and the persecuted be invited by them, upon Gods overruling judgment.

D. 3. Powers persecuting overpowered may command liberty to the persons of Gods Israel, whom they have restrained.

D. 4. As grace separates the Church from the world, so vengeance makes the world separate from Gods Church.

D. 5. Gods prediction of the liberty of his Church exactly is performed in his time.

D. 6. God can and will make worldly powers give liberty of conscience to his Church for worshipping of him, as God commands, and they desire. Ver. 31.

D. 7. God at his pleasure freeth not only persons but estates and substance for his Churches comfort.

D. 8. Persecuting powers by Gods judgments may be convinced that Gods Israel is a blessed, and a blessing people, so as to desire a part with them. Ver. 32.

D. 9. God can make persecutors not only hypocritically willing, but urgent to set the Church speedily at liberty.

D. 10. Apprehension of guilt injuring Gods Church, and of death executed therefore by God, may force oppressors to speed Israels deliverance. Ver. 33.

2. Now followeth Israels preparation to be gone according to the urgency of the Egyptians, And the people took up their dough or kneading troughs, bound up in their cloaths upon their shoulders. V. 34. Readings are much to the same. — Only as it was in their troughs. Syr. — Their cold meat being bound up in towells and put on their shoulders. Ar. — And their baking vessels being tied in their cloaths about their necks.

Herein is made good that of Moses that they would leave nothing behind them, their very dough they carry with them. We may note,

H h h h h

1. The

1. The term connecting Israel's readiness to go upon the Egyptians' urgency.
2. The actions here connected, which are these,

1. They took their dough before it was leavened, they had not time to leaven it much less to bake; raw dough they take up.
2. They bind up their lumps of dough, or pans wherein it was made, in cloaths.
3. They take it on their shoulders, not staying for any other help in carriage.

Note hence.

D. 1. The Churches readiness to go out of bondage, follows close upon the world's urgency.

D. 2. Gods people to have their liberty, will be glad to go out with raw dough.

D. 3. Honest shifts Gods people may make to carry food in their cloaths rather than leave it.

D. 4. It is a good change to take Israel's shoulders from burdens of brick to carry their own food. V. 34.

3. In this first removal to Ramesses the last event mentioned is the spoiling of the Egyptians. Ver. 35, 36. Wherein we have to note,

Ver. 35. 1. Israel's act authorized, And the sons of Israel did according to the word of Moses. All readings agree. Wherein generally,

1. The power authorizing is Moses or God by him.
2. The subject authorized, The sons of Israel.

3. The rule of this work, Gods word by Moses.

4. The work warranted, they did as followeth.

Ver. 35. 2. The act done by them, And they asked of the Egyptians vessels of silver, and vessels of gold and garments. All readings agree. Onely some read borrowed or asked to borrow.

1. Their act here is postulation or desiring.

2. The matter of the petition, silver, Gold, and raiment.

3. The subject desired, the Egyptians, such as were their respective neighbours, and had such precious things, v. 35. nor onely servants of their Masters.

3. Gods approbation and furtherance of this work, And Jehovah gave the people grace in the eyes of the Egyptians, and they lent them. Readings agree. Here we find,

Ver. 36.

1. God warranting and approving this action.

2. God inclining hearts of the Egyptians to it.

3. God favouring his people Israel.

4. Egyptians giving or lending the things desired. ἔδωκεν αὐτοῖς Sept.

4. The account of this work in the issue, And they spoiled the Egyptians. Readings agree. — rooted up, Ar. — Robbed, Syr. — Left empty, Onk. all to the same sense. Not here,

1. The spoilers, sons of Israel.
2. The spoiled, the Egyptians.
3. The act itself, they took away and left the Egyptians empty, it notes sometimes spoiling of enemies, and may be so here intended.

Quest. Did the Israelites aske to borrow?

Anf. 1. That kind of asking may not be forced on the word, in the Hebr. It may note to beg rather, which they needed not to do now. 2. Neither doth reason force it, for they had a command by God to aske, not by lone. 3. Neither doth the Egyptian act imply necessarily lending, but to give to the asker. 4. The same word Hannah useth, 1 Sam. 1. 28. of giving Samuel to the Lord; she giveth him not to have him again, so here. 5. Reason may plead, that the Egyptians would give them any thing to save their lives, no cause therefore is there to make this borrowing. 6. God made his people aske, and the Egyptians give.

Quest. When did the Israelites aske these things?

Anf. It is most likely after the execution of the first born, when they were all in fear of their lives, so was the order before at their very going out, directed from God by Moses to them.

Quest. Did they deceive or wrong the Egyptians?

Anf. No, for, 1. They did onely Gods command which is no cause of evil, what he commands is good. 2. There is no sound reason from the text to prove that they borrowed to deceive them; but asked and it was given them.

Quest. What is carried in Gods giving favour?

Anf. 1. It notes Gods sovereignty over hearts of enemies, as formerly he turned their hearts to hate his people. Pl. 105. 25. So now he turns them to favour them. 2. It carrieth in it his power to make the Egyptians give his people what he pleased. 3. It argueth no change of hearts by grace, but a constraint by power.

Quest. Why did God so work to fill Israel?

Answer. 1. His own pleasure as the highest cause. 2. It was to fulfil his word to Abraham, Gen. 15. 14. 3. It is probable, hereby God enabled them to offer to the making of his tabernacle in the wilderness afterward.

Hence

Hence we Learn.

D. 1. It is safe for Israel to do onely that which is warranted by the word of God.

D. 2. When God bids his people to aske and demand of enemies sub- stance, it is just to do it.

D. 3. Gold and silver and precious things God allow's his people to look after by his word. Ver. 35.

D. 4. It is Gods prerogative to turn hearts of enemies to favour or hate his Church.

D. 5. Enemies favoring the Church will give them all their desires.

D. 6. God turns the favour of the wicked to their own spoil, and the Churches fulnes. Ver. 36.

Thus farre of their way to Ramesses & the events noted therein; which however it were in the land of Egypt, the very country, where Joseph first by Pharaohs favour placed his father and familie. Gen. 47. 11. Yet it is safely to be presumed, that the Israelites were scattered afterward in other parts of Egypt, whither at their first motion they were gathered together from all other parts, it being the utmost border of Egypt toward Canaan; thither it is plain they were all at first driven by the importunity of the Egyptians.

2. Now we come to their next motion general of all the tribes of Israel together, and that was from Ramesses to Succoth. The history of this, and several occurrences, while they staid there, we have recorded from ver. 37. of the 12. Chap. to the 19th ver. of the 13. Chap.

The main passages reported within this compass are these which follow,

1. Israel's motion or journey hitherto, ver. 37, 38, 39.

2. Moses his animadversion hereupon, ver. 40, 41, 42.

3. Gods further order about the Passover, ver. 43, 5.

4. Gods stating a double memorial of this worship, Chap. 13. ver. 1, 16.

5. Gods manuduction or convoy of Israel, ver. 17, 18, 19.

In the first of these we have to observe,

1. The motion or march described, ver. 37, 38.

2. The work upon which they fell presently, ver. 39.

1. As to the motion, we have herein to consider,

1. The subject of it, set out in three degrees,

1. The principal, and they are described,

1. By their line or descent, The sons of Israel, Readings agree. These were the seed of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to whom the promise of deliverance did belong.

2. By their number, About 600000. on foot being men besides little ones, Footmen, Readings agree. Herein may be noted,

1. The positive number of grown men fit for arms 600000.

2. The number indefinite besides these, all the little ones among whom the women being the weaker sexe must be counted. Not one feeble, Plal. 105. v. 37. Ver. 37.

2. The accessories, And also much mixture were with them, i. e. a multitude of mixed people, Vulgus promiscuum, Sept. Sam. Ar. Vulg. read it so, A mixture, Syr. as Hebr. — Many strangers, Onkelos.

1. Their kind or nature, they were of strange nations, doubtles terrified and convinced with the miraculous plagues of Egypt.

2. Their number, it was very much.

3. Their readiness to associate, they went up voluntarily with them.

3. The train carried with them, And flocks and herds a very great possession. Reading agree. Sam. Beasts very many. No difficulty in the words; but the matter itself sheweth the fulfilling of Gods word. Gen. 15. 14.

2. Their motion, And they journeyed from Ramesses to Succoth. Wherein are related.

1. The terms, { A quo, Ramesses. Ad quem, Succoth.

2. The motion between them, they went forward or journeyed until they came to Succoth. Ver. 20.

2. The work which they set upon after their journey to their stage, which was to provide bread. Herein,

1. The work itself, And they baked the dough which they brought forth out of Egypt, cakes unleavened. Onk. Ar. Syr.

1. The matter, dough unleavened.

2. The form, cakes unleavened.

3. The work, they baked them, as well as they could on embers, or upon a stone or slate, or some materials which were at hand.

2. The reason of this work three-fold subordinat.

1. Because it was not leavened, therefore they bake it as it was. Readings agree. Hhhhh 2 2. B.

Ver. 39.

2. Because they were thrust out of Egypt and could not tarry. Readings are to the same purpose. They could not leave because they could not stay, yet God ordered this also.

3. Because of their necessity, And also they had not made food for themselves. Readings the same. transiens eis id est Sept. Italicum. Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. Nec pulmenti quicquam occurrerat preponere. Vulg. The hate which the Egyptians made to get them out of the land, kept them from making provision for their journey; so providence ordered to carry them into the wilderness, hat they might have experience of his power afterward.

Ver. 39.

Quest. 1. What was this Rameses mentioned from whence they journeyed?

Answer. This was a county or province named the land written Rameses. Gen. 47. 11. Not that city which the Israelites built for Pharaoh. Ex. 1. 11. Which might be in the same Province; for doubtless that could not contain the congregation of Israel.

Quest. What is meant by Succoth?

Answer. Though the name be the same with that place where Jacob pitched his tents when he came out of Syria, yet it is not the same with that Gen. 33. 17. But another place leading from Egypt toward the red sea, and by anticipation it is called Succoth from the booths, or tents of Israel first pitched there; of which God ordered a memorial in the yearly feast of tabernacles. Levit. 23. 42.

Quest. 3. Upon what account went this mixed company with them?

Answer. 1. It is noted they were a mixture of several nations, and probably some Egyptians, either turned proselyts or els terrified with Gods signes of vengeance on Egypt. 2. Their own safety seemed to move them. 3. No true love to Gods Church, for afterward we shall find them lusting, and tempting Israel to go back to Egypt. Num. 11. 4. 4. Gods providence ordered this for trial of his people, and the glory of his own name, which was gotten by his judgments on them. Num. 11. 33.

From which we Learn.

- D. 1. The sons of Israel or Church of God are in a moving state below.
D. 2. From countries and cities with habitations God lead his people sometimes to pitch in booths.
D. 3. The number of the seed of Gods visible Church is great and multiplied according to his word.

D. 4. Men, women and children God numbers with his Church or Israel. Ver. 37.

D. 5. Providence so ordering, all sorts of people may join themselves to Gods Church, though not in truth.

D. 6. Gods word failes not in giving his Church great substance when he seeth it good. Ver. 38.

D. 7. Liberty from Egypt is Israels good portion with unleavened cakes.

D. 8. Sufficiency and contentation God giveth his people in their streights.

D. 9. In working liberty for his Church God may put them upon some hardship.

D. 10. God sometimes prevents the providence of his Church for themselves, that he may provide for them. Ver. 39.

2. The next thing that occurs in the history of this stage is the Stylmadversion which Moses maketh about Gods keeping time with Israel according to his promise of deliverance unto their Father Abraham. Ver. 40. 41. 42. Herein we have related.

1. The term of Israels sojourning and bondage. Ver. 40.

2. The point of time fulfilled in their deliverance. Ver. 41.

3. The use proposed of this punctual freedom. Ver. 42.

1. The term of sojourning is thus declared, And the sission or habitation of the sons of Israel who dwelt in Egypt was 30 years and 400 years. The dwelling of the sons of Israel which they and their fathers dwelt in the land of Egypt was 430 years. Sept. Sam. — 430 years in Egypt. Onk. Syr. Vulg. The words are plain, neither is there any difficulty in the Grammar: herein we may note,

1. The subject of this commoration.

1. By their name the sons of Israel.

Which also were the seed of Abraham.

2. By their place of long habitation, Who dwelt in Egypt. All that seed Abraham sojourned there. Gen. 12. 14. And Jacob came down thither. Gen. 46. And here dwelt all the seed of Israel unto this day.

2. The commoration itself, in this land they sat down and sojourned for some space quietly while Joseph lived and was remembered but afterward were vexed with misera-miserable bondage, unto this time of egress.

3. The term of duration in this sojourning estate is 430 years.

Quest. How can this number be made up?

Answer. The Apostle doth give the clearest resolution to this, in numbering the 430 years from the time of Gods giving the promise or Covenant unto Abraham; for otherwise the seed of Jacob after his coming into Egypt, were but little more then half the time there. Gal. 3. 17. Which agreeth well with that 400 years. Gen. 15. 13. For these were spoken of Abrahams seed from Isaac, but the promise was given 30 years before to Abraham, when he came out of Ur of the Caldees to Haran Gen. Chapters. 11. and 12. Which together make up fully 430 years here mentioned. Abraham himself being comprehended in this sojourning also, of which he had a part in Egypt. Gen. 12.

Ver. 41.

2. The point of time for egress is thus expressed, And it was from the end of 30 years and 400 years, and it was the body of the day, all the armies of Iehovah went out from the land of Egypt. Readings agree in the same sense. Here are observable these particulars,

1. The subject of this deliverance or egress. And it was from the end of 30 years and 400 years, and it was the body of the day, all the armies of Iehovah went out from the land of Egypt. The Church came into Egypt, of a family it goeth out in armies yea and the armies of Iehovah the Lord of Hosts

2. The egress itself, They went out of the land of Egypt, &c. Were set free from bondage.

Ver. 42.

3. The point of time, At the full end of 430 years. In that very day, not a moment was deferred when Gods time was come. Ver. 41.

3. The use of this punctual deliverance is thus expressed, It is a night of observations unto Iehovah from bringing them out from the land of Egypt, this is that night of observations for Iehovah unto all the sons of Israel in their generations. Readings are much to the same sense and meaning. Herein note,

1. The use of it, which is, that this night annually was a night to be observed in remembering this prodigious miraculous work of God.

1. God kept them.

2. They must keep it for God.

2. The object of all this religious observation is God himself, it is a night to be observed unto Iehovah in the holy worship of him.

3. The subject of this observation, the sons of Israel; the Church of God.

4. The duration of this work, it was to be continued throughout all the generations of the Jewish Church.

Quest. Why is the night named rather than the day?

Answer. 1. At midnight begun their motion when the Egyptians cried to them to be gone. 2. This excludes not the day, for in the very midst of it God led them forth.

Quest. What were these observations?

Answer. 1. Memorials of deliverance. 2. Worship of God. 3. Fruitful returns, these God expected from them.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. A sojourning session hath God appointed unto his Church in this world.

D. 2. Canaans betrs or children of promise may sojourn in Egypt.

D. 3. The time of sojourning is determined by God for his Church below.

D. 4. In time of sojourning God may afford his people some sweet among their bitter. Ver. 40.

D. 5. The longest time of suffering below hath its appointed end.

D. 6. God is exact to keep every point of time for good according to his promise unto his Church.

D. 7. The Church which goeth into captivity by families may go out by Armies.

D. 8. Egypt cannot keep Gods people, when his time is come to have them out. Ver. 41.

D. 9. The night and day of the Churches redemption is a time of observation toward God.

D. 10. The due observation of such nights and seasons is doubly charged by God.

D. 11. The generations of the Church are bound alwayes to observe Gods redemption in their generations.

D. 12. The children of the Church are deeply obliged to observe Gods redemption of his people. Ver. 42.

3. The next event here at Succoth is an additional law which God makes concerning the due subject of the Passover. Wherein,

H h h h h 3

1. The

1. The law itself is recorded. Ver. 43-49.

2. The obediential return of Israel. Ver. 50.

3. The compleat mercy recorded there-with. Ver. 51.

In the first we have to observe,

1. The preface to this law. Ver. 43.

2. The substance of the law which concern's,

1. The subject of it, ordered two ways,

1. Negatively. Ver. 43. Ulr. 48. Ulr.

2. Affirmatively. Ver. 44. 47. 48.

2. The place of it to be eaten in.

3. The usage of it about the bone.

Ver. 46.

3. The unity of the law as to all sub-jects.

Ver. 43.

1. The preface in these words, And Jehovah said to Moses and Aaron, this is the statute of the Passover. The law of the passover. Sept. Sam. Syr. Constitution. Ar. The rite of the passover. Onk.

1. The statute-maker Jehovah.

2. The subject to whom it was ordered, Moses, Aaron and Israel by them.

3. The force of the title, This is the statute of the Passover.

1. The pronoun is demonstrative to the law that followeth.

2. The notion of statute signifieth a firm constitution or ordinance from Jehovah, not alterable by man.

3. The correlate of this statute is the Passover, the nature whereof was above stated; but here the law mainly concerns the subject of it.

2. The next thing here in order is the substance of the law, which determineth the subject capable of this ordinance, and the ordering of him in this service, the law therefore in short points out these things about the subject.

1. The capacity of him, what that must be, which is here discovered two ways,

1. Negatively, forbidding that which makes incapable and excludeth souls from this ordinance of the Passover under three characters expressed in several verses.

Ver. 43.

1. No son of a stranger shall eat of it. Sam. Syr. same. No stranger, or of another nation. Sept. Vulg. Ar. No son of Israel who hath bin an apostat. Onk. B. Uzziel. In this the words are plain; the terms,

1. The subject of prohibition, The son of a stranger, that is, of another nation as the Sept. and others read, which were not of the natural seed of Israel.

2. The prohibition itself, such must not eat of the Passover; they are incapable by this law of this privilege.

Quest. But were all strangers simply forbidden?

Ans. No, but so long onely as they were strangers to the faith of Israel; but being converted thereunto they were admitted, as we shall see in the affirmative part. Ver. 48. Upon this account the Caldee paraphrase is true that an Israelit Apostat from the faith of Gods Covenant and doctrine was also excluded from this service. V. 43.

2. A forreiner and one hired shall not eat of it. All readings agree. Herein note also,

1. The subject of prohibition is under two terms,

1. A forreiner, who though of another nation, yet dwelt and sojourned in the land, such were not permitted.

2. An hired one or servant, which was not of any of their families but occasionally hired by them.

2. The prohibition itself. These must not eat of the Passover.

Quest. But were these simply excluded?

Ans. No, if they came into the faith, and were obedient to the law prescribed, then they were admitted by the law. Ver. 45.

3. No uncircumcised shall eat of it. Ver. 48. Readings mostly agree. No profane one, &c. Onk.

1. The subject incapable and prohibited is every uncircumcised person being Israelite, stranger, or hired servant, uncircumcision did exclude them from this ordinance.

2. The prohibition itself, such must not eat of the passover.

Quest. What is meant by uncircumcision here?

Ans. 1. Plainly in the letter it notes a defect or denial of that signal initial ordinance of circumcision. 2. Figuratively, it notes the want and denial of that faith into which circumcision did initiate; upon which account mainly is the prohibition, both must be understood here, Ver. 48. Ezek.

44. 9.

2. The capacity of this subject is set down affirmatively and under allowance with a twofold prescription,

1. Personal, which concerned single persons onely, that is in ver. 4. But every man servant bought for money, even him thou shalt circumcise, then shall he eat of it. Most readings agree, Samar. as translated reads, Every servant being a man bought with silver, &c. So may the Hebr. be read, Every servant a man the purchase of silver, Here the law determin's the personal capacity.

1. Condition of the subject allowed, a servant a man, or a man servant, but a male it was and one able to serve.

2. The specification of this subject, bought with money, or being the price of silver, which notes him to be a stranger to Israel, for of their own they were not to buy

Ver. 48.

2. Domestic is the capacity here also allowed by the law, And when a stranger shall sojourn with thee, and will do the Passover to Jehovah, every male of his shall be circumcised, and then shall he draw near to do it; and he shall be as the home-born of the land. Sam. Syr. Ar. are to the same, — If any proselyte. Sept.

— If any proselyte pass to your religion. Onkel. — In vestram volunt transire coloniam, &c. tunc rite celebrabit. Vulg. Herein note,

1. The subject conditioned, which is a stranger, that hath a family and dwells in Israel.

2. The subject specified by his affection, that he desires to join in the service of the Passover; such as were called proselytes by the 70. and proselytes to religion by the Caldee, so again. Acts. 13. 43.

3. Their qualification required. All the males of his house shall be circumcised; i. e. signed with the initial seal of circumcision.

4. The privilege or good allowed by this law is twofold,

1. Admission to the ordinance, with his, capable of it.

2. Reputation in the Church, he shall be accounted as the home born of the land with his family, Ver. 48.

Quest. What is the import and consequence of circumcision to these?

Ans. All these being such as desired the Passover who are mentioned here, we may note,

1. They were grown men, of understanding.

2. They did actually believe the Covenant of God to Abraham.

3. They were thereupon, being actually circumcised, initiated into the Church.

4. They were hereupon admitted by Gods law unto the passover.

Quest. Were all the circumcised admitted?

Ans. No, for. 1. Although no uncircumcised could eat, it followeth not that every circumcised did eat.

2. It is expressly said that he who had his males circumcised was to draw near, not all the males. 3. All uncircumcised not naturally able to eat, as infants. 4. All circumcised were not morally fit; even all that had not understanding about this service: as was cleared before.

Quest. Might they compel servants, strangers & bought to be circumcised?

Ans. Surely no, but, 1. In case they desired the passover they must desire also circumcision. 2. As to the infants of Israel the law laid this necessity on them.

Quest. Did the uncircumcised eat the passover in the wilderness?

Ans. 1. No, for they kept it but once in the wilderness which was in the second year of deliverance. Num. 9.

1. 2. And then all that came out of Egypt were circumcised. 2. No more passovers did they eat until 40 years past, at their entrance into Canaan, and then, Joshua circumcised them before they did eat the passover. Josh. 5.

2. The next thing which the law toucheth about the subject is the location of him, or appointment of place for him to eat the passover; this we have expressed, Ver. 46. in these words, In one house shall it be eaten, thou shalt not carry of the flesh abroad out of the house. Sam. Sept. Syr. Ar. Vulg. same, — In one society shall ye eat it, &c. Onk. The terms are plain. The law in short,

1. Commands all those, which are numbered for a lamb, to eat it in one house.

2. Forbids the carrying of the flesh out of the place.

Quest. Was it always thus in houses?

Ans. It was until God chose a place to put his name there, then did the law call the tribes to that place, Deut.

16. 1. 2. The sacrifice was then publick, though the feast in houses.

Quest. Why was it in one house?

Ans. It well typified the unity of Gods Church, and their agreement in the Lord.

Quest. Why was none of the flesh to be carried out?

Ans. 1. Gods will is reason enough. 2. To keep ordinances from profanation. 3. Sacramental food is to be eaten, not carried away or reserved.

3. The next thing enjoined the subject is concerning the usage of this ordinance, in these words, And ye shall not break a bone thereof. All readings agree. The law is prohibitive, wherein the words are plain,

1. The subject of it, every communicant.

2. The prohibition, not to break a bone of that lamb which was for the passover.

Quest. Why was this prohibited?

Ans. 1. Gods will is reason enough. 2. The bones of all left were to be burnt. 3. It was intended to typify the offering of the true Passover Christ; though the soldiers broke the legs of them who were crucified, yet they touched not him, God overpowering, and Christ yielding up his life before, Joh. 19. 33. 36. Herein God did teach Christ to be the true Passover-sacrifice indeed, of whom in this type the Jews had a shadowing representation.

4. The last thing enjoined about the subject in his law, is the universality of it in the words, All the congregation of Israel shall do it; Readings do here agree: Herein also note.

Ver. 47.

1. The subject in its universality enjoined, All the congregation of Israel, which comprehends all profelyts admitted thereunto.

2. The work enjoined, to do it, that is prepare, and kill, and dresse, and eat the Paschever as hath bin before commanded, Ver. 47. So farre of the substance of the Law.

Ver. 49.

3. The last thing noted about this Law is the unity of it in these words, One Law shall be to home born, and to the stranger that sojourneth in the midst of you, All readings are to the same purpose: In this passage we may note,

1. The uniting Jewes & Gentiles, home-born and strangers in one third privilege and state.

2. The singling out of the Paschever-Law to both, to make them more one in Christ, Gal. 3:18. Act. 15:9. Ezek. 47. ver. 22, 23.

This holds out grace in the Law of Paschever, Ver. 47.

And instructs us.

D. 1. As God by his Law constitutes Ordinances for men, so by the same he points out men for them.

D. 2. It is Jehovahs statute-Law which giveth any privilege unto Paschever enjoyment.

D. 3. Gods Statute expressly forbids any strangers unto faith to eat Paschever-food, Ver. 43.

D. 4. Sojourning, or hired relations to the Church, giveth no right to Paschever-mercies.

D. 5. Gods Statute excludes such unbelieving retainers from Paschever privilege, Ver. 45.

D. 6. Uncircumcision in heart and flesh is barred by Gods Statute from Paschever mercy, Ver. 48.

D. 7. Neither strangers nor bondmen are simply excluded from Paschever grace.

D. 8. Gods Statute binds such to believe and receive initial seals, who partake of visible Paschever-mercies, Ver. 44.

D. 9. In the standing of the parit-tion wall strangers were not simply excluded Church privileges.

D. 10. Willingnes to Gods Ordinances is under Gods Law of admission thereunto.

D. 11. A right will to one ordinance is a will to all in the order which God hath set.

D. 12. Obedience to Gods Law and approach to Paschever-enjoyments must go together.

D. 13. Faith and obedience make all profelyts as home-born as the children of the Church, Ver. 48.

D. 14. Paschever-communicants must be of one society.

D. 15. Nothing must be profaned of Paschever rites in Law or Gospel.

D. 6. God hath his secret purpose in securing the Paschever bones from breaking fulfilled in Christ, Ver. 46.

D. 17. All Gods Israel must observe his Ordinances of Worship, especially his Paschever, Ver. 47.

D. 18. One Law of God unites them that be nigh and farre of in Paschever Worship.

D. 19. One Law of God maketh one heart of his people in obedience, Ver. 41.

2. The obediential return of Israel is the next thing here recorded after the Law, And the sons of Israel did as the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they, All readings are to the same sense.

Ver. 50.

1. The subject of obedience, Sons of Israel, now newly delivered from Egypt.

2. The act of obedience, they kept the command of the Paschever.

3. The rule of obedience, As the Lord commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

We Learn from it.

D. 1. It is a sweet connection of Gods command, and mans obedience.

D. 2. Souls newly delivered from bondage are apt to return dues to God.

D. 3. Obedience required must be according according to rule exactly performed, Ver. 50.

Ver. 51.

3. The last thing recorded with respect to this Law is the completing Gods mercy, with Israels obedience, And it was in the body of this day Jehovah led forth the sons of Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies, or by their troops: Readings agree. This is but a repetition of the great deliverance of Israel out of Egypt: Wherein,

1. The connection of this mercy to Israels duty, in the same time.

2. The deliverance itself, Jehovah did bring the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt.

3. The order of his leading them, it was by their armies in rank and file, an orderly march at midday.

We conclude.

D. 1. It is a good day when the Churches duty and Gods mercy meet together.

D. 2. Jehovah leads Israel out of Egyptian bondage and none can let him.

D. 3. Orderly is Gods motion in delivering his Church from bondage.

D. 4. He makes them march by armies, in order as it were in rank and file, Exod. 13. ver. 18. by Fires.

Thus farre of the third event recorded, while Israel staid at Succoth. Which ends this Chapter.

CHAP. XIII.

The next event at Succoth recorded is a double memorial of Israels great deliverance from Egypt, being the great end of two special ordinances from the first to the end of the 16th verse. In the whole we may note,

1. An additional ordinance which Jehovah appoints unto Moses about the first born, Ver. 1. & 2.

2. The declaration of Moses unto Israel concerning the main use or end of the two ordinances given by Jehovah upon Israels egress.

1. The end of the feast of unleavened bread, Ver. 3. 10.

2. The end of consecrating the males, Ver. 11. 16.

1. Here is recorded Gods institution of an additional ordinance unto the former of the Paschever and unleavened bread which is the consecration of the first born unto God, Ver. 1. 2. Herein we have to note,

1. The Author or Institutor expressed, And Jehovah spake unto Moses saying, Readings are the same, He spake a speech, Ar. Herein note,

Ver. 1.

1. The term of connection, rendered and, then, also, coupling this worke of God which followeth to that day and time spoken of in the last verse of the former Chapter. In the same day when God brought Israel out of the land of Egypt by their armies he also spake to Moses about this law of the first born, which was at their first stage in Succoth.

2. The matter connected is all that which followeth touching this law of the first born, wherein,

1. The Author or Institutor of it is Jehovah,

2. The first subject to whom this law was given, Moses, Gods Minister to Israel and it was for them.

3. The way of giving it was by speech, Jehovah spake to Moses saying, Ver. 1.

4. The law or ordinance itself, Sanctify to me every first born which openeth, or the opening of every womb among the sons of Israel, of man and of beast, it is for me, or it is mine, Readings mostly agree, Sept. For all the wombs are mine. Syr. In this ordinance we have to observe these particulars,

Ver. 2.

1. The object or matter ordained, set out thus,

1. By its primacy or order in nature, the first born, and that by an apposition, the opening of the womb. i. e. that which first openeth and is the first fruit of the womb.

2. The boundary of it is among the sons or children of Israel, not among other nations.

3. The specialities of them, the first born of man, and the first born of beasts.

4. The universality of it, every first born that openeth every womb.

2. The act ordained, sanctify all these to me, which command and enjoine the consecration of all these unto Jehovah, to be sacrifices unto him, in which he may take pleasure. Onely this command is to be understood by the regulations following, Ver. 12. 13. & c. The summe is, these were made holy to Jehovah by himself.

3. The reason of Gods injoining Moses to sanctify these, is his claim to them, this is mine or for me, and therefore count it not common, but let it be holy unto the Lord. The fuller explication of this law I referre unto the repetition of it and enlargements to it. Onely here answer these queries,

Iiii

Quest.

Quest. How are these first born to be conceived?

Ans. 1. The apposition of opening the womb plainly sheweth, that the account must arise from the mother, that although a man have a first born by a former wife; yet the son that openeth first the womb of another wife is here also intended; and so Christ is reckoned the first born of the virgin; unto whom, we shall see hereafter, this law typically had reference.

Quest. What beasts were these?

Ans. 1. No wild creatures in the field.

2. Such as were clean, and which were more familiarly conversant among men, and fit for their use as is implied in being among the children of Israel, such are they intended here.

Quest. Why doth God appropriate the first born? are not all his?

Ans. 1. Yea, all arch as the father or maker of all. 2. Yet all are not holy, nor consecrated to Gods service. 3. It is at Gods liberty to make what he will holy to himself. 4. God did this upon a special account, the destroying the first born of Egypt, and saving Israel.

And informeth us by it.

D. 1. In the day of deliverance of the Church, God judgeth meet to give them ordinances.

D. 2. Jehovah himself must be the author of all ordinances tending to his service.

D. 3. God by his Ministers may make known his ordinances to his Church. As by Moses. Ver. 1.

D. 4. Gods immediate command only can make creatures and persons holy to God.

D. 5. The first born of man and beast God by his own prerogative made holy under the law.

D. 6. It was not without a mystery that God pitched on the first born in the law. It was to Christ.

D. 7. The first born indeed are Gods portion properly in the world and he will have them holy. Ver. 2.

2. The declaration of Moses now followeth concerning the due end and use of these two ordinances for future times, when God should settle them in the land of promise. He begins with the Paschever and unleavened bread, from V. 1. to 10. &c. then proceeds to that of the first born, Ver. 11. &c.

1. Moses teacheth the true use of the feast of the Paschever and unleavened bread. Wherein,

1. He remind's Israel of the first and present occasion or ground of its institution, Ver. 3. 4.

2. He declares the mind of God for the future observation of the same, Ver. 5. 6. 7.

3. He instructeth them of the special use and end of this service to be observed, Ver. 8. 9. 10.

In the first of these which is the reminding of Israel of the first rise of this ordinance, we may note,

1. The address of Moses to Israel, And Moses said unto the people, Readings most agree, — The Lord said to Moles, Ver. 3. sam. Herein note,

1. The term connecting closeth the act of Moses with the injunction of God, and so he presently goeth to bespeak Israel, named here the people.

2. The work of this bespeaking them is to rub up their memories, and herein we may note,

1. The act charged on them, which is to remember, the word is singular in the Hebrew, but spoken to the people, and therefore is generally translated in the plural, remember ye, which word of charge carrieth in it,

1. A passive impression of present providences upon the seed of Israel then surviving.

2. An active worke, of minding their children, and following generations of these things, and bringing them to remembrance.

3. A general work of obediential return to God, with respect to the works of his to be remembered.

2. The object pressed upon their memory, &c.

1. The very day of deliverance, Remember this day wherein ye came out of Egypt from the house of servants, Hebr. and Sam. same. — Of bondage, Sep. Onk. Syr. Ar. Vulg. The very time of deliverance from slavery of Egypt is chargeable on them to be minded.

2. The author of this deliverance, For by strength of hand Jehovah brought you out from hence, or with a strong hand. Readings herein agree.

Wherein are charged to memory,

1. The author, Jehovah.

2. The power whereby, the strength of his hand.

3. The effect itself, bringing them out.

3. The law hereupon formerly enjoined, And leavened bread shall not be eaten, Readings mostly to the same. — That ye should not eat leaven.

Vulg. This also must be remembered by Israel in their generations.

3. The reason of this charge, which was the present mercy enjoined by Israel, This

Ver. 4.

This day came ye out in the month Abib. — Of new things. Sept. — Of new fruits. Onk. Sam. Vulg. — In the month of corn graining. Ar. — In the month of flowers, Syr.

1. Their actual deliverance. They were come out.

2. The day named, this, the 15th day.

3. The month noted, that which was now made the first, called in Hebr. Abib, in Caldee Nisan.

Quest. Is this Abib a proper or common name?

Ans. 1. Some make it common as noting the earing of corn, but then the month were uncertain, but here it was certainly known. 2. It was a proper name doubtles, which is given to that month named the first. Ch. 11. 2.

Observe we hence.

D. 1. Gods commands and his servants obedience are sweetly untied together.

D. 2. Deliverance of the Church from Egyptian bondage is justly chargeable on their memory.

D. 3. Jehovah the Author of deliverance is to be minded with his work, and power of doing it.

D. 4. Remembrance of Jehovah carrieth with it mindfulness of duty and service to him. Ver. 3.

D. 5. Actual salutation requirerth future remembrance of the Church.

D. 6. Dayes and months of mercy are ordered by God to be remembered. Ver. 4.

2. The next thing declared is the will of God for the future observation of the feast of unleavened bread, wherein also that of the Paschever is implied. This is declared, Ver. 5. 6. 7. Wherein we may note,

1. The time designed, And it shall be when Jehovah shall bring thee, Readings to the same.

1. The Author supposed, Jehovah.

2. The work supposed, the bringing Israel to the promised inheritance, declared first to Abraham.

2. The place of observation supposed set out,

1. By the inhabitants in present, The land of the Canaanites, &c.

2. By the donor and way of conveyance, Which he sware unto thy fathers to give thee, This was punctually named in Gods oath to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob.

Ver. 5.

Ver. 5.

3. By the property of it, A land flowing with milke and hony, i. e. A land full of blessings.

3. The duty to be observed by the seed of Israel in this place and that expressed,

1. Generally, Thou shalt serve this service in this month, — Do this Worship Sept. — Celebrate this worship, Onk. — Do this work, Ar. Exercise this Worship, Syr. — Celebrate custome of holy things, Vulg. Samar. is as Hebr. Ye shall keep this service, as in Ex. 12.

25. If this be generally taken it includes the ordinance of the Paschever, as well as of unleavened bread, so the like speech seemeth to do in the former Chapter, Ver. 15. so here is neither delivered but the work and the monthly time for its observation, Ver. 5.

2. Specially the ordinance of unleavened bread is here declared and the command about it is twofold,

1. Afirmative which doth establish it in being,

1. As to the matter of it and that is doubled, Seven days shalt thou eat unleavened cakes, and again unleavened cakes shall be eaten seven dayes. Ver. 6. and 7. Sixe dayes &c. Sept. and Sam. Other readings agree and both these read seven, Ver. 7th including that which was for feast.

1. The matter of it was cutting unleavened bread, as before noted.

2. The duration of it, was for 7 dayes.

3. The necessity of it in this positive land.

2. As to the form of it, And in the seventh day shall be a feast to Jehovah, Readings agree. This festival to Jehovah was the very formality of this ordinance which in the last chapter we read was to be kept on the first and last of the seven dayes, ver. 16. It may be silenced here because probably it was included in the feast of the paschever, which was on the first day; and that at least generally; expressed in the former verse.

2. The negative command inforceth this which is twice also repeated. 1. And no leavened thing shall be seen with thee. 2. And no old leaven shall be seen in all thy borders. Readings mostly agree, some make it one command, as Syr. Ar. Vulg. same also, — No leavened thing nor leaven itself. This was opened Chap. 12. 19. so farre doth Moses by repetition declare the ordinance to be observed.

Quest. Did this forbid them to keep this feast before they came to Canaan?

Ans. No; 1. They did keepe it, as is clear, Numb. 9. 2. Their sin hindered them from keeping of it afterward.

Quest. Why doth Moses mention Gods swearing here?

Ans. It is doubtles. 1. To confirm Israels

Ver. 3.

Ver. 3.

Ver. 6.

Ver. 6.

Ver. 7.

1111 2

Israel's faith in the promise. 2. To give strong comfort and encouragement unto duty.

Quest. Why is this service so often repeated?

Ans. Surely. 1. It notes mans forgetfulness of his duty. 2. It carrieth in it Gods carefulness to have his law impressed on the hearts of Israel.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. Future times of Gods mercy must be times for Israels future duty.

D. 2. The Canaanites shall once be abolished and Israel shall flourish.

D. 3. It is good to consider Gods oath to his Church for all good promised.

D. 4. The remembrance of Gods oath requirerth service from the Church.

D. 5. The Churches portion is a good portion. Ver. 5.

D. 6. Repetition of lawes is requisite upon dull hearts to make impression.

D. 7. Unleavened services spiritualized are excellent services for God. Ver. 6.

D. 8. Where unleavened is commanded, leaven is forbidden. Grace assisted detesteth sin. Ver. 7.

3. The end of repeating this law to be observed Moses discovers in the special use of it for after-ages, ver. 8. 9. 10. The use is threefold.

1. The instruction of posterity in the knowledge of Gods works now manifest to Israel. And thou shalt shew thy son in that day saying because Jehovah did for me in my coming out from Egypt. Sam. Onk. same with Hebr. — Ala tura, &c. Sept. — This is for that which God did for me, &c. Ar. — For this cause God did this to me, &c. Syr. Herein we may note, the use or mediate end of this service was to give occasion for instruction to their children, in three parts.

1. That Israel had bin a bondman in Egypt.

2. That Jehovah by his mighty arm and wonderful judgments brought them out from thence.

3. That upon this account the feast of unleavened bread was ordained to them by God in their generations.

Quest. What is the force of that causal term. Because of that, &c.

Ans. 1. Some make it final to Gods work of deliverance, that God saved Israel to do this service. 2. Others referre the proposition to Gods work because of that which God did, this service was instituted to keep that redemption in remembrance with Israel, For the duty was not the end of this work of God, unles mediāt, but the effect, the great end followeth in the next verse. Both may have a fair interpretation and be joined together, Ver. 8. The last is best.

2. The memorial of God, And it shall be to thee for a signe upon thine hand, and for a memorial between thine eyes, that the law of Jehovah may be in thy mouth, because with a mighty hand Jehovah brought thee out of Egypt. Readings agree in sense, —

Before thine eyes. Sept. — With mighty power. Ar. Herein we have, 1. The great end of this ordinance proposed as a signal, and that by way of injunction, in two several expressions,

1. It shall be for a signe unto thee upon thy hand; wherein the use is made sacramental.

2. It shall be for a memorial for thee between thine eyes, or before them; this also is sacramental, we may put them both together and so read, this ordinance to be either a signal monument, or a monumental signe, of that Covenant which God made with Israel when he brought them out of Egypt; and this is enjoined so to be used as a sacrament, which is memorative.

2. The connection of this signal with the word, which makes a sacrament, That the law of Jehovah may be in thy mouth, that is by this signal united thereto, as Gods Covenant, it may be confirmed and perpetuated in thee to be believed, and professed.

3. The reason of this institution, for with a mighty hand Jehovah, &c. This was the special rife of that sacramental ordinance at this time, which was typical to a greater redemption.

Quest. What mean this sign and memorial upon the hands and between the eyes?

Ans. 1. No superstitious things, as the enlarged phylacteries, for which Christ reprooved the hypocrisy of the Pharisees, Math. 23. 5. 2. God did for a time allow some visible helps, to keep his law in mind. Numb. 15. 38.

3. God herein seems to resemble the things of his law to those more precious & ornamental things which men more choicely keep, as bracelets, and frontlets, Deut. 6. ver. 8.

4. Here it is also ordained as a sacramental mental visible help, such as the Passover was to full obedience.

Quest. What is meant by the law of God being in the mouth?

Ans. 1. The whole Covenant of God delivered by Moses unto Israel, as we shall read hereafter. 2. The being in the mouth, is by truth of profession, arising from faith in the heart. 3. It carrieth the same spiritual work in it as in the Covenant of the Father with the Redeemer, Isai. 59. ver. 21. The Passover was the sacramental seal of this, Ver. 9.

3. The last use was to be an anniversary observation, And thou shalt keep this statute in its season from dayes to dayes, or from year to year, quoniamis, Sam. Mont. Ar. — From year to year, Ar. Septuag. as Hebr. From time to time, Onkel. Syr. The summe of all is an annual constitution of this ordinance, for an anniversary remembrance of Gods Covenant evidenced by redeeming his Church out of Egypt, as to the term of dayes it must note years. For

1. The Passover was but once in a year.

2. Dayes are so often used for years in the Old and New Testament, Gen. 4. 3. Rev. 11. 3.

Learn from it.

D. 1. The instruction of children is a duty upon parents.

D. 2. Gods command's continuance of ordinances for instruction of posterity.

D. 3. The reason of Gods ordinances must be understood by parents and children, Ver. 8.

D. 4. Sacramental signes, and memorials of God, he is pleased to give his Church,

D. 5. God would have these signal memorials at hand and before the eyes of his.

D. 6. The Passover was a true sacramental signe and seal of Gods Covenant.

D. 7. By sacraments rightly used Gods Covenant is confirmed on hearts and in profession.

D. 8. Gods mighty gracious redemption is a just cause of such memorials. Ver. 9.

D. 9. Gods sacraments are his statutes and positive lawes.

D. 10. It is Gods prerogative, to make anniversary memorials of his mercies. Ver. 10.

2. The next thing declared by Moses is the end of consecrating the first born unto God, ver. 11. 16. Wherein more generally note,

1. The circumstances of time and place for this, ver. 11.

2. The law itself of the first born repeated, ver. 12. 13.

3. The use of this institution, ver. 14. 15. 16.

In the first the same time and place are supposed for this duty as for the former, and almost expressed in the same words, save that the name of Canaanites onely, is used instead of all other nations forenamed, and therefore there is no need of any further explication of this 11. verse. See ver. 5.

Quest. Did not Israel observe this law before they came into the land of the Canaanites?

Ans. Yea doubtles, God required the first born in present, and it was continually observed in the wilderness, the law therefore is not exclusive to other times, and places, but especially directs them to the right use and constant practise of this duty when God should give them rest.

Learn.

D. The time and place of Gods performing his word and oath to fathers and children, engage them in succeeding generations to give themselves to the Lord. Ver. 11.

In the second we have the law itself of separating the first born unto God repeated with an explication. Wherein we may observe,

1. The law generally expressed in these terms, Then thou shalt make to passe unto Jehovah every opening of the womb, Readings agree in sense, — Thou shalt separate every thing that openeth the womb, Sept. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. — Thou shalt cause to passe before the Lord. Onkel. Herein are considerable,

1. The subject of this law is Israel, every one to whom God was pleased to give the seed of man and beast, Others are not here concerned.

2. The law itself for duty, wherein are expressed,

1. The object, every opening of the matrix; that is, every first born as it is expressed by the Syr.

2. The act, Thou shalt make it to passe over, thou shalt separate, as ours, and others

Ver. 10.

thers, the burden of this phrase may be thus taken,

1. As it notes a passing from mans power to Gods.

2. As passing under the rod, so separating, and sanctifying it to the Lords use, Levit. 27. 32.

3. As passing through the fire; so the sacrifice did; and so the passing of the first born is stiled a sacrifice, Ver. 15. Numb. 18. 17.

3. The end terminating this law is the same as the efficient of it, Jehovah himself, he made this ordinance for himself, Ver. 12.

2. The law is more specially explained,

1. Concerning beasts, and therein two rules given,

1. About clean beasts, And every opening being the emission of a beast, which thou shalt have, the males shall be for Jehovah, — Every thing that opens the womb of the herds, &c. Sept. — Thou shalt sanctify before the Lord. Onkel. — Consecrate Vulg. Herein note,

1. The order, the first that openeth the womb.

2. The sexe, all that are males first opening.

3. The propriety, such as are a mans own.

4. The transferring of them, they must be passed over to the Lord, and become his, Ver. 12.

Ver. 13.

2. About beasts unclean, And every opening of an asse thou shalt redeem with a kid, and if thou wilt not redeem it, then shalt thou behead it, or cut off its neck or break it. Sam. Ar. same. — First born of labouring beasts, Syr. — Thou shalt kill it, Onk. Syr. Vulg. — Thou shalt change for a sheep, but if thou wilt not change it, thou shalt redeem it with money, Sept. Herein we have two rules added about unclean beasts, under the instance of the asse.

1. That the firstling of an asse, and so of every unclean beast, must be redeemed with a lamb or kid, Numb. 18. 15. The unclean by a clean creature. Where note,

1. God own's the first born of an unclean beast to be his due, and proper right.

2. He requireth the redemption of it, which is by putting a clean creature in its stead to be offered unto God; so the immaculat lamb is put into the place of sinners, and Christ made a curse, &c.

2. In case men will not redeem the unclean creature, the law appoints the decollation of it; and the cutting off the dogs neck, Mat. 66. 3. It notes an opprobrious destruction of it.

2. Concerning man is the law opened, And all the first born of man among thy sons thou shalt redeem, All readings agree. Herein,

Ver. 13.

1. The order, the first born of man of Adam.

2. The sexe, among thy sons or thy males.

3. The act commanded & explained, it must be sanctified to God by redeeming, not by killing, and the price of redemption was five shekels after the shekel of the sanctuary, and this was to be done at a month old, Numb. 18. 15. 16. Ver. 13.

Quest. Why doth God claime a propriety in unclean beasts?

Ans. 1. They are all his creatures.

2. The distinction of clean and unclean, was for mans use prescribed by God, but not set to himself. 3. God alone is the author of his own discriminations, & who can gain say him? 4. God may intend that which he told unto Peter, that there was no man so unclean, but there might be an access for him unto God. Act. 10.

Quest. Were there no other rules given about the first born of unclean beasts, then what are here?

Ans. Yea. 1. That the first born either of herd or flock, which were clean beasts, must be seven dayes with its dam, and the 8th day it was to be given unto God, Ex. 22. 30. It was conceived to prevent deceit. 2. That the first born was to be excepted from other voluntary offerings, because this was Gods already, Levit. 26. 27. It was to prevent hypocrisy. 3. That the first born of the bullock must not labour, nor the firstling of the sheep be shorn before it be given unto God. Deut. 15. 19. This was to prevent covetousness.

Quest. When and at what price were the first born of men redeemed, and was it after God tooke the Levites instead of the first born?

Answer. 1. At a month old they were to be redeemed. 2. The price of every head, 5 shekels to redeem. Numb. 18. 16. 3. The Levites were taken for Gods service, yet the price continued upon the first born; as an acknowledgement that they were Gods propriety, Num. 3. 40. 47. This was given to Aaron, Ver. 11. all this was mysterious and had its truth in Christ himself as the Spirit noteth, Luk. 2. v. 22. 23.

And teacheth us,

D. 1. Jehovah is the beginning and end of his own ordinances. He sets them for himself.

D. 2. The Church must act these duties from God unto God himself.

D. 3. All that God requireth must his people make to passe from them to him.

D. 4. First born males of beasts God required in the Law for special use to himself, Ver. 12.

D. 5. Clean and unclean among creatures is a distinction made by God for men, not for himself.

D. 6. God hath a propriety in all creatures be they never so unclean.

D. 7. God hath ordered redemption for unclean by putting the clean in their stead.

D. 8. Unclean unredeemed must be destroyed.

D. 9. A price hath God set for mans redemption to gain a Church of the first born.

D. 10. The law of the first born hath its truth and accomplishment in Christ Jesus. The first born of every creature. Col. 1. 15. Ver. 13.

In the third general noted we have the end and use of this Law of the first born discovered as it concerned posterity, Ver. 14. 15. 16. Wherein note,

Ver. 14.

1. A supposition, And it shall be when thy son shall aske thee to morrow, saying what is this? Sam. Onk. Ar. Syr. Vulg. same. — Vulg. mōrō Sept. In it are;

1. The time supposed, to morrow, which notes all succeeding time, as Heb. 13. 8.

2. The thing supposed, which is the inquiry of posterity concerning this ordinance of the first born, what it is; or what it meaneth.

Ver. 14.

2. A resolution of this quere returned, Then thou shalt say to him, &c. Wherein by way of answer are returned these things.

Ver. 15.

1. A declaration of Gods delivering Israel from Egypt, By strength of hand Jehovah brought us out from Egypt, from the house of servants, or of bondage. Readings agree. Ver. 14.

Ver. 15.

2. A narrative of what Pharaoh did, And it was because Pharaoh hardened himself, to send us away, Readings are to the same sense. He would hardly or with difficulty let us go.

Ver. 15.

3. A repetition of Gods act upon Egypts first born, Jehovah even slew every first born in the land of Egypt from the first born of man to the first born of beast, Readings agree.

Ver. 15.

4. A rendering of the reason of this work, Therefore I sacrifice to Jehovah all that openeth the womb being males, and all the first born of my sons I redeem, Readings agree. Herein,

1. The illative term therefore, that is because of Gods saving providences defensive which is an offensiveness to enemies.

2. The work inforced, I sacrifice, &c. two acts are in it.

1. Sacrificing all clean creatures designed thereunto.

2. Redemption of all the first born of man; which as before is noted typical.

5. A proposition of the special use or end of this, And it shall be for a signe on thy hand, and for Phylacteries between thine eyes. For by the strength of hand Jehovah brought us out of Egypt, — And immovable, Sept. for a pendent. Onk. Vulg. — monument. Sam. — Expansum. Ar. Herein we have to observe,

1. The end of this ordinance. It was a daily memorial of God, set out by signals on hands and eyes.

2. The reason pressing it repeated, which was Gods mighty redemption of his people out of Egypt.

Quest. Why should generations following, say the Lord brought us out of the land of Egypt, when they were never there?

Ans. 1. Original mercies are memorable in succeeding generations. 2. All posterity live in the strength of foregoing mercies to the Church. 3. All past and to come are one Church of God.

Whence we observe.

D. 1. Ancient ordinances may be justly questioned in succeeding ages to know the meaning of them.

D. 2. Reason is to be given of our religion to such as reasonably demand it.

D. 3. Children may aske of parents and they must inform them of the ordinances of God.

D. 4. Redemption-mercies are to be recorded and reported as just ground of Gods ordinance. Ver. 14.

D. 5. Oppositions against redemptions are justly declared to make the work glorious, and Gods people obedient.

D. 6. Vengeance upon the enemies of the Churches redemption, is fit to be known to quicken them to duty.

D. 7.

D. 7. The Churches reason for its religion to God, is rightly taken from its redemption. Ver. 15.

D. 8. Gods redeeming mercies ought to work in the Church eternal mortals of him. Ver. 16.

5. The last event recorded for Israel while they were at Succoth, is Gods manuduction of them in the way of their escaping from Egypt, V. 17. 18. 19. Wherein we have to note,

1. The negative description of Gods guidance, Ver. 17.

2. The positive discovery of it Ver. 18.

3. The accessory act of Moses declared in carrying Josephs bones, Ver. 19.

In the former we have these particulars considerable,

1. The occasion of the following description, And it was in Pharaohs sending away the people. Onk. and Sam. are the same with Hebr. — As or when Pharaoh sent away the people, Sept. Syr. Ar. Vulg. Much to the same sense.

S. S. S.

1. Here beginneth the 16th section of the law as the Hebrewes account, which they call Beschalleth, from the second word in the text, which signifyeth in sending away, nothing is difficult here, only the time and occasion of the following relation is expressed.

2. The act of God denied, Then God did not lead them by the way of the land of the Philistines, though that was near. Readings mostly agree, — Because it was near, — Which was near. Vulg. Herein,

1. The act of God denied, He lead them not by the way of the Philistines, he would not carry them in that course unto Canaan.

2. The seeming conveniency of that way is yet expressed; that it was the nearer way.

3. The reason urged why God did not send them this way, For God said least it repent the people in their seeing warre and they return into Egypt. Sept. Sam. Ar. Vulg. same, — Least the people fear.

Onk. Syr. Here,

1. Gods foresight of Israels frailty, he knew well their temper, how apt they were to start at difficulties, and to choole their former bondage.

2. Gods prevention of this evil, therefore he carried them another way, that they should not presently see warre and be dismayed.

Quest. How doth it appear that the land of the Philistines was the nearest way to Canaan?

Ans. Several wayes. 1. Some of the cities of the Philistines were reckoned among the Canaanites, Gen 10. 19, Jof. 13. 2, 3. 4. and was part of the promised land, which was not conquered because of their sin and unbelief. 2. The time of travelling between some part of Canaan & Egypt, is reckoned by some to be three dayes. 3. The going and coming of the sons of Jacob to and from Egypt for corn, sheweth that there was a nearer way; and doubtles they took the nearest.

Quest. Why doth the God of Israel so provide against Israels seeing warre?

Answer. 1. Not from any weakness in him to break the arm of the Philistines, which was as easy, as to destroy the Egyptians. 2. God dealt with Israel according to their weakness; he would in a fit time for warre, before he put them upon it; and to he did, before he suffered Amalek to assault them. 3. Gods foreknowledge of the event was certain, however he speak's after the manner of men; he knew what Israel would do upon such trials, and therefore did prevent them; and would not let them go the hardest way, though it were the nearest. 4. The Philistines had slain some before. 1 Chron. 7. 21. Ephraims sons, &c.

We note hence.

D. 1. After redemption of his Church God provideth for guiding them in the way to rest.

D. 2. Neerest wayes to rest with men are not alwayes approved by God for his people.

D. 3. Gods foreknowledge of dangerous wayes to his Church doth prevent them.

D. 4. God will not put his people upon warre or hard trials until he have fitted them for it.

D. 5. Gods special care of his Church is to keep them from a retreat to bondage after redemption. V. 17.

2. The positive narration of Gods conduct now followeth, ver. 18. Wherein are these particulars,

1. Gods conduct of Israel, But God made the people goe about by the way of the wilderness of the red sea. Readings are to the same sense, note here,

1. The leader Elohim, the almighty God, he order's their way and march.

2. The subjects conducted, the people of Israel.

3. The way was the desert or wilderness which was towards the red sea; of which we shall read more hereafter.

4. The

4. The conductor itself, he made them take a compasse, and goe about, instead of going the directer way.

2. Israels march under this conduct, &c.

Ver. 18. And the sons of Israel went up harnessed, or marshalled by fives out of the land of Egypt.

In the fifth generation, &c. Sept. and Sam. — Instructed, they went up armed. Onk. Syr. Vulg. Ar. Here note,

1. The army, the sons of Israel, as before.

2. The motion, or march, they went up out of Egypt.

3. The order, or accomplishment of them as to their march, some read they went up by fives in a ranke Others, they went up harnessed or armed quintati as Ar. Mont. renders. The word cometh from that which signifyeth five; therefore some read, in the fifth generation they came up, but that is false, they came out in the fourth generation, according to Gods word to Abraham. Others, that they had five sorts of weapons, which is not probable, for it is questioned whether they had any. Others, note their order and good accomplishment for their march, as those who are marshalled by fives, and girded about their loins, which some conceive the word to note, as about the fifth rib. The summe is, they marched orderly without confusion, and well trusted up for their journeyes. God being their guide, and magazine for military and necessary accommodations, Jof. 1. 14, Jof. 4. 12. Judg. 7. 11. The word is, armed as there translated by ours, or harnessed.

Quest. Why did God lead them through the wilderness?

Answer. 1. His own will is reason enough, Dei voluntas summa necessitas. Tertul.

2. He consulted his glory to do more wonders upon the Egyptians. 3. His providence ordered trials therein for his people. 4. It might be to make their following rest more comfortable, In wisdom God did all. All this was in ordine gratie. Iun.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. God doth not order salvation to his as is pleaseth man, but as it pleaseth himself.

D. 2. God in wisdom sometimes translates his Church from the house of bondage to a wilderness.

D. 3. Wilderness and red-sea paths, are the way of Gods people here below.

D. 4. God makes the way to rest not alwayes strait, but to be about.

D. 5. Israel, or Gods people, go the round that God doth lead them.

D. 6. Orderly and well instructed are the Churches motions under God in wilderness-wayes. Ver. 18.

3. The accessory act of Moses in following God is the taking of Josephs bones with him. Wherein,

1. The act, And Moses took the bones of Joseph with him. All readings agree, the words are plain.

1. The author is Moses, now chief in Israel.

2. The matter of his care, the bones of Joseph.

3. The work. He took them, i. e. he gave order for the comely transportation of them.

2. The reason of this act, For he had sworn saying, I will visit you, and ye shall carry up my bones from hence with you. Readings do most agree. Some read God will visit, others God will remember, as Onk. Syr. Ar. Herein observe,

1. The urging cause, his oath on Israel.

2. The ground of this oath, Gods certain visitation of Israel for their redemption.

3. The matter thereupon sworn, Ye shall carry up my bones with you.

Quest. Were the bones of the other sons of Jacob now carried with them also?

Answer. 1. That some of those fathers were buried in Sichem is expresse, Act. 7. 16. 2. That they were carried at this time is not certain. 3. Probably some might be now carried. But it is no matter of faith, because not revealed.

Quest. Was it lawfull to impose or take an oath about such light matters as of transporting bones?

Answer. 1. It is certain that oaths must be about lawfull things. 2. In some cases an oath may be lawfull as to indifferent things; where God seems to require it. 3. The oath here given was upon a Prophetical discovery. 4. By faith Joseph gave charge concerning his bones, & therefore upon Gods word. But this is not imitable by others. Heb. 11. 22.

And gives us to observe.

D. 1. Upon Gods instruct dead signalls of present and living redemption his servants may carry with them.

K k k k k But

But no reliques for superstitious uses warrantable hence.

- D. 2. Gods word of prophesy is a sure ground of adjuring the Church to faith and duties suitable.
- D. 3. In such case, oaths taken and imposed must be fulfilled; as to the bones of Gods witnesses.
- D. 4. What God commands and faith orders about dead bones must be observed; and no more, Ver. 19.

Now followeth Gods motion with Israel, and his providence over them as to their third stage, Ver. 20. 21. 22. Wherein we have,

- Ver. 20.
1. Their motion described, And they went forward from Succoth and encamped in Etham in the edge of the wilderness, Readings to the same sense; only some varie the names of Succoth & Etham. Herein we may note,
 1. The mover, the same people.
 2. Their motion from the second stage, They journeyed or went from Succoth.
 3. Their pitching in the third stage, They encamped in Etham upon the side or edge of the wilderness, leading to the red sea, Numb. 33. 6. The words are plain, Ver. 20. On the 17th day of the first month.
 2. Gods leading and guiding them, &c.

Ver. 21. 22. Wherein we have to observe,

 1. The motion of the Captain of the Lords host, And Jehovah went before them, Readings most agree, The Angel of the Lord some read, as Exod. 14. 19. It was Christ, God blessed for ever,
 1. The Captain, Christ.
 2. His motion, he walked or marched.
 3. His order, in the front, or before them.
 2. The manner of his appearance under a double signal,
 1. By day in a pillar of a cloud to lead them the way, Readings mostly agree, and altogether in sense, Ver. 21.
 2. By night in a Pillar of fire to give them light.
 3. The constancy of his thus appearing, He removed not the pillar of the cloud by day, nor the pillar of fire by night before the people, The pillar, &c. did not fail or cease, or depart, as most do render. This noteth the continued visibility of those divine signals by God unto Israel; he that first gave them did continue them at his pleasure. Some queries are here to be resolved.

Quest. 1. Who was it that did appear in this pillar, and how did he appear?

Ans. 1. In the text, Ver. 21. It is said expressly, Jehovah was in those pillars. 2. He is called the Angel of God, Ex. 14. 19. Which was the Angel of the Covenant Christ Jesus, whom the Israelites tempted, 1. Cor. 10. 9. 3. The form of speech is sacramental, and notes the manner of Gods appearance in these signals, not that his essence was included in them, or turned into them, but that only it was represented by them.

Quest. 2. Were this cloud & fire truly such?

Ans. 1. Seeing God giveth them the names of cloud and fire, it is sure God gave them the nature; for God makes no phantasies. 2. Though these were really such, yet not made such by natural causation, but created by the power of God for his Churches special use, and of an extraordinary being, and quality. 2. Many are the differences between, these, and such as are only natural, as

1. In their principle, these were immediately created by God, those arose from material causes; therefore wicked was that assertion, that this was an uncreated cloud, and, that Christ, as Servetus said.

2. In their nature, though they were truly bodies, yet not of the same substance, with natural clouds and fire.

3. In figure, which was a pillar perpendicular from heaven to earth, and that always the same, which natural clouds and fire do not keep.

4. In respect of motion, which was not by moving with winds or otherwise, but by the word and will of God only, sometime behind,

5. In duration, other clouds quickly vanish, and fire also, but these were continued so long as God thought fit to make use of them, for 40 years.

Quest. 3. Were these Pillar and cloud of fire two distinct, and successive, or one only?

Ans. 1. Some assert them to be two in substance, and others leave it in doubt as a matter not to be determined. 2. It is certain by the word of God that this signal was but one in substance, though double in appearance as the condition of day & night required. So it is said that the cloud was upon the Tabernacle by day, and the appearance of fire in the same by night, Numb. 9. 15. 16. And expressly, Exod. 14. 19. 20. 24. It appears to be the same in a double use, when it removed from the front of Israel to the rear, it was therefore one and the same in those two shapes appearing by day and by night.

Q. 4. What was the use of these pillars?

Ans. 1. Guidance through an uncouth wilderness is here expressed to be by day and night. 2. Protection and defence, as we see in its coming between Israel & the Egyptians, Ch. 14. Ver. 19.

Ver. 19. 3. Influence of refreshing from heat by day and the inconveniences of the night, Numb. 14. v. 14. Psal. 105. 39. 4. A spiritual use is added by the Apostle that they were baptised in the cloud, &c. 1. Cor. 10. v. 2.

Quest. When did these pillars begin and end?

Ans. 1. God raised them so soon as Israel had need of them, which was at their going out of Egypt, and entrance into the wilderness, as hence may be gathered. 2. The continuance was, as is justly presumed, 40 years, while God had carried Israel through the wilderness-ways into Canaan. This is rationally to be gathered from the use God made of them.

Quest. Did the people journey incessantly by night and day?

Ans. 1. No, for sometimes the cloud stood still and then they pitched and rested; Numb. 9. 17. 2. The meaning therefore is, that when God called them to move, by day or by night, as sometimes he did, that then the cloud by day and the fire by night did go before them, and lead them, as we find a case in the pursuit of the Egyptians, when they journeyed by night. Ex. 14. 15. 20.

Whence we learn.

- D. 1. Gods redemption-work is progressive from state to state. Still further from Egypt.
- D. 2. Redemption-motions under God may bring the Church nearer the wilderness at first.
- D. 3. Where-ever God brings his Church in the way of redemption, they are encamped. Ver. 20.
- D. 4. In the camp of the Church, Jehovah in Christ is their Captain and Guide.
- D. 5. The Captain of the Lords host goeth before his Church in all redemption-motions.
- D. 6. Visible signals is God pleased to give of his presence with his Church at his pleasure.
- D. 7. Signes do not comprehend God, but represent him graciously to his Church.
- D. 8. Cloud and fire though different signes as to Israel, yet are of the same sense to them. Isai. 4. 5.

D. 9. The Pillar of cloud and fire is a standing memorial of Gods care over his Church. יסוד Statua.

D. 10. Day and night providence equally takes care for the good of Gods people.

D. 11. Guidance, protection, influence of comfort and sanctification to God are the use of his signals.

D. 12. Night as well as day motions may beside Gods Israel in the way of redemption.

D. 13. Israels cloud and fire are eminently distinct from those of the world.

D. 14. Neither the hottest day nor the darkest night shall stop the Churches redemption-motion.

D. 15. God begins and ends his providential help as his will and the state of his Church require.

D. 16. God makes his people witnesses of his visible care and help of them.

D. 17. God is not mutable in his purpose and work of grace to his redeemed people. Ver. 21. 22.

CHAP. XIV.

In this Chapter there are these two general parts containing the history of,

1. The fourth stage with the events of it, From Ver. 1. to Ver. 2.

2. The fifth stage from the 15th Ver. According to the distribution made of the events upon the 10th plague on Egypt which was into 10. we find they made ten stages before they come to mount Sinai: Ch. 19. Now follow in this Chapter the 4th and 5th stages together with the providential events therein which we shall consider in their order.

4. The next motion or stage which God appointed unto Israel, after their escape from Egypt, is declared from the first verse of this Chapter unto the end of the 14th. Wherein,

1. Gods order for their motion and pitching. Ver. 1. 2.

2. Gods account of this order unto Moses. Ver. 3. 4.

Kkkkk 2

3. Pha

3. Pharaohs attempt on Israel as God said. Ver. 1. 9.

4. Israels resentment of the Egyptians approach. Ver. 10. 11. 12.

5. The encouragement of Moses to Israel. Ver. 13. 14.

1. We have to consider Gods order for this 4th journey of Israel and their stage, and herein note,

Ver. 1. 1. The supreme power ordering it is expressed, And Jehovah spake unto Moses saying, Readings agree. Herein,

1. The supreme power ordering the stage, is Jehovah, he speaks.

2. The minister to whom the charge is given is Moses.

Ver. 2. 3. The charge given for a new stage; Speak thou to the sons of Israel, &c. Readings mostly the same. — Speak to the family of Israel. Syr. — Command. Ar.

In this order or charge we have to note,

1. The subject ordered, The sons of Israel.

2. The work given in charge which contains,

Ver. 2. 1. Their motion, that they return. This is to read by all, which doth import not only a motion, but a motion backward by returning to some quarters nearer Egypt than Ethau was.

Ver. 2. 2. Their pitching; And let them encamp before Pi-hahiroth between Migdol and between the sea, before Baal Zephon, over against it shall ye incamp by the sea, Sam. Onk. Vulg. to the same. — Before the suburb, &c. Sept. — At the dore of Gebalah, Ar. — At the mouth or dore of the trench or delved place, Syr.

1. The place of this stage is here expressed or described by four terms,

1. Pi-hahiroth, Numb. 33. 8. It is read hachiroth, the word properly is chiroth, and Ha is but emphatical with the Hebrews. It signifieth a company of steep rocks that were cut out, or having many holes or dens in them, by these were made streights and at the mouth of these were they to pitch.

2. Migdol, this word signifieth a castle-tower, or strong place; it was named as a city of the Egyptians Jer. 44. 1. And is conceived to be a very strong garrison of them now; this is called Hero, or Heroopolis by some Geographers, as Junius conjectures.

3. The sea; which was the red sea, was before the face of Israel; whereto yet was no path; before it, and beyond it a dry sandy stonie shoar; and the waters themselves declared nothing but death.

4. Bayal Tsepon, which is conceived to be a great plain near the sea, Targ. Uz. & Jerus. read the Idol Tsephons which they say Pharaoh trusted that he would keep in the Israelites, that they should not escape him it is likely such an Idol there might be; but here it serves to note the place by which Israel was to pitch. And was a city of the Egyptians recorded, Num.

33. Ver. 7, and might be rendred Baal Septentrionalistake all together and we may see into what strait God brought Israel by his own order now. Before them was the sea upon the right hand rocks and mountains not to be scaled, upon the left a strong hold or garrison of the Egyptians, and a little after we shall find Pharaoh and his host upon the rear at their heels: this difficult camp God orders for them.

2. The pitching here ordered or commanded; and the word is doubled, Let them incamp here, & again, before it shall ye incamp by the sea. There they must pitch so long as God will have them, which is reasonably conjectured to be from the 18th day of the first month, when they came first thither, unto the 20th when Pharaoh and his host were discovered pursuing after them. Ver. 2.

2. Adde we hereunto the account or reason which God giveth to Moses of his ordering Israel to this stage, Ver. 3. 4. In general it is a designe which God had yet to take further vengeance on Pharaoh, but in special we may note these particulars in the contrivance,

1. The actions of Pharaoh himself, And Ver. 3.

Pharaoh will say of the sons of Israel, they are confounded or intangled in the land, the wilderness hath shut them in, Readings mostly to the same sense, — Wander in the land, 70. — Are doubtful. Ar.

— Are strangers. Syr. — Streightned, Vulg. Herein God foretells to Moses the thoughts of Pharaoh concerning Israel, before they appear, that when they did appear, they might believe and not be terrified by pursuers.

1. He sheweth him that Pharaoh would be reasoning with himself concerning Israel, and be making conjectures concerning their streits to encourage himself to a pursuit of them.

2. He declareth the matter of his conjecture in two particulars expressed.

1. That they were confounded in their way, and like a company of Ideots wandred up and down, not knowing whither to go; and indeed such they were in themselves had not God himself undertaken for them.

2. That the desert had shut them in, and kept them prisoners; that he might easily reduce them or destroy them. Such were the agitations of an hardened heart after all Gods plagues upon him, Ver. 3.

2. The actions of God after this on Pharaoh which God foretells unto Moses Wherein, 1. The judicial act of God; Make Ver. 4. strong the heart of Pharaoh, — I will harden. Readings agree to this sense; which act of God hath many times bin spoken to before; neither is there need of further explication.

2. The consequents of this judgment, which are three. 1. And

Ver. 4. 1. And he shall follow after them, you or them, Readings consent. i.e., upon his sinful conjectures and Gods judgment, he shall make after you, to persecute and destroy poor Israel.

Ver. 4. 2. And I will be glorified upon Pharaoh & upon all his power or host. Readings are the same. One, I will be magnified. Another, I will be honored. The summe of this is; that God would make himself glorious in justice, taking vengeance upon them, that would not obey, even to their destruction.

Ver. 4. 3. And the Egyptians shall know that I am Jehovah, Readings are the same wherein the event is,

1. The experimental knowledge of the Egyptians.

2. The matter of their knowledge, which was that he was the cause of being death to them and life to Israel.

Ver. 4. 3. This account being given before-hand, the last thing declared is Israels obedience to Gods charge, And they did so, Readings concur. The summe is, that Moses from God ordered Israel, and they together obeyed and returned, and camped where God commanded them, Ver. 4.

Quest. Why did God bring his people into such a strait camp, seeing before he would not terrify them. Ch. 13.

Ans. 1. This appears that God did not carry them this way for fear of difficulties in another; for greater than these to sense could not be. 2. God had a purpose to put the faith of Israel to a trial. 3. His resolution was to glorify himself in delivering them from straits, and in returning just vengeance on the Egyptians.

Quest. Why did God tell Moses of Pharaohs thoughts and his own hardening of him?

Ans. 1. His free love to prevent unbelieving fears in his people was a main cause, as Christ, Joh. 16. v. 1. to his Disciples. 2. That Israel might know the thoughts of man were not hid from God. 3. That all hearts were in his hand to soften and to harden; and that they might fear before him.

Whence we observe.

D. 1. Jehovah alone is the supreme mover of his Church in all their stages.

D. 2. Jehovah usually ordereth the knowledge of his Churches way unto his Ministers, Ver. 1.

D. 3. Ministers must speak, and Israel must hear Gods mind, as to motions below.

D. 4. Gods charge sometimes draweth his Church back again when they are forward in redemption.

D. 5. Inexorable streits to sense, God brings his Israel unto, in the way of redemption.

D. 6. In such streits God encamps them, for the time of their abode, Ver. 2.

D. 7. God is pleased to give a sufficient account of streitning his people before-hand.

D. 8. The purposes of wicked persecutors are foreknown to God.

D. 9. Cruel persecutors forecast in their own sense the streits of the Church to encourage against them, V. 3.

D. 10. Vpon such wicked projects of persecutors, God gives them up to heart-hardning.

D. 11. Heart-hardning causeth the wicked to pursue the Church to blood.

D. 12. God provide's for his own glory in the ruin of such persecutors.

D. 13. By Gods last vengeance the wicked shall experience Jehovahs being in judgment to enemies, & mercy to his Church.

D. 14. Vpon such discoveries of Gods will his Church may sweetly submit to sit down sometime in streits, Ver. 4.

Now followeth Pharaohs attempt according to Gods prediction to Moses, Ver. 5. to 9. Wherein,

1. Pharaohs consultation about Israels departure, Ver. 5.

2. Pharaohs preparation for a pursuit, Ver. 6, 7.

3. Gods disposition of him in judgment to pursue, Ver. 8.

4. Pharaohs pursuit and reaching of them, Ver. 9.

1. Pharaohs consultation is considerable. Herein,

1. The occasion of it, which was the tidings reported to Pharaoh of Israels flying, And it was declared to the King of Egypt that the people fled, Readings are to the same sense, only the term of connection is rendered various, and, when, furthermore. This sheweth the occasion of Pharaohs pursuit.

Kkkkk 3

suit, some spies had told him that Israel fled night and day, and could as yet get no further, which seemes to be an hint to him, that now it was time to pursue and reduce them.

Quest. How came Pharaoh to know their motion?

Ans. 1. It might be from passengers who might see them marching. 2. It might be by spies and servants sent after them, no difficulty was there to know this, it being done so wonderfully in the open sun. 3. It might be by runegadoes that left the camp of Israel after their going out from Egypt with them: It matters not much how, but this is certain, that their motion was told to Pharaoh.

Quest. Why was it told that they fled?

Ans. 1. It might be upon suggestion that they broke their word with Pharaoh when they desired leave for three dayes journey, and now were making further. 2. It might be suggested, that their fear did make them fly from Pharaoh, both might be told.

2. The cause of Pharaohs consultation is here expressed, which was the sin of his own heart, expressed thus, And the heart of Pharaoh and of his servants was turned against the people, Readings mostly agree, Was changed, Sam. and Vulg. The summe is that the very heart of Pharaoh and his servants returned to the old frame of bitter hatred against Israel, which puts them upon new counsels and preparations.

1. The bitter frame is expressed in the turn, a little before Pharaoh dismissed them, his servants urged them to be gon, and supplied them with riches that they might be rid of them, but now they are turned about again to return to their persecution and oppression of them. They turned themselves.

2. The depth of hatred noted in the subject turned, which was their very heart, their very inwards were turned into bitterness.

3. The object, it was a people lately rescued out of their hands by God, and therefore lesse cause had they to revive hatred and persecution of them.

3. The consultation itself, which is by way of expostulation one with another, blaming themselves for sending Israel out of bondage in these words, And they said why have we done this, that we have sent away Israel from serving us? Readings agree. Why would we do this? vñg.

1. Their conference or reasoning together from the perversenes of their hearts; they spake among themselves upon the tidings of Israels flight.

2. Their blaming of themselves for that which they could not help, God forced them to do what they did.

3. Their repenting of the good done to Israel in dismissing them from bondage, though they could hold them no longer against Gods judgments.

Note we.

D. 1. Under providence tidings of the Churches streits and fears may come to the enemy to moove them.

D. 2. Spies use to report the state of the Church at the worst, to stirre up wicked powers against them.

D. 3. Reprobat hearts take occasion from tidings of the Churches streits to designe against them.

D. 4. Hearts of the wicked are quickly turned from forced favours, to hate Gods Israel.

D. 5. Hardned persecutors befool themselves for doing that good, which God forced from them.

D. 6. The liberly of Gods Church is the eye-fore, and heart-fore of wicked persecutors. Ver. 5.

2. Pharaohs preparation followeth these debates,

1. His harnalling for himself, And he bound his charret, — He joynd, Sept. Onk. Sam. Vulg. — He trim'd his charret, Ar. He cast reins upon his charret, that is, upon the horses bound to it. Herein note,

1. His forwardnes, himself is first in fighting against God still, and pursuing Israel.

2. His strength he trust's in, his horses and charrets; this he thinks enough to bring back a naked people. Blinded soul!

2. His taking of his men or army with him, And he took his people with him, Readings agree.

1. The term of multitude & propriety implieth a numerous company of fighting men, such as he could call together so speedily; the number is not determined; however Josephus writes of 50000 horsemen & 200000 footmen, whence he had it unles from the fabulous Rabbins, it cannot be conjectured; the scripture is not positive. And whether these were the horse or foot-army is not certain. Probable it is that there were foot as well as horse, considering the way which they were to passe.

2. The term of assumption, or association, he took them as his army and strength, to go with him.

3. His muster of his forces, in three degrees,

1. His principal strength, And he took 600 chosen charrets, Readings are to the same. These were the choise of his strength and and therefore probably so numbred in the front.

2. His accessory power, And all the charrets or every charret in Egypt, Readings mostly agree, — All the horse force, or horsemen, Sept. All that were fit for service, and could be prepared at such a juncture of time.

3. The heads or captains of these, And captains over every one of them. Ar. Vulg. same. קצינים, — Sep. Most valiant men — let over them. Syr. — Tribunes. Sam. These were for orders sake, that the great force might not be confused; but orderly march and encounter Israel. The word notes captains of three, and it is conceived that in every charret were nine men, divided into Ternaries, one before, and the two other on each side, over whom were these Captains, such was the warlike preparation to pursue poor Israel.

Quest. Was this a force fit to pursue 600000 fighting men?

Ans. Yea doubtlesse, and enough to follow up a company of unarmed naked men; and supposing every charret to carry 9 men, it was a great force; besides other horse and foot as probable there were. But indeed all was to little against God, which they considered not.

Note hence.

D. 1. Hardned powers against God do not only consult, but are first to lead, in persecuting the Church.

D. 2. Horse and charrets and mens leggs, are the best strength of earthly powers. Ver. 6.

D. 3. The choise of strength and greatest numbers, wicked persecuting powers engage and muster up against God and his Israel. They want no auxiliaries for this work.

D. 4. Persecuting powers have their wisdom to fight orderly, as well as strongly, against the Church. Ver. 7.

3. Gods disposing of Pharaoh in these preparations is considerable, ver. 8. Wherein a double act is observable,

1. Jehovahs work of judgment on Pharaoh, as upon his former rising against Israel, in these words,

And Jehovah made strong the heart of Pharaoh, King of Egypt and he pursued after the sons of Israel, Readings agree here, where

1. Gods act upon Pharaohs heart, he giveth him up after this 10th plague past to be hardned or made strong and stout against Gods judgements, and so prepareth him for the last stroke.

2. The effect of this hardning, He persecuted the sons of Israel more, even in his purpose to the death, but God would not suffer him.

2. Jehovahs act to Israel, And the sons of Israel went out with an high hand, Readings most agree. — With open head Onk. that is, not ashamed, as when the head is covered, 2 Sam. 15. 30. This is added as an aggravation of Pharaohs persecution; that notwithstanding God brought forth Israel from Egypt with such mighty works, yet he and his servants should dare again to pursue Gods Israel; this was a crying evil from obdurate Spirits. The phrase of going with an high hand hath bin opened before; the whole may be read thus to clear this fence, Pharaoh pursued the sons of Israel, even the sons of Israel going out with an high hand; Although God did so gloriously appear to deliver them, — When the sons of Israel went on, Invius. This word which is read went out may be rendred went on, the first notes egress out of Egypt, which was made by Gods mighty power; the second notes Progresse after going out, which was no lesse by the pillar of cloud and fire, which the Egyptians did not only hear of but see, yet durst they pursue against such a leader.

It instructs us.

D. 1. Tentimes hardning in sin calls for ten times hardning in judgement.

D. 2. Such ten fold hardning driveth men to tenfold more wickednes in persecution.

D. 3. The high hand of God in saving his Church will not perswade hardned sinners from persecution.

D. 4. When pride of enemies sets them against the Church, Gods hand will be above them. Ver. 8.

4. The pursuit and overtaking Israel by Pharaoh and his army, And the Egyptians pursued after them, and overtook them encamping by the sea, all the horse the charrets of Pharaoh (or of) and his horsemen and his army beside Pi-hahirob before Baal-Zephon, Readings are mostly the same. Onk. and Sam. same. — Ad or Gehalat contra Saphim Idolum. Ar. — בחימת הים Sep. — Mouth of the trench, Syr. — They found them, Vulg. Here are related,

1. The pursuers,

1. Generally, Egyptians.

2. Special

2. Specially horses of charrets, horsemen, army, even all the rout gathered by Pharaoh.

2. The act twofold.

1. Pursuing.

2. Overtaking, they reached Israel or fetched them up.

3. The object, Israel in their camp.

4. The place, by the sea, before Baal-Zephon, all terms were opened. Ver. 2.

Learn we.

D. 1. Providence may order bloody enemies to pursue and overtake his pilgrim Church.

D. 2. Such advantage of enemies may be ordered in the greatest disadvantage of the Church.

D. 3. Gods mighty hand may order enemies to see his Church in their camp but not hurt them. Ver. 9.

4. Israels resentment of Pharaohs approach now followeth to be considered. ver. 10. 11. 12. Herein,

Ver. 10.

1. The impression of fear made upon the children of Israel, thus expressed, And Pharaoh approached, and the sons of Israel lifted up their eyes, and beheld the Egyptians were marching after them, and they were greatly afraid. Pharaoh went before, &c. Sept. — Egyptians moved. Onk. All readings agree in sense, in which passage note.

1. The event itself making this impression, the approach of Pharaoh, and his army, sudden, unexpected and formidable to a company of naked men; and now they were at their very heels, full of fury and revenge.

2. The discovery of this danger made unto the Israelites, they lifted up their eyes and saw them pursuing close upon them.

3. The impression made upon their hearts, they were vehemently terrified, and struck with a distracting fear, their souls melted within them; it was an extreme passion of trembling that did possess them.

2. The effects of this impression, which are two,

Ver. 10.

1. Their carriage to God hereupon, And the sons of Israel cried unto Jehovah. — The Syr. renders it, the sons of Israel prayed before the Lord, but the word here used, signifieth no such cry.

1. The subject here mentioned is the terrified children of Israel, all in a confused passion, not fit for prayer.

2. The act done by them, they made a cry, or hideous noise or roaring under the apprehensions of sudden danger, like men in a storm ready to be cast away.

3. The object proposed to this cry Jehovah, they houl and cry, Lord, what shall we do, like distracted and unbelieving souls in the depths of danger. This their fear extorts.

Quest. Was not this a good duty to cry unto God?

Answer. Not as acted by them in this place, for,

1. The rise of it was unbelieving fear, not faith, without which none can please God.

2. The matter of the cry is no petition, but confused howling upon sense of danger.

3. The issue or consequence of it is nothing els, but forgetfulness of their late wonderful deliverance, and contempt of mercy, and reviling Moses, and returning to former unbelieving murmurings; as appeareth in the sequel. Ver. 10.

2. Their carriage to Moses, which was full of wickedness, not only against him the instrument, but against God the cause of their deliverance from the Egyptian bondage, and this is expressed,

1. By bitter expostulation with Moses in three things.

1. About pretended fear of graves, And they said to Moses, hast thou taken us away to die in the wilderness, because there were no graves at all in Egypt? Readings mostly agree in the expostulation, onely the vulg. read's positively and ironically. Perhaps there were not graves in Egypt, &c.

The expostulation giveth a bitter charge, and that with a scorn and taunting, where in we may note,

Ver. 11.

1. Parties concerned.

1. Scornful Israel.

2. Scorned and accused Moses, the Minister of their peace.

2. The danger pretended, graves and death; although God had lately delivered them by Moses out of graves in a figure. See here unbelief.

3. The charge, thou hast brought us out of Egypt to bury us, why tookest thou us out? See wickedness and unthankfulness.

2. About pretended injury done them, Wherefore hast thou done this to bring us forth out of Egypt? Readings agree. Here observe,

Ver. 11.

1. Their pretended good lost, Egypt. O Egypt, why did we come out of Egypt? Yet this was an house of bondage, and an iron furnace.

2. Their unjust charge to Moses, thou hast done us this wrong to bring us out of Egypt; wherefore hast thou dealt so with us? Ver. 11.

3. About justifying their former unbelieving carriage, before they came out of Egypt, Was not this the word that we spake to thee in Egypt, saying, cease from us, and we will serve the Egyptians. Readings mostly agree. Sept. Here,

Ver. 12.

1. They repeat their former unbel-unbelieving speeches, Ex. 5. 21. Ex. 6. 9.

2. They resume and own them, that they were true.

3. They charge him with rejecting their counsel, as if they had said, we told you of this beforehand, what would betide us; and you would not hear us, but have brought all this evil upon us.

Ver. 12.

2. They compleat their wicked contempt of God and him, by a positive conclusion, For it had bin better for us to serve the Egyptians, than to dye in the wilderness. Readings agree in sense. Herein also we may observe,

1. Their wicked preventing of God in this unbelieving determination, that they must dye in the desert. There's no remedy, death is before us, dye we must and shall in this wilderness.

2. Their desperat unthankfulness and wicked determination, it had bin better for us to serve the Egyptians. Or that we were servants there again, & prodigious unbelief and frowardness after experience of so many wonders; Ver. 12.

Quest. Who and what were these, who thus expostulate?

Answer. 1. The fabulous Rabbins make them of 4 sorts.

1. Some that said, let us run into the sea.

2. Others that said, let us fight them.

3. Others that cried, let us go back and serve them.

4. Others, let us cry them down and confound them, unto all which they would proportion the answer of Moses to stay them, but it is a fable.

2. It is certain that they were wicked creatures, full of unbelief and rebellion against God, their very speech bewrayeth them.

3. It is no less to be thought, but that there were some who lived by faith, and did not join with them, but the general cry ran this way of murmuring, and reviling God, with his ministers.

Which learneth us.

D. 1. Providence ordereth sometimes the approach of cruel enemies to hinder the Churches redemption.

D. 2. God may open the eyes of his redeemed to see visible & approaching dangers on themselves.

D. 3. Such discoveries of danger may affect unbelieving souls with amazing fear.

D. 4. Amazing fears of death will make souls confusedly to make out cries to God.

D. 5. Unbelieving souls will pretend graves, and fears of death, when God intends none for them.

D. 6. Unbelieving pretences charge Gods ministers and himself to be the cause of them.

D. 7. Unbelief makes men hanker after that bondage, from whence God hath saved them. Egypt, Egypt, thither these would return.

D. 8. Unbelief chargeth Gods instruments with doing wrong, for helping on their redemption. V. 11.

D. 9. Unbelievers would be accounted Trophies upon any visible evil that their sin suggests.

D. 10. It is the malignity of unbelief to resist, and repent the work of Gods redemption.

D. 11. Presumption of dangers never to come, as if they would come, is a bitter fruit of unbelief.

D. 12. Such prejudging fore-casts make souls choose basest slavery, before sweetest redemption. Ver. 12.

5. The last special event in this 4th stage is the encouragement of Moses to Israel after these sinful expostulations with him, Ver. 13. 14. Here note,

1. The manner of encouraging, it was by speech, And Moses said to the people, Rea- Ver. 13.

ding's the same.

1. The encourager, Moses though despised and wrongfully charged by them; he bespeaks them.

2. The encouraged, Israel, now generally distrustful, fearing, murmuring and complaining on him.

3. The encouragement given them in these particulars,

1. By prohibition of their passion; Fear ye not, Which he giveth also in the name of God, whose care is to suppress all unbelieving fears in his people; stop your despondencies, stay your trembling, away way with your fears. Sept. 11. Sep.

2. By command, which is twofold, 1

1. Stand still, or stablish and settle yourselves, Sept. Onk. Sam. Vulg. same. Expectate. Ar. and Syr. Expectants must stand still and wait.

The summe of this respects not so much the posture of the bodie as the mind, to be composed, and settled, and made firm by believing; this is a standing of faith and such a posture is used for the same purpose, to note the settling

Ver. 13.

ling

ling power of faith, Their strength shall be to sit still, Isai. 30. 7.

Ver. 13.

2. And see the salvation of Jehovah, which he will work for you this day, Readings agree in sense and scope. — Redemption, Onk. — Help of God, Ar.

The great things of God, Vulg. Herein are,

1. The act commanded, see, look upon, and consider.

2. The object presented; The salvation of Jehovah, That is the present deliverance of Israel from pursuing Egyptians.

3. The periphrasis of it,

1. By its Author, Jehovah.

2. By the season present, in this day of your fear.

3. By rendering a reason of these commands twofold,

Ver. 13.

1. From the present insuing state of their enemies, For the Egyptians whom ye have seen to day, Or whereas ye have seen. &c. Ye shall not add to see, or ye shall not see them any more for ever, There is not any real difference in readings, only to render after what manner, or as ye have seen the Egyptians this day, ye shall see them no more for ever, that is alive, and pursuing, as now they did: Herein observe,

1. The rational particle For notes that following, to be a reason for removing fears, and settling hearts, whereby God strengthens his commands.

2. The matter of the reason, the certain vanishing of the Egyptians out of sight, that is, from their formidable strength to a company of drowned carcasses, ye shall see them no more an army unless of dead men.

3. The infancy of it, all this shall be done this day, before it go fully about, ver. 13.

2. The next reason is from the help which should appear, though they by unbelief were not worthy of it, Jehovah will fight for you, and ye shall hold your peace, Readings mostly are the same,

Ver. 14.

Ye contain your selves, Ar. Here is,

1. A proposition of the great battel with the Egyptian army; Jehovah by his wind and sun shall fight for you, and give you victory; he whom ye have trusted.

1. The general, Jehovah.

2. The work, fighting and conquering.

3. The subject for whom, you unthankful Israel.

2. An intimation of the excluding them from doing any thing in this work, ye shall hold your peace, that is, not so much as move a member to the work: yet it is read imperatively by some, but ye contain your selves, hold your peace, and do not murmur.

Quest. Was this all the reply of Moses without reproof?

Ans. 1. No more is recorded. 2. It is probable some other words of conviction might pass. 3. Yet God at this first time was pleased to bear with them, and shew them his goodness, though unworthy of it.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. It concerns Gods instruments of salvation to reason quietly with a forward people who despise it.

D. 2. God much contends by his ministers to remove the unbelieving fears of his people.

D. 3. Stability in faith is Gods command to cure fears in unbelief.

D. 4. Jehovahs salvation is worth the looking unto by his poor creatures in faith.

D. 5. Present salvation God can and will give to his people to quiet them in believing.

D. 6. Gods command for faith carries proportionable reason for it in all cases.

D. 7. Causes of fear which hinder faith, God removeth at his pleasure.

D. 8. One and the same day the bloody enemies of the Church may be seen & not seen, or seen for a day in their strength, and never so seen more. In a day a formidable army, and dead corpses, Ver. 13.

D. 9. The great reason of forbidding Churches fear, is Jehovahs undertaking and fighting for them.

D. 10. In Gods great redemption typical and real, the Church is passive, not a word to it.

D. 11. In such appearances of God it is but just with men to be silent from murmuring, Ver. 14.

5. That which is the second general in this Chapter is the fifth stage of Israel in their motion from Pi-hahiroth through the red sea into the wilderness of Shur, the history whereof with the events betiding them we have given in by Moses from the 15th verse of this Chapter unto the 26th of the 16th: wherein note,

1. Gods

Gods charge for Israels motion with the appendix. Ver. 15. 18.

2. Gods ordering his presence in the camp. Ver. 19. 20.

3. Moses his obedience for opening the sea with the consequences. Ver. 21. 25.

4. Gods command to Moses to shut the sea. Ver. 26.

5. The obedience of Moses with its events. Ver. 27. 28.

6. The discriminating work of God to Israel. Ver. 29. 30. 31.

7. The praise of Moses and Israel for this work. Ch. 15. from Ver. 1. to 21.

8. The stage or pitching after this by Moses. Ver. 22. 26.

1. In Gods order or charge for Israels motion, note,

1. The occasion supposed, moving God unto it, which was the crying of Moses unto him, And Jehovah said to Moses, why criest thou to me? Readings mostly agree.

The Syr. read's, therefore Moses prayed before the Lord, and the Lord said to Moses, why dost thou pray before me? — I have received thy prayer. Onk. Wherein note,

1. It is supposed that Moses did cry by faith in prayer unto God, not as therest did.

2. It is expressed, that God heard him and answered him, and that in favour.

3. The summe of his answer, is for the matter of it, a grant of prayer, and as to the form of it, though expostulatory, yet not reprehensory, but yielding. I have heard thy prayer, why criest thou any more? The sequel prooveth this.

2. The charge or command itself to Moses is twofold,

1. Concerning Israel, Speake to the sons of Israel, and let them go forward, Readings to the same sense. — That they disjoin, Septuagint. — That they depart. Ar.

1. Gods commission to Moses, speak to Israel in my name; so I have commanded thee.

2. The matter enjoined, let them march on, and go forward the way I shew thee. Ver. 15.

2. Concerning Moses himself, that he perform the signal work enjoined, And thou lift up thy rod, and stretch out thy hand over the sea, and cleave it, Readings agree all in sense. Here we have to note,

1. The person commanded, Moses.

2. The act twofold,

1. Signal, two wayes,

1. To lift up his rod.

2. To stretch his hand out over the sea; both these were but external signes, which had no power over the miraculous effect, of themselves.

2. Real, divide the sea, cleave it asunder; which was truly effected by the arm of God; signally by Moses.

3. The promise for Israel is annexed to this command, And the sons of Israel shall go into the midst of the sea on dry ground, Readings are to the same,

1. The subject of the promise, the children of Israel.

2. The good promised, which was a miraculous escape from present dangers and death; that the sea should be divided, and they pass thorough on dry ground; a work never heard of in the world before. Ver. 16.

4. The threatening added with respect to the Egyptians for incouragement to Israel to go forward. Herein observe,

1. The threatening itself is twofold,

1. Of spiritual vengeance, And behold, I will make strong the heart of the Egyptians, and they shall go in after them, Readings mostly the same; they shall pursue them. Vulg. In this,

1. The evil threatened is judicial hardning of the Egyptians hearts by God, which before hath bin opened.

2. The effect or consequent of this vengeance, that they should be to desperately bold, and fearless, as to go into the sea after them.

2. The threatening of temporal vengeance thereupon, And I will be glorified upon Pharaoh, and upon all his Army, upon his charrets and upon his horsemen, Readings mostly the same. — I will be magnified by that which I will bring upon Pharaoh, &c. Ar.

1. The avenger Jehovah, God of Israel.

2. The subject of vengeance, the Egyptians, Pharaoh and all his host, charrets and horsemen.

3. The vengeance itself, God was resolved to be glorified upon them, that is by drowning and destroying them, as Levit. 10. 3. Ver. 17.

2. The end or issue of this vengeance threatened, And the Egyptians shall know that I am Jehovah, in my being glorified upon Pharaoh, upon his charrets and upon his horsemen, Readings mostly the same.

When I shall be magnified by the destruction of Pharaoh. Ar.

1. The means is again repeated, Gods getting him honour in the ruin of Pharaoh, and the Egyptians.

2. The end or issue proposed by God hereunto, which is that the Egyptians might know at least by experience, God to be Jehovah, he that maketh to be salvation to his Church, and destruction to its enemies. This though they would not know actively to fear God, he maketh them know passively, by suffering vengeance. Ver. 18.

Quest. When did God so speak to Moses?

Ans. 1. Doubtles not before his cry, for thereupon he expostular's with him

3. The promise for Israel is annexed to this command, And the sons of Israel shall go into the midst of the sea on dry ground, Readings are to the same,

1. The subject of the promise, the children of Israel.

2. The good promised, which was a miraculous escape from present dangers and death; that the sea should be divided, and they pass thorough on dry ground; a work never heard of in the world before. Ver. 16.

4. The threatening added with respect to the Egyptians for incouragement to Israel to go forward. Herein observe,

1. The threatening itself is twofold,

1. Of spiritual vengeance, And behold, I will make strong the heart of the Egyptians, and they shall go in after them, Readings mostly the same; they shall pursue them. Vulg. In this,

1. The evil threatened is judicial hardning of the Egyptians hearts by God, which before hath bin opened.

2. The effect or consequent of this vengeance, that they should be to desperately bold, and fearless, as to go into the sea after them.

2. The threatening of temporal vengeance thereupon, And I will be glorified upon Pharaoh, and upon all his Army, upon his charrets and upon his horsemen, Readings mostly the same. — I will be magnified by that which I will bring upon Pharaoh, &c. Ar.

1. The avenger Jehovah, God of Israel.

2. The subject of vengeance, the Egyptians, Pharaoh and all his host, charrets and horsemen.

3. The vengeance itself, God was resolved to be glorified upon them, that is by drowning and destroying them, as Levit. 10. 3. Ver. 17.

2. The end or issue of this vengeance threatened, And the Egyptians shall know that I am Jehovah, in my being glorified upon Pharaoh, upon his charrets and upon his horsemen, Readings mostly the same.

When I shall be magnified by the destruction of Pharaoh. Ar.

1. The means is again repeated, Gods getting him honour in the ruin of Pharaoh, and the Egyptians.

2. The end or issue proposed by God hereunto, which is that the Egyptians might know at least by experience, God to be Jehovah, he that maketh to be salvation to his Church, and destruction to its enemies. This though they would not know actively to fear God, he maketh them know passively, by suffering vengeance. Ver. 18.

Quest. When did God so speak to Moses?

Ans. 1. Doubtles not before his cry, for thereupon he expostular's with him

2. The end or issue proposed by God hereunto, which is that the Egyptians might know at least by experience, God to be Jehovah, he that maketh to be salvation to his Church, and destruction to its enemies. Quest. When did God so speak to Moses?

Ans. 1. Doubtles not before his cry, for thereupon he expostular's with him him. 2. It was when he raised the camp of Israel from Pi-hahiroth, therefore could not be the same with that. V. 2. Quest. When, and how, and what was the cry of Moses?

 Answ. 1. Doubtless it was in the time of those visible streits. 2. It was a cry in faith and by prayer. 3. His cry was surely for Gods appearance in the great danger of Israel.

Observe we hence.

D. 1. Incouraging instruments, to others under cries, may cry themselves better for help.

D. 2. Jehovah will take notice of beleevng cries, and passe by howling unbeleef.

D. 3. God would have his servants sometimes quiet in his acceptance, and cease from crying.

D. 4. After cries of faith, mooving, and doing Gods will, must be undertaken for success. Ver. 15.

D. 5. It is Gods pleasure sometimes that his ministers should use signals for working miracles.

D. 6. The greatest wonders that God doth, even rending the sea, is attributed to his signal ministry.

D. 7. Gods promise is also sufficient to inable unto his commands.

D. 8. The sea shall be dry ground to the Church, when God doth promise it. Ver. 16.

D. 9. Promises to the Church become threatnings to the wicked enemies of it.

D. 10. Judicial heart hardning God may inflict upon the wicked for presuming on the Churches mercies, unto their own destruction they shall enter the sea.

D. 11. God is glorified in the destruction of persecuting enemies after their heart hardning. Ver. 17.

D. 12. The making known of God to be Jehovah is the end of honoring himself in the ruin of the wicked. Because they would not know him to obey him. Ver. 18.

2. In order to their safe march, God ordereth his own posture in the camp.

Wherein we } 1. His motion.
 may note, } 2. His station.
 } 3. The influence.
 } 4. The event.

1. The motion of God in this march of Israel is from before them to be behind them, and this is expressed,

1. Really of God himself, And the Ver. 19.

Angel of God which went before the camp of Israel removed and went behind them. All readings to the same sense, onely the word of motion is variously read. He lifted up himself, Sept. Vulg. — Went. back. Onk. — Departed. Syr. and Ar. Where we may note,

1. The moover named, the Angel of God, formerly he is stiled Jehovah. Ch. 13. 21. It was the Son of God, who was also the Angel of the Covenant.

2. The motion in the change of his place, he went before the face, or the front of the camp before, and now he remooves behind their backs, and falls into the rear.

2. Signally is this motion expressed, And the pillar of the cloud removed from their Ver. 19.

face, or from before them, and stood behind them, Readings agree, onely the word of motion is variously rendered, as before, which is the same in the Hebrew; here observe,

1. The moover is the cloud, or pillar of the cloud, which was signal of Jehovahs presence.

2. The motion which was also retrograde, from the front to the rear. Ver. 19.

Quest. How are we to understand the motion of Jehovah and his cloud?

Answer. It is no local motion which is properly attributed to God, but after the manner of men, it may be spoken, upon such accounts as these.

1. When his help, assistance and working appears in variety of places; he did lead them in the front, and now it was necessary that he should help them in the rear, the enemy coming close upon them.

2. When the visible signal of his presence doth remove, now this is subject to local motion, therefore God is said also to moove, as this pillar of the cloud mooved; and this latter motion seemeth to expound the former.

2. The next thing in Gods ordering the camp, is his station and posture in his signal, which was the pillar of cloud, thus expressed, And it came between the camp of the Egyptians, and between the camp of Israel, Readings agree.

1. The subject coming and setting, the pillar of cloud and God in it.

2. The posture or placing between both camps of Egypt and Israel, no difficulty in the words, — And stood. 70.

3. The influence is expressed which God gave out by this pillar of cloud, And it was Ver. 20.

a cloud of darknes, and it made light in the night. Sam. the same, — And it was blacknes and darknes, and the night passed, Sept. — It was a cloud and darknes to the Egyptians, but to Israel it was light all the night. Onk. — There were darknes and clouds and covered the night. Ar. — And shined all night to the sons of Israel. Syr. The influence then through the pillar of cloud was twofold,

1. Of darknes to the camp of the Egyptians that they could not see the camp of Israel.

2. Of light unto Israel, that they might see their way plain to march through the sea.

Ver. 20. 4. The event of all this, And that came not neer to this all the night, or not one neer the other. All readings to the same sense under various phrales, — They mingled not with one another, Sept. — They could not come neer one another. Vulg. Here is

1. A curb to the Egyptian fury, they could not pursue as they desired.

2. An enlargement to Israel, they marched free and in full light all the night.

3. A deliverance of Israel thus farre from their fears, that no hurt could come to them. Ver. 20.

Quest. What night was this?

Answ. It was after the 20th day, as may be gathered, and upon the 21th they saw the Egyptians drowned, which they kept a feast unto the Lord, in singing as it was commanded them, being the last of unleavened bread. Ch. 12. 16.

It instructs us.

D. 1. God in Christ mooveth himself in his hander work where the Church doth most need help. Before and behind Israel is he.

D. 2. God mooveth even as the signals of his presence moove for his Churches help.

D. 3. God by Christ the Angel of his Covenant hath given and doth give all help to his Church. Ver. 19.

D. 4. God sets his posture for help between cruel persecutors and his Church.

D. 5. The very same means God makes to darken his enemies which enlighten his people. So the Gospel.

D. 6. Ths interposition of God keeps the wicked world from destroying his Church. Ver. 20.

3. The obedience of Moses to Gods command followeth for making a passage thorough the sea for Israel, Ver. 21. 22. Herein also we have to observe these particulars,

1. The signal work of Moses, And Ver. 21.

Moses stretched forth his hand over the sea, Readings the same. Wherein Moses exactly observeth Gods command given him, Ver. 16. Doing neither more nor lesse; but giving that signe which God commanded him in stretching his hand, so farre as he could over the sea when he came neere it. This God would have.

2. The real work which God did hereupon, in two parts,

1. In causing the means, And Jehovah Ver. 21.

caused the sea to go away, or go back by a strong east wind all that night, — Brought in the sea by a strong south wind, &c. Sept.

Ar. — Took away the sea, Onk. — With a strong hot wind, Syr.

— With a vehement standing and burning wind, Vulg. Samar. The same with the Hebr. Herein note,

1. The author, Jehovah, Moses onely gave the signe.

2. The work mediating, he made the sea change its course, and go away or go back, and fly from its usual place and course, Pl. 11. 4. 5, Pl. 77. 16.

3. The means whereby he causeth it, a mighty east wind, or south as some read, but the word notes the eastern point. Wherein,

1. One element is set against another, wind to water.

2. One is made too strong for the other, as wind for sea.

3. This not by natural, but divine influence.

2. In producing the effect, And set the Ver. 21.

sea for drowth, or dry land, and the waters were cloven asunder. All readings are to the same sense. The effect is twofold,

1. Turning the sea into dry land, firm to walk on.

2. Cleaving the waters and making them part asunder hither and thither, this was an unheard of work unto that day, Pl. 66. 6. Pl. 106. 3. V. 21.

3. The issue and event upon these works, is twofold,

1. For Israel, discovered in two great effects following.

1. The march of Israel, And the Ver. 22.

sons of Israel went in the midst of the sea on the dry, or on the dry ground, Most readings agree, — Through the middle of the sea, Vulg. Herein note,

1. The passengers, the fearful children of Israel, who but now were crying at their danger.

2. The way, a path unknown, which was dry land in the sea, great tracks to march in.

3. The passage, they went safely and securely through it. Pl. 78. 13. And this by faith. Hebr. 11. 29.

Ver. 22. 2. The use or service which the waters were made to afford them, And the waters were unto them a wall on the right hand and on the left. Readings agree. Herein note,

1. The use the sea was put to for the Churches sake, which was to be a wall to them for defence and safety, so the waters stood on heaps. Pl. 78. 13.

2. The sufficiency of this defense, it was upon their right and left hand, to keep them safe under the conduct of God, as Mai. 68. 3. 14. Ver. 22.

2. The next event upon the opening of the sea, concern's the Egyptians. Ver. 23. 24. 25. Herein,

Ver. 23. 1. The attempt of Pharaoh and his host, And the Egyptians followed, and went in after them, all Pharaohs horses, his charrets and horsemen into the midst of the sea, Readings agree in sense,

1. The subject pursuing, general the Egyptians, special Pharaohs horse, charrets and horsemen, in short Pharaoh and his host.

2. The pursuit, they followed Israel at the heels.

3. The place of this adventure, the very midst of the sea, which God had dried for Israel. Bold persecutors. Ver. 23.

2. The providence of God about them, where note,

Ver. 24. 1. His observation of them, And it was in the morning watch, and Jehovah looked to the camp of the Egyptians through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, Readings agree in sense, and mostly in terms, Jehovah appeared, &c. Syr.

1. The connection of this act to the Egyptians daring attempt. And it was shortly upon their pursuit of Israel in Gods new way.

2. The season of Gods act, the morning watch, which was the last, Israel beginning to march at the first watch.

3. The act of God, Jehovah looked to the Egyptians camp, it is spoken after the manner of men, that as a marksmen eyes the but, that he would hit, so Jehovah eyed and aimed at the camp of the Egyptians. And sent storm, hail, &c. Pl. 77. 18. 19.

4. The means whereby he eyed them, the pillar of fire and cloud, so that it was but one Pillar; through this Gods providence works against the Egyptians. Habbac. 3. 8. 9.

2. The next work of providence is Gods dealing with them, which generally was preparatory to their destruction in obstructing their pursuit, thus described to us,

1. And he troubled the camp of the Egyptians, Sept. Onk. Syr. same. Ver. 24. He was hotly angry, &c. Grievously vexed. Sam. He affrighted. Ar. He killed. Vulg. Here is but a stop put to their march, yet it was a terrible one,

1. The troubler, Jehovah.

2. The troubled, camp of the Egyptians.

3. The trouble itself, which was in vexing and terrifying them; putting them to a maze. Ver. 24.

2. And removed the wheels of his charrets, and he led them into heaviness, or heavily. Bound the axle trees of his charrets, and drove them with violence. Sept. Took away the wheels, &c. And they drove them. Onk. Bound his charret wheels & tumbled them into the deep. Sam. Loosed the charret wheels, & led them violently. Ar. They binding their charret wheels, &c. Syr. He overturned the charret wheels, and they were carried into the deep. Vulg. In this variety of readings is evident a great stop in their pursuit.

1. The agent here is Jehovah.

2. The object wrought upon, charrets and chariot wheels.

3. The act double.

1. Taking of wheels,

2. Leading them into a heavy grosse tirefom way. All this was the work of a God preparing the Egyptians unto destruction. He made oars for dry land to them.

3. The too late counsel and resolution of the Egyptians to retreat; wherein we have to note,

1. Their debate and resolve, And the Egyptians said, I will fly from the face of Israel, or let me fly, Singular for plural, Let us. Ar. All readings agree: and herein note,

1. The resolvers, the Egyptians that pursued Israel.

2. The resolution, let us fly, which they could not do, counsel too late taken to be good and successful.

3. The reason urged of this resolution, For Jehovah fighteth for them against the Egyptians. Sam. Sept. Ar. Vulg. to the same sense. For this is the power of the Lord which did fight for them in Egypt. Onk. Syr. 3.

1. The rational particle note's that the Egyptians were now come a little to their wits, when they begin to reason; they forgot what God did against them before; now they have a moment to think on it, but too late.

2. The reason itself which was Gods visible appearance for Israel against the Egyptians, and now they began to know that he was Jehovah. He forced this out of their mouths. Ver. 25.

Quest. 1. At what time of night was the sea divided?

Ans.

Ans. It must needs be at the coming in of the evening, for all night they were marching, and in the morning-watch God begins to deal with the Egyptians, who also were come into the midst of the sea. Vain are conjectures about other delays.

Quest. 2. Was there one way or more made in the sea?

Ans. 1. It is the conceit of some Rabbins that there were 12 paths made for the 12 tribes, but it is fabulous.

2. It is plainly said that there was one way great enough for their passage, and the waters were a wall upon the right and left hand, Pl. 77. 19.

Quest. 3. Was the way quite over the sea, or a way made to a place on the same side?

Ans. 1. This is started needlessly.

2. It is evident that Israel passed over the sea, Pl. 136. 11. 3. They went to mount Sinai and therefore must go over from shore to shore.

Quest. 4. How came the Egyptians so to pursue, when they saw such a wonder wrought for Israel?

Ans. 1. Their hardening their own hearts. 2. Satan hardened them more.

3. God hardened them to destruction, this perfects the work, and makes them run madly upon their ruine.

Quest. 5. Why doth God look to them in the morning, and so gradually proceed?

Ans. 1. This was Gods time, and not before. 2. This was the time to make visible mercy to Israel, and judgement to the Egyptians. 3. God first troubles and then takes of the wheels, &c. to make them see their destruction before it came, and terrify them with his vengeance.

Quest. 6. Was there no other use of the cloud?

Ans. Yea, a spiritual one, 1. Cor. 10. 12. As the Apostle improves it there.

All which teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods instruments must be obedient in doing signs for working salvation when God commands.

D. 2. Jehovah assisteth the signal obedience of his servants to give them salvation.

D. 3. All miracles of raising winds and cleaving seas, must be attributed to Jehovah and not to the signs, Ver. 21. So all saving works of sacraments.

D. 4. Miraculous cleaving the sea maketh dry ground for the Church to march from its enemies.

D. 5. The drowning waters are made walls to Gods people at his word, so all afflictions. Ver. 22. are good by promise.

D. 6. Miraculous mercies to the Church make wicked men presume to have the same.

D. 7. Treasureful heart-hardening causeth sinners to pursue their greatest dangers.

D. 8. Hardened persecutors adventure themselves and armies to vex the Church Ver. 23.

D. 9. Morning and the evening may not be the same to the wicked for their hopes.

D. 10. God hath an eye upon the motion of persecuting powers to stop them in his time.

D. 11. God doth not onely see pursuit of enemies, but troubles them with storm, &c. Pl. 77. 17. Ver. 24.

D. 12. Chariots wheels are quickly of, and horse legs stockt in mire when God troubles them.

D. 13. When it is too late, wicked persecutors usually think of a retreat to save themselves.

D. 14. Persecutors have found and will find that Jehovah fighteth for his Church against the faces of them at last to utter destruction. Ver. 25.

Now followeth Gods second command to Moses to shut the sea again upon the Egyptians, Ver. 26. Wherein we have two things considerable,

1. The peremptory command, And Jehovah said unto Moses, stretch forth thy hand upon the sea, Readings agree in sense, onely the word of command, is variously rendered, stretch, bend, lift up thy hand against the sea. Ar.

1. The authority commanding, is Jehovah.

2. The subject commanded, Moses.

3. The worke commanded, onely signal as before, but the same signe to be done to a contrary effect; therefore the Ar. rendering it against the sea, is from being any longer a wall as for Israel, but to turn again unto waters of destruction unto the Egyptians; tians; he stretched his hand before for the waters to be instrumental for Israel's salvation, as God would have them.

2. The promise annexed unto this duty, gracious to the Church but terrible to the Egyptians, And the waters shall return upon the Egyptians, upon their charret (singular for plural) and upon their horsemen. (His in the letter collectively. Readings are to the same sense: that they may return, which notes Gods purpose as well as his promise; or, let them return and cover, Sept. which way forever we read, a promise is implied.

1. The power promising, Jehovah who commanded.

2. The matter promised, the return of the waters.

3. The issue of all, the inundation of the Egyptian army, Pharaoh and his host. Ver. 26.

3. The obedience of Moses yielded to this command and the consequents of it. Ver. 27, 28. Wherein,

1. The act of Moses meekly answering Gods command, And Moses stretched out his hand over the sea, Readings are to the same, Moses did the signal work.

2. The events consequent which are these that follow,

1. The return of the sea to its usual course, And the sea returned at the looking forth of the morning to its strength Onk. same.

Ver. 27. The water was restored by day to the place, Sept. The morning approaching with violence. Sam. Nearer the coming of the morning to its hardship, To its place. Syr.

Former place. Vulg. In this event we have to observe these terms,

1. The subject changed. The sea, 2. The change itself, it had bin made weak by overpowering, but now it returneth to its strength of overwhelming and drowning, and to its terribleness in its course and place.

3. The time of this change, at the appearing of the morning, or the dawning of the day.

2. The next event is the flight of the Egyptians, And the Egyptians fled against it. Ar. Syr. Onk. same, Went back when it met them. Sam. Fled against the water, Sept. The Egyptians flying against it. Ar. Syr. The Egyptians flying the waters met them. Vulg.

1. The subject flying, presumptuous Egyptians.

2. The motion, they fled with all their speed.

3. The terminating of their flight, it was against the sea which was too hard for them.

3. The next event is Gods revenge. 1. Generally reported, And Jehovah shook of the Egyptians into the midst of the sea, Sept. Sam. Syr. Ar. to the same, choaked them, &c.

Drowned them. Ar. Rolled them in the midst of the waves. Vulg. Here we have the general revenge reported,

1. Jehovah, the avenger.

2. The object, Egyptians.

3. The act, he shook them of, as so many vermin sticking to a garment.

4. The instrument of vengeance, the midst of the sea, wherein he overwhelmed and drowned them, Ver. 27.

2. The revenge more specially described, where we have also more specially to note,

1. The instrument of revenge with its motion, And the waters returned, Readings the same. No difficulty, it is the same as before; the sea returned, the floods came to their course.

2. The revenge itself, wherein occurs,

1. The act, the waters covered, that is drowned; all readings agree.

2. The object of it set out here two ways,

1. In the particulars of it,

1. The charrets.

2. The horsemen.

3. The whole army of Pharaoh; which came after them into the sea. Readings agree.

2. In the extent of it, There remained not of them, or among them, even unto one. Readings agree. This notes the universal overthrow of the Egyptians, foretold that Israel should see the army of the Egyptians no more, unless dead upon the shore. Ver. 13.

Some questions are started of no great value.

Quest. How many Egyptians perished? Answ. 1. It is not revealed what the number of the army was, though some say 30000 horsemen, & 200000 footmen. 2. It is certain their power was great, as before described. 3. It is as certain that every soul there perished, this is enough for us.

Quest. Did Pharaoh himself perish? Answ. 1. It is vainly conceived by fabulists that he escaped. 2. It is certain he went into the sea with his host. 3. It is as certain that he perished there with the rest, for he was the mark of Gods displeasure. Ps. 136. 15.

Learn hence.

D. 1. God is pleased sometimes to require signal actions from ministers for revenge, as well as mercy.

D. 2. Where God commands such signs, he promiseth the sure effect of them. Ver. 26.

D. 3.

D. 3. Gods faithful ministers are obedient to use his signals commanded.

D. 4. God is as good as his promise to assist the administration of the signals commanded.

D. 5. He alone who weakens the sea can make it return to its strength for revenge.

D. 6. Wicked men may fly from vengeance, but in vain. Ver. 27.

D. 7. The red-sea vengeance on the Egyptians is Gods signal work to all ages.

D. 8. God hath partially done it, and he will do it in time fully, not leave one enemy of his Church alive. Ver. 28.

6. Gods discrimination between Israel and Egypt is the next observable in the 5th general which is visible in the events reported, Ver. 29, 30, 31. Here we have a collection of the whole works of providence about Israel, and the Egyptians at the red sea.

1. Israels secure march, But the children of Israel walked upon the dry land in the midst of the sea, and the waters were to them a wall on their right hand and on their left, Readings all agree. It is a repetition of that event formerly spoken of. Ver. 22. Where,

1. The strangeness of their way, it was dry land in the sea.

2. The security between walls of water on their right hand and on their left, to all which it hath bin spoken before. Ver. 29.

2. Israels full salvation, And Jehovah saved Israel in that very day out of the hand of the Egyptians, Readings are to the same sense. Some read freed or delivered, others, he gave help against the Egyptians.

1. The Author of salvation, Jehovah himself.

2. The subject of salvation the children of Israel.

3. The term of deliverance, the hand or power of the Egyptians.

4. The salvation itself. It was a full deliverance, they never saw danger more by the Egyptians.

3. The Egyptians destruction, And Israel saw the Egyptians dead upon the sea shore, All readings are the same. Where we have to note,

1. The event of providence on the Egyptians, that great formidable army were in a moment drowned, and all cast up by the waters dead on the shore. B. Uz. interp. Dead and not dead, is false.

2. The evidence of the fact, Israel saw them all dead, what their faith scarce would receive in Gods word by Moses, that is made obvious to their sight by Gods gracious indignation, Ver. 30.

4. The demonstration of Gods hand in all this, And Israel saw the great hand which Jehovah exercised upon the Egyptians, Readings are to the same sense. The power of the great hand. Onk. What things the Lord did. Sept. Great plagues. Ar.

1. The object demonstrated, the hand of Jehovah or power.

2. The exerting of it, God did his mighty work on Egypt.

3. The demonstration of all this, it was seen by Israel.

5. The present impression upon the hearts of Israel, And the people feared Jehovah, and they believed Jehovah and in Moses his servant. Sam the same. Believed God and Moses. Sept. Syr. Ar. Vulg. Believe in the word of the Lord and the prophecy of Moses his servant. Onk. Herein note,

1. The subject general of the impression, the people of Israel, not some singulars, but the universal body capable of these acts.

2. The impression itself, they feared Jehovah, which affection, over-powered now by Jehovah, and filled with the terribleness of his hand, turns them all to a present profession of faith and submission to God;

1. The object impressing, Jehovah in this great work.

2. The special subject impressed, the fear within them.

3. The issue or event of this fear which was faith, and that diversified according to its object.

1. Immediate Jehovah himself. They believed in Jehovah, he is the only proper object of faith.

2. Mediate, his servant Moses; that is so farre and no further but as ministering from God unto them, and delivering his will and covenant to them; the phrase is believing in Jehovah and in Moses.

Quest. Were the Israelites and Egyptians in the sea together, when these were drowned?

Answer. 1. That the Egyptians closely pursued and were in the sea together with them, is plain, Ver. 23. 2. That they overtook not Israel there, is as true. 3. That the waters stood as a wall until Israel passed, is evident. 4. That God gave not Moses command to shut the sea before Israel was secured is manifest. Now that God did make one part of the waters drown the Egyptians, while the other part was made a wall to Israel, is not revealed, but it is enough that the waters returned in season to drown all,

M m m m m and and keep any from escaping, and yet secured the passage of Israel.

Quest. Why were the Egyptians cast dead on the shore?

Ans. 1. The favouring will of Jehovah is cause enough. 2. To let the eyes of Israel help their faith in his word. 3. It is probable God would there send their arms for Israel to take them unto them. 4. To stir up praise, to him who did save them.

Quest. 3. How are they said to believe in Jehovah and in Moses?

Ans. 1. Some read as ours, they believed the Lord and Moses. 2. The phrases of believing God, or in God, though by some distinguished into assent of mind, and consent of will, yet they note a joint work of faith; one cannot be without the other, and both together do sometimes note a false faith; Joh. 2. 24. And sometimes a true faith. Joh. 5. 46. Joh. 6. 29. 30. 3. Moses is here only a mediatorial object of faith, as declaring Gods mind to Israel; so that it was his doctrine, which they believed; as 2. Chron. 20. v. 20.

Quest. 4. Was this a true fear of God and faith in him?

Ans. 1. With respect to some singular persons it might be so, that they truly believed unto life. 2. But for the general mass of the people it is plain, that their passions were momentary, and their faith temporary; for we find them murmuring again but three days after. Ch. 15. 24. 3. One thing more is observable, that their fear here foregoeth their faith; but in the true and lasting work, faith precedes fear, for men truly fear God, because they truly believe in him and upon this account also they love him. Gal. 5. 6.

Quest. 5. What was the name of this sea?

Ans. 1. It is called the red sea by the 70 and ours, Psal. 106. 7. 9. And the Apostle. Hebr. 11. 29. And conjectures of this adjunct are various; some think from colour, others from the name Erythra son of Perseus. And others by a colour cast by the suns reflection; but all are sandy. 2. The name in Scripture is Suph, which is a weed growing at the bottom of the sea, and dying with it red in India, &c. Exo. 15. And may give the name to it of the red sea; & herewith may we well content our selves.

We conclude this.

D. 1. Miraculous discriminating mercies must again and again be reiterated to the Church. Red sea mercies must not be forgotten by them.

D. 2. To have sea made land, and waters walls of defence, are peculiar to Gods Israel. Ver. 29.

D. 3. Partial deliverance of Gods Church shall be perfected in full salvation.

D. 4. In Gods appointed day his salvation shall be completed for his people.

D. 5. Grace vouchsafeth sometimes the eyes of Israel to behold enemies destroyed, which faith would not receive.

D. 6. Dead enemies God will give his Church to look upon after their living rage.

D. 7. The sea at Gods word not only killeth the enemies of Israel, but giveth them for a spoil to them. Ver. 30.

D. 8. The Church hath seen and shall see the great hand of Jehovah put out against persecutors.

D. 9. Such sight of Gods hand stretched out may make all the people to fear the Lord.

D. 10. Such feare while abiding may force a faith in God, and his word.

D. 11. Jehovah and his Ministers are beloved, and rejected together.

D. 12. Temporary faith will work temporary conformity to God and his Ministers. Ver. 31.

CHAP. XV.

The Chronical connective particle Then which subjoineth this Chapter to the former, sheweth the following history of Israels praise to the great works of God saving Israel, and destroying the Egyptians, which was before reported. In the general division of Israels 15th stage which is declared from the 15th Ver of the 14th Chapter

Chapter to the 26th of this 15th, it was observed that this history of the song of Moses from Ver. 15. to 27. was the seventh head, and the progress of Israel afterward, three dayes in the wilderness and pitching in Marah was the 8th from Ver. 22. to 26. Where the 5th stage was finished.

If we consider this Chapter by itself, it contains two general heads,

1. The narrative of Israels praise, Ver. 1. 21.

2. The history of further progress and pitching, Ver. 22. 27.

1. At Marah which was the fifth stage. Ver. 26.

2. At Elim which was the sixth stage. Ver. 27.

I shall proceed according to the general division, and so we enter in this Chapter upon the seventh head.

7. The next event in the passage of Israel unto the fifth stage after their departure out of Egypt, is the praise ascribed unto God by Israel in the song of Moses. The general parts are two to be observed.

1. The proposal by Moses and the men. Ver. 1. 19.

2. The responsal by Miriam and the women, Ver. 20. 21.

In the former we have more especially to consider,

1. The general proposition and argument of this song, Ver. 1.

2. The grounds or motives of it, twofold.

1. Such as were already past, Ver. 2. 12.

2. Such as were to come, which faith evidenced, Ver. 13. 17.

3. The conclusion, Ver. 18. 19.

In the general proposition of this joyful song occur,

1. The preface, Then sang Moses and the sons of Israel, this song to Jehovah, and they said, saying, Readings are all to the same sense. Onely that which is singular to Moses, is read plural by the 70. and for singing some read praising; Ar. Herein these terms are obvious,

1. The term chronical which knits this to the former history then, this is generally so translated &c.

Quest. When was this time?

Ans. Immediately in that morning of their deliverance, and the Egyptians submerision, which was the 21st day of the first month, and the great festival in the dayes of unleavened bread.

2. The minister and subject of this song, Moses inspired by God, as his Prophet, and the sons of Israel, all the men that were capable of such a duty as to sing, and praise the Lord.

3. The matter of the work reported what they did, They sang this song; that is, that which followeth.

4. The manner of acting it was by voice: saying they said, with singing voice.

Quest. What was the order of singing this song?

Ans. 1. It is evident Moses was the chief Minister of the song, he from God penned, and made it. 2. He it is likely gave this song unto them, or declared the same, that they might sing with him.

Quest. What was the end or scope of this song?

Ans. 1. To impress this mighty work of God on Israel. 2. To raise their hearts unto Gods praise, Ps. 106. 12. 3. Hereby they were joint witnesses of the unheard of work of God, in Israels deliverance. 4. The Spirit of God makes further use of it in applying this song unto the deliverance of the Church from spiritual Egypt, Rev. 15. 3.

Quest. Did the children of Israel truly praise God in this song?

Ans. 1. This surely was required of God, & intended by Moses. 2. The true believers among the Israelites; did praise truly according to their faith. 3. Such as were but temporary and slight believers, they praised God in the letter, but not in the spirit; as in the visible Church is done at this day, some stick in the letter of duty, and some reach to the spirit of it.

2. The proposition of praise made by Moses in general, wherein we may observe,

1. The resolution of faith unto this duty, I will sing to Jehovah, Let us, and we will sing, or let us praise God. So readings do vary but not from the sense. Here note,

1. The subject of the duty express in the first person, I, which is not individually to be taken, but collectively in the name of the Church, whereby they bind themselves in this resolve for duty.

2. The duty itself, which is express in the future time, I will sing; which act, though in itself it be external onely, in the voice, yet carrieth in it all the inward and spiritual action of worshipping by praise; in the inward spiritual joy of the heart, as in the confession of the mouth, & is a work of faith.

3. The object terminating this duty is Jehovah himself, unto him alone doth Moses, and Israel sing; he is the reciprocal object of praise, as well as of prayer.

2. The general ground of this resolution for praise, which is the greatness of Gods work now done, express,

1. By an assertion of his greatness, In magnifying he was magnified, Ver. 1.

Gloriously was he glorified, Sept. Sam. Vulg. He was magnified above M m m m m 2 the the great ones and magnificence is his. Onk. Cald. — Because in power he was mighty, Ar. — Let us praise God to be glorified, who was glorified upon the horses, &c. Syr. Here observe,

1. The rational participle giveth an account, for, or because of his greatness, therefore will I praise Jehovah.

2. The substance of the reason itself, in magnifying he was magnified, the sense is, in making out greatness, and excellency or glory, he was made great, excellent and glorious; that is, he appeared so to be, excelling gloriously, or exceedingly excellent. Imm.

2. By an evidence of the fact, now declared on the Egyptians, The horse and his rider hath he thrown into the sea, All readings agree in this,

1. The author of this, the great Jehovah.

2. The object, singularly expressed horse and rider, which by some is transferred to Pharaoh himself, but it is too narrow, here they are terms of multitude, that is, all the horses and their riders in the Egyptian army; which comprehend the whole host.

3. The fact, which evidenceth his excellent greatness, he threw them into the sea.

1. He in judgment mooved them to go in.

2. He in vengeance cast them into the waters and drowned them, after he had conducted Israel thorough the sea safely.

Quest. Why is this made the general burden of the song?

Ans. 1. Horse and riders are the excellency of strength and pride of power among men, Isai. 36. 8. 2. These were trusted in by Pharaoh and mustered up against God and Israel. 3. In destroying these the excellency of Gods power appeared, God made it known, that the Egyptians were men and not God, and their horses flesh, and not spirit. Isai. 31. 3.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. The time of Israels salvation and Egypts destruction is the season of the Churches praise.

D. 2. The first day of the Churches feast of unleavened bread is their initial feast, but the last a full festival. 1 Cor. 5. 7. 8.

D. 3. Gods Ministers of salvation should lead, and subjects of salvation should follow, in the work of praise.

D. 4. Jehovah onely is the object terminating praise.

D. 5. Singing, as a spiritual work onely, suits with God.

D. 6. Permanent resolutions of praising Jehovah are becomming his Church.

D. 7. The excelling excellency of God in himself, is the true matter of his praise with his people.

D. 8. Evidence of Gods excellency in destroying the strength of persecuting powers, must provoke his Church to sing of his greatness. Ver. 1.

2. The speciall grounds and motives of this praise do now follow, which are of two sorts,

1. Some concerning the time and providences past, from Ver. 2. unto the end of ver. 12.

2. Some respecting the time to come, ver. 13. &c.

As to the former they may be referred also unto these two heads,

1. To Gods being, what he was to them, ver. 2. 3.

2. Gods doing, what he did for them, ver. 4. 12.

In the former Moses describes God two ways,

1. In relation, ver. 2.

2. In himself simply, ver. 3.

1. As to that which notes his relation, therein we have,

1. The description relative, which is in these four particulars,

1. Jah is my strength and my song. Vulg. Ver. 2.

same, — Help and protectour, Sept. — The terrible Lord. Onk.

— My strength and my praise is God. Sam.

— Most mighty and most glorious is God the Lord. Syr. — My magnificence and my glory, Ar.

1. The subject related here is Jah Gods proper name, equivalent with that of Jehovah, and notes his being, and him to be the cause of being unto all things, and now of the Churches salvation, and Egypts destruction; it is usually expressed in songs of praise. Pf. 68. 5.

2. The subject correlat, Moses and Israel with him, Gods Church and people adopted.

3. The relation between these, My strength and my song. The same is expressed, Pf. 118. 14. Isai. 12. 2. Which terms may be understood,

1. Efficiently, that Jehovah gave them strength, and made them a praise to him.

2. Objectively, that Jah Jehovah was the subject of their strong praise, as in the connection strength seemeth to intend

Ver. 2.

1. The subject of this duty. I Moses, and Israel, whose God is Jehovah. Truly adopted ones.

2. The object of this duty, Jehovah their God.

tend, so it is used Pf. 29. 1. Pf. 8. 2. Mar. 21. 16. In both senses may it be taken, and the term of propriety my intimates the peculiarity of this relation from Jehovah to his Church.

2. The next relative discovery is, He was my salvation or for my salvation, Vulg. same. — My deliverer Sept. — He spake in his word, and was to me for a Redeemer, Onk. — Therefore will he be to me for salvation, Sam. — Who was my helper, Ar. And he will be to us a Saviour, Syr.

1. The terms in relation are the same Jehovah and Israel; God and his Church.

2. The ground of relation between them is salvation; he the favour and they the saved, which two are terms reciprocal, now this salvation is either special & singular, as that from the Egyptians now past, or general and of the largest consideration, as salvation to eternity unto such as are truly in this relation with him.

3. The next relation expressed is, He is my God, or This is my God, Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Vulg. same. — This my almighty, Ar.

1. The terms of this relation are the same Jehovah and Israel.

2. The relation between them is adoption, that is asserted by Moses, he is my God, and I am his adopted, he to be almighty God to me, and I to be an inrolled subject to him, this also in the truth is onely belonging to the true Church, Hof. 2. 23.

4. The last relative description is, He is the God of my Father, Readings all agree. — Of my fathers, Onkel.

1. The terms are here Jehovah and Abraham.

2. The relation is adoption, Jehovah was to him a God, Gen. 17. 7. The Caldee read's plural fathers, and so take in Isaac and Jacob.

Quest. Why doth he mention this relation?

Answer. 1. To note the truth of that God, whom he doth assert to himself, Ex. 3. 14. 2. To point out the faithfulness of that God, who continued to from Abraham to Israel, as he promised, Gen. 15. 3. To make this altogether a matter of praise.

2. Next to this relative description of God we have a positive resolution of duty to him, and that in two particulars,

1. For making him an house, And I will make him an habitation. — I will glory him, Sept. — I will build him a sanctuary, Onk. — I will praise him, Sam. Syr. — I betake my self to him. Ar. Herein note,

1. The subject of this duty. I Moses, and Israel, whose God is Jehovah. Truly adopted ones.

2. The object of this duty, Jehovah their God.

Ver. 2.

3. The duty itself, I will make him an habitation. i. e. for my self, or I will inhabit him, as some read, but the conjugation will not suffer it. Others to the letter. I will make an habitation, or a comely dwelling for him; which if it respect Gods visible Tabernacle among them, yet it must note that spiritual house of souls, wherein God delight's to dwell, so his Church is called his house. 1. Cor. 3. 16. 1 Pet. 2. 5.

2. For honoring or worshipping of him, I will exalt him, Sept. Sam. Syr. Vulg. same. — I will serve him. Onkel. — I magnify him. Ar. The force and compass of this duty carrieth in it the whole work of true religion; which stands in the inward prizing and affecting God according to his high being; as he is indeed the most high, and no less in suitable actions about his worship; that the high praises of God should be in their mouths. Pf. 149. 6. So no less are the tremblings of humble souls suitable expressions given unto God exalted on his throne. Isai. 66. 1. 2. Ver. 2.

3. The description of Gods being positive, or absolute, for which also Moses doth exalt him, followeth in two assertions added,

1. Jehovah is a man of warre, Ver. 3.

The Lord breaketh warres. Sept. Pf. 46. 8.

9. — The Lord is the conqueror of warres. Onk. — Mighty in war. Sam.

— The Lord is a giant and warrior. Syr.

— The God of battels, Ar.

The Lord is as it were a man that fighteth. Vulg. In this position,

1. The subject is Jehovah, the infinite and eternal being, the cause of all.

2. The attribute is a man of warre, which expression among men notes one mighty, subtil, active to annoy and destroy others, and here borrowed after the manner of men to set out the warlike power of God. 1. Sam. 17. 33.

3. The attribution itself is tropical; for the subject and attribute are in their nature inconsistent; and therefore it can be but metaphorically spoken of God, that he is a man of warre.

2. Jehovah is his name, Ver. 3.

The Lord. Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. — God is his name. Ar. Almighty is his name, Vulg.

In this proposition note,

1. The subject is his name, that is, the name of that warrior, or man of warre spoken of before immediately; now this name is the notification of him, by which he is known, as if he should say, the proper title or stile of this man of warre by which he is known is, &c.

2. The attribute here is Jehovah, which notes the infinite and eternal being, he that put's into being salvation for his Church, and destruction to its enemies, Ex. 6. 3.

3. The attribution is proper, true, and essential, the name of that man of warre is Jehovah.

M m m m m 3.

Quest.

Quest. Did God appear in any shape to Moses, that he calls him a man of warre? as Jos. 5.

Ans. 1. No such thing doth appear in this place. 2. All his visible appearance was in the pillar of cloud and fire, no more is here mentioned. 3. However God did appear to Joshua as a Captain, yet that was not his usual course, neither would he let Israel see any shape of him, Deut. 4.

Quest. Why is his name Jehovah so indigited?

Ans. 1. To point out the true God the object of worship. 2. To note the cause of Israel's salvation, and Egypt's destruction. 3. To laud the praise, and worship to him, to be real, Ver. 3.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. Gods relative being to his Church rendreth him the object of their praise and worship.

D. 2. Mighty and sweet, and joyful, and saving, and neer, and faithful in Jehovah's relation to his Church.

D. 3. Mighty, and chearful, and faithful must the Churches praise be unto God in relation.

D. 4. The best answer of Israel's relation unto God is to make an habitation for him.

D. 5. High praises from the Church to Jehovah are suitable to his exalted mercies. Ver. 2.

D. 6. Jehovah alone is the mighty Warriour for his Church in the world. The Lord of hosts. Heb. 3. 8. 9.

D. 7. The known title of God is to be the infinite and eternal being, who saveth his Israel, and destroyeth his oppressors.

D. 8. It is Israel's duty to know and trust in that name Jehovah. V. 3.

2. The next special head of argument for the song respects time past, after Moses had declared what God was to them, is the discovery of what God had done for them, from the 4th to the 12th verse. Here in these particulars are observable.

1. The issue of the warre is reported which Jehovah had with the Egyptians, Ver. 4. 5.

2. The cause of this issue described, Ver. 6. 7. 8.

3. The provocation to bring it on the enemy, Ver. 9. 10.

4. The praise ascribed to God thereupon, Ver. 11. 12.

1. As to the sad issue of Gods warre with the Egyptians (for with that Moses beginneth as to method of his song, reporting that first which was done last) it was generally the destruction of Pharaoh and his host, and that expressed as it were in 4 verses following.

1. Pharaohs charrets and his host hath he cast into the sea, Readings most agree. Ver. 4.

He saw in the sea; Sam. mistaking יָרָא for יָרָה

1. The Agent here is Jehovah, that man of warre.

2. The patient, Pharaohs charrets and host, instruments of warre and souldiers.

3. The act done upon them; he threw them into the sea like a stone out of a sling and plunged them into the sea.

2. And the choicest of his servants are drowned in the red sea, or reedy sea. Ar. same, Ver. 4.

His choise captains, &c. ἡλικυς ἀρχαγοι. Sept. — His choise valiant men. Onk. — Tribunes. Sam. — His choise Princes, Vulg.

No difficulty in the text.

1. The subject of this sad issue, Pharaohs chiefest commanders and chief captains.

2. The issue itself, they were all drowned in the sea; the glory of all his strength perished in the waters.

3. The special notation of the place is remarkable, it was in the red sea, this is still pointed at by the spirit, Ver. 4.

3. The depths have covered them, Readings most agree. — He hid them in the sea. Sept. This is but a confirmation of the issue. For though the sea gave passage to Israel, yet the waters returned to cover the Egyptians, and bury them.

4. They sank down into the bottom as a stone, Readings all agree. Ver. 5.

1. The subject of this issue, is the same formidable army as before.

2. The issue itself, They sank down as a stone, a paraphrase of drowning.

1. It note's the certainty of their death.

2. It note's the irrecoverableness of them. This is expressed by falling of lead into the water afterward, Ver. 10. But here and elsewhere set out by a stones sinking in the water, Neh. 9. 11. So prophesied also of spiritual Egypt or Babylon, Revel. 18. 21. Ver. 5. There is no swimming out.

Quest. What were these choise captains mentioned?

Ans. The word rendred Captains cometh from that which signifieth three. תשלוש --- And the 70 render them. Triptas ascensores Various are are conjectures about the reason and force of this name; as that they were third from the King, or as eminent among three; but some Rabbins and the Cald. Par. read it by valiant ones, without reference to number; Targ. Hieruf. Ben. Uz. His fair young men, such as were the choise of his strength, yet if there be any weight to be laid upon the notion of a triary Captain; probably it seems there were such in every charret, wherein 9 were carried, set in a treble posture, fit to fight, and a Captain over these might well be: but the sum is, they were the choise of Pharaohs Army, upon whom God darted his arrows in the sea, as Targ. Hieruf. there the depths covered them, and they perished. So shall all the Captains and mighty ones be destroyed, who fight under Antichrist against Christ and his Church.

Hence observe.

D. 1. Armies, and charrets, and Kings with all their power are at the dispose of Jehovah, Lord of hosts.

D. 2. The sea, the deeps, the red sea, all waters are Gods warlike instruments against persecuting powers.

D. 3. The choicest strength of Armies cannot stand against these Gods instruments of destruction.

D. 4. God sometimes destroyeth his enemies in the same kind, as they destroy his Church. Waters drowned Israels infants, now the Egyptians. Ver. 4.

D. 5. There is no swimming out but sinking into the bottom of Gods destroying deeps without recovery.

D. 6. Such dolefull issues of vengeance on Gods enemies is the matter of heavens song. Ver. 4. 5. Rev. 18. 20.

2. The cause or Author of this dismal vengeance on the Egyptians, is God himself, described emphatically in this work. Ver. 6. 7. 8. Wherein note,

1. His work upon the enemy, which was destruction, ver. 6. 7.

2. His work upon the means, ver. 8. In the former we have to observe these particulars,

1. The form of words used by Moses which is by way of apostrophe unto God; he was declaring what God had bin and done for Israel against the Egyptians in the description of the event; but now coming to speak of the cause, he turns himself to Jehovah ascribing all to him, Thy right hand, &c.

2. The matter here acknowledged unto Jehovah in this song is his prevalency, in breaking, overthrowing and consuming the enemy; and it is rhetorically expressed in 4 propositions,

1. Thy right hand O Jehovah is magnified in power or made glorious, Readings mostly agree, — Is glorified, Sept.

Is most valiant, Onk. —

Excellereth in strength, Syr. —

Abounds, Ar. — Sam. and Vulg. as Hebr. — Thy right hand magnified itself to me in that power, Jun. The terms herein observable.

1. The object of this assertion, which is Jehovah.

2. The special thing in Jehovah here sung of, is his Right hand, in several passages of the Prophets it notes his power as also his arm; yea and it seemeth to hint his dexterous exertion of his power to success, Psal. 18. 15. 16.

3. The commendation ascribed to it, that it was magnified, or made great and glorious, and excellent in its virtue and power to Israel.

2. Thy right hand O Jehovah hath broken or dashed in peeces the enemies, Readings to the same sense, — Hath smitten, Vulg. — Hath made the enemy to tremble, Ar. In the former, Gods right hand is exalted defensively as made glorious for Israel, and in this is set out offensively as destructive to the Egyptians.

1. The same object of praise, is Jehovah.

2. The same power exerted, his right hand.

3. The effect for which it is praised by Moses is various, and opposit, and that is destruction unto the Egyptians enemies to Israel, Ver. 6.

3. And in the greatness or multitude of thy excellency thou hast thrown down thy risers up, or those that rose up against thee. — In the multitude of the glory hast thou broken the adversaries, Sept. — Broken them who rose up against thy people Onk. — Thou wilt subvert, Sam. — In the greatness of thy omnipotency, thou dost overthrow, Ar. — Thou hast troubled thy haters, Syr. Thou hast put down thy adversaries, Vulg.

1. The object here praised is the same Jehovah.

2. The special property here praised is the greatness of his excellency, wherein the enemy dealt proudly, he shewed himself above them.

3. The

3. The effect of this, he subverted, overthrew, and cast down all that did rise up against him.

1. The subverted were the Egyptians.

2. The crime was, their rising up against God, so they did in rising against his people. Zech. 2. 6.

3. The sad issue, they were thrown down, and trampled on by the great Majesty of heaven.

Ver. 7. 4. Thou sentest forth thy wrath, it devoured them as stubble. All readings are the same. As the fire the stubble Onk.

1. The same object, Jehovah is still praised.

2. The special thing here sang of, is the emission of his burning wrath upon the Egyptians.

3. The effect or issue is the devouring of them as fire consumeth stubble; so is Gods wrath fire, and the wicked are stubble. Pf. 89. 47. Isai. 5. 24. Isai. 47. 14. Mal. 4. 1. Thus farre is the cause of the Egyptian destruction exalted in song, viz. Jehovah in his power, greatness, excellency and wrath ingaged against them, V. 7.

2. His consumption, or work upon the means of their destruction which were the waters of the sea. Ver. 8. Whereabout also we may note,

Ver. 8. 1. The cause working or effecting, And with the blast of thy nostrils the waters were gathered together. By the Spirit of thine anger the water was divided, Sept. By the word of thy mouth the waters were wisely gathered. Onk. Breath of thy wrath. Sam. Ar. and Vulg. By the blast of thy countenance the waters swelled. Syr. Here are these terms,

1. The cause itself operating, which is said to be the blast of Gods nostrils.

1. Principally his word or command.

2. Subordinatly, the strong east-wind raised by his word.

2. The operation or work itself, it gathered the waters according to Gods pleasure.

2. The effect produced hereupon, in two expressions.

Ver. 8. 1. The floods stood upright as an heap. As a wall, Sept. Onk. Sam. The gulfs stood like hills, Ar. The floods as in bottles. Syr. The flowing water stood. Vulg.

Ver. 8. 2. The depths were congealed in the heart of the sea. Most readings to the same. They were thickened in the midst of the sea; some allude to the curdling of cheese; others, to the congelation of waters into ice. The effect generally is the same; that Gods breath miraculously made the fluid waters to become solid bodies.

1. As walls to Israel.

2. As ice to melt on the Egyptians. So Moses praised God for disposing the same means to save Israel and destroy the Egyptians.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Jehovah alone is the onely Author of salvation, unto whom the Church must turn its praise.

D. 2. Jehovahs right hand is glorious in saving Israel and dashing its enemies. His power works dexterously for Israel but terribly to Egyptians. Ver. 6.

D. 3. The same enemies that rise against Israel, rise against God himself.

D. 4. The greatness of Jehovahs excellency will certainly subvert them.

D. 5. Wicked persecutors are subtle, Gods wrath a fire.

D. 6. In Gods day his fiery wrath will be sent out to destroy such wicked ones. Ver. 7.

D. 7. Gods word and winds are but the blast of his nostrils.

D. 8. The very waters are gathered, heaped, and congealed at his breathing. They change their nature.

D. 9. Such great things hath God done, and will do for Israels deliverance.

D. 10. Israel must sing of this power, excellency, wrath and breath of Gods nostrils to his praise. Ver. 8.

3. Now followeth the provoking cause of this past destruction from God upon the Egyptians, which was their own proud braggings and confident boastings of their victory over Israel beforehand, which stirred up wrath and hastened their destruction. Ver. 9. 10. In which two verses we have to observe,

1. The enemies threatening and insultation, Ver. 9.

2. The execution of God preventing them, Ver. 10.

In the former, the pride of the Egyptians confidently promiseth them successe to the vanquishing of Israel, whereupon they made these resolves.

1. The

Ver. 9. 1. The enemy said, I will pursue, I will overtake. All readings agree in this. Wherein are these terms,

1. The resolver, it was the enemy, that is, the Egyptians, well paraphrased under that name, as being full of malice, rage, and cruelty, set against Gods Israel, and it was a mighty enemy too, on a fleshly account. Enemies resolves are not like to bode good.

2. The resolution itself first here taken, and that is, he will pursue, yea that he will overtake Israel, let God do what he can. In which resolve we may note

The form of words is a propositio, emphatical.

1. The enemies violent bent against Gods Church to take them.

2. The proud and high defiance of God, though many a time he had by plagues required his people from them, and now miraculously had opened the sea for them, to escape from Egypts persecution.

3. The desperat blindness and folly as to themselves, to resolve to persecute Israel in such a way, which was onely of Gods making, & in his power to shut it up; yet foolish enemies they resolve to pursue.

Ver. 9. 2. The next resolve is to spoil, I will divide the spoil, my soul shall be filled with them. Readings mostly agree, I will fill my soul, Sept. My soul shall be avenged. Ar. My soul shall devour them, Syr. Here the enemy makes a further resolve,

1. Division of all the substance of Israel for spoil among his army, which he had gathered.

2. Satisfaction at dulness for the great prey which they made use of to themselves, my soul, or the lust of my soul shall be filled. Here is confident boasting before victory.

Ver. 9. 3. The last resolve, I will draw out my sword, my hand shall destroy them, I will kill with my sword, my hand shall Lord it, Sept. My hand shall consume them. Onk. Ar. My hand shall kill them. Sam. Syr. Vulg. The same enemy goeth on further in his resolution.

1. To draw his sword, to which expression all agree, and the rendering of it, that is, a resolution to use all warlike instruments to annoy, terrify, kill, and destroy such as he resolved to pursue.

2. To destroy them by his hand or power, the word used here is variously translated, one readeth, I shall impoverish them, another, it shall devour them; another, my hand shall take them for my inheritance, Junius. And so, ours, in the margin, my hand shall repossesse them. The word in the root signifyeth to possess as an inheritance; but in some conjugation to make poor, and drive out of possession; and thence consequently to destroy: every way the proud enemy threatens to draw his sword for some pernicious end, which amounts to the destruction of Israel; which way soever it be read; for if Pharaohs hand had repossessed them, it had bin for destruction, or if he meant to dispossesse them of all, it was still to destroy them; the verb seems to be in the second person; as if it were read, O my hand, thou shalt impoverish or destroy them. 1. Sam. 2. 7. The word signifyeth to make poor. The Lord maketh poor. Hab. 3. 14.

2. Gods prevention by an unexpected execution now followeth. V. 10. Wherein.

1. The cause preventing and executing, thus express, Thou didst blow with thy wind. Sam. Ar. Syr. Thou sentest out thy wind; Sept. Thou spakest by thy word, Onk. Thy wind did blow. Vulg. Here note,

1. The cause principally efficient, is Jehovah himself.

2. The cause instrumentally efficient, his wind; which was contrary to that which made the waters stand.

3. The causation which was the blowing of it, or putting it now to work.

2. The effect produced hereupon, which is twofold,

1. Upon the sea, The sea covered them, Ver. 10. Readings same.

1. The sea obeyed its maker to return unto its course at his word; it came to its strength from its astonishment or standing still.

2. The word executed, which was commanded it. viz. It covered the Egyptians, Deut. 11. 4. Pf. 106. 11.

2. Upon all Pharaohs host, They sank as lead in mighty waters, All readings to the same. In the deep water. Ar. Pf. 74. 13. 14. Herein,

1. The subject of this execution, the proud vaunting enemy, the Egyptians, Pharaoh and his host.

2. The effect upon them, they sank into the mighty waters; they were drowned and destroyed.

3. Their irrecoverableness of this ruin, they sank like lead, never to rise again; as before it was said they sank as a stone, thus they who would pursue are pursued, they who would take are taken, and such as resolved to spoil are spoiled, and who would kill and destroy are killed and destroyed in Gods mighty waters, poor worms are these mighty persecutors in Gods hand. Ver. 10.

We Learn.

D. 1. The pride of persecutors makes them utter their boastings themselves in Gods defiance.

D. 2. Enmity against God and his Israel will not stick to resolve the worst against them.

Nnnnn

D. 3.

D. 3. Turfs, spoil, captivity, and death are the breathings of enemies against the Church.

D. 4. Madness and folly maketh wicked enemies to threaten what they cannot do. Ver. 9.

D. 5. God hears all the blasphemies and boastings of enemies, and blows upon them.

D. 6. The blast of Gods mouth defeats all the brags of enemies.

D. 7. God can make his waters prevent enemies pursuing and spoiling. Irrecoverably can God destroy all enemies that seek to destroy his Israel. Ver. 10.

4. The retribution of praise followeth, Ver. 11. 12. Herein two especial heads are considerable,

1. The ascription of praise itself. Ver. 11.

2. The reason, Ver. 12.

In the former we have to consider these particulars,

1. The form of ascription which is by way of admiring exultation, and this is much more than to say thou art glorious, &c. And it expresseth him to be transcendently glorious, and without a parallel. Several such expressions the Spirit giveth us; for the execution of God, Ps. 89. 6. 8. Micah. 7. 18. Who is a God like unto thee? Onk reads it positively,

2. The matter ascribed unto God which is a fourfold attribute. We have plainly expressed,

1. The glory of his deity in these words, Who is like unto thee among the Gods, O Jehovah? Readings mostly agree. There is no God beside thee. Others read

Ver. 11.

There is none like thee among the mighty. Vulg. The force of this question is negative with an emphasis. There is none like Jehovah among the Gods, which being a comparative speech these terms are observable,

1. The subject compared, Gods, some read mighty ones, Angels, &c. But though the word in some other places may be so read, as circumstances may require, yet here nothing so forceth it. And it is most proper to understand it of the Egyptian Gods, who in this warre, and the event of it, are compared with the God of Israel. There are Gods many, or multiplied in variety of the ways of worship, such as gentiles have, 1. Cor. 8. 5.

2. The subject comparing, Jehovah the Creatour of heaven and earth, the God of Abraham, & Israel, who is worshipped by them according to his law only.

3. The comparison itself is about likenesses, they are no way like unto this being, pure vanities which can do neither good, nor hurt, but this God hath now made known his eternal power, and Godhead in saving Israel and drowning the Egyptians, None like to him in being or working, either for saving or destroying.

2. The next attribute is the glory of his holiness, Who is as thou glorious in holiness? Ver. 12.

— Magnificent in justice, Sam. — Thou art glorious, holy, &c. Ar. — In holiness. Syr. Vulg. — Glorified among Saints. Sept. — Mighty in holiness. Onk. Herein,

1. The terms of comparison are the same Gods.

2. The matter of comparison here, is, holiness and the glory of it, wherein we may observe,

1. Concerning holiness itself here spoken of him,

1. That it is comprehensive of all attributes, Isai. 6.

2. That the perfect notion of it, is absolute denial of impurity, and infinite perfection of purity, such as is effective of holiness in creatures, making Angels, and men holy.

3. That the glory of this also is drawn into comparison, which is the highest excellency of the same, such as is competent to the infinit Jehovah only, Deut. 32. 3. 4. Ps. 92. last.

2. Concerning the adjunct, glorious, magnificent. Now in respect of those what comparison is there between the unclean dunghill - vanities of the heathen, and this holy God. They are not to be named with him.

3. The next attribute is the terrible-ness of his praise, Fearful in praises, Sam. Ver. 11. Onk. same. — Wonderful in glories, Sept. — Terrible and to be praised, Syr. Ar. Vulg. Herein also God is made unparallel'd. Herein are two terms,

1. The matter attributed, terrible-ness, or that he is to be revered or feared.

2. The formal account of it upon which it is attributed, his praises, which is here to be taken objectively and passively, for all those dreadful acts which deserve praise, rather than subjectively and actively, however we are to rejoice and praise him with trembling; for if he be to be praised for his praiseful acts; needs must he be praised to the fear of his name.

4. The last attribute is, Doing a wonderful thing, singular for plural, doing wonders, most readings agree. — A worker of miracles or prodigious things, Syr. Ar. Herein also Jehovah is set above any, like as a wonderworking God, where, in note,

1. Activity, he is pure act, & acting for his. 2. The

2. The product of his acting; it is all wonder and miracle, miraculous dividing seas, miraculous destruction of Egyptians, miraculous salvation of Israel, all his wonders are here ascribed to his name, Ver. 11.

2. The reason in special for all this followeth, wherein are,

1. The cause mentioned, Thou hast stretched out thy right hand, Readings are mostly the same, — Thou hast lifted up, &c. some.

1' Here is the right hand the cause, and that of power, holiness, terrible wonderfulness mentioned.

2. The exerting of it, now it was stretched out and should it not be praised?

2. The effect of putting forth this mighty, holy, terrible, and wonderful right hand, The earth swallow them up, Readings are the same, that is, upon the stretching out of Gods right hand all the formidable army of the Egyptians were devoured, and swallowed up in the earth.

Quest. Were they not drowned? How could the earth be said to swallow them?

Answer. The Rabbins fable it here that the sea and earth did contend about them, when they were cast upon the shoar, and at last God commanded the earth to open and swallow them. But these are foolish inventions. The matter is clear that the depth of the channel between the mountains is filled the earth, in comparison of the Ocean, & there were they devoured, after God had shewn them dead on shore, Ionah. 2. 6. Ver. 12.

Whence we note.

D. 1. Unparallel'd is God in the truth of his deity in himself and will revealed, none els like or besides him.

D. 2. Unparallel'd is Jehovah in the glory of his holiness, none so holy.

D. 3. Unparallel'd is Jehovah in the terrible-ness of his praises, or praiseful works.

D. 4. Unparallel'd is Jehovah in his wonder-working for his Church, Ver. 11.

D. 5. Gods stretched out arm in the destruction of Egyptians held out his Deity, holiness, &c.

D. 6. It is the Churches duty to sing for all this of God in unparallel'd praise, Ver. 12.

2. Now followeth the argument of praise

In this song which concerns the works of God for Israels future salvation, here prophesied of, and evidenced by faith, Ver. 13. 17. Herein these works of God are foretold,

1. His providential guidance of them to the place, Ver. 13.

2. His consternation sent upon enemies in the way, Ver. 14. 15. 16.

3. His settling of Israel in his holy place, Ver. 17.

In the first of these, three acts of providence toward Israel are spoken of, all noting Gods care over Israel,

1. Gods initial conduct of them, Thou wilt lead forth in thy mercy this people, Sept. Ver. 13. Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. Vulg. read in the time past, Thou hast led forth, some read in the present, Thou dost lead, or thou art leading, Jun. And others in the future, Thou wilt lead forth, all the verbs in Hebr. are in the time past, but the work that terminates them, which was their coming to Gods holy place, was not performed, therefore it is better to read either in the present, Thou art leading, or in the future, Thou wilt lead, &c. And so taking it as the matter requirerth, all this is promissory which we read in this verse, as well as that which followeth,

1. The Author of this promised providence, Jehovah to whom Moses now singeth.

2. The object of it Israel, named this people, emphatically.

3. The good promised, which containeth two things,

1. The providential act itself, thou wilt guide or lead forth, conduct or carry onto the end.

2. The manner of it, or specification of this providence, In mercy even in thy mercy thou leadest them. A mercifull conduct was this mentioned, goodness, love, grace, mercy, is the guide.

2. Gods continued Redemption, Thou wilt redeem or dost redeem, Sept. Ver. 13. and others read as ours, which thou hast redeemed, but the relative is not in the original, though it may well be supplied, as it must in other places, yet the whole verse being prophetic and promissory, and the acts distinct, it may well be read as the rest, Thou art still redeeming them, or thou wilt redeem them. If it be read in time past, it concerns that work which so farre God had done, in freeing them from the Egyptian bondage thus farre; but if in the future, then it points out,

1. The term a quo, of future troubles.

2. The term ad quem, future rest.

3. The act of redemption which is the motion of them from the one to the other, until he shall fully save them. — liberasti, Syr. Salvasti, Ar.

3. Gods continued guidance, Thou shalt Ver. 13.

Nnnnn 2

Thou shalt gently lead them in thy strength to the habitation of thy holiness, — Thou hast called them in thy strength to thy holy lodging, Sept. — Onk. Syr. and Ar. and wear the Hebr. The Samar reads, — Thou hast possessed in thy strength the habitation of thy holiness, mistaking חן for חל. Now this cannot reasonably be meant of anything past, for they were but now come over the red sea, neither were they come to that holy habitation of God prophesied of, which is the promised land, & therein Jerusalem, and in that the Temple, which (as reputed) was built about 480 years after Israel's coming out of Egypt, 1 Kings. 8. 3. English. Annot.

Herein also we have to note these special terms,

1. The guide, Jehovah.
2. The object, the same people.
3. The providential act with its modification, Thou shalt sweetly, mildly, gently lead them, in thy strength, to the word is rendered, Isai. 40. 11. Where are observable,
1. Thorough conduct to the end of their way.
2. Tender & sweet guidance in their way.
3. Sure and safe conduct in the strength of God.

Note hence.

- D. 1. God's future providence as well as past deliverance is the matter of faith's praise.
- D. 2. God as a shepherd leadeth his people thorough their course to rest, and will lead, as if it were done.
- D. 3. Mercy is the rule of all Gods conduct to his Church here below.
- D. 4. God hath saved, and will redeem his Israel out of all their troubles. It is his promise, Psal. 136. 8.
- D. 5. Gods holy habitation, Zion in type, and heaven in truth, is the end of all his providential guidance unto his.
- D. 6. Gods strength secureth the Churches conduct to his holy habitation.
- D. 7. Tender, sweet, and gentle is Gods guidance of his Church thorough their way to rest, Isai. 40. Ver. 11.
- D. 8. All his promised guidance faith must return to the praise of God. Ver. 13.

In the second work of God prophesied which is the terrifying of Israel's enemies, we have to note,

1. A general prediction, The people shall hear and be moved, — Gentiles heard and were angry, Sept. moved. Onk. Sam. Affrighted, Syr. Ar.

The people went up and were angry. Vulg. 1. The subject of this prediction, peoples, or all the nations, enemies to Israel, with whom they were to deal.

2. The state of them foretold, in two events,
1. They shall hear of Gods terrible vengeance on Egypt, and his dividing the red sea.
2. They shall be moved with the fear of his judgments and no less with wrath against Israel, Gods people, Deut. 2. 15.

2. A special prophecy, wherein evil is prophesied upon 4 sorts of people,

1. The evil hereof prophesied,
1. Upon the Philistines, Sorrow shall take hold upon the inhabitants of Palestine, Travelling paines have taken hold, &c. Sept. — Terror, &c. Onk. — Fear. Syr. — Griets. Vulg. Here note,

1. The subject of this evil prophesied, the Philistines.

2. The evil itself, pains, as of a woman in travel, so shall they be moved at Israel's prosperity. Ver. 14.

2. Upon the Edomites, the Dukes or princes of Edom shall be amazed. Were amazed, preter perfect for future, to note the certainty of events as in the rest. They hastened, Sept. — They were troubled, Onk. Sam. Vulg. Astonished. Ar. Afraid. Syr.

1. The subject spoken of is the seed of Esau, always bitter enemies to Jacobs seed, the Church.

2. The evil foretold, trouble of spirit, consternation, fear, astonishment, when they hear of Gods wonderful appearing for Israel.

3. Upon the Moabites, The mighty men of Moab trembling shall take hold upon them. Readings agree. Here time past is put for future also,

1. The subject here threatened, the Moabites, and the mightiest of them, who were the children of Lot, conspired against Israel, Psal. 83.

2. The evil threatened, trembling, shaking, knees knocking one against another at the hearing of the tidings of Gods vengeance on Egypt for Israel's sake. These shall hold them fast. Numb. 22. 3.

4. Upon the Canaanites, all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away, — They

They wasted, Sept. — They were broken, Onk. Syr. — They flowed, Ar. — They grew stiff, Vulg. As benumbed with cold.

1. The subject here, all the Canaanites, whose land God had given to Israel.

2. The evil threatened, They shall melt away, and their hearts dye within them, they should be as water spilt upon the ground, Jos. 2. 9. Ver. 15.

2. The event or effect of all this evil; as in Ver. 16. Wherein we have also to observe,

1. The form of expressing it, which is rhetorical and by way of apostrophe unto God, turning away from the former narrative discourse, we may here perceive that he bespeaks Jehovah, wherein he attributes unto him these effects, upon the enemies, and upon Israel.

2. The matter ascribed in two main events,

1. Upon the enemies that they should be made still and silenced, Terror and dread shall fall upon them by the greatness of thine arm, they shall be so still as a stone, — Let them be made stones, 70. — Let them hold their peace as a stone, Onk. — Let them be dumb as stones, Ar. — Let them be drowned as stones, Syr. — Let them be unmovable Vulg. Here we may observe,

1. The causal event upon enemies, Fear and dread shall fall upon them,

1. The author God, Ex. 23.

2. The causal influence, terrible fear, and dread, Great terror, Deut. 2. Ver. 25.

3. The impression, it shall fall upon them as a mountain.

2. The effect issuing hence, they shall be as silent as a stone, or be made stones, as Nabals heart, dead, and lumpish, and stifling them that they shall not lift up a word against Israel.

2. The next event is upon Israel, Till thy people pass over, till this people pass over, which thou hast purchased, — This thy people, Sept. — Arnon and Jordan. Onk. Which thou hast redeemed, Syr. — Which thou hast gotten into possession, Ar. — Sam. and Vulg. as Hebr.

1. The term of enemies silence, until Gods people.

2. The subject of this effect, Gods people Israel doubled.

1. The event itself, Passing over Jordan foretold, to enter into Canaan, all this mainly respects Gods enemies.

4. The reason of this is Gods owning or possessing of them, the relative is not expressed in the Hebr. only Thou hast possessed, or they are thy possession, therefore shalt thou do all this for them against their enemies, Ver. 16.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Tidings of Gods appearance for his Church against his enemies will make nations fear.

D. 2. Tidings of a travelling woman shall fall upon the Churches enemies at Gods pleasure.

D. 3. Princes and powers shall be astonished at Gods vindicating his Israel.

D. 4. Trembling shall hold fast the mighty enemies when God sends word of vengeance.

D. 5. Hearts of cursed Canaanites shall melt and dye away when God threatens. Ver. 15.

D. 6. All terrible works of vengeance must be ascribed unto Jehovah.

D. 7. Gods great Arm alone strikes dread and silence on his enemies.

D. 8. Not a tongue shall move against Gods Church when his arm is revealed.

D. 9. Gods Israel shall pass to its rest without rub or resistance.

D. 10. Gods possession of his Church is the ground of all his appearance against enemies for them, V. 16.

4. The last argument of praise from future good is the settlement of Israel in the place appointed for his own habitation. This is given her in promise, Ver. 17.

Thou wilt bring them in and thou wilt plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, the place to rest thyself, thou hast made (it), O Jehovah, the sanctuary, O Lord, thy hands have established it. — Bringing them in, plant them on the mountain of thine inheritance, for thy prepared habitation, which thou hast perfected, O Lord, the sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have prepared, Sept. — And place them, &c. The place prepared for the house of thy Majesty thou hast prepared, O Lord, the sanctuary, O Lord, thy hands have prepared. Onk. — In the most firm place of thy habitation, which thou hast made, O Lord, in the sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hand hath prepared. Sam. — Thou hast made a most firm sanctuary, O Lord, for thy dwelling, O Lord, establish

Nnnnn 3 if it with thy hands. Syr. — Thou hast prepared it for thy dwelling, O Lord, in the sanctuary which thy hand hath disposed. Ar. — In thy firmest habitation which thou hast wrought, O Lord, thy sanctuary, O Lord which thy hands have established, Vulg. Such are the readings. In the whole being a promise, we have to note,

1. The form of words, which is also by way of apostrophe unto God, in two terms,

1. O Jehovah, the name of being unto Israel.

2. O Lord, which is a term of supremacy, he being indeed Israel's Lord and King. From him they had this promise, and to him in their song they ascribe the praise of it. For he as their Lord was resolved to give not only the promise, but the performance of it, which was yet to come.

2. The matter or contents, here, is a promise of a good to come unto Israel, of which Moses prophesieth. In summe it is a place of Israel's rest, and plantation, after all their wilderness conditions, and motions. Wherein we have to observe,

1. The place itself described under 3. titles.

1. The mountain of Gods inheritance, under which is described to us,

1. The sweetness or comfort of it, it is an inheritance to maintain, and keep them. This notes among men a good portion. Eccles. 7. 11.

2. The strength of it, it is a mountain of inheritance, such strong dwellings have men sought after.

3. The glory of it, in that it is Gods mountain of inheritance, and that is glorious thoroughly.

2. It is styled, The place for God to dwell in, which is a singular addition unto the inheritance.

1. It notes a settled place, such usually are dwellings wherein men sit down and make abode, opposit to tents which are moovable habitations.

2. It notes an all-satisfying place, for it is the portion wherein God himself sits down with Israel, and there all his well-springs are apparent. Psal. 87.

3. It is called the sanctuary or holy place, which is the highest excellency of Israel's rest promised, it is Gods holy place, Ex. 25. 8.

2. The Author or former of this place for Israel, Thou hast made it, thy hands have established, O Jehovah. His workmanship must needs be good, nothing can come out of his hands but glorious.

1. Jehovah, the Builder, the eternal Being.

2. The act of causation. Twofold,

1. Making it, putting it into being,

2. fixing it, making it sure, not to be shaken or altered,

3. The interest of Israel in this place set out in two expellions,

1. Of entrance, Thou wilt bring them in, they shall not always be absent or kept off, entrance shall be given unto them.

2. Of plantation, Thou shalt plant them therein, O Jehovah.

1. Certainty of interest, for the Lord shall give it, who hath onely title to it.

2. Reality of interest, they shall have entrance, and possession.

3. Perpetuity of interest, for there they shall be planted. This is the promise.

Quest. But what and where is this place?

Ans. 1. Literally the promised land, Jerusalem, Sion, were this mountain of inheritance and sanctuary, but typically, Ps. 76. 1. 2. Ps. 132. 13. 14. 2. Really, and in truth of the mystery, it is heaven itself, and Jerusalem which is above, this mountain and city God prepareth for his true Israel, as for Abraham, &c. Heb. 11. 10. 16. All this grace and goodness is sung of here by Moses and Israel to the praise of Jehovah.

Learn we.

D. 1. Jehovah onely is the Fountain of being and sovereign Lord unto his Israel.

D. 2. Israels Lord alone maketh and establisheth their place of rest for them. None can unmake it.

D. 3. Israels last rest is Gods mountain of inheritance, his own dwelling place, and sanctuary.

D. 4. Real interest by entrance and plantation in this place Israel hath by promise.

D. 5. Gods goodness is to make his dwelling with Israel, as theirs with him.

D. 6. All this grace must be ascribed to Jehovah in his Churches song. Ver. 17.

3. Now followeth the conclusion of this song of Moses, Ver. 18. 19. Wherein we may note,

1. A prophetic declaration of the eternity of Gods Kingdom, Ver. 18. Jehovah shall reign for ever and ever, Sam. Syr. Vulg. same.

The Lord is ruling the world for ever and age, Sept. The kingdom of the Lord endureth for ever, ever, &c. Onk. God is King of the everlasting world, Ar. In this closing passage the Church prophesieth of Jehovah's reign and kingdom,

Ver. 1.

1. The King Jehovah he is sung of by them.

2. The reign, government and kingdom of his over all the world, his Church, and enemies.

3. The eternity of it, for ever and age or to ages and perpetuity. And thus Moses sings prophetically to our faith, Ver. 18.

2. A special demonstration of it from his unheard of act, concerning Israel, and the Egyptians,

Ver. 19. 1. His work on Egypt, For the horse of Pharaoh went in, with his charrets and with his horsemen into the sea, and Jehovah brought again the waters of the sea upon them, Readings agree in sense,

1. Pharaohs adventure.

2. Jehovahs vengeance, all have bin opened from Ch. 14. 23. &c.

2. His work on Israel at the same time, But the font of Israel went on dry land in the midst of the sea, Readings the same, all opened before, C. 14. ver. 29. &c.

Quest. How doth this demonstrate the eternity of Gods reign and kingdom being but one act past?

Answer. Not the singleness but the singularity of the act, which was impossible for a finite power to do, giveth us the force of this demonstration. That which an infinit arm works demonstrates power to eternity, but such was the work of God on Egypt & Israel at the red sea; ergo, there was no reason therefore to shut this out of the song as it hath seemed good unto some to do.

This instructs us.

D. 1. The eternity of Jehovahs kingdom in Christ is a most undoubted truth.

D. 2. This everlasting kingdom is revealed to the Church for faith to rest.

D. 3. The everlastingness of Christs government must be the burden of the Churches song, Ver. 18.

D. 4. One single act of infinite and eternall power is sufficient to demonstrate the eternity of it.

D. 5. Gods red sea actions on Egypt and Israel proclaim him to be the eternal King.

D. 6. The Church to eternity is bound to praise their King upon this account, Ver. 18.

2. Now followeth the second general head of this song at first observed, which is the answer of the women unto the men who began the song, Moses and the sons of Israel, Ver. 20. 21. Herein we may observe,

1. The womens preparation, ver. 20. And Mirjam the prophetesse the sister of Aaron, took a timbrel in her hand, and all the women went out after her with timbrels and dances, Readings the same.

1. The subjects of preparation, the daughters of Israel.

2. The order.

1. Mirjam the Prophetesse, sister of Aaron, as here named.

2. The other women.

3. The preparation itself, they took instruments of Musick, and went out to keep their places in this worship. — Timbrels and pipes or flutes, Jun.

2. The womens action represented under Mirjam as the mens under Moses, And Mirjam answered them, sing ye to Jehovah, &c. As it was Ver. 1. No real difference in readings, Ver. 21.

Quest. Why is Mirjam here called a Prophetesse?

Ans. 1. It may be, under a general consideration, as joining in duties of Gods praise or worship, which are sometimes expressed under prophesying, 1. Cor. 11. 2. In a special way also God did appear to her, as to some other women to reveal his will, Numb. 12.

Quest. Why is she called Aarons sister, and not of Moses?

Ans. 1. It was to expresse her relation as pleased the Spirit. 2. Not exclusive to, or undervaluing of Moses. 3. She was conversant with Aaron in Egypt when Moses was long absent.

Quest. Did the women sing onely this burden of the song?

Ans. It is probable that they sang not onely this but the rest in answer to the men, as was the order of service at that time; this onely may be recorded for brevities sake.

Quest. Is this practise now imitable in the Church?

Ans. No, for. 1. This was done by a prophetic and extraordinary instant. 2. It was a service suitable to that legal constitution at that time. 3. The Gospel onely requireth spiritual sacrifices of praise and singing.

Hence learn we.

D. 1. Women also have their place and work in the spiritual worship of God.

D. 2. Orderly carriage by women and men men is requisite in Gods Church, when they praise him.

D. 3. The Old Testament dispensation had its peculiar rites in service, not to be followed now.

D. 4. The moral work of praise is for ever due unto God for his excellent salvation unto his, V. 20. 21.

8. The last particular in the history of Israels 5th stage is their progresse unto and pitching in Marah, Ver. 22. 26. Wherein we have to observe.

1. Israels motion forward, Ver. 22.
2. Israels pitching place, Ver. 23.
3. The events that follow thereon, threefold,

1. Israels murmuring in this stage.
2. The intercession of Moses.
3. The reply of God to Moses.

1. By discovering means for healing, a tree.
2. By giving law and charge, V. 25.
3. By encouraging, Ver. 26.

To the first. In the motion of Israel we may note,

Ver. 22. 1. The instrumental cause mooving them, And Moses made Israel to go forward, from the sea Suph. Took them from the red sea, Sept. Onk. Vulg. Made them go forward. Sam. Depart. Syr. Go. Ar.

1. The term connecting sheweth this to be soon after their festival and song which was on the 21th day of the first month.

2. The instrumental cause of mooving them was Moses in Gods hand.

3. The causal act, he made them arise and go forward; it is conceived that some at least were lingering in taking the spoil of the Egyptians, who were cast upon the shoar, and therefore Moses urged them forward.

4. The subject of the motion, Israel.

5. The term from whence of their motion, the sea Suph, or the red sea or the weedie sea as some.

2. The motion of them, whereabouts we read here,

Ver. 22. 1. The way wherein they mooved, And they went out into the wilderness of Shur. Vulg. same. He led them into, &c. Sept. Sam. Through the desert Agra; Onk. The desert Giapher, Ar. The desert Sud. Syr.

1. The subject mooving, the whole camp of Israel.

2. The motion, they went out, or onward.

3. The way of their travel, the desert Shur.

Ver. 22. 2. The continuance of their journey in this way, And they went three dayes in the wilderness, Readings agree. Here was a trial; three dayes motion before any pitching.

1. The continuance of the motion, it was three dayes.

2. The place, it was the desert.

3. The great disappointment in the way, And they found no water, Readings the same. Now this made the trial greater, viz. 3 dayes want of water, upon so hard a travel, in a dry land.

Quest. Whether was this desert of Shur and that of Echem the same, Num. 33. 8.

Ans. 1. That desert which led to Marah from the red sea is filled by both names, 2. This must be distinct from that mentioned Ex. 13. 20. That being on the other side of the sea, and in the territories of Egypt. 3. Yet from their confinity Echem might be named upon part of the desert whence they mooved into Shur, the bounds of both are uncertain unto us.

Quest. Were these three dayes those meant in the desire of Moses unto Pharaoh?

Ans. 1. No surely, for those dayes were twice passed, as to their number before. 2. This therefore was another like number of dayes, wherein God tried Israel, Ver. 22.

2. After these three dayes motion we read their pitching at the 5th stage.

1. The place itself, And they came to Marah, Readings are the same. Herein,

1. Their access.

2. The term of it, where they pitched, Marah.

2. The condition of this place and trial of Israel here, And they could not drink of the waters of Marah for they were bitter, Readings agree. Here was another trial, three dayes they were without water travelling, and when hope was of refreshing, they came to the waters of wormwood and gall; waters so bitter that there was no drinking without dying.

1. An inhibition was upon the satisfying of thirst, they could not drink.

2. The reason of it. The waters were deadly bitter that they durst not.

3. The naming of the place, Therefore he called the name thereof Marah, Readings most agree. Bitterness. Sept. He imposed a fit name, &c. Vulg. Here is only recorded a monument of this trial in the name imposed.

1. The imposer, Moses from God.

2. The subject, the place of bitter waters.

3. The name, Bitterness.

Quest. Was not this name upon the place before?

Ans. No, but by a prolepsis it is spoken of before, as Moses doth, who wrote the the history, in this and other cases, writing after the things were done, Ver. 23.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. After worship done in memory of mercies, the Church must go on in its pilgrimage.

D. 2. From red-seas deliverance to wilderness-travels is Israels motion. So God mixeth trials.

D. 3. Hard travels, and piercing thirst, for want of water, is the Churches lot sometimes, Ver. 22.

D. 4. God in wisdom giveth a pitching place to his pilgrim Church after travels.

D. 5. Instead of no waters, God ordereth bitter waters to his peoples thirst at his will.

D. 6. Monuments of such trials God sometimes sets up in the names of places for posterity, Ver. 23.

3. The events of those providences follow, which are three.

Ver. 24. 1. Israels discontented murmurings hereupon, And the people murmured against Moses in saying, what shall we drink? Readings concur. Complained. Onk.

1. The subject of this action, the people, generally the whole body of them, being weary and thirsty, and so much disappointed, and now tried by these bitter waters: yet these were mightily delivered but three dayes before by Gods miraculous dividing of the sea, which might have sustained their faith against the discrepancy of sense; sure God could as well provide waters for them, as so to save them from the Egyptians.

2. The action here is murmuring, which carrieth in it, griefe, anger, discontent; complaint and chiding with Moses, and God thorough him: this was the second eminent contention of unbelief against God and his instrument, after he had brought them out of Egypt; the one was the day before they passed the red sea, Ex. 14. 10. 11. 12. And now this second three dayes after they were gone over.

Ver. 24. 3. The instance of their murmuring specified it was in saying what shall we drink? Now though this short exprellion be onely mentioned, yet doubtles, the circumstances were many for aggravating this question, they cryed out on Moses as the cause of all their streits, that he had brought them hereto poison them with bitter waters; and now they cry out, give us drink. What shall we drink? Wile thou kill us with thirst or poison us? to this or the like purpose they strove against him and God, Ver. 24.

We observe.

D. 1. Carnal Israelits are short breasted in faith and love to God and his servants; no longer than sense helpeth.

D. 2. Unbelief soon changeth men from praising God, to murmur against him, and his instruments.

D. 3. Sense of present streights and wants destroyeth the faith of sensual Israelits.

D. 4. Gods ministers of salvation are obnoxious to all the murmurings of discontented souls for his sake.

D. 5. Foolish unbelieving creatures are running to creature instruments for drink, in wants, rather than God.

D. 6. A little present want of drink makes all Gods forepast wonders to be slighted by sensual souls, Ver. 24.

2. The next event is the recourse of Moses unto God, And he cryed out to Jehovah, Vulg. same. Moses cried. Sept. Sam. And he prayed before the Lord. Onk. Moses therefore prayed, Syr. He besought God. Ar. See here the rulers course to still a murmuring people.

1. The subject is Moses laden with the complaints of Israel.

2. The action, he cryed, not in murmuring, but by faith and prayer, and that to Jehovah; who was able to heal waters, or creat them for the supply of Israels wants. And this was not without effect.

3. The last event here at this stage is Gods reply unto Moses two wayes,

1. By teaching him to heal the waters, And Jehovah shewed him a tree or wood, And he cast of it into the waters, and the waters were made sweet, Readings agree in the sense. Where we may note,

1. Gods action in reply to the cry of Moses, Jehovah taught him a tree. A bitter tree Ardiplne. As Targ. B. Uz & Hierosol. do read; wood that had vertue to sweeten, ten, as Syracides Eccles. 38. 5. Some say it was the root of Licorace. All are conjectures. Is is said by some Hebr. Doctors hereupon, that the blessed God makes bitter things sweet by bitter ones.

O o o o o ten,

1. The teacher here is Jehovah hearing prayer.

2. The subject taught, Moses the suppliant.

3. The matter taught him, was about a tree, which God pointed out for him to use for healing the waters.

Quest. Had this tree a virtue to sweeten of itself?

Answer. 1. The apocryphal author seemeth to say so. 2. Others make it more bitter, and therefore unfit to sweeten other things. 3. Whatever this tree or wood were, it was Gods word only that sweetened these waters, and therefore no virtue in the tree or wood must lessen this miracle; God heals by contrarie means as well as without means sometimes; and therefore it matters not what the tree was; God would have it sacramentally used, not that he had need of it.

2. The action of Moses, He cast it into the waters, this doublets was that which God commanded him as Elisha did the salt into the waters, 2 Kings 2. 21. The words are plain, it was an obediential act.

3. The issue of both. The waters were made sweet, i. e. both wholesome and pleasant, that all the camp of Israel drank and were refreshed. This is fruit of Gods teaching Moses.

2. He answers him further by shewing to Israel his mind upon this occasion of their murmuring, and that in these 3 acts expressed,

Ver. 25.

1. In his commanding them, There he set for him a statute & judgement. Augustine. Sept. Paſſum et judicium,
Onk. Legem & judicium, Sam. leges
& judicia, Syr. Constitutiones &
judicia, Ar. praecepta & judicia. Vulg.

1. The institutor God.

2. The subject Israel.

3. The institution,
1. The matter of it, statutes and judgements the same mentioned, Ver. 26.

2. The form of it, which was a firm position of these to be observed by Israel, and that God might hear no more of their murmurings.

Ver. 25.

2. In his proving them, And there he tried them, Readings are to the same, Herein note,

1. The Tempter is Jehovah, not Israel.

2. The Temptation was by work and word. In work by strengthening and enlarging them; in his word by commanding them and covenanting with them to see if yet they would listen unto God after his great salvation.

3. The tempted is Israel and not Jehovah, as some have conceived, God trieth them at this time to make them sensible of their evil and weakness, ver. 2. 5.

3. In his conditional covenanting with them, Wherein note,

1. The party covenanting Jehovah, he said.

2. The party covenanted, Israel his Church now.

3. The covenant itself which is conditional, whereof we have to consider,

1. The condition required on Israels part, And he said, if hearkning thou shalt hearken to the voice of Jehovah thy God, and wilt do the right in his eyes, and wilt give ear to his precepts and keep all his statutes. Readings vary expressions but not the sense. Here in Gods covenanting are three conditions,

1. Double, diligent, serious listening to Gods voice or word.

2. Rectitude in actions, that can endure Gods eye to search them.

3. Universal conformity to Gods rule of worship and service unto him, carried in commands and statutes, which are Gods positive laws.

2. The promise hereupon made by God, I will not put upon thee every disease or infirmity, which I put upon Egypt; i. e. none of them at all. Readings vary in words but not in sense, Diseases, scourges, some. In this promise two sorts of blessings are carried,

1. Privative, the keeping off the plagues of Egypt.

2. Positive, all Gods opposite blessings promised to obedience, Pro. 3. 7. 8, &c.

3. The reason of this Covenant, and force of promise annexed, For I am Jehovah healing thee, Readings are to the same sense, Thy physician. Onk. Syr. Healer, Ar. Vulg.

1. The rational particle for sheweth that Gods gracious inclination to Israel was the only cause of this Covenant.

2. That which is in the cause, is, 1. Jehovah himself, the simple and independent being.

2. His work of grace, it is all healing, both souls by pardoning, and purifying, Psal. 41. 5. and also on bodies, he healeth all infirmities, Matth. 12.

3. The object, a vile murmuring Israel who deserved nothing from God but to be consumed; yet grace undertakes thus to heal them, if they will believe and obey.

It instructs us,

D. 1. When unbelievers are murmuring under stress, Gods servants are praying and crying unto God.
D. 2.

D. 2. Gods faithful ones shall never cry nor seek his face in vain.

D. 3. God will shew his servants how to turn bitter into sweet, when they truly seek him.

D. 4. External signes God may teach to be used, not that he needs them.

D. 5. Obedience must be in use of means appointed to receive the desired issue.

D. 6. Upon his servants obedience, God doth usually turn their bitter into sweet.

D. 7. Where God giveth merces to his people he also giveth lawes and judgments.

D. 8. God seeth it good to try his people by word and works whether they will be faithful. Ver. 25.

D. 9. God ingageth his redeemed in Covenant to walk worthy of mercy.

D. 10. Conditional duties of faith, in words, upright walking, and regular worship, God require's in Covenant from his Israel.

D. 11. Gods promise in Covenant of preventing evils, and doing good, ingage's his to conditional duties.

D. 12. Gods free grace in healing a sinful people foregoeth his promises and their duties, as cause of all. Ver. 26.

6. Moses now proceedeth to the history of Israels 6th stage after their departure out of Egypt, and of the providential events there, which he dispatcheth in one verse, and this our translators and others generally join unto this 15th Chapter, but some make it to be the beginning of the 16th we shall take it where we find it placed by our own. And thus it is read.

And they came to Elim, and there were 12 fountains of water, and 70 palm trees, and they incamped by the waters. Readings agree, only 70 read. ισχυματα & παλμοι φωνται. 12 stumps of palm trees, but not strictly to the Hebr. Herein we have to observe these terms.

1. The subject of this motion, They came.

ven all the children of Israel, the whole camp.

2. The motion, they came, which noteth their access, as well as moving toward their stage.

3. The term whereunto of this motion which refers also to the term from whence they came, it was from Mara to Elim, both places were in the Arabian desert, which is partly stiled Perrea from the rocks, and partly Felix, as having some happy good soil, such as Elim it seemeth was.

4. The description of this place from the providential accomplishments of it. There were 12 wells of water, and 70 palm or date trees,

1. Here was provision against their thirst, sweet fountains of water were here provided.

2. Here was some accommodation for shade and food, these trees being date trees as conceived fitly for height and comfortable to eat; Josephus speaketh otherwise, as if they were here disappointed, but the holy history sets it out thus to the commendation of the place.

5. The pitching of Israel here, They incamped by the waters. In this we read of no murmuring, therefore doubles they were pleased with their sitting down here.

1. Their accommodation was the waters, a creature suitable for their wants; so God ordered after trials in the want of such a mercy.

2. Their acquiescence in this providence, so long as God was pleased to vouchsafe it they sat down and pitched their camp about it, Numb. 3. 9.

Quest. Was there any thing in these numbers of fountains and trees mystical and typical, as was the tree for healing the waters, Ver. 25.

Answer. 1. Types and mysteries are both of Gods making, and opening, and all intended to signify Christ upon some account or other. 2. God hath not applied these trees or fountains to signify any thing but their own natures & uses. 3. Men have made allusive explications, as the tree was healing to type out Christ: the 12 fountains either the 12 Patriarchs, or the 12 tribes, or the 12 Apostles, various are such conjectures, and the 70 Palms to note the number that came first with Jacob into Egypt, or the 70 in the Sanhedrim afterward to be settled as a great council; or as others, the 70 Disciples which Christ made beside the 12 Apostles, thus men vary in conjectures; and it may be harmless to allude to such like numbers, but to set these in their scope to signify or type out these things, is a great mistake. 4. It is safest then to keep to the literal sense of the history, and learn what God teacheth there; and leave men to their conceits.

Ooooo 2 learn

Quest. How long staid Israel at Elim?

Answer. The time cannot be peremptorily determined, but only by conjecture, the 21th day of the first month, they kept their feast and sung to Jehovah; after that past, with soonest conveniency they march & were three dayes coming to Marah, and there seemed to pitch a while. Again on the 5th day of the second month, they came into the desert of Sin so that about 19 or 20 dayes must be spent at Marah and Elim, and it is probable that they staid at the best place longest.

We conclude.

D. 1. Marah and Elim are both Gods providential stages for his Church. Various places, Bitter & sweet.

D. 2. God is pleased sometimes to lead his Church from place and state of temptation unto consolation.

D. 3. God numbers fountains and trees; meanes and mercies ordered to his Church, 12 and 70.

D. 4. Sufficient harbour and refreshment, God finds out for his Church in the wilderness.

D. 5. Israel willingly sits down by Gods waters of refreshing.

D. 6. Gods records make his providences remarkable, Ver. 27.

CHAP. XVI.

IN this Chapter wholly is recorded the Journeys of Israel from Elim unto the wilderness of Sin, together with all the providential events, of which they had experience there, in the repeating of this history Moses maketh an immediat stage, Num. 33. 19. And they removed from Elim and incamped by the red sea, or Weedy sea, and from hence into the wilderness of Sin, so there he makes two stages, 7th & 8th which are here made one.

Quest. How is that place of Moses and this reconciled?

Ans. Plainly thus. 1. That Moses here, by reason of the greater events of providence in the wilderness of Sin, maketh not mention of their stage again by the sea Suph; together with the shortnes of their stay there, so that it was of choise unto the Spirit of God to put these stages together here, and to speak distinctly of them in another place. 2. Know we must, that this place by the red sea was not, where they were before, but the same sea compassing and running by the desert thorough which they travelled, this was another creek stiled Elim is by Iunius, where, in their passage for a small time they pitched, we must therefore in this Chapter consider the 7th and 8th stages as one. In the Chapter are noted,

1. Israels access to Sin by the sea Suph, Ver. 1.

2. The events betiding them there; which are these,

1. Israels murmuring, Ver. 2. 3.

2. Gods provision for them to silence complaints. Wherein are to be observed these particulars.

1. Gods secret intimating of his will to Moses, Ver. 4. 5.

2. The discovery of this by Moses to Israel, Ver. 6. 7. 8.

3. The summons of Israel to stand before God, Ver. 9. 10.

4. The Lords appearance to perform his word, Ver. 11. 15.

5. The law of gathering this provision.

1. With respect to the 6 common dayes, Ver. 16. 21.

2. With respect to the 7th day Sabbath, Ver. 22. 31.

6. The ordinance of God for reserving some of this heavenly bread or provision, together with the time of its continuance, & character of their daily measure, v. 32. 36.

1. Israels access to their 8th stage through the 7th is here related, And they journeyed from Elim, and all the congregation of the sons of Israel came into the desert of Sin, which is between Elim and Sinai on the 15th day of the second month from their going out of the land of Egypt, Readings agree. Herein we have connected unto the former history, Ver. 1.

1. Israels rising from the 6th stage, And they moved of, or journeyed from Elim, no difficulty in terms. Here only is noted, the term from whence, of Israels present motion; it was from a commodious and pleasant stage.

2. Israels access unto their 8th stage thorough the 7th included, And all the congregation of the sons of Israel, &c. Wherein occurs,

1. The subject of motion, the whole body of Israel, not a hoof left behind, all the congregation.

2. The term whereunto, of their motion, not immediat, for that was the creek of the sea Suph, Elana, where they incamped ped a while by which they passed, but the mediaterm is here named, viz the desert Sin which is described.

1. By its name Sin, written with S not S as another place is stiled, Num. 33. 36.

2. Zin, not Sin, It is conceived to have its name from a city of Egypt, not very farre from it, as is gathered from Ezek. 30. 15. 16. It was it seems a sad place, wherein wants of bread, &c. pressed them.

2. By its situation, it lay between Elim and Sinai, the wilderness wherein the mount of God was.

3. The time of this access it was on the 15th day of the second month after they were gon out of Egypt, so that to this time they had bin 30 dayes in travelling from Egypt; in which time it is conceived that their provision was spent which they brought out of Egypt with them, and after this came they into great wants which occasioned a sad event from them as followeth in the second verse.

We may learn hence.

D. 1. Comfortable stations in this life God will have his Church sometimes to leave. They say with Peter, it is good to be here, Math. 17. 4.

D. 2. Dreadful and barren deserts doth God appoint instead of better places to his Church for trial. Sin for Elim.

D. 3. The saddest deserts are but the Churches way to go unto Gods mountain. Thorough this to mount Sinai.

D. 4. The dayes of the Churches redemption and travel are punctually numbered by God, Ver. 1.

2. The events consequent to this motion are to be considered,

1. Israels murmuring being brought into this wilderness condition, wherein they had no bread, in which observe,

1. The subject murmuring, And all the congregation of the sons of Israel murmured, Readings agree. Wherein we have the subject noted,

1. By relation, sons of Israel.

2. By calling, congregation or Church of God.

3. By universality all, i.e. all generally, some few might be excepted, but they were rare, it was a general conspiracy.

2. The object against whom this was,

1. Immediately, against Moses and Aaron,

2. Mediatly, Jehovah himself.

3. The place of this onset, it was in the desert whither God by Moses had brought them, Ver. 2.

4. The murmuring itself, which consists,

1. In an imprecation on themselves, And the sons of Israel said unto them, who would have given us that we might have died by the hand of Jehovah in the land of Egypt, in our sitting by the flesh pot, in our eating bread to the full. Readings are all to the same scope, we would have died smitten by the Lord, &c. Sept. By the command of the Lord, Ar. Herein note,

1. The same subject and object repeated, Israel to Moses and Aaron.

2. The sad imprecation made upon themselves, whereabout are observable,

1. The evil imprecated, death, dissolution.

2. The subject on whom, themselves, now tried by wants.

3. The importunity of wish, who would grant it? Job. 6. 8.

4. The hand by which they would die, Jehovah.

5. The place where they would have died, Egypts furnace.

6. The condition wherein they would have died, and that was in their fulnes when they had bread and flesh enough. O wretches! What an imprecation was this?

2. Their murmuring is expressed in a most unjust accusation of Moses and Aaron for all their care; For ye have brought us forth into this desert to kill all this congregation with hunger, All readings are to the same sense. Onely some read it by way of interrogation, Why have ye brought us forth, &c. Here by this horrid charge they think to give sufficient reason of their divelish imprecation on themselves, for they judge it better to have perished, than here to be famished; but alas! here was no such thing, either intended, or acted; but so formed by their own evill hearts of unbelief. Here note,

1. The person charged, their redee2 mers, both God and his instruments, Moses and Aaron.

2. The charge, which is a murderous intent, set out,

1. By their act in bringing Israel out of Egypt.

2. By the place whereunto they had brought Israel, this desert; wild, wast, howling wilderness.

3. By their bloody intent, aggravated.

1. In the act, it was better, to kill.

2. In the object, the whole congregation or Church of God.

3. In the way of doing it, by starving and famishing them.

Q o o o o 3

Quest.

Quest. Had they such fulnes in Egypt? Answ. 1. It is sure, that what they had was in bitter bondage, and therefore it was all bread of affliction. 2. What ever comforts they had it was Gods allowance, not Pharaohs; wickedly injurious therefore was this charge, and most deservat their ingratitude to God who had miraculously given them deliverance and was able to give them food.

Which instructs us.

- D. 1. Multitudes of sinners are usually stirring up all to murmur upon present changes.
- D. 2. Wildernes trials put unbelievers in the visible Church upon discontent.
- D. 3. God and his instruments suffer all indignities from unbelieving sinners. Ver. 2.
- D. 4. Unbelieving murmurers are ready to imprecate destruction on themselves in time of temptation.
- D. 5. The fulnes and comfort which God giveth to unbelievers, they ascribe to their oppressors.
- D. 6. Unbelief makes sinners so mad to wish themselves killed by the hand of God.
- D. 7. Sinful injoiments are more despised by unbelievers, then gracious redemption.
- D. 8. Gods most gracious acts are charged by wicked ones to be their destruction.
- D. 9. It is not strange to have the ministers of salvation charged with the Churches perdition.
- D. 10. It is an unjust and bitter accusation of God and his instruments; for all good done to sinners, Would God starve his people. Ver. 3.

2. The next event at this stage is Gods provision for Israel to stop their murmuring, the history whereof together with the appendent circumstances is from the 4th verse unto the end, wherein note,

1. Gods intimation of his will to Moses about the course of his providence, for Israel in this strait to help them discovered, Ver. 4. 5. Wherein observe,

1. Gods address to Moses, And Jehovah said to Moses, All readings agree. The terms are plain. Ver. 4.

1. The connection of this speech unto the murmuring of Israel, is immediat, which points out the occasion of Gods coming unto Moses; doubtles he was now grievously afflicted with these wicked tumultuations of Israel, and God saw there was need to go and comfort him, immediatly, therefore Jehovah hasts to perform it.

2. The parties concerned, Jehovah bespeaking, and Moses bespoken in this condition of trial.

3. The parly, God bespeaketh him as followeth, which was either by voice, or vision, which he knew to be from God,

2. Gods promise made known to him, what he would now do in this strait, for want of bread, &c. Behold I am raining or I will rain unto you bread from heaven, Most readings agree. I will make to come down, Onk. Send down food. Ar. Ver. 4.

1. A term of attention is given to Moses behold, whereby he rouseth him from his pressure to attend, look to me Moses and hearken what I say, and listen not onely to Israel.

2. The promise itself proposed: wherein note,

1. The power promising, Jehovah able to do his word.

2. The good promised, I will rain bread from heaven,

1. The blessing promised is suitable to their wants, bread, which though it were not such as they formerly had, yet it was instead of all uses of bread unto them, the matter of which they made the bread which they did eat, we have the further description of this hereafter.

2. The plenty of it, God would rain it, it should come down in showers like rain, which satisfieth poor and rich, rain cometh in abundance, therefore the promise is full to the camp of Israel; it shall fall as rain about them.

3. The excellency of it, I will rain it from heaven, Israel murmur because they are in a barren wilderness, and the earth giveth them no bread; therefore I will work a strange thing, the heavens shall give you bread, because the earth is barren; this is no change to loose, to have Angels bread for that of worms, Pl. 78. v. 23. 24. 25. Such God promiseth.

3. The subject to whom this promise is made, I will rain it for you, saith the Lord; which seem's immediatly to hint at Moses and Aaron; as if the promise were made for their sakes, who were thus unjustly charged by Israel; yet in order to Israels present relief, as the sequel sheweth. So that murmurers fare the better for them.

3. Go d

3. Gods order and rule to Israel expressed now unto Moses, what they must do for getting food under this promise, viz. That they must take pains and gather it, about which here is a double rule.

1. That which concern's every day, And the people shall go forth and they shall gather the portion of a day in its day, that I may prove them whether they will walk in my law or not, Readings agree, herein we have the particulars observable,

1. The injunction, what Israel must do for this bread which God had promised: wherein note,

1. The subject of it, the people of Israel, every one able or such of every family as were fit to prepare for all in it.

2. The work enjoined, to go out and gather up this bread which was rained from heaven; as to quantity, or measure we shall see in the sequel.

3. The frequency of this work, it must be to gather the dayes portion for every day, to make one dayes provision at once, and no more.

2. The end of this injunction, that I may prove them prove him in the letter, whether they or he will walk in my Law or not.

1. The tempter Jehovah.

2. The tempted, Israel.

3. The matter of trial or proof, which is obedience whether Israel would yet walk in Gods law.

Quest. Why is Israel enjoined onely to gather one dayes portion?

Answer. 1. Hereby God would teach them that one dayes bread is sufficient for the day, manneed's no more. 2. That they might trust on Jehovah for to morrow. 3. That a necessity is upon his of seeking daily bread from God.

Quest. Why doth God here again prove them?

Answer. 1. Not because he was ignorant of them, or their tempers. 2. To make their hearts better known to themselves. 3. To see what mercy and goodness would work upon them as well as straits, and whether they would trust God for every dayes bread. 4. To try universall obedience unto this law of living uprightly unto God in all things, Ver. 4.

2. The injunction suggested now to Moses about Israel concern's their labour in gathering for the seventh day which afterward is largely pressed on the people. Here God singularly informeth Moses of it; And it shall be on the 6th day they shall even prepare that which they bring in, and it shall be double about what they shall gather day by day, Readings agree in the same sense. Herein observe,

1. Injunction expressed is to double their labour and measure of gathering on the 6th day.

2. The reason implied here, because of the seventh day Sabbath approaching; which however onely implied here, is expressed hereafter, where we shall have more occasion to confider the force of the reason and other things about it. Here is no difficulty in the terms that requireth further explication.

But teacheth us.

D. 1. Jehovah timeth his consolations unto the trials of his dearest servants.

D. 2. Jehovah and Moses part not in temptations, or God will not leave his instruments comfortles under strivings with a rebellious people.

D. 3. Jehovah call's his abused instruments to look from men to himself. Behold me.

D. 4. God mind's his own servants in promise first, and for them murderers and sinners.

D. 5. God can make heaven give bread when the earth deneth it.

D. 6. It is easy with God to make bread plenty in greatest scarcity. I will rain it.

D. 7. Gods promise is given for consolation of his oppressed creature who believe.

D. 8. Mans labour and diligence must follow Gods promise to get food.

D. 9. Daily bread is a sweet portion which God allots unto his people.

D. 10. Gods mercies are his trials of men to see whether they will obey him.

D. 11. Gods Law of living holily & righteously must measure mans obedience, Ver. 4.

D. 12. Gods positive will may alter his general rule, and cause men to look for more than for the day.

D. 13. Such special injunctions are upon special accounts of Gods glory intended, Ver. 5.

D. 14. Men loose nothing by keeping Sabbaths to God. They have double double blessings before and as much in it, Ver. 5.

2. The next thing about provision from God concerning the present streit of Israel is the discovery which Moses and Aaron do make unto the people, of Gods mind revealed unto them; Ver. 6. 7. 8. Herein note,

1. Gods will simply related by Moses and Aaron unto Israel; Ver. 6. 7.

2. The same iterated and expounded further, Ver. 8.

In the first of these we have these particulars to be noted,

Ver. 6. 1. The instruments of discovery, Then said Moses and Aaron to all the sons of Israel, Readings to the same purpose αὐτοὶ πρὸς πάντας τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ, &c. Sep. No difficulty here, terms are all plain,

1. The messengers, Moses and Aaron.

2. The subject to whom they were directed, Israel.

3. Their duty, to bespeak them.

2. The matter of this discovery which was a twofold relation of Gods will about them,

Ver. 6. 1. The evening revelation, what God would do then for them, At even ye shall know that Jehovah hath brought you out of the land of Egypt, All readings agree. It was charged by the murmurers upon Moses & Aaron that they had brought them out of Egypt, Ver. 3. Here therefore they are told; that at evening they should know that Jehovah brought them out of the land of Egypt; wherein note,

1. The subject of this knowledge, Israel.

2. The matter to be known, That Jehovah brought them out of Egypt.

3. The time of this manifestation, at evening, which implieth also the way of evidencing this by Gods evening work; which afterward is declared, Ver. 6.

2. The morning revelation what they were to expect then, whereabouts are reported.

Ver. 7. 1. The morning event itself, And in the morning ye shall see the glory of Jehovah. Most readings agree, the Ar. renders Gloriosam munificentiam Dei.

1. The subject of this sight, Israel,

2. The object, Gods glory, either in his signal, as Ver. 10. or in his work.

Ver. 8. 3. The act vouchsafed, they shall see it, and enjoy the comfort of it though they were murmurers; it is more than that noble man did, 2 Kings. 7. 1.

4. The season of this also, in the morning.

2. The reason of this morning and evening work.

Ver. 7. 1. On Gods part, For he heareth your murmurings against Jehovah. Readings mostly the same. Your murmuring is heard before the Lord, Syr.

Against himself, Ar. Gods hearing of their murmuring is urged as the reason of this morning and evening work.

2. On the part of Moses and Aaron to justify them against murmurers, And what are we that ye murmur against us? Readings the same.

1. The form of words is increpatory by way of expostulation with Israel.

2. Excusatory, what are we that ye thus charge us?

3. Purgatory, by way of justification of them; Gods morning and evening works among you will make you know how causelessly you charge us, V. 7.

2. Gods will further explicated, wherein note,

1. The evening and morning works Ver. 8. of Jehovah expounded, And Moses said by Jehovahs giving unto you in the evening flesh to eat and bread in the morning to satisfy, or fill, all readings here agree. The speech in the original is defective, and must be thus supplied to be understood itself, and give light to what went before, ye shall know that Jehovah hath brought you up of the land of Egypt by Jehovahs giving you flesh in the evening to eat, and ye shall see the glory of God in the morning when he shall give you bread to the full.

1. The interpreter is Moses.

2. The interpretation,

1. Of their knowing Jehovah to be their redeemer at even by his giving flesh to eat for which they complained.

2. Of their seeing his glory in the morning, by giving them bread to the full.

2. The reason of these works repeated.

1. That on Gods part thus, In that Jehovah heareth your murmurings which ye murmur against him, most readings agree Against us Sept. This seem's to be a strong reason that God should feed them because he heard their murmuring against himself, yet thus he doth.

2. That on the part of instruments, And what are we your murmurings are not against us but against Jehovah, Readings most the same.

Against the word of the Lord, Onk. B. Uz. &c.

1. They plead their own nothingness in these great works, what are we?

2. They discharge the murmurers from themselves, ye are deceived to think ye contend only with men, alas we hear the least.

3. The transferring of their sin ultimately against God, all your murmurings are against God himself thorough our sides, Ver. 8.

Quest. 1. Why was this provision given at such set times distinctly, morning and evening?

Answer.

Ans. 1. The will of the donor is the highest cause. 2. God may make use of seasons suitable to creatures, in whom he was resolved to shew miracles as the evening was fit for fowl to rest and fall upon the ground; but the miracle was not bound to the evening. 3. It is dangerous to urge natural causes to subvert miracles. 4. The mercies were distinct, and distinct times were needful to gather them, both falling about the camp, therefore was it needful to fall singly that they might be orderly received by the people.

Quest. 2. How did these works evince that Jehovah had brought Israel out of Egypt?

Answer. 1. They were miraculous works of the same kind as these by which God delivered them. 2. Hereby God demonstrates himself to be their continued redeemer in keeping them in their way, and therefore that he had not brought them out to destroy them. 3. A further demonstration is that God answered their sinfull murmuring in so much mercy, had he not brought them out, he would not have bin so long suffering to them.

Quest. 3. Why doth Moses put of the injury from themselves?

Answer. 1. To shew their humble thoughts of themselves, they were not worthy to be reckoned in such a work. 2. To glorify God that was (all.) 3. To aggravate Israels sin the more. To provoke such a Lord.

we learn from it

D. 1. Gods Ministers instructed and comforted by him are engaged to instruct and comfort his people.

D. 2. Gods evening and morning providences, may convince men that he is their redeemer.

D. 3. Knowledge of redemption, and sight of Gods visible glory in Christ, God hath and doth give unto his.

D. 4. Signals and works of glory may make God glorious with his people.

Ver. 6.

D. 5. The glory of grace God sometimes sheweth to murmurers. This was in Christ eminently.

D. 6. A murmuring against ministers is taken by God himself to be against him. Ver. 7.

D. 7. Humble souls are content to be nothing in redemption that God may be all.

D. 8. Gods first attempt is to overcome murmuring with mercy. So here, sometimes otherwise God avengeth himself upon them. Ver. 8.

3. The next particular about Gods provision, is the summons of Israel to hear Gods mind about it,

1. The order for the summons, ver. 9.

2. The event upon the execution, ver. 10.

In the former we have to observe,

1. The authority ordering the summons, And Moses said to Aaron, Most readings agree, — Moreover God said to Moses and Aaron, say ye, Ar. But Moses from God and Aaron from Moses did it.

2. The summons itself. Wherein we read,

1. The command, Say unto all the congregation of the sons of Israel, come near before Jehovah, Readings to the same sense.

Where note,

1. The subject to whom this command is given, all the Church.

2. The command unto them, Come near, which was toward the place of Gods signal presence.

2. The reason of it, For he hath heard your murmuring, Readings to the same.

This seem's to summon them upon the ground of their default, and that now therefore they were to attend Gods pleasure, ver. 9.

In the latter we have also to consider,

1. Aarons execution, And it was as Aaron spake to all the congregation of the sons of Israel, Readings concur. Here is only the report of Aarons duty done, and the consequents thereof, all we may see in these particulars,

1. Aaron did call the congregation together, that was his work enjoined by Moses.

2. The people yielded to the call, And they looked toward the wilderness, Ver. 10.

Readings mostly agree; onely some vary, that the people should look toward the desert where the Lord went before them, yet it is safely presumed that they did so approach to God as Aaron had called.

3. The answer of God to their expectation, And behold the glory of the Lord was seen, or appeared in the cloud, Most agree, — Light in the cloud, Ar. In this the ministry of Aaron was made successful, that Israel might see they were not summoned in vain, but that God had called them to account; in which consider,

1. The subject appearing, Jehovah in his glory of grace, which was here in Christ.

PPPP

1. Tho

2. The evidence of that glory, it was seen appearing.

3. The manner of its appearance in the cloud, which was the signal, and whence God made known his will unto them, as followeth.

Quest. 1. Why was Aaron here commanded to summon Israel?

Ans. 1. Some read both Moses and Aaron. 2. It is most probable, that Moses was now called to meet God in the cloud, and be nearer to him upon his appearance, for so we find Jehovah speaking to him in the verse following.

Quest. What cloud was this?

Ans. 1. Some read it plural but amiss. 2. Others conceive it another cloud, beside that which went before them. 3. But it is nearest truth, it was the same cloud, but new appearing in an unusual manner, whereby God shewed that he did take notice of their murmuring, and appeared to reprove them, though in a way of grace and tenderness.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods ministers oppressed with murmurings are made his cryers to summon sinners.

D. 2. When the congregation of God quarrels with his ministers, he usually calls them before himself.

D. 3. God hears the murmurings of sinners against his ministers, and calls them to account, Ver. 9.

D. 4. Gods ministers must summon souls to God, and the faithful do it at his command.

D. 5. Souls shall be brought to see Gods appearing in a sad way, who rise up against him.

D. 6. Appearances in mercy are turned to wrathfull discoveries unto sinners. So the cloud, V. 10.

4. The next special head in the history of Gods provision for Israel is Jehovahs appearance to make good the word given unto Moses, Ver. 11. 15. In which passage we have to observe,

1. The preface which God maketh to Moses, Ver. 11. 12.

2. The work itself effected, V. 11. 12.

3. The discovery of it made by the inquiry of Israel about the second event, with Moses his reply unto them, Ver. 15.

In the preface which God maketh unto Moses before his works, of giving flesh and bread, we have.

1. God bespeaking Moses, And Ver. 11. Jehovah spake unto Moses saying, Readings agree, the words are plain.

2. The Speaker, Jehovah, Israels redeemer.

3. The party bespoken, Moses burdened with Israels complaints.

4. The action between, is a consolatory speech following.

Quest. Was this the same speech with that in Ver. 4?

Ans. 1. It was a speech to the same purpose. 2. But it seemeth to be a second speech; which now God made to him, after his first intimation of his will, yet further to encourage Moses unto his work against the causeless calumnies cast upon him by these murmurers, Calvin. 8. and others make it the first.

2. The speech itself comprehending three heads.

1. Gods cognisance of Israels fact, I have heard the murmurings of the sons of Israel, Readings the same. Herein Jehovah sheweth unto Moses his sense of Israels murmurings that Moses was not alone under these clamors. Here note,

1. The subject of reception, Jehovah.

2. The object, The murmurings of the sons of Israel.

3. The reception itself by hearing, I have heard, after the manner of men it is spoken; that Israels murmurings had troubled Gods ears as well as Moses; and this reception of Jehovah carrieth in it his resentment of the fact and his determination what to do at present in this case of temptation.

2. A command to Moses, Speake unto them, saying, between the two evenings ye shall eat flesh and in the morning ye shall be filled with bread. Readings all agree in sense, ve'et tarmag Sept. — Mane saturabimini cibo. Ar. In this command is no more than Moses told them, Ver. 8. Ooely the variation of a number, before it was read בערב in the evening, here, בין הערבים between the two evenings, or between both the settings, as the Ar. That is, of the sun and of the day. This sets the space of time more clearly wherein the quails fell, which was the flesh here promised. No more need here to be spoken, other things having bin opened before.

3. The last head in this speech of God to Moses, is the end aimed at in this work, And ye shall know that I am Jehovah your God, Readings the same. And it is to the same purpose as the end proposed, Ver. 6. Onely this is general and thus more special. The scope of it is, that notwithstanding their murmurings, by Gods gracious provision for them in this streight, they should know that he was Jehovah, &c.

1. The

1. The subject of this knowledge, were the sons of Israel.

2. The object of it is God onely, under a double discovery.

1. Of his being that he was Jehovah able to make to be whatever pleased him, flesh and bread, and all things for his people.

2. Of his relation, that he was their God, so he saith, your God. i. e. yours in Covenant, and however ye have broken with me by your unbelief and murmuring, yet will I not break with you, yet I owne you as my people, therefore I will give you both bread and flesh.

3. The knowledge itself, ye shall know this, that is, be convinced to acknowledge it; herein are,

1. The scitum, me to be Jehovah your God.

2. The scientia, ye shall know it, i. e. really and clearly be forced to confess it, and acknowledge it.

3. The medium, by this miraculous work of giving them flesh and bread. Ver. 12.

Observe we from it.

D. 1. God himself owns what his servants have spoken from him in his name. If we read dixerat, &c.

D. 2. It is no strangest thing for God to speake twice to his oppressed servants to support them. If a second speech. Ver. 11.

D. 3. Jehovah would have his ministers know that he heareth murmurings of sinners as well as they.

D. 4. Gods hearing murmurings sometimes is with a purpose to shew mercy and patience to sinners.

D. 5. In greatest streights God can make evening and morning to bring seasonable supplies to his.

D. 6. Jehovah will make his people know him, and that he keepeth Covenant though they breake it.

D. 7. Miracles are, media scientificæ, demonstrative evidences of Jehovah, who is the God of his

D. 8. God is not apt soon to deny his relation to his people. Your God still, though you murmur against him. Ver. 12.

2. The work itself effected is next to the preface, which is twofold according to the season.

1. The evening work, And it was in the evening that the quail came up and covered the camp, Readings are to the same sense. Qatavim Sept. Herein we find the accomplishment of the word forespoken to every title.

1. The kind of flesh which God giveth, one of the sweetest of fowls. Quails the singular is put for the plural. Other discoveries of them are needless.

2. The abundance of them, they covered the camp, falling all round about them.

3. The season, this was at evening, or between two evenings, as we read, so it was promised Ver. 8.

Quest. Was this the same miracle of quails with that, Num. 11. 4. 31.

Ans. No. 1. That in Numb. was a year or more after that, in another place. 2. This was but upon one evening, that in Numb. for a month.

3. This temptation was answered in mercy, but that in vengeance.

2. The morning work for giving bread, about which,

1. The manner of its coming, And in the morning there was a lying of dew about the camp, Readings to the same sense.

Dew rested. Sept. — Spreading of dew Ar. — Congealed darknes of dew. Syr. In summe this was Gods way to send down his bread, with his morning dew. The words are plain, Ver. 13.

2. The matter distilled in the dew, And the dew which lay, went up, and beheld upon the face of the desert was a small round thing, small as the hoar frost upon the earth, Readings are much to the same sense, but words different.

A little thing like white coriander seed as frost, Sept. — A little rinded, Onk — Asice, Syr. — As a thing beaten with a pestill, Vulg.

1. Here is the amotion, ascent or reparation of the dew which was by the heat of the sun.

2. The appearance of the matter of bread, which God gave now to Israel, wherein note,

1. The demonstration of the place, Behold on the surface of the wilderness round about them.

2. The description of the thing,

1. By its form, a small round thing.

2. By its likeness, small as the hoar frost, so farre of the work itself.

3. The discovery of it as to its nature made out.

1. In the doubtfulness of Israel, And the sons of Israel saw it, and said a man unto his brother what is this, as some this is man, as others for they knew not what it was, Sept. Onk. Sam. Syr. Ar. Vulg. What is this? otherwise they agree. — it is a portion or gift, Vatab. — Man est, lun. calvin, &c.

1. The subject taking cognisance, the sons of Israel.

2. The notice they take of it; They saw it, as some read it, and out of thankfulness judge it to be Gods provision or portion prepared, others read it by interrogation, and make it a question of unthankfulness, what is this? doubts they were at a stand about it for present.

3. The reason of what they said, for they knew not what it was, which makes some read Man or Mah interrogative. Ignorance was surely with them.

מִן דְּ

Ver. 15.

2. In the resolution which Moses giveth them, And Moses said unto them, this is the bread which Jehovah hath given unto you to eat, Readings the same,

1. The replier, Moses taught of God.

2. The resolution given to Israel, who were doubtful, This is the bread which Jehovah hath given you to eat, wherein is declared to the Israelites,

1. The blessing vouchsafed, it was bread, and that not ordinary, stiled angels food, Pf. 78. 25.

2. The author of it, Jehovah himself from heaven, no common providence from the earth.

3. The freeness of it by gift, Jehovah hath given it unto you, though you by your murmuring have deserved nothing but his wrath; these are the contents to this 4th head also.

Quest. 1. How is this place and that of Num. 11. 9. reconciled?

Ans. 1. The mention of Manna there is not about the giving of it, but notwithstanding God had given it them for a whole year, yet they now lusted, and murmured for wantonnes and not for need of meat, therefore it is here spoken of to aggravat their sin when they cried we have nothing but this Manna, Ver. 6. 2. As to the falling of it upon the dew, Num. 11. it is easy to know that the dew was both beneath it & upon it, and by the sun all this might be dried up and the Manna or bread from heaven left behind for Israel.

Quest. 2. Which is the best reading, either it is man demonstratively, or what is this? interrogatively.

Answer. 1. As to this some keep the originall words Man hu, not knowing well how to translate them, so the Vulg. Lat. but with an interpretation what is this? 2. Others look upon Man as a Caldee word which is properly an interrogative, and however yet Israel had not bin carried captive into Caldea; yet it was no very strange thing that some Caldee words might be used by them now, as well as many in Job. and the reason following better favours this interrogative; for they knew not what it was. Therefore might they well aske what is this?

3. Yet it is certain the word Man with the Hebrewes is positive, & notes a portion prepared without a mans own labour, so it may be asserted here more surely to the letter, It is a prepared portion, or this is a provision for us; but what it was they knew not, this is closest to the letter, yet the former is not to be despised.

Quest. 3. Was not this Manna naturally falling in the deserts upon some parts of Arabia?

Answer. 1. Something of that name might be, yet not food, but physike.

2. All circumstances in the text clear this to be a miraculous event,

1. The promise of it.
2. The falling of it every day for 40 years in all seasons.

3. The putrifying, and not putrifying of it, at Gods word.

4. The measure of it, to satisfy so many hundred thousands every day, for daily bread.

5. The reservation of it, without putrefaction.

6. The ceasing of it at Gods word, upon Israels entrance into Canaan.

Quest. 4. Had this any spiritual or sacramental use now, as we read, Joh. 6. 1 Cor. 10. 3.

Answer. 1. It is certain, that the first use of it was to be naturall food, as concerning all Israel. 2. That there was a spirituall use of it in the Church the Spirit of Gods asserts peremptorily. 3. But that all Israel did so now eat of it, is not true, for such use must be otherwise discovered though at this time it appear not.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. God of his grace can give the sweetest nourishment to unworthy sinners at his pleasure.

D. 2. God keeps his time in performing his promise to his people. At evening.

D. 3. Gods performance of promise is full and large unto his Israel.

D. 4. Mercies promised are ordered to come seasonably, evening and morning.

D. 5. God can make his dew bring, and hide bread for his people, Ver. 13. Hidden Manna.

D. 6. Natural coverings removed God can discover his hidden mercies under them.

D. 7.

D. 7. The best of bread from God may seem as a small and despicable thing to men, Ver. 14.

D. 8. Gods own Israel in taking cognisance of his greatest mercies may be at a stand what to think of them.

D. 9. Ignorance of Gods mercies may cause men to be at a stand about them, and give uncertain judgement. Man hu.

D. 10. It is a blessing to have a choise interpreter of Gods mercies to his Church.

D. 11. It is Jehovah's bread freely given that feeds unworthy sinners, such was Manna.

D. 12. God hath gracious thoughts sometimes to make common bread of spiritual use to his Church, Ver. 15.

5. The next head considerable about Gods provision for Israel is the Law of Jehovah about gathering it, which with respect to a twofold state of time is so doubled.

1. With respect to the fixe dayes of the week, Ver. 16. 21.

2. With respect to the seventh, Ver. 22. 31.

3. In the former of these the Law provideth two things,

1. For gathering it.

2. For using of it.

1. In the command for gathering we have considerable,

1. The precept itself, Ver. 16.

2. Israels obedience, Ver. 17.

3. The event thereupon, Ver. 18.

1. In the precept are considerable these particulars,

2. The Authority commanding, Ver. 16. This is the word which Jehovah hath commanded, Readings agree.

1. The power commanding or injoining is Jehovah.

2. The way of ordering Israel by command.

3. The matter generally commanded, This word, or thing, it is demonstratively spoken unto that which followes.

2. The work commanded more specially declared: where note,

1. The work itself, Gather ye of it a Man (for his mouth, his eating to the letter or) according to his eating, so much as sufficeth them to eat, Vulg. Onk. Sam. Syr.

1. The subject, every man either by his hands, and by overseeing it to be done by his family.

Ver. 16.

Ver. 16.

2. The work, to gather that which God rained on them.

3. The end of it, it was for their eating, or to get sufficient food.

2. The measure to be gathered, An Omer for the pole of the number of your souls, Ver. 16. Most Readings agree, — a Measure for every head, Syr. Marzoban, Ar.

1. The measure named an Omer, which Ver. 36. is said to be the tenth part of an Ephah, the measures are something unknown to us, therefore is it curiosity to search what cannot justly be known. It was doubtles a sufficient portion for every fouldaily.

1. The subject of this measure, every man by pole was to have an Omer; all souls or persons,

3. The extent of this measure, Ye shall take every man for such as shall be in his tent, Readings are to the same sense, and herein may be noted, Ver. 16.

1. The subject principal of this providence, a man, which seem's to be the head of every house.

2. The subject accessory, all his inhabitants.

3. The worke repeated, Ye shall take or provide, the word is plural, Ver. 16.

2. Israels obedience, And the sons of Israel did so, and they gathered one multiplying, another diminishing, that is one more, one lesse, readings agree, they gather some more, some lesse, Ver. 17.

1. The subject of obedience, the sons of Israel, such as were able and ordered for the rest.

2. The act of obedience,

1. Generally spoken of, they did so, that is, as Jehovah commanded.

2. Specially, they gather one more and one lesse, Ver. 17.

3. The event upon this obedience which was discovered by measuring what was gathered, And they measured in an Omer and he that multiplied did not make it abound, and he that diminished did not lessen, they gathered every man according to his eating, Readings are to the same sense, some words vary, Ver. 18.

1. The act of measuring or proof after their gathering, they measured with an Omer.

2. The event upon proof twofold,

1. He that gathered much had nothing over, but his measure of an Omer.

2. He that gathered least had his Omer full rich and poor alike.

3. The general account hereupon, they gathered every man according to his eating.

As much as they could eat, Vulg. So we have an account of the law for gathering.

Quest. How could they who gathered much or little, be so equall in the event?

Answer. It is conceived. 1. That all was

Ppppp 3

was brought to one heap about the vicinity. 2. That every one could not labour equally, some were more able than others. 3. That upon measuring, an equal measure was given to all.

Quest. How doth the Apostle apply this? 2 Cor. 8. 15.

Answer. To regulat mutual liberality, between the Churches of Christ; that one might not be in wants when others do abound; but burdens might be equal.

Quest. Would God hereby level all mens estates?

Answ. No. 1. God hath made propriety. 2. God hath ordained rich and poor in his Church. 3. By proportion only is this made use of; that others abundance might supply in measure them that want.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. As God promiseth bread, so he commandeth labour to gather it.

D. 2. Sufficiency God alloweth, and for that men must take pains.

D. 3. Gods Omer or measure is enough for every souls portion.

D. 4. All souls in families God will have cared for, even such as cannot labour for themselves, Ver. 16.

D. 5. Obedience must be given to Gods command of labour.

D. 6. All are not labouring alike for daily food. Some more, some lesse, Ver. 17.

D. 7. Gods measure equals his labourers with food convenient.

D. 8. Food convenient for every souls eating is a good portion from the Lord, Ver. 18.

2. The law for using the bread gathered now followeth, Ver. 19. 20. 21. Wherein we have recorded,

2. The law itself, Ver. 19.

2. Israels disobedience with the reproof of Moses, Ver. 20.

3. Israels amendment, Ver. 21.

Ver. 19. 1. The law itself is thus given, And Moses said unto them, let no man leave of it till the morning, Readings agree. Herein we may note,

1. The lawgiver subordinat, Moses from the Lord,

2. The subject to whom it is given, the sons of Israel.

3. The law itself which was an expresse prohibition of reserving any of the Manna to the morning; which includes a positive law for making an end of their daily bread. All must be eaten.

2. Israels disobedience; whereabouts we may note,

1. The act of disobedience, But they Ver. 20. bearkyed not unto Moses. Readings to the same sense. Some read they did not obey. Others, not acquiesce in the law given by Moses. Here was their sin, unbelief and refusal to do according to the law.

2. The proof of disobedience, And Ver. 20. wretched men left of it until the morning, most read וְשָׁרְיָם here, some men, it notes poor, miserable men sometimes, in opposition to other words.

1. The subject then of this sin were not all the sons of Israel, but some vile men of them. Dathan and Abiram, B. Uz.

2. The sin itself, they left, or reserved of it until the morning, expressly against the law.

3. The event of this sin, And it bred Ver. 20. worms and stink, Readings to the same sense. It sent out worms, or was full of worms and stink, it became noisom. This was the effect of disobedience, to make the best nourishment loathsom as poison. So God ordered upon their sin. It wormed worms.

2. The resentment of Moses about this is considerable, And Moses was wrath with them or angry against them, Readings agree. וַיִּחַר Sept.

1. The subject of this wrath, Moses from Jehovah.

2. The object of it, these wretched men of Israel, that refused to obey, but did corrupt Gods bread.

3. The act of this wrath. It notes burning or foming wrath, which doubles brake out into chiding and bitter reproof against the sinners. It was bitter wrath, Ver. 20.

3. Israels amendment after this, And Ver. 21. they gathered it morning by morning every man according to his eating, and when the sun was hot it melted, Readings concur as to the sense, some read more to the letter than others. Here,

1. The expression of Israels amendment. And they gathered, &c. In which passage we may note,

1. The same persons, they who were reprovved.

2. The work of amendment, they gathered their bread morning by morning, as God commanded, and left none at evening, as they were forbidden; only each man providing for the mouths in his family for the day.

2. The providence of God ordering the rest, after his people were provided for,

for, And the sun waxed hot and it was melted, made hot. Readings are all to the same sense. That which remained on the surface of the field, &c. Onk. When the sun was hot, &c. most do read. All to one sense. Here note,

1. The season of their gathering bread, before the sun put forth its heat; in the morning early; the time for man to work. After the sun grew hot, no more gathering. To the 4th. hower of the day. B. Uz.

2. The cessation of the heavenly bread, it melted, all that was remaining after Israel was served. That it turned to water, and ran into the sea, is a fable.

Quest. Why must Israel thus every morning look for food?

Answ. 1. It is the will of the Lawgiver to have it so. 2. It was to teach them that the morrow was in Gods power, not in theirs. 3. That daily bread from God is a good finding.

Quest. Was it natural to Manna to melt with heat?

Answ. No, for then it could neither be boiled nor baked, which was the daily use of it. But this was Gods special providence, that the beams of the sun should draw the remainder up, or waft it away, that Israel might depend on God for the next dayes bread.

And instructs us,

D. 1. Gods law orders his allowance how to be used by his people, and not to be abused, Ver. 19.

D. 2. Foolish men refuse to hear and obey the justest lawes given to them.

D. 3. Rebellious Spirits are apt to try God in using mercies against his will.

D. 4. Mercies abused by sinners stinke, and aggravat their sin, and are accused by God.

D. 5. Gods hot displeasure is revealed against sinners by his servants for such abuse, Ver. 20.

D. 6. Gods wrath revealed may make the vilest of men reform in some outward things.

D. 7. There is an appointed season for men to get bread, which they must observe.

D. 8. That season being past God hath his way to take bread from them, Ver. 21

2. Concerning the last of this provision with respect unto the seventh dayes Sabbath, we have several things remarkable from the Ver. 21st to the 31st.

1. The law for gathering double on the 6th day, obeyed, Ver. 22.

2. The law for use of the double portion, Ver. 23. 26.

3. The disobedience of some to that law, Ver. 27.

4. The cognisance taken by God of this, Ver. 28. 29.

5. The acquiescence of the people, Ver. 30.

1. In the first of these we have an obediencial return unto the law given, Ver. 5. And here are reported,

1. The 6th dayes labour, And it was Ver. 21. on the sixth day they gathered double bread, two Omers for every man. All readings are to the same sense; only some words are altered about the Omer, Two measures, Syr. Dno Marzoban. Ar. In this is no difficulty.

1. The time noted, on the 6th day, with respect unto the seventh.

2. The work done, they gathered a double portion for two dayes to serve every man one Omer to satisfy on the 8th day & another reserved for food on the seventh, as afterward.

2. The account given to Moses, And Ver. 21. all the rulers of the congregation came and told Moses, Readings agree; only some read elders, some nobles. Here is no obscurity.

1. They who render an account, the Princes, rulers or elders of the congregation, in their respective charges.

2. The person to whom, Moses the chief.

3. The account made, they tell him what they had done in obedience to Gods command by him.

Quest. How came they to gather double on the 6th day?

Answ. 1. Not that it was multiplied after it was gathered, as some think.

2. God did on the 6th day rain down double to the rest, and so gave them matter of wonder as well as occasion of labour. 3. The law was to gather a double portion upon the 6th day, therefore they did it upon command.

Learn we here.

D. 1. When God orders the morrow to be cared for, it is duty to gather two dayes bread.

D. 2. Gods double provision upon one day is a work seriously considerable by his people.

D. 3. God expects an account of mercies

cles received to himself by his ministers.

D. 4. Direction from God is to be expected for the right use of mercies received. Ver. 22.

2. The law for the use of the double portion related with its appendices, from Ver. 23. to Ver. 26. Herein we have to note:
1. His declaration of Gods mind about the 6th day's use of it, with their experience, Ver. 23. 24. Here note,

1. His narration, Ver. 23. Wherein he declareth,

Ver. 23. 1. The authority from whom he speaketh, And he said to them, this is that which Jehovah hath spoken. Readings to the same purpose, nothing is dark here.

1. The subject speaking is Moses to the rulers.

2. His speech is about the demonstration of that which followeth. This which I shall tell you is the very word of Jehovah.

2. The matter declared to them from the Lord threefold,

Ver. 23. 1. The nature of the day succeeding, To morrow is the Sabbath, the Sabbath of holiness to Jehovah. Readings to the same sense. — The Sabbath the holy rest, Sept. — The rest of the sanctified Sabbath, Onk. — The holy rest of Sabbath, Sam. — The Sabbath is a rest, holiness to the Lord, Syr. — The rest is an holy Sabbath, Ar. The summe declared is, that the seventh day was a Sabbathism, or holy rest to Jehovah.

Quest. Did not Israel know this before now?

Ans. 1. So it is causelessly said by some.

2. It is evident that the seventh day's Sabbath was known from the beginning.

3. It is probable that Israel had bin carcles of it in captivity.

4. Yet now Moses makes mention of it as the reason of Gods bounty the 6th day; and to let them know that it was the day of Gods holy rest made for man, and not to be spent in common daily labour.

Ver. 23. 2. The will of God about the 6th day's work, Bake that which ye will bake, and seeth that which ye will seeth. Readings are to the same scope, but vary in several words, — That which is to be boiled to morrow boil, Sam. as translated. So B. Uzziel. but the word tomorrow belongs to the former sentence. Onely most have conceived that all baking and boiling for the seventh were done upon the 6th day. These were the usual wayes of making bread or otherwise to fit it for their food.

Ver. 23. 3. The mind of God about the reserve, And all that remaineth over, lay up for you to be reserved unto the morning. Readings mostly agree. — Keep those things cold unto the morning, Syr.

1. The matter of reservation, 'all that did abound over the measure appointed for the sixth day; which was the seventh day's portion, their Omer.

2. The work commanded, to reserve or lay it up.

3. The end or use, to be kept for to morrow, that is, to be the portion of the Sabbaths food.

Quest. Did they not bake and boil all for the Sabbath on the sixth day?

Ans. 1. It hath bin so presumed by the Jewish Rabbins and Christian interpreters. 2. Yet it seemeth not so clear nor congruous unto the next.

1. The letter is not bake or boil for to morrow.

2. The next day's portion was to be reserved, but it is not said to be kept baked or boiled; and as God did allow them food for the Sabbath, no doubt he allowed them to fit it for their eating on the seventh day; nothing is forbidden but their going out to gather it, Ver. 23.

2. Israels attention, wherein we have to note,

1. Their obedience, And they laid it up until the morning, as Moses commanded. Readings agree, nothing is hard herein. We may observe,

1. The act of obedience, they reserved it.

2. The rule, as Moses commanded.

3. The event, And it did not stink, neither was there a worm therein. Readings to the same. The two sad events of their disobedient reservation are here denied upon their obedience, It did not stink nor breed a worm when they reserved it according to Gods command, Ver. 24.

2. His declaration about the use of the seventh day's portion, wherein occur these particulars,

1. His direction or prescription for them to eat the reserve on the Sabbath, And Moses said, eat that to day. All readings the same, where God appoints his people by Moses daily bread for the Sabbath, wherein they rest to him, the residue was then to be eaten.

2. His reason is twofold,

1. For the Sabbath to Jehovah is to day. All readings the same, the reason sheweth why they should eat, to bless God on his Sabbath.

3. The denial of giving it this day, To day ye shall not find it in the field. All readings the same, Gods providence in denying it to day giveth reason enough for them to content themselves with their portion given the day before, Ver. 25.

3. The law hence more generally declared, Six dayes ye shall gather it; but in the seventh day the Sabbath, in it there shall be none. Readings agree. On the seventh day is the Sabbath: So some.

1. The law is for six dayes labour for for food onely, so long would God rain down, and on no other day.

2. The reason of this, because Jehovah would give none to be gathered on the Sabbath, Ver. 26.

We observe.

D. 1. The best resolution of cases belonging to God is from the lord himself, so Moses gives these elders an account.

D. 2. The holy Sabbath is a rest unto Jehovah, God hath said it, he terminates it.

D. 3. Daily food when God giveth it, his will is creatures should fit it for their eating.

D. 4. Gods reserve of food for his Sabbath is no lesse than for other dayes in conventency, Ver. 23.

D. 5. Reserves for to morrow upon Gods command shall not corrupt nor be a curse to his, Ver. 24.

D. 6. Gods rest and mans repast are made very well consistent by Jehovah.

D. 7. Jehovah alone terminates his Sabbath, it is alone and altogether for him.

D. 8. Eating for life, but not necessary labouring, is allowed by God on his Sabbath, Ver. 25.

D. 9. Six dayes are not onely created but commanded for labour to get daily bread.

D. 10. God denieth the common blessing of 6 dayes on the Sabbath to make souls more carefully to attend the Sabbath blessing, V. 26.

Ver. 27. 3. The next thing noted is the disobedience of Israel unto Gods prohibition of seeking bread on the Sabbath, And it was in the seventh day some of the people went out to gather and they found none. Readings are the same.

1. The time prohibited is attempted by some on the seventh day.

2. The work prohibited by God is here done by some sinful men, they go out together, if God had not forbidden them probably they might have sat still.

3. The event, they found nothing, as God had told them before, Ver. 27.

4. The cognisance of this disobedience taken by God and expressed two wayes.

1. To Moses, And Jehovah said to Moses, how long wilt thou keep my commandments and my lawes? Most readings agree.

How long wilt thou not? &c. Vulg.

1. The Anthonr that impleads, is Jehovah.

2. The subject charged, is Moses.

3. The charge itself, which concerns all under Moses.

1. The form is by expostulation, How long?

2. The matter, that they refused to keep Gods commandments and his lawes, this looks back to more transgressions than the present, but to this last provocation especially.

Quest. Why is Moses charged here with their sin?

Answer. 1. Not that he was among the refusers. 2. But he had charge over Israel under God. 3. Further God sharpens the spirit of Moses hereby to deal roundly with Israel, Ver. 28.

2. To the people with whom he dealt.

1. By way of conviction of Gods bountiful dealing with them to prevent this sin of theirs, See because Jehovah hath given you the Sabbath therefore he giveth you in the 6th day, the bread of two dayes. Readings agree.

1. He asserteth the Sabbath is Gods gift.

2. That God giveth sufficient unto his in the 6 dayes to encourage them unto the seventh.

3. That therefore they had no need to go seek bread against Gods commandment.

2. By way of command,

1. Affirmatively, Abide ye every man in his place. Ver. 29.

2. Negatively, Let none go out of his place in the seventh day. Readings to the same. — Let none go out of the doors of his house, Syr.

1. Recluse and withdrawing to all, to abide with themselves as befitting meditation, is the first.

2. Vain wandrings to pursue mans own pleasures are here expressly forbidden.

Quest. Was it not lawfull for them to go out?

Answer. 1. Not about their own affairs to distract them from serving God.

2. God hinders not from going to his assemblies upon his Sabbath.

5. The acquiescence of the people unto this, And the people rested in the seventh day. Readings agree. The people sabbatized or kept the Sabbath in the seventh day.

1. The subject, Israel generally who had bin forward to transgress.

2. The act attributed, they rested or kept the Sabbath, that is according to this command.

3. The time, in the seventh day Gods own portion.

Learn we.

D. 1. Gods fairest offers and sweetest commands are accounted grievous by some and intolerable. As the Sabbath.

D. 2. God frustrates sinners who think to gain by breach of his Sabbath, Ver. 27.

D. 3. When people transgress, God sometimes challengeth rulers.

D. 4. Such charge is not to condemn but awaken unto duty such as command others, Ver. 28.

D. 5. Gods bountiful blessing upon the account of his Sabbath may shame such as pollute it.

D. 6. The Sabbath is a special gift of God to men.

D. 7. Recluse and sequestering souls for God, is very suitable to the Lords Sabbath.

D. 8. Gadding abroad or wandering is a foul transgression against Gods Sabbath, Ver. 29.

D. 9. Reproofs and commands are Gods good means to bring men to sanctify his Sabbath.

D. 10. Gods Sabbath must be kept upon the day appointed by him, Ver. 30.

6. The last general head noted in this Chapter is from Ver. 31. to the end which finisheth the history of Israels 8th stage in the wilderness of Sin. And herein are contained these particulars,

1. The nomination of this bread from heaven, ver. 31.

2. The law for reservation of its memorial, ver. 32. 34.

3. The duration of this bread for food to Israel, Ver. 35.

4. The notation of the quantity of the measure, Ver. 36.

In the first occur,

1. The nomination of it in these terms, And the house of Israel called the name of it man, Sept. Sam. Vulg. same. Manna Onk. Syr. and Ar. and so ours with others, and so the Greek Ioh. 6. 31. No difficulty in the words

1. The imposers were the house of Israel the whole people, yet probably these guided by their heads.

2. The object of imposition was the bread from heaven.

3. The name imposed, man or Manna.

4. The imposition, they generally call it so,

2. The description of it in what followeth, And it was like coriander seed, white, and the taste of it was as wafers with honey, Readings mostly to the same. — Flower,

With honey Vulg. — As the honeycombe. Syr. The description here of this Manna is by comparison threefold,

1. As to the outward form of it, the figure of coriander seed was upon it, and about that bigness it was, but not like it in colour, for that was brown or blackish.

2. As to the colour it is expressly said to be white; it was of the eye, or aspect or colour of bedellium; which is thought to be as a white pearl.

3. As to the taste of it, the mixture of fine flour with honey did much resemble it; doubles it was of a very pleasant taste, which marvelously did refresh nature, and against which none had cause to murmur, as they did, Num. 11. 6. Yet that Apocryphal note, that it should fit every mans taste, is false, for it did not please them who murmured against it; and to say it was of pleasant taste to the good, and not to evil ones in Israel, is an unreasonable presumption, for as our grain, so that also gave the same taste to all, Num. 11. 8.

4. As to the abundance of it, the discovery was before under the similitude of hoar frost, which falleth as the dew in great abundance.

Quest. Why did they call it Manna?

Answer. 1. At the first appearance they were in ignorance, and therefore, as conceived by some they aske Man-hu what is this? 2. But now they had experience of what it was, and therefore name it, as their prepared gift or portion from God. 3. It may safely be presumed this was ordered by God himself who made it typical, unto his Christ, the bread which he giveth from heaven unto poor sinners that they may live, this was the gift and portion.

We note.

D. 1. Providence orders the naming of the bread and blessing given to his people for a taste.

D. 2. Unbelieving and ungrateful Israel are forced to acknowledge Gods bread by naming it.

D. 3. The bread given by God from heaven heaven is choise, and clean, and sweet, and cordial.

D. 4. Manna did signify good bread but it did type out better, Ver. 31. John. 6. 31.

In the second, the law of reserving a memorial of this Manna is made, and manifested, ver. 32. 33. 34.

Ver. 32. 1. A general intimation of this will of God for a reserve is given, ver. 32. And Moses said this is the word which Jehovah hath commanded, fill an Omer of it, for a reservation for your generations that they may see the bread which I have made you eat in the wilderness, when I brought you forth from the land of Egypt. All readings are to the same purpose. Some words only vary. Herein note,

1. The law of God for reserving a measure of Manna to be reserved for the generations to come. This is the word of Jehovah, &c. Nothing difficult.

2. The end of this reservation. That they may see the bread, &c. The words are plain.

Ver. 33. 2. A special item to Aaron, And Moses said to Aaron take thou one pot and put there an Omer full of Manna, and lay it up before Jehovah for a reservation unto your generations. All readings are to the same sense, — Take a golden pot, &c. Sept. So it is expressed, Hebr. 9. 4. Herein we may note,

1. The persons concerned, Moses from God to Aaron.

2. The injunction, Take one pot and put therein an Omer full of Manna and lay it up before Jehovah.

1. The vessel to be taken, gold, not earthen. As B. Uz.

2. The measure to be put in, an Omer full.

3. The posture of it, Before Jehovah. 3. The end of it, to be reserved for your generations, i. e. to be seen, and to testify to after ages Gods goodness to Israel.

Ver. 34. 3. The obedience of Aaron, As Jehovah commanded unto Moses so Aaron laid it up before the Testimony for a reservation. Readings are to the same sense, where note,

1. The rule of obedience, As Jehovah, &c.

2. The obedience itself, he laid it up.

3. The place, and end, before the testimony to be reserved for posterity.

Quest. How could the generations following see this, it being reserved in the holiest of all?

Answer. 1. It was there kept to be visible, and to convince gainsayers in after ages. 2. It was not necessary that it must be seen every day, for thither the highpriest only had entrance. 3. It is conceived also that it was set in the entrance of the holy place, where at times it might be seen by the people.

Quest. Are these phrases, before the Lord, and before the testimony equivalent?

Answer. 1. They are so as to the main scope, that this should be laid up with reference to the Lord. 2. Yet supposing that this was done presently, before they removed from the wilderness of Sin, it must needs be for present another place, for the testimony was not as yet settled nor the tables written, 3. Seeing the Ark of the testimony was not yet made nor settled, needs must this be written by way of prolepsis, and anticipation by Moses, he having a desire to finish the history of the Manna, & its disposal according to Gods will, for Aaron could not set this pot before the testimony at this time, until near a year after: but yet before the Lord in the place appointed by him was it reserved; neither was it in the Ark where the tables of the testimony only were, but in the same place even the holiest of all, as Deut. 10. 5. 1. Kings. 8. 9. Heb. 9. 34.

It instructs us.

D. 1. Gods command alone can make the standing monuments of mercy.

D. 2. Mercies of old to his Church God would have known to generations following.

D. 3. Men may see that the best provision of Gods Church hath bin in its wilderness condition.

D. 4. God consults murmurers by his monuments, that he did not bring Israel out of Egypt to destroy them, Ver. 32.

D. 5. As God to Moses so Moses to Aaron, giveth order for a memorial of Gods mercies. God to powers, and they to their ministers.

D. 6. Gods monuments of mercy must be such as may stand before him.

D. 7. Gods reserve for good of posterity must be laid up in his Church, Ver. 33.

D. 8. Gods faithful ministers are exact to walk by his command.

D. 9. God and Gods Testimony are equivalent and reciprocally regarded.

D. 10. In sacred history things are some

Sometimes recorded by anticipation, Ver. 34.

Ver. 33.

3. The next thing in this conclusive part of the Chapter, is the duration of this Manna, how long it lasted, And the sons of Israel did eat manna 40 years, until they came to a land inhabited; they did eat manna until they came to the border of the land of Canaan. Readings mostly agree, 40 annis & quatuordecim Sept.

1. The continuance of this mercy, 40 years.

2. The termination of it, at their coming into a land of habitation, which is explained, until they came to the border of the land of Canaan, which was the land of promise; which we read accomplished, Jos. 5. 12.

Quest. How could Moses write this since he saw it not?

Ans. 1. It is thought by some that he revealed it prophetically, but this being an history, that is not rational, 2. It is safest to conclude that Joshua his survivor, or some other who wrote of his death, might give this completing to this history; no prejudice to truth by this.

But teacheth us.

D. 1. It is worthy of God to give 40 years mercy for 40 years temptation.

D. 2. Such continued mercies are strong engagements to continued obedience.

D. 3. God is faithful to make good his promise to his people in every part; even unto Canaan.

D. 4. God is arbitrary to continue miracles no longer, than till he giveth in common mercies.

D. 5. Wilderness-mercies are temporary with wilderness-conditions.

D. 6. God will carry his Israel through all wilderness-troubles unto their Canaan-rest, Ver. 35.

Ver. 34.

4. The close of all is a note upon the measure, Now the Omer is the 10th part of an Ephah. — The 10th part of three measures, Sept. — Of three pecks, Onk. — 10th part of a bushel, Syr. — Ma-gorban erat decima pars Vahbe. Ar. other names of measures. This is added to discover the large allowance which God gave every person every day, and with this is closed the history of Israel's 8th stage in the wilderness of Sin; and I shall close all with this note.

D. Gods bounty stands upon record to condemn unbelief and murmuring of men and justify God against sinners.

CHAP. XVII.

Hitherto we have continued the history of Gods providence toward Israel in their 8th stage in the wilderness of Sin. In this, and in the following Chapter we have the history of Gods ordering them to the 11th stage at Rephidim, and the events which fell out there. Moses therefore to clear this short relation here addeth more distinctly this, Num. 33. 14. And they took their journey out of the wilderness of Sin and encamped at Dophkah, and they departed from Dophkah, and encamped in Alish and they removed from Alish and encamped at Rephidim where was no water for the people to drink. So that in order Rephidim is the 11th, whereas in the account of Moses in this place it is but the 9th stage, as before hath bin noted in a general Analysis of the history from the 12th Chap to the 19th.

Quest. Why doth Moses pass over those two places of Israel's encamping which did intervene?

Ans. 1. They were onely places touched at, and of shorter abode, where no extraordinary providences were remarkable, 2. This stage at Rephidim was more remarkable, both for Israel's sin, and Gods miraculous indulgence toward them, which Moses intending to relate passeth over the two other less observable. This passage being cleared we come to consider the events at Rephidim which eminently and generally are three.

1. Gods ordering Israel into, and out of a grievous trial by want of water, Ch. 17. 1-7.

2. Gods disposing of them to another piercing trial by warre, together with the issue, Ver. 8. 16.

3. Gods sending Jethro to visit Moses and Israel, and the good which he left behind him as to the order of government, which is related, Chap. 18. throughout, with several things annexed.

The first event we shall now begin withall, contained in the former verses of the 17th Chap. wherein these more special heads occur.

1. The occasion of this event, Ver. 1.

2. The event itself which is manifold.
1. Israel's chiding with Moses and his reply, Ver. 2.

2. Israel's murmuring and charge against Moses, Ver. 3.

3. Moses his appeal to God, Ver. 4.

4. Gods

4. Gods answer unto Moses, ver.

5. 6.

5. Moses his obedience to Gods order, Ver. 6. 7.

1. The occasion of what happened here, was Israel's access to thither, as we have it thus related, And all the congregation of the sons of Israel, journeyed from the desert of Sin thorough their journey according to the mouth of Ichorab, and they encamped in Rephidim, and there were not waters that the people might drink. Readings are mostly the same, all to the same sense, — For month some read the word of the Lord, Sept. Vulg. Onk. — Of the mouth of the Lord, Syr. The commandment of the Lord, Sam. Ar.

Ver. 1.

1. The term of connection of this history to the former, which is read by some as a term of order afterward, by others an illative, therefore, and by ours copulative, which is enough to shew, how one trial is joined to another, or the continued progress of the Church in its pilgrimage, from place to place, as it is ordered in heaven.

2. The matter connected, which is Israel's access to their 11th stage at Rephidim, and this is the occasion of the events following, about which, the words being plain, these terms may be observed.

1. The subject of the motion, All the congregation of the sons of Israel, Moses being their leader.

2. The motion itself, they journeyed, or went forward.

3. The term from which, The wilderness of Sin.

4. The way by which, thorough other passages of Dophkah and Alish.

5. The rule unto which they steer their course, by the mouth or word of the Lord, so farre well, for they obeyed the voice of God herein.

6. The term they came at, Rephidim, Ben Uz. add's where their hands were idle from Gods precepts.

7. The condition befalling them there, no water was in that place for the people to drink. Here were they tried with thirst, whether they will wait upon Gods mouth now, or not, as they seemed before to do.

We may learn from it.

D. 1. Motions and trials of the Church are continued and multiplied here to the time of pilgrimage.

D. 2. From Sin to Rephidim, or from hunger to thirst God may carry his congregation.

D. 3. Intermediate passages may be so the Church between extrem trials.

D. 4. Gods mouth or word is the only rule of his Churches motions.

D. 5. The Church must encamp where the word of God determines.

D. 6. Wants and hardships may attend Gods people where he bids them pitch, Ver. 1.

2. The events following upon this occasion come to be considered in their order, as before proposed,

1. Israel's chiding with Moses, &c. thus delivered, and or therefore the people did contend, strive or chide with Moses, and said give ye us waters, and let us drink: and Moses said unto them, why contend ye with me? Why do ye tempt Jehovah? — Give thou waters, Sept. Vulg. Sam. Syr. But it is in the plural, give ye, &c. so Hebr. Onk. and Ar. Here,

1. Israel's contention with Moses, whereabout note,

1. The term connecting, which may be illative or copulative, therefore, i. e. For want of water; or and or upon that occasion also, they strive again,

2. The subject contending, which is, a sinful discontented people, whom God now again afflicted,

3. The object, Moses the instrument of mercy, not without Aaron,

4. The contention itself, whereof,
1. The form, was in bitter invectives, striving, railing, reproaching and reviling him.

2. The matter of it, which is a most unreasonable demand, give ye us waters that we may drink, or, and we will drink or let us let us drink; this was a meer quarrel pickt; for alas I was he able to create rivers? &c.

2. The reply of Moses to them in a double expostulation,

1. About himself as guiltless, Why contend ye with me? Or why do ye revile or reproach me as if I had brought this evil on you? I am free from any hurt to you.

2. About God the judge and inflictor of this misery, Why tempt ye Jehovah? Is he not your judge? Are ye stronger than he? Why do ye so bitterly grieve his spirit? It will turn to your ruin. In this they questioned Gods presence, and providence toward them, as in verse the seventh.

Q. Was this the same chiding with that Num. 20. 4?

Answer. 1. Some have thought so but amisse. 2. Many circumstances shew that they were distinct.

1. In time, that being many years after this.

2. In place, that being in the desert of Sin, this at Rephidim.

3. In Gods commission, here he bids them strike the rock, there onely he commands

Q q q q q 3 them them to speak unto it. These and other things distinguish them.

We observe.

- D. 1. Every street is an occasion of stirring up the wicked to sin.
 D. 2. Unbelieving and impatient sinners fall out with Gods instruments, when himself smites them.
 D. 3. Desperate sinners in their streets unreasonably demand from creatures, what God alone can do.
 D. 4. Unreasonable transgressors are apt to rail and revile the innocent ministers of God.
 D. 5. Gods faithful ministers desire patiently to suffer the unreasonable strivings of sinners.
 D. 6. Gods innocent servants may justly turn away undeserved reproofs from themselves, so Moses.
 D. 7. Rising up against ministers is a high temptation of God himself.
 D. 8. Gods faithful instruments labour to shew men their unreasonableness in their temptation of God.
 Ver. 2.

Ver. 3. 2. The next event is Israels further murmuring and charge against Moses, And the people thirsted there for water, and the people murmured against Moses, and said, why is this? Thou hast made us come up out of Egypt, to kill me, and my sons and my cattle with thirst, Readings agree. Onely where the Hebr. expresse it me and my sons, &c. The 70, Vulg. Sam. Ar. Syr. read us and our sons, which is all one in sense, though in the original the people speak as one man, and so Onkel. reads also. Herein we may note,

1. A further occasion of their repeated sin, the people thirsted in that place which was a soar trial; but yet not tending to make them murmur, but lye low and look to Jehovah in this case; though they make a contrary use of it.

2. Their further Sin against Moses in these acts.

1. In murmuring at him with mischievous intents, the people generally stormed at him, and that as if they would have stoned him, as he tells God, ver. 4.

2. In expostulating with him about the present event, For what is this? What no water? What a strieght is this? All aggravating their misery.

3. In charging him again with murderous intentions. Thou hast brought us up out of Egypt to kill us, and our children, and cattle with thirst.

1. The design charged is murder of the whole Church of God at once.

2. The way of execution by thirst, this is the third time of such an opprobrious charge against Moses within a very few days.

Quest. Why did God thus try them now with thirst?

Ans. 1. There was sin enough among the people to pull down such a visitation, which justifieth it. 2. Gods will on this & all trials is reason sufficient. 3. God seemeth not to do this in vengeance, but to manifest his glory in supplying, and trying their faith and obedience thereby.

And teacheth us.

- D. 1. Gods stroke on people in thirst or otherwise may fall bitterly when they tempt him.
 D. 2. The pinching pain of thirst or other judgments makes sinners incapable of counsel or conviction.
 D. 3. Pressing plagues increase murmuring in wicked transgressors.
 D. 4. Unbelieving murmurers expostulat about judgments as if they were causeless.
 D. 5. Unreasonable sinners will invent the cause of their trouble, to be from the designs of Gods servants against them.
 D. 6. The foulest practises of murder and blood, wicked murmurers usually charge upon Gods most faithful ministers of their good, V. 3.

3. The next event is the appeal of Moses unto God in these words, Ver. 4. And Moses cried unto Jehovah saying, what shall I do to this people, yet a little while and they will stone me, — Moses prayed unto the Lord. Onkel. Syr. Here note,

1. The appellant, Moses, under the pressing cries of murmurers.

2. The judge of the appeal, Jehovah, who brought Israel out of Egypt into the present streit and trial by want of water.

3. The appeal itself, whereof,

1. The form is expostulatory, some what passionat, as if he were at his wits end in thinking what to do for the appealing of of the people, he breaks out, Lord, what shall I do unto them?

2. The matter seems to be a desire of direction from God, although passionatly exprest, for his demeanour unto the people in the present streit, as if he had said, Lord I pray thee tell me what I shall do as to this people.

4. The urgent reason of this appeal, and that was the danger imminent upon him, they be almost ready to stone me, or, yet but a little while, if thou step not in for my help, my life is at stake, they will surely stone me, and so spill my blood without cause, and bring wrath upon themselves.

Quest. How did Moses know this?

Ans. 1. It is safely presumed that however this threat were not mentioned before among their murmurings, yet such passages were let fall; upon which account Moses tells God of it in this place. 2. The fear of Moses did not arise upon light ground, but doubles from such menaces uttered against him, neither was the fear unbelieving nor sinful; but natural, incident to the best of men, for self preservation,

It learneth us.

- D. 1. Just cries and appeals to Jehovah are the best means for Gods servants to use against the violent threats of men.
 D. 2. When Gods ministers know not what to do against assaults of murmurers it is best to seeke help of God.
 D. 3. There is but a little between the ministers of salvation and death, from unbelieving murmurers, if God do not put in and save them in time.
 D. 4. Jehovah alone can bound the fury of the wicked and save his people.
 D. 5. Passionat may be the cries of Saints to God from fear, and yet in faith, Ver. 4.

4. The next event is Gods answer to Moses, Ver. 5. and part of the 6th which is two ways exprest,

1. By way of command, Ver. 5th, And Jehovah said to Moses passe on before the people and take with thee of the elders of Israel, and thy rod, that, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thy hand and go, Readings are mostly the same. — The river Nilus, Ar. Wherein we have to note,

1. The power commanding, the same to whom Moses cried, Jehovah said to Moses.

2. The command imposed which seems to be threefold.

1. For a further motion in Rephidim, passe on thou before the people, go in their sight and before them toward Horeb.

2. For his associates take with thee of the elders of Israel; that is, the heads of the families, some of them who might be competent witnesses.

3. For his instrument to be assumed also, And thy rod, that, wherewith thou smotest the river, take in thy hand and go, The rod or staffe wherewith the miracles in Egypt were done, and the river there smitten; for that of Nilus was more properly so called than the sea. This instrument he must reassume and go.

Quest. Why doth God bid him go &c.

Ans. 1. Not to expose him to greater danger. 2. To magnify himself and Moses yet more by it.

Quest. Why was he to take the elders?

Ans. 1. It was Gods will to order it. 2. It may be, they were murmurers among others, therefore God will convince them. 3. It is probable, to be witnesses of the miracle in bringing water out of a flint, Pl. 14. 8. It was also that by them Gods works might be declared to others.

Quest. 3. Why was he commanded to take his rod?

Ans. 1. God needed it not, but will have this instrument at his pleasure, 2. It was an emblem of Moses his power derived from God at first. 3. Gods mind at this time was that the rock should be smitten with it.

2. Gods answer to Moses is by way of promise as followeth, Ver. 6. Behold I will be standing before thee there upon the rock in Choreb, and thou shalt smite the rock and waters shall come forth out of it, and the people shall drink, Readings mostly agree, — I stand there before thou come to the rock, &c. Sept. — I will raise a signe unto thee upon a flint, &c. Ar. — Thou shalt see the footstep of a foot, B. Uz. In all this we have these things considerable.

1. The note of demonstration pointing out the promise following, as the great encouragement to Moses, which consists in these heads,

1. Gods presence and appearance to Moses on the rock, as some read Gods preventing him to be there before him; the summe is, Gods presence to help him when he should come thither, which is noted,

1. Punctually by the place, the rock in Choreb.

2. Visibly as to the person, before thy face.

3. Effectually in his posture, there God

God promiseth to stand, and be ready to effect what he promiseth.

2. Gods help to Moses, Thou shalt smite the rock, wherein though this may seem a slight matter; yet in this is the promise of the means, whereby the refreshing shall come to Israel, and in this we may note,

1. The subject smiting, Moses in faith.

2. The object smitten, a rock, very unlikely to give out water, a flint as some read.

3. The smiting itself, striking it with his rod, which was as unlikely means to bring out water. This God will have done when he stands by.

3. The seasonable effect of the issue, water shall come forth out of it, & the people shall drinke. The effect is twofold.

1. Water shall come out of the rock, which is a miraculous worke for stone to give water.

2. The people shall drinke, which was satisfaction unto them, to cease their murmuring and secure Moses from their hands. All this is under promise.

Quest. What Horeb was this to which God directs Moses?

Ans. 1. Not that of Sinai, Ch. 19. Thither they were as yet not come. Yet, 2. The name is thought by some to point out the whole tract unto Sinai. 3. It seems to be that which is called the mount of God, Ex. 3. 1, Ex. 18. 5.

Quest. How did God stand on the rock? Ans. It is likely in the same way as he appeared unto Israel in the pillar of a cloud, for this was notably visible to Moses and the elders.

Quest. Was there a spiritual use of this? Ans. Yea, to some it was so, but not unto all, for so we find it applied by the apostle, 1 Corin. 10. 4.

Quest. Why must Moses strike the rock?

Ans. 1. God needed it not, 2. Yet God will have it as a signal, 3. Hereby doth he honour Moses before these who murmured at him.

5. The last event is the obedience of Moses unto God, which stands in two particulars,

Ver. 6. 1. In doing all that God commanded, And Moses did so in the eyes of the elders of Israel, Readings agree. Herein note,

1. The term of connection, knitting obedience to commands.

2. The subject of this obedience, to Moses Gods servant.

3. The matter of obedience, he did so as God commanded.

4. The witness of this obedience, the elders of Israel that saw him do it, V. 6.

2. In making a monument for remembrance of all this providence, by putting a double name upon the place, And he called the name of the place Massah, temptation and Meribah strife because of the contention of the sons of Israel, and because they tempted Jehovah, saying, is Jehovah in the midst of us, or not? Readings mostly to the same sense, — Is the majesty of the Lord, &c. Onk. — Is the light of God found among us or not? Ar. In this we have to consider.

1. The monument itself, in a double name imposed.

1. The imposer, Moses by power from God.

2. The object of imposition, the place where they were.

3. The name itself 1. Temptation. 2. Strife.

2. The reason of it, which is twofold, as expressed.

1. Because the children of Israel did chide and strive with Moses,

2. Because there they tempted Jehovah saying, is the Lord among us or not? which expostulation implieth adenal of Gods presence with them.

Quest. Why was this name here imposed? Ans. 1. God would make an impression of their sin upon themselves.

2. God would hereby commit to posterity, that they might fear to tempt God, and strive with his Ministers.

3. A memorial of mercy. He providing for them, when these sinned.

From it observe we.

D. 1. In the midst of threatenings God commands his servants to walk safely. Go.

D. 2. God may vouchsafe some murmurers to go along and see his miracles wrought by his servants, but not all.

D. 3. God may command the use of signals for miracles though he need them not. Ver. 5.

D. 4. God usually seconds his commands with promises unto his servants.

D. 5. Gods presence for expedition works all his wonders.

D. 6. God will honour his instruments in working miracles as himself.

D. 7. God will give the mercy effected which he promiseth his servants.

D. 8.

D. 8. Murmurers save the better, and have merces by believers, who obey God.

D. 9. Gods ministers are and must be exact in doing Gods commands before all men. Ver. 6.

D. 10. It is Gods pleasure to make places monuments of mens sins by his naming them.

D. 11. Temptation of God and contention with his servants usually go together.

D. 12. It is high tempting of God to call in question his gracious presence with his people. Ver. 7.

2. The next great event befalling Israel in Rephidim is a dreadful warre ordered by God, and managed by Amalek against them, when they were now faint for want of water, and in the expectation of a redress. Herein we may note,

1. An assault made on Israel. Ver. 8.

2. The defense made against Amalek, Ver. 9. 10. 11. 12.

3. The issue of the warre, Ver. 13.

4. The consequent acts upon this issue, Ver. 14. 15. 16.

1. The assault of Amalek upon Israel, we have briefly asserted Ver. 8. Where readings are to the same sense, Herein these terms occur,

1. The term of connection which knits this event to Israels former murmuring; this some read as copulative, connecting this judgment to their former sin; some make it a term of order, and so shewing the cause of this plague coming on Israel now: which doubtles the Lord so ordered that it should follow at the very heeles of their rebellious murmurings, and tempting of him.

2. The assault itself asserted, wherein are,

1. The assailant Amalek, not here noting a single person, as somtimes, but the body of a nation, taking name from Duke Amalek, the son of Eliphaz the son of Esau who was brother to Jacob, Gen. 36. 15. 16.

2. The assailed, Israel; the whole camp in their intent, but actually the hindermost of them, and that when they were faint and feeble, as Moses elsewhere notes to aggravat Amaleks cruelty, Deut. 25. 17. 18. 19. And these giving them no offence or provocation. Some say the tribe of Dan, Ben. Uz.

3. The assault expressed in two words,

1. Of motion, they came, that is, doubtles from their own place, in the fourth of Arabia where they dwelt; having heard of Israels motion, they doubtles pursued them and overtook them.

2. Of action, they fought, or made warre with Israel; that is, they fell upon some of them and smote them with the edge of the sword; and intended nothing but death unto the whole host of Israel; some say they were men of the tribe of Dan, whom the cloud did not protect by reason of their idolatry, but this is groundles; all Israel were equally sinners, and deserved all alike, however God suffered some of the reer of Israel to fall.

4. The place of the assault, it was in Rephidim, where they were murmuring for water.

Quest. Why did Amalek now assault Israel?

Ans. The reason is considerable.

1. Upon Gods side, in whose hand this was ordered; now as to his judgments, they are all righteous,

1. He seems to let Israel know the weight of sin in murmuring, by this first commanding the sword to trouble them.

2. Yet was it in grace, for God intended and effected victory for Israel.

3. It was to the initial destruction of Amalek.

2. But upon Amaleks part, the reason could be nothing but the violence of sin; some conceive from the old grudge between Esau and Jacob, which might be rooted in posterity; but at present more probably, it was their evil eye at the Church of God; hearing what things God had done for them, and therefore now intended to bury them in the wilderness, and make their memory to cease, for we read of no provocation here given them, to fall upon a weak and feeble people.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. New plagues for new murmurings God can make to follow sinners at the heeles, Connect.

D. 2. Greatest enemies to the Church God may make to arise from the Fathers of it.

D. 3. The weakness of the Church is an occasion unto bloody adversaries to oppress them.

D. 4. It is proper for Amalek upon no cause to fight, and destroy Israel.

D. 5. The place of murmuring may prove the place of revenging.

D. 6. Whatever enemies intend, God orders all their violences against his Israel for good; V. 8.

Rrrr 2. The

2. The defense made upon Israels side next followeth; wherein we have to note,

1. Counsel given and taken about this,

Ver. 9.

2. Counsel acted as to this defense,

Ver. 10.

3. Various events in the managing of this warre, Ver. 11. 12.

Ver. 9.

1. The counsel given and taken hereupon followeth, And Moses said to Joshua chuse for us men, and go thou out and fight with Amalek, to morrow I will stand upon the top of the hill, and the rod of God in my hand, Readings all tend to the same sense, only some words varied. Ar. choose out for thyself mighty men; and go smite Amalek to morrow. Sept. — And therod with which all miracles have bin done before God, shall be in my hand, Onk, — Having or carrying the rod of God, &c. Syr. Ar. In this passage we have to note,

1. Counsel given by Moses to Joshua for doing his part in managing this warre, wherein note,

1. The counsellour, Moses from God, with authority advising as to the present state.

2. The party counselled, Joshua, designed at this time, for this part of the work.

3. The advice itself given as to three things.

1. For choise of men unto this expedition; he knowing well the state of the tribes.

2. For marching, go thou out captain of the host, lead them to the battel.

3. For fighting, go and fight with Amalek, that is fallen upon our rear.

2. Counsel taken by Moses from God, as to what concerned him in the present expedition.

1. As to his station I will stand upon the top of the hill, which doubtles was to do his part in waiting upon God, and attending him in this streight, which was by praying.

2. As to his signal action, And the rod of God shall be in my hand, this no doubt was done by the word of the Lord now, as in former times, not that God needed it, but that Moses might be obedient and do it.

3. As to the time, to morrow shall all this be done, you shall do your part, and I will do mine.

Quest. Why doth Moses allot Joshua the part of leading the host?

Ans. 1. Not as laying down his supremacy under God. 2. But from God to initiate Joshua in the military services.

3. As to himself, he keeps the oversight, and by the word at prayer, and the rod, he engageth God in the warre against Amalek.

This will instruct us.

D. 1. In case of oppression by hostil-ly God doth allow his Israel to make their defense.

D. 2. God in his wisdom orders several parts to several instruments for safety.

D. 3. God will have choise men to prosecute the defence of Israel by warre, when he calleth thereunto.

D. 4. Some instruments God points out for praying and waiting on God in the defence of his Church.

D. 5. Signal attendance upon God in his own way is needful, when he calleth for it.

D. 6. Counsel for praying and fighting given by God, and taken from him, is defensive to his Church. Ver. 9.

2. The next thing in this defensive part is the counsel acted. V. 10. And Joshua did as Moses had said unto him to fight with Amalek, and Moses & Aaron & Chur went up to the top of the hill. All readings to the same sense.

Ver. 10.

And going out he encountered with Amalek, Sept. Here we have two parties acting for Israels defence, according to advice,

1. Joshua follows the word of command given unto him by Moses, he chose men and marched, and fought with Amalek to repulse him, he keeps close to time, & worke, as he had in charge.

2. Moses also act's his part, and takes assistance with him for his help in attending on God, and contending for Israel against Amalek.

1. The ascendants here are,

1. Moses principal, whose work was with God.

2. Aaron and Chur accessories.

2. The place of ascent. The head or top of the hill where he was to meet with God, and shew the signal of help unto Israel.

3. The ascent itself, they went up, which action is Synecdochical, and takes in all these things done there in order unto Israels salvation, as prayer, faith, expectation from God, &c.

Quest. Why went Moses to the top of the hill?

Ans. 1. It seems to be so ordered by God. 2. It was a place not onely for meditation and prayer, but for manifestation of Gods respect to Israel.

It

It is therefore reasonably conceived that he lifted up his rod from thence in the view of Israel to do wonderfully thereby, as he had done before to destroy the Egyptians, so now to vanquish Amalek.

Quest. Why doth he carry these associates?

Ans. 1. It seemeth not to be without the direction of God. 2. The men themselves were able, Aaron a Prophet of the Lord, and Chur a prince of the tribe of Judah, the son of Caleb, the son of Ezron, the son of Pharez, the son of Judah. 1 Chron. 5. 9. 18. 19. One afterward left in charge with Aaron to judge, while Moses was in the mount with God. Ex. 24. 14.

Learn we here.

D. 1. Counsels for defence of Gods Church are not onely to be given, and taken, but acted.

D. 2. Fighting with Gods enemies is good, when done at Gods command.

D. 3. Ministering and praying work must be done to God in making resistance to his enemies.

D. 4. The top of the hill where God may be revealed, and whence the Church may be comforted, is fittest for intercessours.

D. 5. Good associates in praying are sweet helps to save the Church.

D. 6. Gracious instruments are ready and obedient to climb hills to God for his peoples relief, Ver. 10.

Ver. 11.

3. In managing this defense several experiments are obvious, as to the use of means about the issue of the battel, and successe of the day, which are these,

1. Sometimes the prevailing of Israel, And it was when Moses lifted up his hand then Israel prevailed. Readings are all to the same sense, yet in variety of terms. When Moses lifted up the hands, Sept. — His hands the men of Israel, &c. Onk. — Israel was mightier, Sam. — Israel did overcome, Ar. Vulg. Wherein we have to note,

1. The means used, Moses lifted up his hand or hands, so the letter is plain,

2. The issue, Israel got ground, grew great and prevailed against Amalek.

Ver. 11.

2. Sometime the prevailing of Amalek, And when he let down his hand then Amalek prevailed. Readings concur in sense, but terms here vary also, hands for hand; men of the house of Amalek, Amalekites for Amalek, Onk. Ar. overcome and were mightier for prevailed, Ar. Vulg. Where the letter is plain, Here note,

1. The defect of means, The letting down the hand or hands of Moses.

2. The disadvantage then to Israel, Amalek then prevailed, and Israel was worsted. Ver. 11.

3. The support of Moses under some deficiency wherein we have to observe,

1. The falling, And the hands of Moses were heavy. Readings mostly the same. — His hands were weary, Syr. Herein also note,

1. The subject spoken of, Moses the great instrument of salvation, who had done mightily for Israel before.

2. The signal help of this subject, His hands, as here in the plural but before in the singular, which were used in some signal means or other for Israels help.

3. The weakness attributed, they were heavy, or weary, apt to fall, and hang down.

2. The support given him by his assistants,

1. To his body being weary with standing all the time of the conflict, And they took a stone and put it under him and he sat upon it. Wherein these terms are.

1. The taking of a stone by Aaron or Hur.

2. The putting of this under him to hold up his body.

3. The sullivan of him thereupon, all clear in the letter.

2. To his hands, And Aaron and Hur Ver. 12.

staid up his hands, one on this side, and one on that side. Readings are to the same sense, some in other terms. — They sustained on both sides, Vulg. — On the right hand and left, Ar. Here the letter is plain,

1. The sustainers, Aaron and Hur.

2. The sustained, the hands of Moses.

3. The sustentation, they were made steady, right and left.

3. The event hence arising, And there was to his hands firmness or fidelity until the sun set, or was gone down,

The hands of Moses were steadfast to the, &c. Sept. Sam. — Were stretched out in prayer. Onk. — Upheld. Ar. — Were in fidelity, Syr. — His hands were not weary, &c. Vulg. These terms occur here.

1. The subject of this event. The hands of Moses.

2. The affection or state incident to them, firmness, stability, expressed by a word noting fidelity.

3. The continuance, until sun set, long enough according to Gods appointment to give Israel the victory.

R r r r 2 Quest.

Quest. 1. What is meant by the hands of Moses?

Ans. 1. Doubtles in the letter, his bodily hands, as signals of some more inward parts. 2. Under these the heart and spirit of Moses is included as in several other passages. Psalm.

141. 2.

Quest. 2. What is meant by the lifting of them up?

Ans. 1. It is a metonymical phrase, and thereby is signified,

1. Some mighty prayer, which doubtles was a main matter intended here. 1 Tim. 2. 8. Pl. 28. 2.

2. Sometimes signal encouragement unto duty, and successe, as the lifting up of the brazen serpent to Israel, and the rod of God at this time to Joshua. Joh. 3. 14 Num. 21.

Quest. 3. What is meant by letting them down?

Ans. In contradistinction to the lifting up it may note,

1. A deficiency of strength and Spirit in prayer, which might be caused by extraordinary spending himself in prayer, and not from natural faintings or weariness of his body without it.

2. A deficiency of that signal encouragement which Moses gave by the rod in his hand to Joshua and Israel. So his hands were heavy.

Quest. 4. How did the successe of the day depend upon these actions of Moses?

Ans. 1. Not naturally, for so it depended upon God alone. 2. Signally they might, as noting Gods assistance or withdrawing by lifting up, and letting down the hands. 3. Subordinatly, and as by way of means, strong prayer might help victory, and weak may remit it.

Quest. 5. What was meant by putting under the stone?

Ans. 1. In the letter doubtles it notes a very stone to support the weary body of Moses, being worn with waiting and wrestling with God. 2. It is applied by some mystically to Christ, the support of his, that is a conjecture. 3. It may morally note, stable help from God in his faints deficiency.

Quest. 6. What is meant by Aaron and Hur, and their work?

Ans. 1. Doubtles their persons holding up the weary hands of Moses. 2. Their assistance, and joyning of hearts, and hands with him to help on victory for Israel against Amalek, Ver. 12. Other allegorical glosses are vain.

3. After this followeth the issue of the warre, And Joshua discomfited Amalek and his people with the edge of the sword, Readings to the same sense. Onely some read

Ver. 13.

He made them fly with slaughter of sword. Sept. Vulg. Others, He broke them to peeces & smote them. Onk. Syr. Sam. He cut them off, Ar. Here we have a total victory obtained by Israel over Amalek. Wherein notes,

1. The general who beareth the name of it, Joshua, with his host, so assisted by Moses from God.

2. The party vanquished Amalek, which seems here to be a personal name, and noting the King; however other names were assumed afterward, as Agag, and the whole host of his under the name of his people.

3. The conquest itself, he weakened or discomfited them with the edge of the sword, that is by slaying many, & driving the rest to flight, for they were not all destroyed now, neither could Israel pursue the victory upon them. Ver. 13.

Whence we observe.

D. 1. Hands of creature-instruments may be helpful under God, to give his Church successe against its enemies.

D. 2. Such hands lifted up to heaven in prayer, and for encouragement, God doth assist unto prevalency.

D. 3. Hands hanging down and feeble in prayer, may give opportunity unto enemies to prevail.

D. 4. Such languishings after strong strugglings, God sometimes orders upon his choicest servants.

D. 5. Doubtful may be the fight of Israel as to successe against its enemies for a time, Ver. 11.

D. 6. Heaviness of flesh and spirit in contending with God for Israel may sometimes befall Moses. Mat. 26. 41. 43.

D. 7. Suitable supports under such delinquencies are very requisite for Gods servants. Christ the stone to us.

D. 8. Good helpers to strengthen hearts and hands in faintings are specially useful.

D. 9. By such helps souls may be steadfast and faithful unto God unto time of victory. Ver. 12.

D. 10. Moses praying and Joshua fighting, fighting, Amalek must fall, when prayer puts the edge on the sword, it is furnished to the slaughter.

D. 11. It is Gods just ordering that they who first oppress with the sword, shall perish by the sword. Ver. 13.

4. The last thing in the history of this first warre with Amalek is the consequent use of it, which God will have made, Ver. 14. 15. 16. Wherein we have,

Ver. 14.

1. The command of God to Moses about this, And Jehovah said to Moses write this for a memorial in a book, and put it in the ears of Joshua, that wiping I will wipe out the remembrance of Amalek from under the heavens, Readings are to the same sense, write this monument, Give it to the ears of Joshua, Read it, Set it before Joshua, all to the same purpose. Here notes,

1. The term connecting the following injunction to the foregoing Providence in Israels victory.

2. The power injoyning, Jehovah who gave it.

3. The subject of the injunction, Moses, who had bin the main instrument in begging the victory.

4. The injunction itself laid on him, what God would have Moses do upon so eminent a victory which he gave them, that a feeble company of pilgrims in the wilderness should quash such a formidable enemy armed with malice, cruelty, and power, and this is some duty answerable thereunto, of which we have to consider,

1. The form of it, how it is to be done, twofold,

1. To commit unto writing, write this memorial in a book or for a memorial as outs,

1. The act is to write.

2. The object is that memorable work which God now discovered about Amalek.

3. The instrument, in a book or rolle which was to keep things in for the future, and not a table which is plain, and open, and contains matters of present use.

4. The end, to be remembered, or for a memorial, to be a future memorandum.

2. To speak and publish it in the ears of Joshua which was for a more immediat use, wherein,

1. The party delivering or speaking as injoynd is Moses, who must give Gods message.

2. The subject to whom this is to be delivered, is Joshua, he that was next to succeed Moses in charge.

3. The way of conveying, is by putting it into his ears, causing him to hear and know what God had now revealed to Moses.

2. The matter thus to be written or spoken, that wiping I will wipe or blotting I will blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven, Which is a dreadful threatening for the future, against all the race of Amalek to take away all remembrance of the name, wherein occurs,

1. The power threatening, Jehovah who had now begun with them and given them this earnest.

2. The object of this threatening, the race of Amalek in all their generations.

3. The threatening itself, utterly to destroy in time roor and branch of them, that none should continue the name of them in the earth, wherein a total extirpation is threatned; which afterward was done partly in the times of the judges, and partly by Saul and David, and the last we find executed upon Haman in Esters time; he was an Agagite and seemeth to be of the royal family; some Rabbins look upon an Amalek in the times of the Messiah.

Quest. What book was this mentioned?

Ans. 1. Conceits are various, and many idle, 2. The truest conjecture is, that it is this very book of Moses where we find it written; and that upon the account of this command.

It learneth us.

D. 1. Jehovahs victories over his Churches enemies he giveth in charge to be recorded.

D. 2. Writing and tradition are both Gods wayes of recording his works for future ages.

D. 3. Gods book is the best record of his mighty works done for his Church.

D. 4. A memorial would God have kept by the records of Gods works to men.

D. 5. God hath irreconcilable displeasure against some enemies above the rest.

D. 6. Blotting out of the names of such enemies will God make, who would blot out the name of his Church. Ver. 14.

2. The obedience of Moses followeth, Ver. 15. 16. Wherein we have to consider these particulars,

1. The work which he doth in answer to Gods word, and that is twofold,

1. His erecting an Altar, And Moses Ver. 15. Rrrrr 3 built

2. The obedience of Moses followeth, Ver. 15. 16. Wherein we have to consider these particulars,

1. The work which he doth in answer to Gods word, and that is twofold,

1. His erecting an Altar, And Moses Ver. 15. Rrrrr 3 built build an Altar, Readings mostly agree. Herein,

1. The builder is Moses, Head Gods' beek.
2. The structure is an Altar, an instrument for worship by sacrifice.
3. The work is the erecting or building of it.

Ver. 15. 2. His naming it, And he called the name of it Jehovah nissi, My refuge, Sept. — And sacrificed before the Lord who had done wonderful things for him. Onk. — The Lord my banner, Ar. — Sam. as Hebr.

1. The impuler of the name is Moses from God.

2. The subject of imposition is the Altar made.

3. The name imposed, is The Lord our banner, of which that structure for present was a signal remembrance; & the worship thereby done, really expressing Jehovah to be their banner displayed in victory.

Quest. How doth this swear the command for writing and speaking?

Ans. 1. It excludes not a direct answer to that, for that was done besides. 2. This also answereth the main drift of the command which was to make a memorial of Gods wonderful works which was best done by his worship, Ver. 15.

Ver. 1. 3. The reason of all this rendered, And said because the hand upon the throne of Jah, Jehovah will have warre with Amalek from generation to generation; various are the readings, — For with a hidden hand will God warre, &c. Sept. — With an oath this was spoken from the face of the terrible one, &c. Onk. — The hand is upon the throne. Sam. — Now have I that may swear by the throne Ar. — Behold the hand upon the seat, Syr. — The hand of the throne of the Lord and the warre of the Lord shall be against Amalek, &c. Vulg. The reason here in general, is Gods ingagement against Amalek for ever, upon which account he is stiled Israels banner, but herein more expressly we have.

1. The form of ingagement as it is most generally conceived, which is by way of Oath, the hand upon the throne of Jah, an Hebraism, for, the hand of Jah upon the throne, which by all the Caldee paraphrasts is rendered as the form of Gods swearing.

2. Some look upon this hand to be Amalecks, now set against the throne of God which is his Church, and so it is made the reason of Gods warring with him.

3. Others take the hand of Jah for his power, and the ingaging of it in warre against Amalek; but the first and more general interpretation is most probably the best here, as ours read, because the Lord hath sworn.

2. The matter of Gods ingagement,

That Jehovah will have warre with Amalek from generation to generation, which we read continued to Esters time, B. Uz makes three gradations,

1. Of that age.
2. Of the Messiah.
3. Of the world to come.

The burden tends to the utter destruction of Amalek, enemy to Israel.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. Worship-memorials are the best monuments of Gods glorious victories in the Church.

D. 2. In all such worship-memorials Jehovah must be known to be his Churches banner, Ver. 15.

D. 3. Gods oath against his Churches enemies is a strong reason of naming him their banner.

D. 4. God hath sworn successive destruction to all of Amalek to the end.

D. 5. Gods hand upon the throne hath power enough to make good his oath against his enemies.

D. 6. Amaleks hand against Gods throne justly raiseth warre for ever from Jehovah against him. V. 16.

3. The third and last remarkable event upon Israel while they were in Rephidim, is Jethroes visiting of Moses and them, with the consequences as declared in the whole 18th Chapter.

CHAP. XVIII.

PPP. The 17th Section.

This Chapter containeth the history of Jethroes visiting Moses and Israel in the wilderness while yet at Rephidim and in that part of Horeb, wherein God gave Israels water. These general heads are considerable therein.

1. Jethroes access to Moses, V. 1. 6.
2. Jethroes entertainment with him, Ver. 7. 12.

3. Jethroes observation, and advice given and taken, Ver. 13. 23. 26.

4. Jethroes departure, Ver. 27.

In the first general head are these particulars to be noted,

1. The occasion of Jethroes visit. Ver. 1.
2. The

2. The preparation made for it, Ver.

2. 3. 4.

3. The motion and approach to Moses, Ver. 5.

4. The message sent by an harbinger to him, ver. 6.

Ver. 1. 1. The first special head, is in the first verse, And Jethro the priest of Midian the Father in law of Moses heard of all that God had done for Moses and for Israel his people, that Jehovah had brought forth Israel out of Egypt; Readings to the sense, are the same; some read When, others afterward, others and, coupling another event, again Jethro is stiled Prince of Midian, Onk. Im. In this head being the occasion of Jethroes visit, note,

1. The connection of it to the precedent events in Rephidim.

2. The subject taking occasion to visit set out,

1. By his name, Jethro.

2. By his office, Prince and priest of Midian.

3. By his relation, Father in law to Moses, whose daughter was married to him.

3. The occasion given and taken for this visit, which was the hearing of some strange events, wherein,

1. The act, which was reception of something by the ear, whether it were by common fame, or special message, is not expressed here, neither is it material.

2. The object received let forth two ways,

1. Generally. All that God had done hitherto,

1. More specially, for Moses who was his son in law.

2. More largely, to Israel Gods people. This was very much, since the time Moses departed from Jethro his Father in law in Midian. All the plagues on Egypt.

2. Singularly, one main event, that Jehovah had brought forth Israel out of Egypt, With all the prodigious means made use of thereunto. Of the man, his office and relation hath bin spoken already, Ex. 2. Now onely shall we note what is recorded of him here.

D. 1. God moved strangers and heads of nations sometimes to listen after his providences to his Church.

D. 2. Affinity simply was not interdicted unto the Church with strangers that yeeld to faith.

D. 3. The fame of Gods stupendous works to his Church may affect strangers to come and see them.

D. 4. Relations hearing of Gods goodness to their correlates, are justly moved to visit them.

D. 5. Friends to Israels good cannot but be moved with the tidings of Gods great works for them.

D. 6. The fame of Israels deliverance from Egypt may justly move men to inquire after God, Ver. 1.

2. The next thing related is Jethroes preparation for his visit, and that was in disposing his company, the wife and sons of Moses, good pledges to carry with him. Whereabout we read,

Ver. 2. 1. His taking of his daughter, the wife of Moses, And Jethro the Father in law of Moses took Zipporah the wife of Moses after the sending of her back, Readings agree in sense. — After he had left her, Syr. — Sent her back to him. Ar. Onk. No difficulty in the letter.

1. The subject taking, the same Jethro spoken of.

2. The object taken, Zipporah wife to Moses, and daughter to Jethro, the best pledge for Moses.

3. The time of taking, after he had sent her back; of which it is queried, when he sent her to Jethro? some think; but since they came over the red sea. Others think that she went back about the circumcision of her son by the way; which seems to be more probable, seeing so many troubles had met them in the way since their coming out of Egypt, that it can scarcely be conceived possible to send her and her sons there in safety. V. 2. That gloss, after Zipporah sent Moses gifts or tokens, is vain.

2. His taking of the Children, his two sons, whose names occasionally with the reason of them he recites,

1. And her two sons, of which the name of the one was Gershom, for he said; I have bin an alien in a strange land. Readings are the same. Ver. 3.

2. And the name of the other was Eliezer, for the God of my father was my help and delivered me from the sword of Pharaoh. Ver. 4.

4. — from the hand of Pharaoh, Sept. All els the same, — His word hath bin my help, Caldee. Here note,

1. The same undertaker, Jethro, &c.

2. The persons taken, two sons of Moses.

1. Gershom, the reason of whose name is rendered, Ex. 2. 22.

2. Eliezer, The reason of whose name we have here; he was born, it seemeth, upon Moses his departure from Midian, and for want of circumcising him, God was angry, Ex. 4. 24. His name is, My God is an help, and he sheweth wherein, even delivering him from being slain by Pharaoh long before. Ver. 4.

4. — from the hand of Pharaoh, Sept. All els the same, — His word hath bin my help, Caldee. Here note,

1. The same undertaker, Jethro, &c.

2. The persons taken, two sons of Moses.

1. Gershom, the reason of whose name is rendered, Ex. 2. 22.

2. Eliezer, The reason of whose name we have here; he was born, it seemeth, upon Moses his departure from Midian, and for want of circumcising him, God was angry, Ex. 4. 24. His name is, My God is an help, and he sheweth wherein, even delivering him from being slain by Pharaoh long before. Ver. 4.

4. — from the hand of Pharaoh, Sept. All els the same, — His word hath bin my help, Caldee. Here note,

1. The same undertaker, Jethro, &c.

2. The persons taken, two sons of Moses.

1. Gershom, the reason of whose name is rendered, Ex. 2. 22.

2. Eliezer, The reason of whose name we have here; he was born, it seemeth, upon Moses his departure from Midian, and for want of circumcising him, God was angry, Ex. 4. 24. His name is, My God is an help, and he sheweth wherein, even delivering him from being slain by Pharaoh long before. Ver. 4.

4. — from the hand of Pharaoh, Sept. All els the same, — His word hath bin my help, Caldee. Here note,

1. The same undertaker, Jethro, &c.

2. The persons taken, two sons of Moses.

1. Gershom, the reason of whose name is rendered, Ex. 2. 22.

2. Eliezer, The reason of whose name we have here; he was born, it seemeth, upon Moses his departure from Midian, and for want of circumcising him, God was angry, Ex. 4. 24. His name is, My God is an help, and he sheweth wherein, even delivering him from being slain by Pharaoh long before. Ver. 4.

4. — from the hand of Pharaoh, Sept. All els the same, — His word hath bin my help, Caldee. Here note,

1. The same undertaker, Jethro, &c.

pledges a father can bring in visiting.

D. 2. Prudence may send away sometimes the dearest pledges from hindering Gods work. Ver. 2.

D. 3. As Children are great mercies so it is good to make them memorials of Gods mercies to us.

D. 4. The mercies in pilgrimage, & deliverance from death must not be forgotten. Ver. 3. 4. By Gods Moser.

Ver. 5.

3. The motion and approach of Jethro to Moses followeth, And Iethro the father in law of Moses came, and his sons and his wife unto Moses in the wilderness, where he was encamping at the mountain of God. Readings, to the sense are the same. — The mountain upon which the glory of their God was revealed, Onk. — Where he stayed at the mount of God, Syr. Ar.

1. The subject moving, Jethro with the sons and wife of Moses, they are jointly here in this.

2. The motion, they came or were coming upon their way as they intended, not that they had arrived.

3. The term whereunto, expressed, 1. More large, into the wilderness.

2. More strictly, into the mount of God, where Moses and Israel incamped: the letter is plain; hither were they bent in their motion.

Quest. What mount of God was this? Was it Sinai?

Answer. 1. Surely no, for here they were in their second month after their coming out of Egypt, but to Sinai they came not until the third month, Ex. 19. 7. 2. This mountain being called Horeb, Ch. 17. 6. breeds the difficulty, compared with Deut. 5. 2, where it is said the law was given which was at Sinai. 3. The homonymie of the word Horeb solveth the doubt, for it is conceived to be the name of all that tract unto Sinai; so that now they were but entered into this compass of ground which contained many mountaines. 4. The stile of Gods mountain was variously attributed, where-ever God appeared upon any such eminent place, so Jerusalem afterward was called, Gods holy mountain. 5. It is probably the same place where God met with Moses at first, when he was feeding Jethros sheep. Ex. 3. 1. Quest. When came Jethro hither to visit Moses?

Answer. 1. Doubtless at that time while Moses and Israel encamped there, which was in the second month.

2. He departed to his own land before they went on to Sinai, Ver. 27. 3. Therefore it could not be that this visit was after the giving of the law, or in the second year as some conjecture.

We may note.

D. 1. Wildernes-conditions fright not the true relations of the Church from coming unto them.

D. 2. In the wilderness God may have his mount, his strong place for his Church.

D. 3. Gods Israel hath his camp safely by his mount, though in a wilderness. Ver. 5.

4. The message of Jethro sent beforehand to Moses; so the burden of the words must byasse it, however it seems to some that this verse is transposed, and should come after the next, but there is no such cause here of transposition; the history laying things naturally as they were acted, And he said to Moses, I thy father in law Iethro am coming to thee, and thy wife and her two sons with her, Readings mostly to the same purpose, — And he sent one who should tell Moses, I &c. Ar. — And it was told Moses behold thy father in law, &c. with him. Syr. and Sept.

Herein note,

1. The informer Jethro, by some messenger as must be supposed, who sent as the courier unto Christ, some fit persons to deliver his desire.

2. The information itself which was his approach, with his wife and children toward him. And this was but reasonable, for doubtless after this conflict with Amalek, they kept guards and centinels to watch, for security of the camp, thorough which he could not passe, without acquainting Moses with the same.

Observe we.

D. 1. Natural relations though higher, yet must give due respect to inferiour when exalted by God in power.

D. 2. Providence orders sometimes the enjoyment of relations to his servants, after sad separations.

D. 3. It is sweet meeting of Church-relations as others after vanquishing of enemies. Ver. 6.

2. The next general of this Chapter is the entertainment which Moses gave to his his father in law Jethro, expressed; Ver. 7. 12. In which passage occur these particulars.

1. Moses his meeting and salutation, Ver. 7.

2. Moses his narration to him of all providences, Ver. 8.

3. Jethros resentment of all this, V. 9. 12.

Ver. 7.

1. As to their meeting and salutation we have it thus, And Moses went out to meet his father in law, and he bowed himself down, and kissed him, and they asked each other of (their) peace, and they came into the tent, They saluted one another, and he led them into the tent, Sept. — They saluted each other peaceably. Onk. Sam. — With peaceable words. Vulg. — Each wished peace to his neighbour, &c. Syr. — And both inquired of the safety of his friend. Ar. sense is most the same. These particulars are obvious.

1. The action of Moses alone is threefold,

1. His egress to meet Jethro, and Moses went out to meet his father in law.

1. The person moving, Moses, King in Jeshurun.

2. The motion, he went out from his place or tent, one faith from under the cloud of glory. B. Uz.

3. The end of his motion, to meet his father in law, in answer to his message having knowledge of his approach.

2. His humble and dutiful obeisance at meeting, he bowed himself down, or did obeisance.

3. His tender expression of love, he kissed him. All suitable to relations.

2. Their mutual action twofold,

1. They asked each other of peace, which may be understood either of inquiry or wishing peace, good and welfare one to another, which was saluting with peaceable words, as some render.

2. They both went together into the tent. One read's he made him a proselyte and they came into the tent of the house of drink. Ben. Uz. but no such thing is in the text.

Learn hence.

D. 1. It is not unbecoming the highest places or persons in Kingdom or Church of Christ to give due respect to relations.

D. 2. Grace doth not unteach men manners, and civil carriage respectively unto men.

D. 3. Natural affection and expressions of it to friends, becometh Gods servants.

D. 4. It is a natural duty for relations to inquire of and wish each others peace.

D. 5. Conduct to a tent for rest is suitable for travellers that visit their relations. Ver. 7.

2. After this follows the narration of Moses to him while he was reported in the tent, And Moses declared to his father in law; all that Jehovah had done unto Pharaoh, and to the Egyptians for Israels sake, all the travel that had found them in the way and (how) Jehovah had delivered them. Readings are to the same sense. Some for travel read tribulation, labour, mis-hap, &c. some for (finding) that hapned or beset them or all the labour which they laboured, &c. Syr. Herein note,

1. The reporter is Moses, full of Gods discoveries, such as he could hold no longer in, as wanting vent.

2. The subject to whom, is Jethro his father in law. One whose heart, it seems, was affected with Gods works.

3. The matter reported is the history of all that God had done, since Moses his coming into Egypt.

1. All the judgments executed upon Pharaoh unto death.

2. All the plagues upon the Egyptians because of their oppression of Israel.

3. All the streights which met with them by the way at the red sea, Marah, and Rephidim, even to Amaleks destruction.

4. All the deliverance which God gave them from these continually, where-in he casteth all upon Jehovah.

Quest. Why did Moses tell all this to Jethro?

Answer. 1. It may be to acquaint him more fully with the true God, wonderful in being and working. 2. To affect his heart more toward Israel the Church of God, that he might join with them. 3. To glorify God upon the account of all the works declared to him.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods servants filled with sense of mercies, cannot but declare them unto others.

D. 2. The friends of Israel are fittest subjects to hear Gods works unto it.

D. 3. Terrible works God doth among his enemies for Israels sake.

D. 4. Great travels and distresses S s s s s may may befall Gods Church in the way of redemption.

D. 5. Jehovah is sure to deliver his Israel out of all their troubles.

D. 6. Such works of God are to be reported to instruct others and glorify God, Ver. 8.

3. Jethroes resentment of all this report followeth, and that is expressed in these acts of his.

Ver. 9. 1. In his joy, thus described, And Iethro rejoiced for all that goodness, which Jehovah had done to Israel, whom he had delivered out of the hand of the Egyptians, Readings are to the same sense, only some words different, Iether was astonished, &c. and out of the hand of Pharaoh, Sept. — About their safety, &c. Ar. — And who delivered them for (whom he delivered) Sam. It may be read either way by the relative. Here observe.

1. Jethroes affection, he was full of joy and gladness.

2. The object of it, God and his goodness upon Israel.

3. The instance of that goodness. Their deliverance from the hand and power of the Egyptians, Ver. 9.

Ver. 10. 2. In his thanksgiving, And Iethro said blessed be Jehovah, who hath delivered you out of the hand of the Egyptians, and out of the hand of Pharaoh; who hath delivered the people from under the hand of the Egyptians, Readings are to the same sense, — And delivered both you, Ar. — This people, Syr. Vulg.

1. The action of Iethro is blessing, and praise to Jehovah.

2. The ground of it, a double deliverance.

1. Special of Moses and his relations.

2. General of Israel, ver. 10.

Ver. 11. 3. In his acknowledgment of God, Now I know that Jehovah is great above all Gods, for in the thing wherein they dealt proudly he was above them. The latter clause is variously rendered. — For this that they tell upon them, Sept. — That they dealt proudly against them. Vulg. — Because in the same thing wherein the Egyptians thought to judge, viz. they were judged. Onk. — They dealt proudly against them. Sam. — Seeing he punished them in the same thing wherein they were cruel against them. Syr. Our translators join with the truest reading. Here note.

1. An improvement of Jethroes knowledge of God, Now I know that Jehovah is greater than all Gods, now, upon this report of all by Moses.

2. The improvement of knowledge, now I know more fully, and experimentally.

3. The object, the greatness of Jehovah above all Gods, either Idols, or earthly powers, but false Gods are intended here, such as Egypt and the nations did worship.

2. The ground or medium perfecting this knowledge which was Gods work done upon the enemies for Israels sake at this time. The expression is either elliptical, as Jethroes ecstasy might make it, or else it is truly read, that wherein the Egyptians dealt proudly against Israel, God was above them, to curb their pride, and save his people. This demonstrates the true God, ver. 11.

Quest. Had he no knowledge of Jehovah before?

Ans. Yes, but now more particular & instructive as he acknowledged.

4. In his worship or sacrifice, And Iethro Moses father in law took a burnt offering and sacrifices for God, and Aaron came & all the elders of Israel to eat bread with the father in law of Moses before God. Readings to the same sense. Some read, He offered, &c. But not to the letter. It was doubtless an holy feast kept by them unto God.

1. The act of worship directed unto, and terminated in God.

1. The subject worshipping, Iethro father in law to Moses.

2. The act, he took, and set apart burnt offerings and sacrifices for the true God, he prepared them doubtless according to law from Moses, but he acted not as a priest to offer them. — But ordered it to be offered according to Gods will.

2. The feast attending, in partaking of these sacrifices, whereabouts are noted.

1. The guests or associates, Aaron and the elders of Israel, Ready to congratulate his coming.

2. Their approach, they came to him where Moses had appointed them to meet.

3. Their end, it was to eat bread with him, to join in sacrificing and feasting with him before God.

Quest. What were the sacrifices here spoken of?

Answer. Doubtless thank offerings, and peace offerings, which were known before the written law of these they who worshipped did eat, Lev. 7.

Ver. 12. Quest. Who did offer these sacrifices?

Answer. 1. Not Jethro, being not called thereunto. 2. The same hand that God appointed to minister before the Priesthood was set, which Moses ordered; it might be by Moses or Aaron at his appointment.

Quest. What was their eating bread?

Answer.

Answer. 1. Not only eating Manna, though that they might. 2. It was the usual phrase of feasting. 3. It was a sacred festival done before God & with reference to joyce in him.

And learneth us.

D. 1. The Churches friends rejoice in all the good done for it, and deliverance of it.

D. 2. As Jehovah is the cause of good & deliverance to his Church, so he is the object of their joy, V. 9.

D. 3. Joyfull hearts for the Churches good are thankful hearts to God for the same.

D. 4. Deliverance of special relations but especially of the Church from powers of enemies is just matter of thanksgiving Ver. 10.

D. 5. Experience of the mighty works of God, perfects the knowledge of himself.

D. 6. The great works of God, sets him above all that are so called.

D. 7. The pride of enemies exalts the power of God above them, Ver. 11.

D. 8. Knowledge of God is best expressed in sacrificing and worship of him.

D. 9. True profelyts worship according to the will of God revealed.

D. 10. Holy feasting is consistent with Gods holy worship.

D. 11. Gods glory must terminate all sacrificing, and eating among his people.

D. 12. Eminent members of the Church may not disdain communion with true profelyts, Ver. 12.

3. The next general head of this Chapter is Jethroes counsel and advice about framing and modelling of the government of Israel to their better advantage. In the history whereof we have to note,

1. The occasion of this offered, V. 13.

2. Jethroes questioning with Moses thereabout, Ver. 14.

3. Moses his reply to his father in law, Ver. 15, 16.

4. Jethroes return upon Moses,

1. By way of a tender check, Ver. 17, 18.

2. By way of advice as to a new model, Ver. 19, 23.

5. Moses his concession to this advice, Ver. 24, 25, 26.

1. As to the occasion of all this, it was the painfull administration of justice which Moses did alone, and it is thus described, And it was about the morrow, and Moses sat to judge the people, and the people stood by Moses from the morning to the evening, Readings agree; and the letter is plain: Herein note,

1. The term connecting this to the former passage, and it was this declares the succeeding actions. One day is for worshipping and feasting, but that is not all the business of Moses, the next day he is at work, and executing judgment.

2. The matter connected which is Moses his employment: about which we have to note,

1. The person, Moses, the judge of Israel.

2. The action, He sat to judge the people, where,

1. The act implieth hearing and determining of all cases brought to him.

2. The object, such of the people of Israel that had matters to be judged.

3. The time, it was the morrow after his sacrificing and rejoicing with Jethro.

2. The peoples attendance upon judgment, and here,

1. Their posture, they stood by Moses where he sat to give judgment, submitting to him.

2. Their patience, it was from the morning to the evening, so long stood they to receive judgment, or just administrations between a man and his neighbour.

Observe we.

D. 1. Gods providence joyns work to sacrifice, and his servants do unite them.

D. 2. The morrow brings its own work from God unto his servants, not every day the same.

D. 3. Gods substitutes are careful as to worship him, so to do judgement to Gods people.

D. 4. Good rulers sit close to deal judgement to their people.

D. 5. Providence puts hard work upon Gods ministers sometimes, from morning to evening.

D. 6. It is just to be unwearied in giving sssss 2.

ving and receiving judgement, when God calleth, Ver. 13.

2. Next to this occasion given, Iethro prepareth to his further advice by expostulating with him about his present course in judging Israel, as it is Ver. 14. And the father in Law of Moses saw all that he was doing to the people, and said what is this thing which thou art doing to the people? Why art thou sitting thy self alone, and all the people standing by thee from morning to evening? Readings all agree in the sense, Herein note, 1. Iethroes observation of what Moses did,

1. His relation describeth him, The father in law of Moses.
2. His observation, he saw and took notice of what Moses did in executing judgment.

2. His question twofold.

1. What is this thing which thou doest to the people? It is not a question of doubting, for he knew well that he judged the people, but an interrogation rather, admiring what he did, and how he was able to pass thorough it, and in some kind checking his work as afterward he speaks more plainly, Ver. 17.
2. Why sittest thou alone and the people stand by thee all the day? It is an expostulation of the same nature with the former; something of wonder and something of dislike; a strange thing, and that which tended not to the comfortable being either of himself or Israel.

Quest. Upon what account doth Iethro so expostulate?

Answer. 1. His relation to Moses might stirre him, seeking his good.
2. His good will to Israel might move him. 3. Something from the light of nature might guide him in it.
4. Some motion might be from God.

Mark here.

D. 1. Observant fathers or sages may see inconveniences in acting judgment, which judges do not perceive.

D. 2. Nature and affection may well move to question works of superiors in order to good.

D. 3. God may and doth use the light of nature for discovering and rectifying judgment, or rule in his Church.

D. 4. The best rulers may overburden themselves and people in giving judgment.

D. 5. It is rational and profitable to question and be questioned upon such over-actings in rule. Ver. 14.

3. The reply of Moses to this question followeth, Ver. 15-16. Thus, And Moses said to his father in law, because the people come to me to enquire of God or seek God, Readings to the same sense, onely one reads — To seek the sentence of God, Vulg. — judgment of God, Sept. — Doctrine from God, Onk. — The word of God, Syr. — To aske the matter or business of God, Ar. Ver. 15.

When they have a matter (each) cometh to me, and I judge between a man and his neighbour, and I make known the statutes of God and his lawes; Readings are all to the same sense. — If any controversy, judgment or strife happen, some read, ver. 16. Herein these terms occur,

1. The replier Moses, judge of Israel, son in law to Iethro; he yeelds to the satisfying his question.

2. The account which he giveth which standeth in a threefold reason,

1. Because the people come to seek God. Wherein are,

1. The client, the people according to their respective cases, these came to him.
2. The oracle, or means to which they come, it was Moses who was made the mouth of God.

3. The end of their address, they came to seek God, or to inquire of God.

1. In case of conscience, to be satisfied.

2. In case of complaint, to be righted, according to the will of God, ver. 15.

2. Because upon all matters of difference, They come unto me, and I judge between a man and his fellow. Herein,

1. The duty of the people is supposed, that they were to come to him for judgment, and so they did.

2. The duty of Moses to them, and I judge between a man & his neighbour, and that by Gods order, not mine own choice; therefore I sit alone, and judge all the day.

3. Because I am to make them know the statutes of God and his lawes; this is a great work incumbent on me, God having made me his mouth to this people, and must make them to understand all his revealed will, his statutes and his lawes to order them, in all their duties to God and man.

Quest. Why, or how come the people to Moses to inquire?

Answer. 1. Yet the law was not written.
2. Yet the Priesthood ordained for teaching was not settled. 3. Moses onely himself was as yet authorized to teach and judge them, hereupon they come.

We

We observe.

D. 1. The greatest and best rulers disdain not to give an account of their judgment to reasonable inquisitors.

D. 2. The access of souls unto rulers to inquire of God, is a just ground for them to attend the work.

D. 3. The appeal of souls to mans barre in matters, is and should be inquiring after God, Ver. 15.

D. 4. Duties of people and rulers are correlative, they come with matters, and these must judge.

D. 5. Gods lawes and statutes are the best rule to order judgment between men.

D. 6. It is duty to rulers to make people know the statutes and lawes of God.

4. Iethroes return upon Moses now followeth.

1. By way of tender reproof, Ver. 17-18. Thus, And the father in law of Moses said unto him, the thing is not good which thou doest. Sam. same, — Thou doest not rightly this thing. Onk.

A good thing, Vulg. — Thou doest not well. Syr. It is no congruous business which thou doest. Ar. ver. 17.

2. Fading thou wilt fade away both thou and this people that is with thee, for the thing is too heavy for thee, thou art not able to do it thy self alone, — With corruption insufferable, Sept. — With foolish labour shalt thou be consumed. Vulg. — With weariness thou shalt be wearied. Onk. Ar. — Thou wilt be disgraced. Syr. All tending to the same sense. Wherein these special things occur,

1. The person returning filled by his relation still, the father in law of Moses, rationally he can return him no hurt.

2. The rejoinder made, consisting in these heads,

1. In a proposition of the evil of this course, set out,

1. Simply, the thing which thou doest is not good, which is negative.
2. The subject, was his alliduous sitting in judgment alone.

2. The attribute denied is goodness, not moral, but natural, civil. ver. 17.

3. Interpretatively and positively, fading thou wilt fade away both thou and this people, that is with thee; this was the evil attributed in the denial of the work of Moses to be good.

2. In the reasonable account of it, For this thing, &c. The reason is the disproportion between the burden of the work and the strength of the man.

1. This thing is too heavy for thee, it requires many more shoulders than yours.

2. Thou art not able to do it alone, no single man is sufficient for so many mens works.

Learn we.

D. 1. God may use men of meaner calling and endowments to help for prudentials, for government in his Church.

D. 2. The most morally good government may not be good in natural or civil respects, Ver. 17.

D. 3. Imprudential over-acting in doing judgment may consume rulers and people.

D. 4. Good and righteous work may be too heavy for the best and strongest shoulders.

D. 5. Solitariness in dealing judgment may carry great weakness in it.

D. 6. It is good prudence to undertake burdens proportionable for strength and no more, Ver. 18.

2. Jethroes return is by way of advice to Moses for preventing the evil which he feared would otherwise befall both him, and Israel, which is given, Ver. 19-23. Wherein we have to note,

1. His prescription to Moses for his work, Ver. 19-20.

2. His advice for under-officers, Ver. 12, 22.

3. His encouragement unto all, v. 23.

1. In his prescription to Moses we may observe,

1. His preface in these words, Now hearken to my voice, I will counsel thee, and God shall be with thee, Readings agree to the same sense. — The word of God shall be for thy help, Onk. Herein occur,

1. His call for audience, hearken unto me.

2. His promise of help, I will give thee counsel, &c. Advise you for the best.

3. A prediction of successe, God shall be with you.

Quest. How could Jethro undertake so much?

SSSSS 3

Answer.

Ans. 1. Jethro was come into acquaintance with God, although before a stranger. 2. God doth not disdain his presence to the weakest, but by them may give advice unto the stranger. 3. Gods law of nature might direct him, as well as his Spirit guide him in the following advice. 2. The counsel itself followeth as to Moses, which standeth in two particulars,

Ver. 19.

1. In ordering him, in this new model, his place and government, Be thou for the people to Godward. — Be thou teaching doctrine for the people from the face of God, Onk. — The teacher of the people from God, Syr. — On Gods part for the people, Ar. Here he sets,

1. God supream in the government of Israel.
2. Moses next to God, to receive, and give law from him.
3. Israel universally subjected to him under God.

Ver. 19.

2. In ordering the work of his place which stands,
1. In mediating between God and them, And thou shalt bring the matter unto God. — Their words or matters, &c. 70. — Into the sight of the Lord, Onk. Sam. Syr. and Vulg. to the same sense Herein note,

1. His work being mediation, stands in bringing the cases of Israel unto God.

2. In returning Gods answer unto them, which must be supposed, for satisfying them. This is the general work of mediation, Ver. 19.

Ver. 20.

2. In law giving, And thou shalt admonish them of the statutes and lawes. — Testify to them the ordinances of God, and his law, Sept. — With precepts, &c. Thou shalt exhort, Ar. — And shew them ceremonies and rites of washing, Vulg. The whole work is declared in two things.

1. The object, Gods statutes and lawes, which must rule.
2. The act which is admonishing, teaching, opening, and giving the lawes to the people from God.

Ver. 20.

3. In propheticall teaching, And thou shalt make known unto them the way wherein they shall walk, and the work which they shall do. Readings are to the same sense, Deut. 1. 18. In this work also are considerable,

1. The object of this propheticall work, which is wayes to be walked in, and work to be done; that is the whole business of their conversations both toward God and man.

2. The propheticall work, which consists in teaching or making known these things to Israel, Gods people; in all this Jethro doth assert, and not deny the dignity and sovereignty which God gave to Moses.

Learn hence.

D. 3. Where God sends convulsions of failings he enjoyneth counsels to amendment. So here.

D. 2. Gods counsellors to any may reasonably desire audience.

D. 3. Gods presence may be boldly asserted to be with his counsel.

D. 4. God hath appointed a mediator next himself for his Church, not to be removed.

D. 5. The mediators work is to bring all the affaires of his poor people unto God, Ver. 19.

D. 6. It is proper to the mediator to give lawes and statutes from him to his Israel.

D. 7. It is the mediators work prophetically to teach the wayes and works proper for the Church.

D. 8. Moses was the mediator typical, but Christ Jesus true and real even of the Jewish Church. Ver. 20.

2. Jethroes advice for under-officers followeth, Ver. 21. 22. Wherein we have to note,

1. Their qualifications pointed out.
2. Their places of order and distinction, Ver. 21.

3. Their work and employment stated, Ver. 22.

1. He points out the men and their condition to be employed, And thou shalt provide out of all the people, men of strength fearing God, men of truth, hating covetousnes,

Readings are to the same scope, Able men worshipping God, righteous men, hating pride, — Sept. —

Hating to take money, Onk. — Hating a gift and deceit, Syr. In this peece of advice note,

1. The oversight committed to Moses Thou shalt see, consider or provide, this care is his, who was supream in Israel; to look out others.

2. The bounds of his providence for choise, the whole people of Israel to appoint some out of them.

3. The qualifications of those men, which are here 4.

1. Men of strength, ability, courage, the the word notwithstanding virtue or power both of body and mind.

2. Men fearing God, or worshipping God, subject to him, that they might rule others.

3. Men of truth, faithful men, such as may speak and do, and judge according to the truth of God.

4. Men hating covetousnes, that is, taking money and gifts, which usually pervert judgment. Three other are expressed in the repetition of this, Deut. 1. 13.

1. Wise men, skilled in matters of God and his judgment.

2. Understanding men, practically knowing the wayes of God.

3. Men of known, or of eminent repute, not of obscure reputation.

2. He points out their order and degrees in 4 ranks,

Ver. 21.

1. And thou shalt set over them Rulers of thousands, some. — Tribunes; these were highest next to Moses.

2. Rulers of hundreds, Readings most agree. — Centurions. — One of two hundreds, Ar. these next.

3. Rulers of fifties, Readings are the same, these are in the third degree.

4. Rulers of tens, Readings concur, this is the 4th & last order; thus several sorts are appointed to several charges to bear the worke, Ver. 21.

3. He points out the work or several places of rule or command wherein also we have to note,

Ver. 22.

1. The description of their work in governing, thus expressed, And they shall judge the people in every season, and it shall be every great matter they shall bring to thee, and every small matter themselves shall judge, Readings agree, herein.

1. A general direction for their work, they shall judge the people in every season, where observe,

1. The judges, rulers of all ranks named.

2. The object of judgment, the people, that is, those thousands under their rulers, and hundreds under their centurion, &c.

3. The act, they shall judge, that is, hear and determine causes betweene thei in their bounds.

4. The time of doing this, which was at every season, except then prohibited, and set apart for Gods special service.

2. A special distinction of their work, which is twofold,

1. Every great matter they shall bring to thee, that is, in causes which they could not decide, as about the blasphemy, &c. which required their immediate answer from God.

2. Every small matter themselves shall judge, that is, all such cases they were to hear and determine, which did fall under their power, and they were able to dispatch.

Ver. 22.

2. The reason of this distribution, And lighten thou from thy self, and they shall beare with thee, or let them; &c. Sam. Ar. Syr. to the same. — They shall lighten from thee and help together with thee, Sept.

— Shall lighten thy burden from thee and beare it with thee, Onk. — Let it be lighter for thee, the burden being divided among others, Vulg. All to the same sense. The strength of the reason is evident in two things,

1. In easing Moses, that he may discharge his work more cheerfully among them.

2. In employing others, who might beare every one his share in the burden with him, and so governours and people might be eased. Ver. 22.

3. Jethroes encouragement unto his advice followeth, If thou shalt do this thing, and God command thee, both thou shalt be able to stand, and also all this people shall come to their place in peace. Onk. Sam. the same, God will strengthen thee, &c.

Ver. 23.

Thou shalt fulfil the command of God, and shalt be able to beare his precepts, Vulg. — Thou mayest persevere and all this people shall go to their place in health, Ar. — Every one shall return to his own house in peace, Syr. This differs from all. Here notes,

1. Something supposed, which is twofold,

1. If thou shalt do this thing, that is, as it was advised; this concerned Moses.

2. If God command thee. This Iethro supposed or els he dares not preface his counsel. Others read, — God will strengthen. Not to the letter.

2. Something promised for encouragement. Twofold,

1. Concerning Moses, Thou shalt be able to stand and persevere, to subject & endure comfortably in thy work.

2. Concerning Israel, This people also shall come to their place in peace, which is a prediction of a more easy passage hereby to Canaan; that is, such administrations so farre would help them; if used; yet this hinders not but that Israel might be otherwise cut short of Canaan by their sins as it fell out with this generation. Some understand by place, each mans sent whether they returned after judgment; but it being spoken of the whole people, the general place of their rest is most properly understood here.

Quest. Was Moses advised to provide these himself?

Ans. 1. He was as the supream first to look to it. 2. He gave the charge to others to find them. 3. Upon their presentment he was to constitute them, and so we find it acted. Deut. 1. 13. 15.

Quest. Were these sorts of rulers independent?

Ans. No, but subordinat. 2. The appeal appeal therefore lay from him over ten to the centurions, &c.

Quest. What mean these thousands? &c.

Ans. 1. Not so many persons as in military affairs. Tribunes, centurions, &c. 2. But so many families, it being a civil government, and so disposed, as all the people of Israel might be ordered and governed in their several causes.

Quest. How could Jethro promise this issue?

Ans. 1. It was a rational course to bring peace. 2. It was with submission unto Gods command, whereunto his promise was annexed, ver. 23.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. Supreme Governours had need of subordinat to carry on the burden of government.

D. 2. Men intrusted with government should be eminently qualified with wisdom, knowledge, courage, &c. Each indowment may give a special observation.

D. 3. Variety of bounds for power are requisite to the various capacities of rulers. Ver. 21.

D. 4. Men so designed to rule ought all times reasonably to attend on judgment.

D. 5. Matters of greatest moment have a just way of appeal from lesser to superior judges.

D. 6. Smaller matters are reasonably to be concluded by lesser hands.

D. 7. Such distribution of work in government maketh the burden more easy. Ver. 22.

D. 8. Supreme rulers managing their affairs by others according to Gods command, walk safely.

D. 9. Prosperity to Prince and people may be well expected by keeping Gods commands, Ver. 23.

3. The last thing in the third general head is the yielding of Moses to Jethroes advice, Ver. 24, 25, 26. Wherein we have to note these acts.

Ver. 24. 1. Of Moses, Ver. 24, 25. And Moses hearkened to the voice of his Father in law, and did all that he had said. Readings agree, Ver. 24.

Ver. 25. And Moses chose with of ability out of all Israel, and gave them heads over the people, rulers of thousands, &c. Readings agree, here are 4. acts considerable.

1. The hearkening of Moses to his Father in law.

2. The obedience given to his advice.

3. The election of the men with their qualifications, which he did by the help of the heads of the tribes, and people who presented them.

4. The constitution or setting them in their several charges, 600 Tribunes, 6000 Centurions, 12000 Captains of fifty, 60000 Decurions, Ben. Uz.

2. Of these inferior now chosen officers, Ver. 26. And they judged the people in every season, the hard matter they brought to Moses, and every small matter they judged themselves, Readings to the same sense. Every howse, Sept. Wherein is an exact answer to Jethroes advice.

1. Generally they took each their province, and within their bounds they judged in all seasons.

2. Specially they carried hard causes to Moses to have answers from God.

3. Singularly they finished their own work, and judged smaller matters themselves, thus was the government of Israel upon this occasion changed and stated. Other alterations we shall read of upon other occasions also.

Note we.

D. 1. Audience and obedience are to be given to relations in reasonable advice or counsel. Ver. 24.

D. 2. Constitution of able men for subordinat rulers is a work befitting the supreme, Ver. 25.

D. 3. It is commendable for inferior rulers to be exact in discharging duties in judgment, Ver. 26.

4. The last head noted in the Chapter is Jethroes departure to his own place, And Moses sent away his Father in law, and he went for himself to his own land. Readings agree. To make proselyts all the sons of his land, Ben. Uz. In the text we have but two things exprest.

1. The dismissal of him by Moses, which doubtles was with much respect as his first entertainment, such as did befit his person and worth.

2. The departure of Jethro, he went his way now freely and comfortably to his own place, and up doubt with a desire to spread the fame of the true God of Israel. That this Jethro was not that Hobab, nor his visit there the same with this here, Numb. 10:29, seemeth most probable, for for Jethro departed, but Hobab was intreated to stay. How long also Jethro staid with Moses is not exprest, but probably so long until he saw his counsel put in execution, which could not be suddenly, some conceive about two months, but peremptorily it cannot be determined.

We conclude this.

D. 1. Due dismissal unto honorable relations is as fit as entertainment.

D. 2. Wise and sage counsellors after their work is done to others, betake themselves to their own charge. Ver. 27.

Thus farre is the history of the state of the Church at Rephidim, their 9th stage from Egypt, as here related, but their 11th as it is recorded, Numb. 33. 14. And here is finished the first general head of this book, observed in the entrance, which was the history of Gods great acts in bringing Israel out of Egypt and carrying them thus farre. The next general head containeth the history of Gods law-giving to his Church, which was done at the 10th stage as here reported, but the 12th as Numb. 33. 15. To this we shall proceed in the order laid before us.

CHAP. XIX.

Here begins the third general head of this book with Israels encamping at their 10th stage, which is the history of Gods law-giving to his Church. And this continueth to the end of this book, and throughout Leviticus, and unto Chap. 10th Ver. 1th of Numb. So that at this stage Israel staid near 11 months before the cloud removed to lead them forward. So that it is a large work to give the analysis of the whole history concerning this stage. I shall walk in the plainest way, and as the history naturally divides itself, so shall I proceed in treating of it.

In general this history is divided into two heads,

1. Preparation for Gods law-giving, Ch. 19.

2. The law giving itself which is from Chap. 20th to the end of this book, and in the whole book of Leviticus, & to the 10th Chap of Numb. Which is such a bulk as is not easily to be distributed here; it will be easier to branch heads as we proceed.

In this Chapter which contains a preparatory to Gods law-giving to Israel, we may observe,

1. The history of time and place when and where this was to be done, Ver. 1. 2.

2. The history of the preparation is twofold,

1. Of the people to receive the law, and that.

1. By teaching them Gods mind to them, Ver. 3. 9.

2. By sanctifying and regulating them, Ver. 10. 15.

1. Of God himself, as to his address in giving the law and manner of appearance, with further charge to Moses, Ver. 16. 25.

1. As to the time and place we have it thus related, In the third month of or after the going forth of the sons of Israel from the land of Egypt in the same day came they into the desert of Sinai, v. 1. For they were removed from Rephidim, and were come into the desert of Sinai, and they encamped in the desert, and there Israel encamped before the mount, Readings are to the same sense. Only some read encamped twice as in the Hebr. Others read the latter, Israel fixed their tents, Vulg. Israel staid there before the mount. Syr. Herein Israels access to their 12th stage is recorded. Wherein we have to note these particulars,

1. The time pointed out and that two wayes,

1. More generally, in the third month or new moon after Israels going forth from the land of Egypt, which was the first year according to computation, Ex. 12.

2. More specially, in the same day, not the third day of the third month as some; but in the first day of that new moon, 45 dayes after their coming out of Egypt.

2. The place of this 12th stage. They came to the wilderness of Sinai.

3. A further declaration of their removal, For they were departed from Rephidim, and were come into the wilderness of Sinai, that is, without interruption, or stopping at any other place, they journeyed from Rephidim to Sinai.

4. Their posture there described two wayes,

1. More largely, they encamped in the desert, This speaks of the place more largely.

2. More strictly, there Israel encamped before the mount; which was mount Sinai; as well as the whole desert filed by that name. Therefore this double expression of encamping carrieth no incongruity upon this account, that they not onely pitched in the wilderness, but at the very mount Sinai, the mount of God that might be touched.

Which instructs us.

D. 1. Months and dayes from Egyptian bondage are fit to be recorded.

Tette D. 2.

D. 2. Dayes are set by God for the Churches gradual progress to their rest; it fails not, Ver. 1.

D. 3. From Rephidim to Sinai, or from streits and trials to some rest and doctrine God removes his Church.

D. 4. The Churches camp and Gods mount are sweetly joined together, Ver. 2.

2. The preparation of the people now follows,

1. By teaching them to know Gods special respect to them, that they might be more willing to heare the Covenant now to be revealed, Ver. 3. 9. Herein we have a double advertisement of God to Moses to be communicated to Israel.

1. Of gracious respect unto them, Ver. 3. 8.

2. Of his appearance purposed toward them, Ver. 9.

In the former we have these particulars to note,

1. Gods information to Moses, Ver. 3. 4. 5. 6.

2. Moses his report of it to the people, Ver. 7.

3. Israels return to Moses, with his to God, ver. 8.

1. As to Gods information to Moses, therein note,

1. The access of Moses unto God, And Moses went up to God, Readings to the same sense. — To the mount of God, Sept. — To the Angel of God.

Ar.

1. The ascendent is Moses, the mediator at this time.

2. The term of ascent, God himself, — The word of the Lord. Cald. The Angel of the Lord, as some. Christ.

3. The ascent itself, he went up. The second day. Ben. Uz.

Quest. Upon what account went Moses up to God?

Ans. 1. Not rashly; nor of himself, he knew better Gods mind, 2. It was doubtles upon Gods call, without which Moses may be presumed not to attempt it, which is more evidently exprest in what followeth, which giveth the reason of his ascent.

2. The reason of this ascent, And for Jehovah called to him out of the mount, saying, thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, and declare to the sons of Israel, Readings to the same sense. In these words we have the reason of the ascent of Moses, which was Gods call, and commission to him,

1. The term of connection which ours and others read as copulative, but some as rational. For. Vatab.

2. The power engaging him to ascend, Jehovah.

3. The engagement itself to ascend, set out,

1. By calling him out of the mount, the cloud now resting there.

2. By commissioning him to hear, and declare his will unto the people in two expressions.

1. Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob, or family, as Syr. — Thus God hath said to the stock of Jacob, as Ar.

2. And thou shalt declare to the sons of Israel, which noteth a further discovery and pressing of this message on them which followeth.

Quest. Why is it doubled, first to the house, secondly to the sons?

Ans. 1. The subject to whom is doubled under two titles probably to shew a twofold state of this people, as they were a poor family of Jacob, and as they were made Israel by grace from God. 2. The act is doubled, that Moses might be more pressing and urgent upon them, to make them know Gods mind, which after he discovered, Ver. 3. 3. The matter given in charge to Moses to declare unto this people, which is a twofold message.

1. A recognition of what God had already done for them, Ye have seen what I have done to the Egyptians, and I have borne you upon the wings of Eagles, and I have brought you to my self; — Ye yourselves. Vulg. — And brought you to my service, Onk. — To this my mountain, Ar. Otherwise readings are the same. Wherein God would have Moses presse them to recognize these three great things,

1. His wonderful plagues on the Egyptians their cruel oppressors, who kept them in bondage.

2. His unparalleled providence to them in bringing them thus farre in safety, in that he carried them, as an eagle her yong upon her wings.

3. His special act of grace to them, in that he brought them or took them, and made them come unto himself, to be for him and his service.

Quest. Why doth God use the allusion of the eagles bearing her yong?

Ans. 1. Not that any creatures care over theirs could parallel Gods care over them. 2. But to shew the tendernes of God by this to Israel; as some Hebrewes note; other birds carry their yong in their talons or claws, but the eagle beareth hers upon her wings, more tenderly and more safely; that if any should shoot at them in flight, she might take the shot and save them; so did God carry Israel and keep them from evil.

Ver. 4. 2. A

2. A conditional promise, wherein we have to note,

1. The condition, And now if hearkning ye will hearken to my voice and keep my Covenant. Readings are to the same sense. — Word for voice, Onk. — Command for voice, Ar. It is the voice of his word and precept now to be given to them. Wherein we have two expressions in the condition,

1. That hearkning they should hearken to his voice, the word is doubled in the original; so some read it in other tongues. Ours paraphrase it thus, If ye will obey my voice indeed; which is hearing with an emphasis. Others, if you diligently attend my voice, which notes the meaning of the double expression. The paraphrase carryeth in it,

1. Sedulous or diligent attention or hearing.

2. Full hearing of the voice of God to be uttered.

3. Obedient hearing, to do all that the voice saith.

2. That they should keep his Covenant, two terms are here,

1. The object; Gods Covenant which is to understand what here it meaneth, we must know his Covenant is twofold,

1. Original, which was all of promise, Gen. 3. 15. Gen. 17. 7. Which was not for them to keep, but by faith in it.

2. Additional, which carrieth in it restitution, and articles of duty from them to God, which now God was about to make with them at Sinai; whereof we shall read the contents in the following part of this book, and the rest. This is said to be added to the promise, Gal. 3. 19. This is here meant.

2. The act, they were to keep it by faith and love and obedience to the same. This is the condition.

2. The promise annexed is to be weighed, which is twofold,

1. Of indearment unto God, Then surely, or even ye shall be to me a peculiar treasure above all people, for all the earth is mine, Sam. Vulg. same. — A peculiar people of all nations, Sept. — Beloved before all people, — Onk. — Dear above all nations of the earth, Syr. — A propriety out of all people, Ar. Where we have to observe these two particulars,

1. The promise, ye shall be &c.

2. The reason, for all, &c.

1. As to the promise we have these terms considerable,

1. The subject of it, the sons of Israel keeping Covenant.

2. The Author of it, Jehovah himself who reigns.

3. The matter of it, that they should be a peculiar treasure unto God, his own portion and propriety, Ps. 135. 4. This is a priviledge above all people,

2. The reason of Gods engaging in this promise, for all the earth is mine, the rational particle sheweth this to be a reason of the precedent, For, and the reason which God rendereth is his own propriety in, and sovereignty over all the earth; therefore he may indear what people he will unto himself and passe by others. In the proposition are,

1. The subject, the earth, put for the people or nations in it, all nations in the earth.

2. The attribute is Gods propriety, they are all mine or for me, i. e. in my right and under my command and dispose, I could have taken some of them, and left you, but I have left them out of my peculiar respect, and taken you, this is my own work and of my self, Ver. 5.

2. There is a promise of preferment, And ye shall be unto me a Kingdom of Priests, an holy nation, Readings are to the same purpose. — A royal priesthood Sept. — A priestly Kingdom, Sam. Vulg. — Kings & Priests and an holy people, Onk. — A Kingdom of Priesthood and a sanctified people, Ar. This add's to the former, and herein are promised 3 excellencies.

1. Royalty in the notion of a Kingdom, they should be all kings so dignified by God, as Revel. 1. 6.

2. Priestly honour, to come nearest to God, they should be all as Priests, 1 Pet. 2. 5.

3. Sanctity, an holy nation bearing Gods Image, and therefore near and dear unto him, so accounted with him, and used by him.

4. The last thing in Gods information is the charge of telling all this, injoined again unto Moses, These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the sons of Israel, Readings to the same. Where these terms occur to be noted,

1. The authority injoining, which is Jehovah.

2. The subject charged or injoined, Moses.

3. The charge repeated, these words or matters thou shalt speak unto and presse upon the sons of Israel, that they may know them, Ver. 6.

Quest. What kind of Covenant was this now made?

Ans. 1. It was in itself the Covenant of grace, for it was given unto sinners with blood. A type of what Christ spilt for them. 2. It is yet called the law because of the severity and darkness of its delivery.

Quest. How then doth it require conditions precedent?

Ans. 1. These conditions are not precedent to the first act of grace, for God had already chosen them. 2. They are conditions consequent to Gods love, but precedent onely to the continuance and perfecting of the same, which doth not derogate from grace enabling them to perform them.

Quest. 3. Why doth God thus prepare them by teaching?

Ans. 1. It is his gracious condescension to do it. 2. They stood in need of such recognition, and instruction. 3. The manner of law-giving that followeth, being so terrible, such encouragement was requisite to precede.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. In covenant-making or law-giving from God there is need of some mediator to be with God.

D. 2. Gods call alone can qualify or authorize a mediator between him and sinners.

D. 3. It is incumbent on the mediator to declare fully Gods mind unto his people.

D. 4. The house of Jacob and the children of Israel note the people with whom God dealeth by a mediator, Ver. 3.

D. 5. A due recognition of Gods gracious acts for souls against enemies is a good preparation to receive his law.

D. 6. Gods securing providence as well as selecting a people to himself prepare them to hear his Covenant, Ver. 4.

D. 7. The condition of exact hearing Gods voice and keeping his Covenant, justly followeth grace, and precedeth the Churches greatest privileges.

D. 8. Gods Covenant people are his peculiar treasure in the world.

D. 9. It is Gods free grace who owneth all nations on earth to make one his peculiar above another. Ver. 5.

D. 10. Royalty, near communion with God, and sanctity are the privileges of Gods peculiar ones. Kings, Priests and Saints.

D. 11. The words of duty and pri-viledge must be spoken and made known unto the Church, Ver. 6.

2. In this preparation of Israel, by teaching them, follows the declaration of the former words by Moses unto the people thus, And Moses came and called the elders of the people, and set before them all those words which Jehovah commanded him, Readings agree to the same sense. Ver. 7. Expounded, Vulg. — Propounded, Sam. — Rehearsed, Syr. — Declared, Ar. — Commanded them for him. Sept. Herein note,

1. The access of Moses from God to Israel, And Moses came.

2. The accession of Israel unto him. And he called the elders of the people. The Vulg. reads the Ancientest of the people, but here it seems to be a term of office, noting these heads of the people by whom Moses might acquaint Israel with his message from God.

3. The delivery of his message unto the people,

1. By proposition of Gods mind in the recognition and promise which were made known to him.

2. By exposition of the same, as some please to translate the word. He put or set before them.

4. The reason of this action, Jehovahs command unto him, All these words Jehovah commanded him to speak to Israel, therefore he thus declareth them.

Observe we.

D. 1. Command received from God by his ministers, they must go and call them whom they must bespeak.

D. 2. Orderly proceeding to acquaint the people of Gods will by their heads is rational.

D. 3. Proposition and exposition of Gods words must be made to souls that they may know them.

D. 4. All Gods words, and no more but his, Jehovah commands his ministers to speak to his people, V. 7.

3. In this information or teaching Israel for preparation to meet with God is expressed a double return,

1. Of Israel to Moses, And all the people answered together and said, All which Jehovah hath spoken we will do, Readings to the same sense. — We will do and hear Sept. immediatly. Wherein they engage upon the recognition of Gods works, and promise made by God to them, an universal obedience unto Gods conditions exacted.

1. To obey his voice, i. e. to hear and do whatever was commanded by him.

2. To keep his Covenant in faith and love, laying up all promises and stipulations.

3. They do it jointly. One and all.

2. Of Moses unto God, And Moses returned the words of all the people unto Jehovah, Readings the same in sense.

1. The relation is Moses intrusted by God to take their answer.

2. The matter related, the words of Israel for professed obedience.

3. The relation itself, Moses brought it back with him when he went into the mount again.

Quest. When and how did the people answer Moses?

Answer. 1. After the time that the message was brought to them from Moses, by the elders. 2. By these elders did the people give answer unto Moses.

Quest. Was their answer full to Gods mind?

Answer. 1. In word and shew it was, and probably they then intended no other. 2. Yet in deed and truth it was not so, for God wished there were such an heart in them, Deut. 5. 29.

3. They were overpowered by Gods reason and promise, and could do no less than grant all, but little did many of them understand either Gods voice or covenant, or what the law required, therefore their reply could not be so full unto the mind of God, neither did they consider their own wickedness.

Mark we from it.

D. 1. The sovereignty and reason of God cannot but force creatures to yield unto what he saith.

D. 2. Universal and free may be the confessions of the Church visible to the demands of God.

D. 3. Blind affection may make such fair answers unto the proposals of God.

D. 4. Men may be convinced and promise all to God, when they can do nothing.

D. 5. Returns of people unto God must be by their mediators.

D. 6. Mediators can return no other but what they receive from people unto God, Ver. 8.

2. The next advertisement in this teaching, preparation is about Gods intended appearance, ver. 9. And Jehovah said to Moses, behold I come to thee in the thicknes of my clouds that the people may hear in my speaking with thee, and also believe in thee for ever, and Moses declared the words of the people unto Jehovah, Onk. Sam. Syr. same. — In the pillar of a cloud, Sept. — In the darknes of a cloud, Vulg. I will manifest my Angel, &c. Ar. — And the Lord said to Moses upon the third day, B. Uz. And the word of the Lord said, Behold my word shall be revealed unto thee in the thicknes of a cloud, 1. Hieruf. In these words seems to be the reply of God to Moses upon his report. Wherein these particulars occur to observation,

1. Gods bespeaking Moses or betokening his special favour to reply unto him.

2. The matter of his reply, Behold I come to thee in the thicknes of a cloud, He declareth his visible advent unto him.

3. The end of his appearance is twofold subordinat,

1. That the people might hear God speaking to Moses, that which they acknowledged, Job. 9. 28. 29.

2. That they might believe in Moses i. e. in the word delivered by Moses from God for ever.

4. The repetition of the rehearsal of the peoples words to God. And Moses told, &c.

Quest. 1. Was this the pillar of the cloud which had gon before them all this while?

Answer. 1. It is sure it was the same God promising appearance now, who used that symbol of his appearance unto Israel. 2. It probably might be the same cloud extended, 3. It is certain that there was addition of thicknes and darknes, which might diversify the form, and other clouds might be added to make it a terrible signal, such as God intended unto this dispensation of his Covenant to Israel.

Quest. 2. What was it that God would have the people hear him speak to Moses?

Answer. 1. Here doubtles it was the delivering of his moral law; God trusted not Moses to deliver that, but himself doth it, Chap. 20. And that with an extraordinary voice. 2. Other laws of lesser moment God gave a pattern of them to Moses and trusted him to carry them to Israel. 3. This speech was extraordinary to Moses at this time, V. 19.

Quest. 3. Was Moses to be believed in by Israel?

Answer. 1. God alone is the proper object of faith. 2. Moses is here but ministerially considered; he was the Minister by whom they believed. 3. His doctrine may and must be understood by his name.

Ttttt 3

Quest. 4.

Quest. 4. How is this repeated again, that he told the peoples words unto God?

Answer. 1. It is not evident that they spake to Moses any more than formerly, Ver. 8. 2. It is therefore rendered by some thus, Jehovah said to Moses I will come, &c. After that Moses had told the peoples words to him, which is the best.

We observe.

- D. 1. Upon peoples readines to obey God is willing to make known his law. A willing people have all.
- D. 2. Gods own appearance to give his law, is only that which command's faith. His word is for faith.
- D. 3. Gods Prophets and Ministers are to beleeve upon Gods credit. Because he speakes to them.
- D. 4. Dark and cloudy was Gods appearance and speech to Moses for his Church.
- D. 5. People must hear Gods speech by Ministers, that they may beleeve it.
- D. 6. The saving doctrine spoken by God to Moses must command faith in the Church for ever, Ver. 9.

2. The next way of preparing the people for receiving Gods law is by sanctifying them, whereabout we have to consider,

1. Gods command unto Moses, Ver. 10. 11. 12. 13.

2. Moses his execution of Gods will, ver. 14. 15.

In the command we have two branches expressed,

1. A command for sanctifying the people, Ver. 10. 11.

2. A command for bounding them, Ver. 12. 13.

In the former we have these particulars considerable,

1. The preface by way of delegation, And Jehovah said to Moses, Readings are to the same purpose, — Who said to him, Volg. — And he said to him, Ar. Herein note,

1. The Authority delegating, Jehovah.

2. The subject delegated, Moses.

3. The delegation by Gods word.

2. The precept, which is here generally exprest for sanctifying the people, but more specially it is threefold.

1. For dispatch and motion, Go to the people, Readings are to the same.

Going down testify to the people, Sept. The words are plain, the command is for his descent to Israel; wherein are observable,

1. The term from whence; The mount.

2. The term whereunto, The people.

3. The motion, Go away, haste to them.

2. For the sanctification of them, wherein are considerable,

1. The work real, which was to sanctify them, And sanctify them to day and to morrow, Readings to the same sense,

Prepare them, Onk. — Ver. 10.

Clenfe them, Ar. Where we have,

1. The work enjoined. Sanctify thou them; which surely imports, sanctification of persons in truth for receiving Gods law, the purifying of minds, senses, and members; such the holy God requireth to attend on him, Pl. 93.

2. The circumstance of time, this day and to morrow; such time doth God allot to cleanse the people; it is his will.

2. The work signified in this sanctification, And let them wash their cloaths, Readings the same in sense. Let them whiten their garments. Syr. In which act is noted only the symbol of sanctification, which consists really in the purifying of the Spirit, and was for the time of the law enjoined by God, but now with all other Jewish washings are ceased, Heb. 9. 10. Under such phrases yet true sanctification is signified in the Gospel, Heb. 10. 22. Eph. 5. 26.

Quest. How could Moses sanctify them?

Answer. 1. Ministerially onely, by shewing them the way of sanctification from God. 2. Typically, he is said to do it, as typing Christ the true Mediator. 3. Really, he discovereth it to be Gods words, and gracious work upon them, in his own way.

Quest. How could this be true sanctification?

Answer. 1. Symbolical washings or clensings were but institutions to note higher works of grace. 2. God did both require and effect holines as truly under the Law as under the Gospel; be ye holy as I am holy.

Quest. What dayes were they appointed for it?

Answer. The third and fourth of the third month; for on the fifth God appeared and gave his law which was the 50th day from the 15 of the first month, or the day of the Paschever and their coming out of Egypt; & hereupon called Pentecost. On which afterward was appointed an holy Festival, mentioned, A. R. 2. i. Exo. 23. 15. Levit. 23. 15. 16. A. R. 20. 16. Ver. 10.

3. A precept for full preparation, And let them be ready against the third day, Readings all the same.

1. The

1. The matter enjoined, is full and due readines, by sanctification, that all might be suited to the will of God, and nothing wanting of what he required.

2. The time prefixed, the third day from this Gods speaking, which was the fifth of the month, and the day of Pentecost as before noted, Quest. Why was all this preparation to be made?

Answer. It was to dispose them better for receiving the doctrine of the law, and it noteth such a moral duty for souls holily to dispose themselves for receiving Gods Covenant.

Quest. Can men be sanctified before the law of God come unto them, to cleanse them? Joh. 17. 17.

Answer. 1. There is a sending forth of Gods truth and doctrine for calling strangers to conversion; so the Apostles are enjoined to preach to every creature. 2. There is a Covenant-discovery and law-giving to the Church, which is supposed to be sanctified already, these must be thus prepared for a due reception of Gods will.

3. The reason of this precept followeth, For in the third day Jehovah will come down in the eyes of all his people upon mount Sinai, Readings are all to the same sense, shall be revealed, Onk. — The Angel of God shall be revealed, &c. Ar. There the manifestation of Jehovah for delivering his law to Israel is the reason given of foregoing commands, where we may note,

1. The time again stated, in the third day.

2. The work intended, Jehovah will come down, i. e. in a visible discovery for giving his law to them,

3. The witnesses of this, the sight of Israel.

4. The place of his appearance, mount Sinai, upon the account of this Moses must take care to sanctify the people.

Quest. Was it Jehovah himself that descended, or his Angel?

Answer. 1. No created Angel is here meant. 2. The Angel of the Covenant is here spoken of, who is God himself, Christ. 3. His descent is spoken of him as to his visible appearance, for otherwise God filleth all in heaven and earth. 4. Angels were his ministers at this time, Gal. 3. 19.

Learn we.

D. 1. Jehovah delegat's a mediator to deal with the people to whom he will appear.

D. 2. Jehovah dispatcheth the mediator unto them in his time with whom he hath to do.

D. 3. Sanctification of the people by the mediator, is commanded by God before he deal with them.

D. 4. A set time for sanctification God appoint's, which men must take.

D. 5. Signal sanctification went not alone under the law, however enjoined for that time, Ver. 10.

D. 6. Due preparation must be performed by souls against the time of meeting with God.

D. 7. God hath his third dayes appointment upon several occasions of giving out his grace.

D. 8. Jehovah doth humble himself in Christ to visit his people below.

D. 9. God makes his peoples eyes to witness sometimes his appearance to them.

D. 10. Gods appearance on mount Sinai was his condescension in grace, Ver. 11.

2. The next command from Jehovah to his people is for bounding them at the time, and in the place of his intended appearance, Ver. 12. 13. Herein,

1. The command is to Moses about the work which he was to do, And thou shalt set bounds to the people round about, Readings mostly agree. Sept. — Set a bound about the mountain, Sam. — Testify to the people, &c. Syr. Herein we may note,

1. The subject commanded, Moses Gods messenger and Israels mediator.

2. The work commanded, set bounds to the people, or as it were rail in the mountain round about for the people.

2. The command is also about the word which he was to say.

1. Of prohibition, and that is here twofold,

1. Against their motion beyond their bounds, wherein,

1. The prohibition, Saying take heed to your selves of going up to the mount and touching the border of it, i. e. that ye touch it not nor go up, readings are to the same sense, — Touch not any thing of it, Sept. The utmost border, the edges of it, Ar. Syr. In the letter is prohibited to Israel,

1. Any ascent beyond these bounds, go no further, than ye are called and bounded.

2. Any touching any part of the mount.

Ver. 12.

Ver. 12.

2. The reason of this prohibition under a threatening, All that toucheth the mountain, dying shall dye, Readings are to the same sense. — Shall draw nigh. Onk.

1. The subject threatened, every creature man and beast.

2. The penalty threatened, certain death, ver. 12.

Ver. 13.

2. Against the least touch of him or it that goeth beyond bounds, together with the penalty annexed, There shall not a hand touch it or him but it shall be stoned with stoning, or shot thorough with shooting, whether beast or man, it shall not live, Readings to the same.

1. The evil prohibited, touching the mount. This must not be so much as touched with a hand, the law is peremptory.

1. The penalty. It was an Anathema. Wherein,

1. The subject, man or beast that breaks thorough.

2. The evil threatened, death.

1. By stoning.

2. By shooting thorough.

3. The confirmation of it, none shall live.

2. Of promise, When the sound of the trumpet or cornet is drawn long they shall ascend into the mountain, Sam. the same.

When the voices and trumpets and cloud are gone from the mount they shall ascend, Sept. — When the trumpet is withdrawn they shall have leave or power to ascend. Onk. — When the trumpet shall found, Ar. When the cornet is silent it shall be permitted, &c. In this passage is observable,

1. The condition, when the trumpets sound is drawn out to the end and so ceased, as some, or prolonged, as others.

2. The permission, then man or beast might go up again upon it, as any other common mount; that is when God had drawn away the tokens of his majesty, and trumpet ceased, and cloud departed, then the place became common as before. Others say the neither part of the mount, so farre and no further, Ver. 17.

Quest. Why are the people forbidden the mount?

Answer. 1. Gods pleasure is cause enough for the prohibition. 2. It was the mountain that might be touched or was in itself tangible, Heb. 12. v. 18. And so noted more sensible delivery of the Covenant; and God would not have them to much to use their sense. 3. It was to make a difference between the people and their mediator.

Quest. Why are beasts prohibited and threatened?

Answer. 1. Not for their own sakes. 2. It was to inform men, that the appearance of God is not unreasonably to be abused. 3. To punish mans sin by them if in this kind they transgressed.

Quest. Why was no hand to touch man or beast, that touched the mount?

Answer. 1. This is not meant by way of rescue, as Vatab, for none durst now attempt it. 2. It was to note the accursedness of those that should transgress now, as such as were not to be touched. 3. It noted the more despicable death, to be killed without laying hand on them, Heb. 12. 20.

Quest. How farre were they permitted to come to the mount?

Answer. 1. Not beyond the bounds. 2. So farre as Moses led them, to the bottom of the mount, for this was a present license, therefore not likely to be when they removed their station hence, as Iunius, and so when the trumpet ceased. The prohibition and permission concern the same time, in greatest reason.

And teacheth us.

D. 1. God measures out creatures approaches to him, and his appearance unto them at his own pleasure.

D. 2. The revelation of Gods Covenant in the law was bounded.

D. 3. It was a weaknes in the Covenant-dispensation to Moses that it was from a mountain to be touched, Heb. 12. 18.

D. 4. It was not lawfull for any to touch that mountain, but the Mediatour of that Testament.

D. 5. Carnal approach to the mount by any beyond the bounds set, was death to all but the Mediatour, Ver. 12.

D. 6. No hand-touching or communion must be with that, which God hath judged to death.

D. 7. The Covenant given upon the mount that might be touched was severe and deadly, no life there, Hebr. 12.

D. 8. In the law God hath discovered by the death of beasts, the sin of men.

D. 9. As Gods signal or call souls may draw neer to him without danger.

D. 10. Creatures may come so farre and and no further to God than he alloweth them, Ver. 13.

2. Now followeth the execution of the commands by Moses, V. 14. 15. Wherein these particulars occur,

Ver. 14.

1. The descent of Moses, And Moses descended from the mountain to the people, Readings agree, nothing is difficult here. This answers Gods first command to him, Go to the people, Ver. 10.

Ver. 14.

2. The work of Moses, And he sanctified the people, and they washed their cloaths, Readings to the same sense, — He prepared, &c. Onk. — He cleansed them, Ar. — They whitened, &c. Syr. Here the letter is plain, Moses his obedience to Gods command of sanctifying Israel, Wherein note,

1. The act of Moses, he sanctified them, by command & ordering them thereunto.

2. The act of the people, they washed their cloaths, which was signal unto washing of hearts, 1er. 4. 14. Ver. 14.

Ver. 15.

3. The last act of obedience to God in ordering Israel to meet with him, And he said to the people be ye ready against the third day or at 3 dayes, come ye not nigh to a wife, Readings agree, Here,

1. Moses executed his third command in giving the charge to the people to be ready at Gods time to wait on him.

2. His prohibition added, Come ye not nigh to your wives, that is, as to mutual injoyment, which otherwise was lawfull.

Quest. Is there not defect and excess in this act of Moses?

Answer. No: for 1. Though it be not mentioned here that he set bounds, yet this was done to Gods mind. 2. Though abstinence from wives be not mentioned before, yet doubtles at this time it was commanded unto him by God himself.

Quest. Doth obedience to God then deny use of wives?

Answer. 1. Not generally, for it is Gods institution. 2. Upon this extraordinary occasion, as this, of attendance on God, it is required to deny ourselves in it.

Observe we.

D. 1. The Mediatour willingly commeth from God to impart his will to his people.

D. 2. The true Mediatour is as ready to sanctify his people as God would have him.

D. 3. Souls must follow their Mediatours command for sanctification, Ver. 14.

D. 4. It is the Mediatours care to prepare a people for God at his time, to whom he is sent.

D. 5. Lawfull injoyments in the flesh sometimes must be denied for better attendance on God.

D. 6. Great is the fitness required in souls for receiving rightly the law from God, Ver. 15.

2. The next head for preparation to give the law concern's God himself in his visible address thereunto, Ver. 16. 25. In this are several actions between God and Moses interwoven, all preparatory for the giving of the law and Covenant.

1. The fore-running signes of God giving the law, Ver. 16.

2. The work of Moses in ordering the people, Ver. 17.

3. The terribleness of the place of Gods appearance, Ver. 18.

4. The parly between God and Moses ver. 19.

5. The appearance of God and his charge to Moses, ver. 20. 21. 22.

6. The reply of Moses about the charge ver. 23.

7. The dispatch of him to Israel from God, ver. 24.

8. The obedience of Moses, ver. 25. In the first concerning the fore-running signes of Gods appearance, we have these terms to note,

1. The time expressed, And it was on the third day in the being of the morning, Readings to the same, — And the third day come and the morning appeared, Vulg.

1. Here is the term connecting his appearance to the preparation of the people now done by Moses; immediately thereupon comes God.

2. The term of time, set out,

1. By the day, it was the third day from that, when God first spake to Moses and the 50th from the Paschever,

2. By the part of the day, it was in the morning at the breaking of the day.

2. The signals given, And there were voices and lightnings, and an heavy cloud upon the mountain, and the voice of the trumpet exceeding strong, Readings to the same sense, some various expressions, here are 4 signals,

1. Voices, which were thunders,

2. Lightnings, even the flashes from them.

3. An heavy thick cloud.

4. The sound of the trumpet exceeding strong and loud, all very terrible, Heb. 12. 18, 19.

3. The impression which these terrible

Vvvvvv signes

Ver. 16.

Ver. 16.

Ver. 16.

signes made upon the people, And all the people that were in the camp trembled, Readings the same.

1. The subject of this impression, a people lately prepared and sanctified to meet God, yea all of them within the camp though some stout enough, yet now they who durst face great armies, tremble at the voice of God.

2. The impression itself, fear and trembling, that made their joints to be loosed, Ver. 16.

Quest. Were these natural thunders? &c.

Answer. 1. It is very probable the matter might be natural. 2. But it is certain the making of them at this time was miraculous.

Quest. Why are such terrible signes used?

Answer. 1. These were suitable to the law given. 2. These were ensignes of the Majesty of the Law-giver. 3. These were fit to humble soules and prepare them for due hearing of the law.

Quest. what was this fear?

Answer. 1. Naturall in most, from seeing and hearing such terrible things. 2. Yet it might be by faith also in some, beleeving the terribleness of Gods Majesty therein.

Which informeth us.

D. 1. Upon Churches preparation and sanctification God is ready to appear to them.

D. 2. God will keep his day, his third day of appearance to his people.

D. 3. In Gods appearance for Covenant-making he giveth the discovery of himself as he pleaseth.

D. 4. Terrible signals God useth sometimes, to declare his Majesty to men, Ps. 18. 9.

D. 5. The law given by Moses differs from Christs in darkness and deadlines. Hebr. 12.

D. 6. Suitable affections unto terrible appearances of God may be from nature and grace, Ver. 16. It might be a spirit of bondage in some, but of free grace in others.

Ver. 17. In the second the work of Moses is expressed in the bringing of the people & ordering their approach to God, And Moses brought the people out of the camp to meet with God, and they stood at the neither part of the mountain, Readings most the same, To meet the word of the Lord, Onk. The commandment of God, Ar. Herein we may note,

1. The act of Moses, and therein these terms,

1. The agent Moses, their Mediatour and Captain.

2. The patient, all the people capable of having and seeing this appearance of God.

3. The action, He brought them, or marshalled and ordered them for their approach, in which,

1. The term whence, is their camp, where they were pitched in their tents.

2. The term whereunto is God, and to meet with him at some nearer distance.

2. The posture of the people, They stood at the neither part of the mount, here note,

1. Their station which they kept, as ordered.

2. Their place, at the lower part of the mount, where bounds were set.

Quest. Why did Moses bring Israel to such a terrible sight?

Answer. 1. He doubtles was so commanded by Jehovah. 2. He was their Mediatour, and stood between God and them. 3. This was not to destroy them, but graciously to dispose and fit them for grace in this terrible dispensation.

We note from it.

D. 1. Gods terrours in the law are not to drive men from him, but to bring them humbly to him.

D. 2. God hath appointed a Mediatour to bring souls unto him. They come not of themselves.

D. 3. Upon the Mediatours conduct souls may be bold to approach the terrours of the Lord.

D. 4. Sinners must keep their standing appointed by the Mediatour to find grace in the sight of God, Ver. 17.

In the third the terribleness of the place where God appeared is next discovered, And mount Sinai was all on a smook because Jehovah descended upon it in fire, and the smook thereof ascended as the smook of a furnace, and all the mountain trembled exceedingly, Sam. and Syr. same. All the people were astonished, Sept. Trembled. The Lord was revealed, Ar. Onk. The whole mountain was terrible, Vulg. In this passage we we have to note these particulars,

1. The terrible state of this mount, the place where God appeared to give his law, expressed in two visible signals,

1. Of smook, and that described,

1. Positively, the whole mount Sinai was in a smook, i. e. In a thick grosse darkness, called smook.

2. Comparatively, The smook thereof ascended as the smook of a furnace, i. e. Very thick and black.

2. Of earthquake, And all the mountain trembled exceedingly, there was a dreadful earthquake, enough to make creatures cry and fly at the sight of it; when mountains quake, Heb. 12. 18. Hab. 3. 10. Ps. 114. 4. Ps. 68. 8.

2. The reason of all this, Jehovah descended on it in fire, wherein concur,

1. The efficient itself, Jehovah who alone makes this apparatus, the eternal being.

2. The mode wherein he work's, it was fire, a terrible signal of his appearance whose name is a consuming fire.

3. The actuating of all these terrible events by his descent attributed to him after the manner of men, and upon his visible manifestation onely, for as God he filleth heaven & earth, & is not subject to motion, but this note's here the putting forth of himself to make this terrible sight.

Mark we.

D. 1. The wisdom of God orders the place to be terrible, where he giveth his dreadful law.

D. 2. Smook and darkness and earthquakes God useth to awe creatures for receiving his will.

D. 3. Gods fiery appearance is the onely cause of his fiery law, Deut. 33. Ver. 2.

D. 4. Such fiery revelation of God is for salvation and not destruction in the first intent, Ver. 18.

Ver. 19.

In the fourth we have a special parly between Moses and God, thus recorded, And the voice of the trumpet was going and waxing strong vehemently, Moses spake and God answered him by a voice, The founds of the trumpet proceeded vehemently stronger, &c. Sept. And from the face of God it was answered by a voice. Onk. Grew and became very strong, Sam. As it proceeded so it grew stronger. Was intense and grew very strong, Syr. All mostly to the same sense. Here we have to note,

1. The occasion of this parly, and that was the vehement loud and terrible found of the trumpet, expressed in three terms.

1. It mooved and went on.
2. It waxed strong or loud.
3. It was vehemently loud and strong, which ours render, It waxed louder and louder.

2. The expression of Moses before God, he spake, no mention to whom.

3. The return made to him, And God answered him by a voice,

1. The replyer God.
2. The manner of reply, by a voice.
3. The matter of the reply, God answered him. Some queries here are to be satisfied.

Quest. What and to whom did Moses speak?

Answer. 1. Neither of these are here expressed, but onely that upon some consternation falling on him upon the exceeding terrible found of the trumpet, being as overwhelmed he spake, and probably to none but God. 2. This expression of his arising from the loud found of the trumpet, most reasonably was the expression of fear; and though we read not of what he did say, yet the words recorded by the Apostle seem to be his speech, I exceedingly fear and quake, Heb. 12. 21.

Quest. 2. What was it that God answered him by voice?

Answer. 1. Nothing is here expressly said of this. 2. This was not the charge afterward mentioned, for Moses was not yet called up. 3. Neither was it the law given, for that follows, Chap. 20. 4. It was doubtles an answer of peace and comfort suitable, whereof he now stood in need, though he were mediator, the like may be observed of Christ in the flesh, Math. 16.

Quest. 3. What did this found of the trumpet note?

Answer. 1. A dreadful alarm to summon Israel. 2. A terrible threatening of them. 3. An insufferable charge against them; such as neither Israel, nor Moses could well brook; Hebr. 12.

Learn we here.

D. 1. Dreadful and unsufferable to sinners is Gods warning trumpet which doth but summon.

D. 2. Mediators themselves in the flesh may tremble and cry at the found of Gods wrath.

D. 3. God himself supports mediators under the hardest conflicts with his terrours.

VVVVV 2

D. 4.

D. 4. God hath a voice of comfort to countervail the terrible sound of his trumpet, Ver. 19.

In the fifth head noted about Gods preparation are these specials,

Ver. 20. 1. Gods descent upon the mount, And Jehovah descended upon mount Sinai, upon the head or top. Readings most the same, — And the Lord was revealed, &c. Onk. — Behold the Angel of the Lord appeared, &c. Ar. In this occurre these terms to observation,

1. The descendent Jehovah, who is said to dwell in the high and holy place, and to be higher than the highest, he humbly himself to come down among men, Isai. 57. 15.

2. The descent itself, he came down, i. e. as to the signals of his presence, otherwise God is not subject to motion.

3. The place of descent, mount Sinai, even the top of the mount which was the utmost of its height.

Quest. Why did God thus descend to give his law and not rather speak from heaven?

Ans. 1. Gods will in choosing his way and place of law-giving is reason sufficient. 2. Yet here God seemeth to prefigure the place on earth unto the present disposition and state of the mediator, Moses who was on earth. 3. Heaven was the place whence the Covenant was to have a better discovery by Christ, the true mediator, to shew the excellency of it above this from earth, Heb. 12. 22.

Ver. 20. 2. Gods call to Moses with his return, And Jehovah called Moses to the top of the mountain, and Moses went up. Readings to the same. — From the top, &c. Ar.

1. Gods act in calling Moses the mediator nearer to himself; even to the highest place of his visible presence, which was interdicted to all besides him.

2. Moses his return in obeying Gods call. He went up whether he was called to stand by God in his law-giving, Ver. 20.

3. Gods charge to Moses for testifying a double message,

Ver. 21. 1. To the people of Israel, And Jehovah said to Moses, go down, testify to the people, lest they break in to Jehovah to see and many of them fall. Sam. same. — Lest haply they will transgress the bounds, &c. Vulg. — Draw near to God to consider, Sept. transgress, Onk. — Come forth before the Lord to see, Syr. — Warn, &c. that they break not in to the sight of God, &c. Ar. Here note,

1. A command for his descending again from God to Israel.

2. Gods charge unto them, wherein is expressed,

1. The manner of his dealing with them, testify to them, a work added to the former warning by way of witness-bearing, and more solemn pressing of them to heare.

2. The matter of it, that they break not their bounds to gaze, or pry into the doings of Jehovah further than was permitted them.

3. The reason of it which was the preventing of the danger threatened, lest many of them thereupon should fall and perish as the Bethshemites, 1 Sam. 6. 19.

Quest. Why is this double charge given by God to Israel?

Ans. 1. Their hearts needed it, who where curious enough to presume, and trespass the prohibition, as, Ch. 16. 20. 27. 2. It was to expresse his own care of their good.

2. To the Priests, And let the Priests also that draw nigh to Jehovah sanctify themselves lest Jehovah break forth upon them. Ver. 22. Smite them, Vulg. — Kill them, Sept.

Which draw near to minister, &c. Onk. — Destroy them. Sam. —

Break in upon them, Syr. — Cut them off, Ar. Herein also we may note,

1. The duty charged, let the priests, &c.

1. The subject of it described, 1. By name of office, Priests,

2. By their work, in drawing nigh to God for ministering to him.

2. The duty charged is their sanctification, that they be purified and prepared in their places, according to the will of God revealed.

2. The reason of this also is exemption of them from danger, lest Jehovah divide upon them, or break forth to kill them; thus these commands are backed with dreadful threatnings, to keep them to obedience, and deliver them from death.

Quest. 1. Who were these Priests, seeing yet Aarons sons were not called to that office?

Ans. These doubles were the first born of Israel chosen of God, Ex. 13. called yongmen, Ex. 24. 4. These for present were set apart for ministering to God.

Quest. Where were they to satisfy themselves?

Ans. In their places, at the bottom of the mount, where Moses had set them, who was mediator now for them also, for into the mount they were not to come, Ver. 24.

We observe.

D. 1. Great is the condescension of Jehovah unto men in giving law and Covenant to them.

D. 2. In Gods humbling himself he keeps his distance and place above men.

D. 3.

D. 3. In giving his law to men God calleth the mediator to be by him.

D. 4. The mediator is ready at Gods call to be with him, and take law from him for his people, Ver. 20.

D. 5. The mediator is up and down between God and men for their good. So God will have it.

D. 6. Double charges and most serious contestations are all but needful to keep souls from sin.

D. 7. So near access to God is not lawful for the people, which is allowed to the mediator.

D. 8. God withholds no discovery from his Church, but that which would be deadly to them. Ver. 21.

D. 9. Among the congregation God hath appointed some to office for ministering to him.

D. 10. Such persons must be sanctified in their special place according to Gods will.

D. 11. The more holy the persons and office are, the more deadly is their transgression.

D. 12. Threatnings of death are primarily in grace to give life to souls, Ver. 22.

Ver. 23. In the sixth place the reply of Moses followeth, And Moses said unto Jehovah, the people cannot come up to mount Sinai, for thou hast testified to us, saying, bound the mountain and sanctify it. Readings are all to the same sense. Herein we may observe these particulars,

1. The reply of Moses, he said to Jehovah, the people cannot come up to mount Sinai, the letter is plain, wherein note,

1. The manner of replying, Moses said to Jehovah, it was by word.

2. The matter of it, the people cannot come up.

2. The reason of this his reply which is given,

1. Expressly, thou hast said unto us bound the mountain, set a pale and sanctify it, separate it from that ground on which the people stand.

2. Implicitly, all this we have done, and therefore the people cannot come up. Thus the letter sound's.

Quest. Was Moses unwilling to go down?

Ans. 1. It is not reasonably to be thought, that he withdrew from Gods command. 2. It is likely that from what means had bin used, and the charge already given so strictly, Moses had so much charity to think, that Israel could not transgress in that matter. 3. Others conceive it, as if it were made by way of inquiry, whom God would have come up, and whom not, but the words seem not to carry it.

Learn we.

D. 1. Ministerial charity may think that good of people, which God knoweth is not in them.

D. 2. Gods testimonies being declared, and his means used, it may be presumed by good ministers, that people will obey.

D. 3. Unwillingness to suspect the Church may stand with willingness in Gods best ministers to obey his word, Ver. 23.

In the seventh place followeth Gods dispatch of him down, And Jehovah said unto him, walk, go down; and come up thou and Aaron with thee, but let not the priests and the people break through to come up to Jehovah, lest he break forth upon them. Readings to the same sense. — Afterward come up, &c. Lest he destroy them, Sam. — And rush upon the light of God, lest he break them, Ar. — Kill and destroy them, others. Here observe,

1. His dispatch away, go down, stay not.

2. His allowance of return, come up again, thou and Aaron.

3. His interdiction of all other Priests and people upon the former penalty, that they come not beyond the bounds.

Let them not violently presse, &c. Sept. pa sinidwras, yet there is a violence for taking heaven, Math. 11. 12.

Quest. Why did God so charge Moses to go down?

Ans. 1. This stands upon Gods absolute will, God will have one and not another. 2. Doubtless God had some special work for Aaron there, though not expressed in this place. 3. He was in commission with Moses, and to be a minister of this law.

In the 8th is a short recital of the obedience of Moses, And Moses went down to the people, and said unto them. — Readings agree. — Declared all unto them, Vulg. In his obedience are two things,

1. His descent. He leaveth the top to go to the bottom.

VVVVV 3

2. His

2. His speech, he made known Gods will in all unto them, in the matters of their safety.

Quest. How long staid Moses below before he ascended?

Ans. 1. All the time of the giving of the law, Ex. 20. 10. 2. After this he was called up with Aaron, Ex. 24. 1. when it is most plain he went up.

We conclude.

D. 1. God seeth need for his ministers testifying and pressing on people his will, when men do not.

D. 2. The Mediatours descent to men hinders not his ascent to God again for their good.

D. 3. None but Mediatours must come so near to God as he appoints them.

D. 4. Such as do, though under pretense of holiness, must perish, Ver. 24.

D. 5. The Mediatour as he must, so is he willing to be with Gods people at the lawgiving.

D. 6. It is Mediatours work to teach all to soules that may fit them to a due reception of Gods Covenant, Ver. 25.

All this done, then God delivereth his law as followeth.

CHAP. XX.

After preparation made as before, God now proceedeth to deliver his law unto Israel in this Chapter, and the following, for settling his Church, to the end of this book: unto which are many enlargements and appendices in Leviticus and part of Numbers, so long as they stayed at mount Sinai, Numb. 10. 10.

This last part of Exodus which is about Gods law-giving, containeth these general heads.

1. The tradition of Gods whole will from him to Moses his servant, from Chap. 20th to the end of Chap. 34.

2. The delivery of this will of God from Moses to Israel, Chap. 35.

3. The execution of Gods will in making all things for the Tabernacle, and raising it, from Chap 36 to the end.

In the first general head, for orders sake we may note two steps of Gods delivering his will to Moses.

1. In his being at the neither part of the mount, dealing between God and the people, Ch. 20. 21. And this will is made known to him, Chapters. 20. 21. 22. 23.

2. In his being up with God in the mount, and there the will of God is declared from Chap. 24. unto Chap. 35. of which we shall consider in its place.

1. In that will of God delivered him below, three heads are observable about the same, as a threefold law.

1. He giveth to Moses and Israel the moral law, which concerned them as men, Chap. 20.

2. He add's some judicial lawes, which concerned them as a state, Chap. 21. 22. 23. to the end of Ver. 9.

3. He delivered something of the ceremonial law, which concerned them as a Church, Ch. 23. 10. &c. But of the Church state God gave Moses a fuller platform or pattern in the mount from Ch. 24. &c.

In this present Chapter we have mainly the morall law delivered, and in the whole these heads,

1. The preface to this law, ver. 1. 2.

2. The law itself delivered, ver. 3. 17.

3. The consequents of this law's tradition, ver. 18, &c.

1. The preface of the law runs thus, Ver. 1. And God spake all these words, saying, Ver. 1. I am Jehovah thy God, which have brought thee out from the land of Egypt, from the house of servants, Ver. 2. Readings are all to the same sense. This passage in the very form of words appears not to be preceptive but narrative; therefore it is none of the ten words, as some Hebrewes have conceived, but a true preamble unto them: wherein we may note.

1. The term of connection, which knits this that followeth unto the precedent narration of trumpet-sounding, and thunders roaring and earthquakes shaking, and darknes of clouds terrifying, in this mode God is brought in speaking, so that the words were made terrible not in themselves, but in those fearfull adjuncts where: with they were delivered; for the law it good to man and not terrible, Deut. 5. 22.

2. The matter connected, which is both the preface, and the law following: in the former we have,

1. A narrative of the law-giver, and his work.

1. The law-giver is declared to be God himself who claims the name of Jehovah, v. 2. And therefore was it not an Angel that delivered the law, though multitudes attended on the ministry of it.

2. The work was utterance, He spake all these words, both in the preamble, and law, wherein,

1. The

1. The voice which was Gods, and that was a mighty voice, which could make so many 100000 hear it at one and the same time; it was truly a voice which they understood, Deut. 4. 10.

2. The matter of it, which was assertive in the preface, and preceptive in the law, he first declares his being and relation to them and then his will.

1. The words.

2. The universality of them are here noted, not a word of mans invention or speaking.

2. An assertion of the state of his Law-giver in this work, which is threefold,

1. Of his being, I am Jehovah, the reciprocal name of the true God, Ch. 3. 14. 6. 3. It is the eternal being, the cause of all beings, therefore to him belongs it to give law to creatures.

2. Of his relation, I am thy God.

1. By creation.

2. By redemption.

3. By Covenant with Abraham, &c.

3. Of his work, I brought thee out from the land of Egypt, from the house of servants, where,

1. The deliverer Jehovah, it was I who did it.

2. The term of deliverance, set out, 1. By the place, the land of Egypt, the place of their oppressours.

2. By their condition therein which was the worst of slavery, the house of servants.

3. The act of deliverance, I brought you forth, and that with an outstretched arm, with signes and wonders which none could resist. All this is asserted in the preface, to single out the hearts of the people unto God.

Quest. 1. Why did God speake himself this law?

Answer. 1. His name was onely concerned in it, as a Law-giver. 2. The law itself, was of eternal being, therefore fit to be given by the eternal Lord. 3. That all men as well as Israel may know God to be the Law-giver, and fear.

Quest. 2. Why doth he assert his being here?

Answer. 1. To give true being to the law. This is law indeed. 2. To adde sovereignty to the law, as he is over all. 3. To make the law efficacious to assimilate souls to his being, which is Gods great designe in giving his law.

Quest. 3. Why doth he assert his relation also?

Answer. 1. To shew the justice of his lawgiving, he being their God. 2. To shew the goodness of his law, for it must needs be good which commeth from their God in Covenant. 3. To make it more binding on them. Should not a people look unto their God? This is a great ingagement.

Quest. 4. Why doth he assert his redemption of them?

Answer. 1. As a great indearment of them to his law having so saved them not as the onely ground of it. 2. To declare that this was a redemption-law or word of grace not given to condemn. 3. To bring them and all men to be his servants onely upon a redemption-account.

Which teacheth us.

D. 1. Terrible expressions God doth use in giving words of grace. Terror and grace may joyn. Connect.

D. 2. God himself is the onely author of his own law. No creature work is this.

D. 3. All the words of Gods morall law are spoken or declared by himself.

D. 4. Gods voice in his moral law reacheth all men, Ver. 1.

D. 5. Jehovah onely can put the law of truth in being.

D. 6. Relation to man as their God is a just ground of lawgiving unto them.

D. 7. Needs must that law be good to man, which comes from God in relation.

D. 8. Their Redeemer God is, to whom he is related as their God.

D. 9. Redemption-work from hell more than from Egypt should engage souls to Gods law.

D. 10. God would have creatures know upon what gracious terms he giveth them law, Ver. 2.

2. The next general head of this Chapter is the law itself here given by God, from Ver. 3. to Ver. 17. About which, because I have largely opened the whole in a Catechistical way, I shall but cursorily touch the whole here. And to that purpose I shall passe the critical observations of some learned men about the double pointing of some parts in these commands and deliver onely a plain, and short account of the whole law, as it is in this place first delivered by God, and again repeated by Moses, Deut. 5. 6. 7. &c.

The whole law contained under ten words, as Moses numbers them, is originally ginally and naturally divided into two tables, upon which God wrote his eternal will, with his own finger that which concern's all men.

The summe of these two tables is comprehended in two great lawes.

1. The summe of the first is, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, &c. Deut. 6. 5. Matth. 22. 37.

2. The summe of the second is, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself, Matth. 22. 39, 40.

1. Under the first general head are contained 4 special commands, wherein man is bound to expresse his love to God.

1. The first of these is given us, v. 3. thus in the letter, There shall not be to thee any of the strange Gods before my face. Here was given,

1. Expressly, a negative law. Wherein note,

1. The subject to whom it is given Thou, the redeemed of the Lord now concerning all men in Christ, There shall not be to thee.

2. The matter prohibited, the having of strange Gods, or Gods of strangers, where is forbidden.

1. Plurality of Gods. Not Gods many, as gentiles have had, 1 Cor. 8. 5.

2. False Gods, or Gods of strangers which men formed to themselves after their own lusts, Rom. 1. 23.

3. The bounds of this prohibition, Before my face or in my sight, or against my face, no where that my face can behold: no not in the heart and innermost thoughts; which God seeth.

2. Implicitly, here is an affirmative law, The Lord thy God is one Lord, and he shall be to thee for a God alone, Deut. 6. 4.

1. The subject is the same.

2. The matter of command, appropriating Jehovah as the true God, and onely God.

3. The ordering of this also to be in Gods sight; where-ever Gods eye can pierce, that he may see himself in thought, word, and deed owned as God.

Quest. Why are strange Gods forbidden who are none?

Ans. 1. It is true in themselves they are no Gods. 2. Yet by interpretation and mens opinion they are. 3. The burden therefore of the prohibition is, that men should not frame, conceive or make any such in their thoughts unto themselves.

Quest. What is this appropriating of Jehovah to be our God?

Ans. It consists in the inward heart respect to Jehovah, and him onely as God, and in that respect is expressed.

1. In heart-acknowledgment of him, as the onely true God. 2. In heart-dependance on him, and hope in him.

3. In heart-love and feare of him, and delight in him. 4. In heart-praise and obedience to him. And all this acted from the heart, singly, fully and for ever.

Which learneth us.

D. 1. Atheism or denial of any God is expressly forbidden by Jehovah to man the subject of redemption.

D. 2. Poluthesim, or the having more Gods than one is as great an evil prohibited by Jehovah.

D. 3. The denial of Jehovah to be the true God is a grievous sin forbidden by him.

D. 4. The onely true having Jehovah for a God is a great duty on man, who may be redeemed by him.

D. 5. Heart-having or closing with Jehovah as our God is the main duty of the first precept.

D. 6. Gods sight or face will try whether men own Jehovah for their God truly and solely or not.

2. The next of these 4 words in the first table, which commands love to God is that which concerneth his outward-man-worship and this is given us, Ver. 4. 5. 6. Where,

1. The law itself is given thus to the letter, Thou shalt not make to thee a graven thing, nor any likeness of things which are in the heavens above, or which are in the earth beneath, or which are in the waters under the earth, Ver. 4: Thou shalt not bow down to them, nor serve them, Ver. 5. In which passage are delivered,

1. The law expresse which is negative, and that prohibits,

1. The making of any Image as means of worshipping God, Thou shalt not make, &c.

2. The bowing down to them, or worshipping by them, Thou shalt not bow, &c.

2. The law implied which is affirmative commanding the true conceptions of God, and worship of him, according to his will.

Quest. 1. What is meant by the graven thing or likenes prohibited?

Ans. 1. In the letter, all graven carved, molten work for representation of any thing, as the first word noteth, & all painted pictures or images to resemble persons and things. 2. In spirit, and inward meaning, all vain Imaginations and conceits, misrepresenting God, or presenting other things for him.

Quest. 2. What are the things to which these relate?

Answer. 1. Things in heavens, invisible as God himself, &c. Or visible as sun, moon. 2. Things or staries on earth, as men, beasts, fowl and creeping things. 3. Things in the waters, as fish, &c. Which are said to be under the earth, because the waters seeme so to be, and elsewhere the earth is said to be founded upon the seas, Ps. 24. 2. However elsewhere the earth is said to be covered with the deep, Ps. 104. Ver. 6.

Quest. 3. What is it to make these images and likenes?

Answer. 1. Simply to frame them by making, and casting, carving, or painting, and the like. 2. The term, end or scope of making these, which is a mans self, thou shalt not make them for thee, i. e. for thy use, as to worship by them. Otherwise some representations of creatures may be made; but none at all of God, that is sin; the very making of an image of him.

Quest. 4. What is meant by bowing down to them, and serving them?

Ans. 1. All reverence, as kneeling, killing, lifting up or spreading hands unto them, worshipping, or offering to them. 2. All use of them as means of worship, so as to worship or serve God by them. This is an abomination here forbidden.

Quest. 5. What is carried in the affirmative part implied?

Answer. 1. In general a command to worship God onely according unto his revealed will, and that is spirit and truth. 2. In special to have Gods Spirit the principle of worship, Gods law the onely rule, and Gods glory the onely end. To this may be added as here included all commands to destroy all images or means of false worship, which are frequently mentioned.

2. The reason prelling this law is added in part of the 5th and 6th verses which is gathered from the consideration of the law given in these particulars,

1. In his being, I am Jehovah he that was and is, &c.

2. In his relation, I am thy God, thy redeemer and husband, so he declareth himself in Covenant.

3. In his attribute proper to an husband, I am a jealous God, loving fidelity in worship, and in fury pleading with the adulterous soul.

4. In his vindictive work of justice, I visit the iniquity of the fathers on the sons upon the thirds and upon the fourths of them that hate me. Ver. 5.

5. In his remunerative work of justice, And I do mercy unto thousands of them that love me, and of them that keep my commandments. Ver. 6.

Quest. 1. What is carried in Gods jealousy?

Ans. 1. Strength of love to such souls, whom he prohibits to deale treacherously. 2. Single desire of enjoying souls in worship. 3. A careful eye lest they miscarry in the performing it. 4. Extremity of rage against souls adulterous.

Quest. 2. What is carried in the vindictive threatening?

Ans. 1. The nature of the sin. It is perverse iniquity to make an image to serve it. 2. It is very infectious from fathers to sons to continue it. 3. The return of Gods visitation of vengeance, extended as farre as the infection goes, to the third & fourth generation of haters; such are corrupters.

Quest. 3. What is carried in the remunerative promise?

Ans. 1. The character of obedience to this law, such as love God, chaste souls that keep from Idols. 2. Fruit consequent, keeping all Gods commands. 3. Good promised.

1. In its nature, Doing mercies.

2. In extent, Unto thousands.

3. In the true line, such as love God, fathers, and sons, and are chaste in worship.

And informeth us.

D. 1. God-mans redeemer hath given him law for outward as well as inward respect unto him.

D. 2. No visible image or likenes of God must be made by men. It is an obomination.

D. 3. God must not be served or worshipped by visible shapes. It is Idolatry.

D. 4. Inward imagination-worship of God is grievous sin and spiritual adultery.

D. 5. God himself, and as himself is purely to be worshipped by his redeemed.

D. 6. Spirituality and truth in worship is the duty of man redeemed.

Ver. 4. part of 5.

D. 7. God being Jehovah rejects all image and inforceth onely spirit-worship.

adultery in image-worship, and commandeth fidelity in spirit.

D. 9. Gods jealousy argueth image-worship to be adultery and spirit-worship fidelity to himself.

D. 10. Image-worship of God is a sure character of souls that hate him.

D. 11. False worship is an infectious sin, it runs in the blood from fathers to children.

D. 12. The jealousy of God visits with vengeance fathers and children to many generations, that hate him. Ver. 5.

D. 13. Fidelity of souls to God in true worship is the true love of him.

D. 14. He that loveth God in worship will truly keep all his commandments.

D. 15. Gods mercy and grace is reciprocal with the love of God in his true worship.

D. 16. Gods exercise of mercy is intailed by covenant upon all true worshippers to a thousand generations. Ver. 6.

3. The next word in the first table which is the third command, thus followeth, Thou shalt not lift up the name of Jehovah thy God to vanity, for Jehovah will not clear him who lifteth up his name to vanity. Not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. The Lord will not cleanse him, &c. Septuagint. Thou shalt not swear in the name of the Lord thy God causelessly, for the Lord will not justify him who shall swear by his name to falsehood, Cald. Syr. Ar. Samar. and Vulg. as our English. This is the third way of expresting mans love to God with respect unto his name, which this precept injoineth.

Quest. Do not all the commands in the first table concern Gods name?

Ans. Yea, the whole law beareth Gods name as the author and end of it, but more immediately and objectively Gods name is held out in the first table, and variously in the precepts thereof. In the first the name of God essential was concerned, as to inward worship of him. In the second as to outward worship in ordinances. In the third as to all religious conversation toward it. In the fourth as to the preservation of his time for sanctifying his name therein.

Two heads are considerable in this precept.

1. The command itself delivered two ways.

1. Explicitly, and so it is negative, forbidding sin, Thou shalt not take, &c.

2. Implicitly, and so there is an affirmative word commanding the duty contrary to the sin, which is, to take up and use Gods name as it is.

2. The reason enforcing this command, For Jehovah will not clear, justify or hold him guiltless, &c.

For the explication some questions must be answered.

Quest. What is the burden of the negative precept?

Ans. Three things are to be opened here.

1. The object under prohibition. The name of the Lord thy God.

2. The act denied, lifting up to vanity, or taking it in vain.

3. The force of the negative term, or prohibition,

1. As to the object three terms are considerable in it,

1. Name.

2. Jehovah.

3. Thy God.

Quest. 1. What is meant by the name here of the Lord thy God?

Ans. The name of God is that generally by which God is made known to man, but this is twofold,

1. Essential, such as notes God himself in his being, such are the titles of his being, as Jehovah, &c. or of relation, as Father, Son, and Spirit, or of attributes, both incommunicable, as infinite, &c. Or communicable, as wisdom, justice, &c. God is in all this name.

2. Declarative, so the name of God is all that, which declareth or maketh him known, as his word, his works, his ordinances, &c. Pf. 138. 2. The whole name of God in both these senses is to be understood in this commandment, but not so in the two former, for God himself in his being is inwardly and outwardly to be worshipped, but his works or word or ordinances are not to be worshipped, yet none of these must be abused or lifted up to vanity. The name of God therefore at the large is here to be understood, none of his discoveries must be used as vanities.

2. The term of Jehovah here signifieth that eternal being which is signified by the name, therefore not the word in letters and syllables is here meant, as if it were unlawful to pronounce this name, as the superstitious Jewes conceive, but (that being discovered by any name of his.

3. The term of relation thy God noeth to them,

1. The true God so discovering himself.

2. A God theirs by Covenant, therefore not to be abused by them. As to the second, which is the act denied. It is lifting up to vanity or taking in vain, where,

1. The end of the action is vanity.

2. The action itself.

Quest. 1. What is vanity?

Ans. It carrieth in it. 1. Emptiness, nothing, Pf. 39. 5. 2. A lye, Pf. 4. 2.

3. Fruitlessness, without any good issue. Isai. 30. 7. 4. All manner of sin, Pf. 119. 50.

Quest. What is the action?

Ans. It is the lifting up this name to vanity, or taking it in vain, which noeth the abuse of this name of God to lye, to sin, to emptiness, to no purpose, and this may be done outwardly, and inwardly, the law reacheth the Spirit. And all this in these ways,

1. In opinions about the name of God, as misapprehension of it.

2. In profession toward God; as denial of trust in him, and conversation toward him, by abusing his works, and corrupting his word, not only swearing, but every abuse of Gods name is meant.

As to the third. The force of the negative is as strong here, as in other laws.

1. It binds against making Gods name a vanity in any kind.

2. It binds at all times, never must this be done.

Quest. What is the weight of the affirmative precept implied?

Ans. 1. In general it is to lift up the name of God to truth, and to make use of it in the whole extent of it, word, and works, as to sanctify it, make it a praise, and let it be known in our conversations, as being truth, in which our souls must put affiance, as our sure support. Under this general several duties are carried unto the several acceptions of the name of God, both essential and declarative, inward, works and ordinances, to use all in truth according to their natures, and to the great end of glorifying God in them, is no less than the duty here enjoined.

Quest. What is carried in the reason of it?

Ans. 1. Something expressly, as God will not clear, justify, or hold him guiltless, but convince, and condemn every foul taking his name in vain, and not repenting. 2. Something implicitly, God will justify every one, that shall use his name worthily, and as becomes the greatest, truth and holiness of it; but not for it; but upon the account of Christ, in whom alone souls are justified.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. The name of God is dear to him, and should be fearful to his redeemed. The law binds this.

D. 2. God must not in any part of his name be vainly used, or abused as a vanity. The law forbid's it.

D. 3. God in all his name must be lifted up and glorified indeed, by his redeemed ones, even as he is. The law requires it.

D. 4. The law about Gods name is spiritual, and spiritually to be observed, both in prohibition and command.

D. 5. Every vain abuse of Gods name brings guilt on man, and God will hold him to it.

D. 6. In the sanctifying of his name God will justify his redeemed, Ver. 7.

4. The last word in the first table which commands the acting of love to God is the sanctifying of his time, and the whole is delivered in the 8. 9. 10. and 11 verses as followeth, Remember the day of Sabbath to sanctify it, Ver. 8. Sept. of Sabbaths. All readings els singularly. Six dayes thou shalt labour and do all thy works, Ver. 9. Sept. Cald. Sam. Ar. Syr. the same, But the seventh day is a Sabbath to Jehovah thy God, thou shalt do no work, thou, nor thy son, nor thy daughter, thy servant, nor thy handmaid, nor thy cattle, nor the stranger who is within thy gates, Ver. 10. Thy oxe and every beast of thine, Sept. In thy city, Cald. Syr. In thy house. Ar. For in six dayes Jehovah made the heavens and the earth, the seas and all that are in them, and rested in the seventh day, therefore Jehovah blessed the Sabbath day & sanctified it. Ver. 11. Blessed the seventh day, Sept. gave them rest on the seventh day, therefore blessed the seventh day, &c. Ar.

In this whole passage we have to note,

1. The law of God positive, Remember, &c. Ver. 8.

2. The law of God permissive, six dayes, &c. Ver. 9.

3. The law of God negative, but the 7th, &c. Ver. 10.

4. The reason of the whole, for in 6 dayes, &c. Ver. 11.

Quest. 1. What must be understood in the positive law?

Answer. These terms must be opened to the understanding here.

1. The object immediately and properly concerned

Ver. 8.

Ver. 9.

Ver. 10.

Ver. 11.

concerned in this command, this is the day of Sabbath, about which we must know,

1. That it is a day natural, such a portion of time as a day denoteth; and this not as a circumstance of duty as in other commands, for every duty requireth its time and season, but as the substance of the duty commanded.

2. That the name of Sabbath imposed on it, is the natural name of it, noting it to be the day of Gods rest, which after other dayes & works created, he made for man to take up his rest weekly in God.

3. A weekly day. The seventh day, not the sixth, or any other in it, and this weekly to return.

4. Reciprocal, not because it was the seventh from the creation was it established, but because the Sabbath for that time, &c.

2. The act immediately here commanded is to sanctify this day of Sabbath, which work of ours stands in conformity to the act of God, in his sanctification of the day, as afterward is urged in the reason, which consisted,

1. Not in any positive holines infused, whereof dayes are not capable, but relative onely, with respect to God himself, and for his use.

2. In setting it apart from common dayes.

3. In putting his name upon it, The holy of the Lord.

4. In appointing it for communion more solemn with his creatures, thereby to give out holines and blessing to them. Now our conformity hereunto stands,

1. In calling the Sabbath, the holy of the Lord, &c. which is the acknowledgment of it in our minds.

2. In laying out our affections thereon, by calling it our delight, and having our pleasure on it.

3. In sanctifying and blessing the Lord in it, with bodies and spirits thorough all duties of holines, Isai. 58. ver. 13. 14.

3. The duty more remote, and which is in tendency to the former act of sanctifying, is, remembering to do this, that is, to sanctify the Sabbath. This is commanded equally, and in the first place to charge the memory of Gods redeemed with this duty. The word is observed, to be an infinitive, read, like a gerund in remembering, and by supplying an imperative, it is read by some emphatically in remembering remember. Which is usual with Hebrewes to note seriousness, carefulnes and circumspection in remembering. Now memory of a duty, supposeth the knowledge of it before, and carrieth here retention of the duty known, and enjoined, as the remembering our Creator, is the retaining of him as creator in our hearts, Eccles. 12. 1. And in order to this his law injoyneth us to remember his Sabbath to sanctify it, and God our Creator, and Redeemer in it. This stands]

1. In a retention of mind, keeping fast the knowledge of the Sabbath, as Gods holy day.

2. In a retention of love, affection, and delight, to keep it fast in our hearts.

3. In a retention of practice, by keeping close to all those holy duties, whereby the Sabbath must be sanctified; this phrase therefore of remembering, Moses openeth by another, that truly noteth retention, keep the Sabbath day to sanctify it. Deut. 5. 12.

Ver. 8.

Quest. What is the meaning of the law permissive?

Ans. These particulars are to be opened herein,

1. The contents of the law which are carried,

1. In the object of the command, All thy work.

1. The nature of it is work, that is work of general calling, wherein men are employed in the world, as plowing and trafficking, work mechanical, or liberal arts, such as God injoineth on man to be done with all diligence, no sin, but work can here be allowed.

2. The propriety, thy own, that is such as are thine, allowed of God, in contradistinction unto Gods works on his Sabbath.

3. The universality of it, all thy works

2. In the action enjoined by this law, thou shalt labour and do the work of honest callings. Wherein,

1. Travel, pain, and industry are commanded, no idleness allowed.

2. Diligence, circumspection and industry is enjoined, labour and do all thy work.

3. The time allotted, Six dayes, in contradistinction to the Sabbath. These for honest labour.

2. The force of this law is,

1. Preceptive for mens following their honest callings in those dayes allotted.

2. Permissive, and indulgent to give man six dayes for one.

3. Yet not exclusive of duties to God ordinary every day, nor of extraordinary duties when God calls for them, Ver. 9.

Quest. 3. What is the meaning of the negative law?

Ans. Herein we have to consider these particulars,

1. The day stated about which the law proceed's, But the seventh day is the Sabbath Ver. 10. or for to Jehovah thy God.

1. The adversative particle sets this day against the former six. As for six dayes God giveth them to you for your honest labours, but the seventh is none of yours.

2. The day excepted is by the numerical name pointed out; the seventh day, and that so called from the creation. 3. The use of this time, it was to be a Sabbath as before explained.

Ver. 9.

4. The propriety of this day, It was Jehovah's thy God; his name is upon it, and he owneth it as his peculiar, yet this proposition is not convertible. This seventh day is the Sabbath, therefore the Sabbath is onely this seventh day. For the number was alterable from the seventh to eighth, but the Sabbath is eternal to abide for ever with man.

2. The law negative about it, Thou shalt do no work, &c. Here note,

1. The subject is twofold,

1. Principal as man, and he considered orderly.

1. Men superior. Thou Father, &c.

2. Men inferior, son, daughter, servant, handmaid, and stranger, within thy gates, and under thy power.

2. The accessory subject is the beast, which is instrumental to man in his labour, and therefore for mans sake is here mentioned. Oxe and ass are mentioned by way of explication, Deut. 5. 14. And God commands mercy for the beast, Pro. 12. 10.

2. The evil prohibited, wherein note, 1. The nature of it, it is work, lawful, common employment at other times.

2. The propriety, it is mans own work, opposit to Gods work required in his Sabbath, mans own pleasures, words and wayes, Isai. 58. 13. Otherwise Gods works of piety, charity, and necessity must be done, these are his, and not mans, Mat. 22. 10, &c.

3. The universality. All such works of man are forbidden,

4. The time of prohibiting these, it is onely the Sabbath day. All this is in the negative law, Ver. 10.

Quest. What meaneth the reason of the law?

Ans. It referreth to both parts negative and affirmative; and giveth cogent undeniable reason for both; the whole consist's in two heads.

1. In Gods exemplary work.

2. In his work of institution.

1. The force of the first appeareth thus, that which God hath done as an example, it is just and necessary that men should do, but thus God did teach men, ergo, &c. The assumption here is onely laid down in two parts.

1. In six dayes Jehovah made heaven and earth, &c. What God did in point of work, it is just and reasonable for man to do, but God did his work in six dayes, shewing man the dayes of labour; therefore man must do his works, unto which he is called, in the time exemplified.

2. God rested the seventh day, that is, ceased from all the works which concerned the outward life of man, and now on the seventh day he maketh a rest for his soul;

what God did exemplarily for mans souls good, it is just and reasonable for man to follow; but on the Sabbath God rested to make a rest for man, therefore it is reasonable man should cease from his labours, and rest with God upon his Sabbath.

2. Great reason is there in Gods work of institution, Wherefore Jehovah blessed the Sabbath-day and sanctified it. Had not this bin added it might be doubtful, whether Gods act were exemplary, but this being joyned cleareth that matter, and addeth a further reason thus. That day which God hath blessed and sanctified for mans sake, all reason will require man to remember and sanctify it, but Jehovah hath blessed and sanctified his Sabbath, ergo, &c.

Quest. Is this command moral in whole or part?

Ans. It is wholly moral as other of the ten words, onely something is moral-natural, which is time itself, whatever God should require of creatures for his worship; and something moral positive which is the first seventh day, which God intended; then called the 8th. Ezek. 43. 27.

Quest. What is properly moral in it?

Answer. Gods Sabbath, by which he meant the time of rest, on whatsoever seventh day he should set it; which now is upon the Gospel-seventh, which God made in his sons ceasing from his laborious pains in redemption. To these and the large confirmation of the truth of the same, I must referre to a larger treatise on this command.

We learn from it:

D. 1. The memorial of God in his time of worship is a special argument of love to him.

D. 2. Gods Sabbath is his time strictly enjoined by his law for his solemn worship.

D. 3. The day God strictly chargeth upon mans remembrance to sanctify it, Ver. 8.

D. 4. Large time hath God allowed man for his honest labours, none for sin. Sixe for one, Ver. 9.

D. 5. Gods Sabbath was determined upon the seventh day from the creation, but not reciprocal.

D. 6. Gods seventh-dayes Sabbath is his own day.

D. 7. No work of mans own must be done done on Gods Sabbath; but what God alloweth.

D. 8. All orders and ranks of men are obliged strictly unto obedience hereunto.

D. 9. Fathers and rulers must see Gods Sabbath not to be profaned by any under their power.

D. 10. In commanding men to rest, God provideth mercy for beasts, Ver. 10.

D. 11. Gods works on the six dayes shew men their due time of labour.

D. 12. Gods rest from his works makes a rest for men from theirs.

D. 13. God hath blessed the Sabbath to bless men thereby.

D. 14. God hath sanctified his Sabbath to sanctify men therein.

D. 15. Gods Sabbath is made for the most spiritual good of man.

D. 16. The greatest reason is that man should remember Gods Sabbath ever to sanctify it, Ver. 11.

2. The commands of the second Table now follow which are 6 words. All subordinate to that second great command, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thy self, The expression of which the Lord requireth of his redeemed in six eminent works enjoined,

1. In keeping order in relations, Com. 5.

2. In preserving the life of neighbours, Com. 6.

3. In securing the chastity of neighbours, Com. 7.

4. In preserving the estate of neighbours, Com. 8.

5. In maintaining the good name of neighbours, Com. 9.

6. In the innermost desire of good in all related, Com. 10.

That which concern's the keeping of order is the first law in the second Table, as that which concern's the life and prosperity of the universe; the chief thing to be regarded before personal interest. This command in terms runs thus, Honour thy Father and thy mother, that thy dayes may be long on the ground or earth which Jehovah thy God giveth thee, or that they may prolong, &c. By prayer and blessing, ——— That it may be well for thee, and that thou mayest be of long time upon the earth, Sept. which the Apostle keepes in his pressing this command, Eph. 6: 3. All readings are to the same sense. ——— That thine age may be long in the country, &c. Ar. ——— Thy dayes may be multiplied, &c. Syr. In this command occurre to observation two particulars,

1. The command itself, honour thy Father, &c.

2. The reason in forcing it by way of promise. That thy dayes, &c.

Quest. What is imported in this command?

Ans. 1. The command expresse, which is affirmative. 2. A command implied which is negative, forbidding the evil contrary to the duty commanded.

1. In the affirmative precept foras-much as it is relative, we must know, that though the duty of one relation only be expressed, the duty of the other is necessarily carried in it, so that we have two affirmative precepts,

1. Concerning inferiours duties to superiours.

2. Concerning superiours duties unto them.

The first is here honour thy Father, &c.

The second is, walk honorably to children, &c.

Quest. 2. What is the subject of the first of these?

Answer. Each particular person who is capable of the name of a child, either son or daughter among the redeemed of the Lord. Such are,

1. All inferiours in families, wives, children and servants.

2. All inferiours in states, as all subjects unto superiour powers.

3. All inferiours in the Church as members with respect unto Pastors, &c.

Quest. 3. What is the subject of the second?

Answer. All such as are styled fathers and mothers, that is, all superiours in families, states, and Churches. These interchange in the two precepts.

Quest. 4. What is the duty of the inferiours?

Answer. To honour father and mother, which according to the various acceptation of those superiour relations must needs be diversified,

1. As to natural parents the duty standeth,

1. In fearing or reverencing them, Lev. 19: 3.

2. In obeying them in the Lord, Eph. 6: 1.

3. In sustaining them in age and wants, 1 Tim. 5.

2. As to civil parents and ecclesiastical, the honour due to them consists,

1. In esteeming them as fathers in place.

2. In submitting unto them in the Lord.

3. Paying all just dues unto them, Rom. 13: 5. And giving them in the Church double honours, 1 Tim. 5: 17.

Quest.

Quest. 5. What is the duty of the superiour order as parents in every respect?

Answer. 1. To walk honorably before their inferiours and so deserve honour from them by doing their special duties towards them. As parents to nurture their children in the Lord, husbands to give honour to wives as the weaker vessels, Magistrates to do justly, and rule over men in the fear of God, Pastors and Ministers to labour in word and doctrine, and be examples of the flock. All which elsewhere I have largely opened, therefore shall not enlarge in this place.

Now that both these orders are carried in this law is evident,

1. From the perfection of this law as well as others, which must provide for all orders of neighbours, therefore for superiours as well as inferiours.

2. From the interpretation of the Prophets, who make known the will of God, as to the duties of all these children and parents in their several acceptations.

Quest. 6. What is the negative law implied?

Answer. It concerneth also both parties in these orders, and forbiddeh under the pain of Gods curse, any disorderly walking either of inferiours to superiours, or of these to them, which is in doing any thing contrary to the duty commanded, or in omitting any thing of the duty enjoined which may easily be known by considering, what in this law and by the Prophets, God requirerh of these orders.

Quest. 7. What meaneth the reason added?

Answer. 1. That which is expresse in it is a promise, and that the Apostle noteth, that it is the first commandment with promise, that is, the first of the second table, for there is a promise before expressed in the second precept of the first table, and one implied in the fourth, but as this is to encourage the affirmative duty, so implied is a contrary threatening to deterre from breach of this law.

Quest. 8. What is the good here promised and to whom?

Answer. 1. The subject of this promise is the soul that perform's this duty, be he Jew or gentile, either of superiour or inferiour rank; for as the duty is commanded upon one part of relation yet includ's the other, so also the promise concerneth all that obey of either party, parents or children. 2. The good itself is longevity upon earth under the enjoiment of Gods love therein; without which, the longest age ends with a curse, 1 Sai. 6: 20. Neither did this concern Israel onely in their land but every obedient soul in all parts of the earth, where God should see them, so the Apostle extend's it Eph. 6: 3. Wherein distinctly are,

1. Gods special love to thef, which is always carried in promise; this being the natural issue of love.

2. A suitable portion of good here in this life.

3. A sufficient age as time of enjoiment here, before God take them unto glory; all this in grace.

Quest. 9. What is the threatening implied to the disobedient?

Answer. 1. Gods hatred and displeasure.

2. Portions of evil upon earth. 3. Cutting off at last in Gods displeasure. Such expressions note it. The ravens, &c. Prov. 30: 17. 2 King. 2: 26.

Quest. Do not the rebellious usually enjoy better, and live longer in this world than the righteous?

Answer. 1. As to sense sometimes it may be so. 2. Yet rebellion never hath Gods love in any portion. 3. The longest age of sinners, must expire with a curse, that torment's to eternity. But God dealeth graciously with his righteous ones.

Which instruct's us.

D. 1. God hath a set law of order among men for the due exercise of love among neighbours.

D. 2. The observation of the law of order is first needful to be done, that other duties follow.

D. 3. Family-order is Gods law wherein the parts thereof may mutually exercise love.

D. 4. Children by obedience, reverence, and piety must honour and act love to parents according to the law.

D. 5. Parents must walk honourably to children, and by good nurture, and care expresse love to them.

D. 6. Wives by submitting to their husbands in the Lord, and husbands by giving honour, must act love mutually.

D. 7. Servants by sincere subjection and masters by an equall care of doing them good, must act love.

D. 8. Magistrates by ruling well and and subjects by obeying in the Lord must all love together.

D. 9. Members in the Church by submitting to the word, and ministers by teaching and waiting over them must perform the law of love.

D. 10. Gods love in promise is upon all obedient to this law.

D. 11. Gods promise carrieth all that is truly good in things of this life and length of dayes to the obedient.

D. 12. Promise to obedience includes threatnings of curse to rebellion: sinners are accursed. Ver. 12.

Ver. 13. 2. The next word or command in the second Table concerneth the life of our neighbour, and is shortly given thus, Thou shalt not kill. The same is reported, Deut. 5. 17. Readings agree in sense. — The life or soul Cald. add's. The word used Ratsach is observed to be meant only of man. This law also is negative, but as noted, it must include the affirmative. The first forbids the taking away of our neighbours life, and the second commands the preservation of it.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of the negative law?

Ans. Herein shortly occurs,

1. The subject to whom it is given, which is every man, to whom the moral law belongeth, all that are capable of redemption.

2. The object, concerning whom this law is made, is our neighbour, every man with whom we have to do, or that may stand in need of us; and more specially the life of this neighbour is here provided for in this law, that it may not be injured.

3. The act denied hereabout is the killing or taking this life away by violence; which act (the law being spiritual) is best interpreted by Christ, who discovereth this act to be done three ways,

1. In thought-murder, when men meditate enger, and wrath, and malice against their neighbours.

2. In word-murder, by threatening and speaking against his life, by scorning and mocking unto death.

3. In deed or hand-murder, when willingly, and willfully any taketh away the life of another, Mat. 5. 21. 22. All this is forbidden.

Quest. 2. What is the meaning of the affirmative law?

Ans. The subject and object are the same in it; the act here commanded is all that needs opening, which is contrary to that of killing; and therefore must note, all care inward and outward for preserving and comforting the life of our neighbour, yea though he be an enemy; and this consists in duties opposit unto the former sins forbidden.

The contents follow.

D. 1. God, next to the life of the universe which stands in order; provideth for the life of every person.

D. 2. Gods spiritual law forbids as much as a thought of evill against the life of our neighbour.

D. 3. Neither tongue, nor hand must do violence to the life of man, by Gods law Gods command injoineth us by thoughts, word, and deed to preserve our neighbours life as our own. This is love. Ver. 13.

3. The next word or precept of the second Table which is the seventh of the ten, concern's the body of our neighbour, for the keeping of it pure, and spotless from pollution; which is next considerable unto the life of man; it is thus also shortly given us, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Readings agree. Here also we have a double law given us,

1. Negative forbidding some evil to neighbours.

2. Affirmative commanding some good unto them.

Quest. 1. What meaneth the negative law?

Ans. The same terms are in this as in the other.

1. The subject is every man, and woman made under the law of God, and who need redemption by him.

2. The object is our neighbour generally, but in special the bodies of our neighbours, both men, and women, which should be temples of the holy Spirit. These we should look to keep from this defilement. Now though this be the object expressed; yet all creatures that may be abused to any uncleannes, as bestiality, &c. must needs be comprehended.

3. The act prohibited, Thou shalt not adulterate. The word here used notes usually the act of adultery. Another is used to note fornication; but they are neither tied up so strictly. Herein Christ giveth us the best interpretation also. The evil forbidden and the principle of obeying are considerable.

1. The

1. The evil forbidden carrieth in it these things,

1. All heart-uncleannes in first motions.

2. All tongue-uncleannes in words and speeches.

3. All bodily uncleannes by eyes, eares, or other members, Math. 5. 27. And this,

1. In all kinds, self pollution, fornication, adultery, sodomy, bestiality, &c.

2. In all occasions of it, or means tending to uncleannes, uncleane society, spectacles, and occasions of drawing into such evill.

2. The principle of obedience, in denying this, must be, love to God; and our neighbour, and that spiritual and sincere, if it answear Gods law.

Quest. 2. What doth the affirmative law import?

Ans. 1. The same subject and object as before mentioned. 2. The good here commanded is the only thing to be stated. Of which the work and the principle must be considered.

1. The work itself is Purity, which we are to preserve in our neighbours and ourselves.

1. A pure frame of Spirit is required.

2. A pure acting towards our neighbours, and ourselves.

1. In pure thoughts;

2. In clean speeches.

3. In all chaste actions. And in a strict observation of all pure means, to preserve man in this frame of cleannes.

2. The principle of this also must be love to God and man; and that from a pure heart, and faith unfeigned, if it answear Gods law, 1 Tim. 1. 5.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. Next to mans life Gods law provides to keep mens bodies from pollution.

D. 2. Gods pure law forbid's all unclean thoughts, words, and deeds, that may defile mans self or neighbour.

D. 3. Gods holy law injoineth, all his creatures to purity, and chastity, in thought, word, and deed, and use of all means tending thereunto.

D. 4. True love to God and our neighbour is the only fulfilling of this law of God, Ver. 14.

The next precept of the second Table which is the eighth in the general number concern's love to our neighbour to be expressed in seeking his good as to his outward estate and livelyhood, expressed in these words, Thou shalt not steal. Readings all concur. To the understanding of this precept, the matter of it, the principle of doing it, and the rule of it are to be considered.

1. The material contents of this law are two precepts,

1. Negative which is expresse, Thou shalt not, &c.

2. Affirmative which is included, thou shalt preserve.

Quest. 2. What is the meaning of that negative word, Thou shalt not steal?

Answer. 1. The object concerned which must be such matter as is subject to stealing, and belongeth to our neighbour.

1. All real, external, good needfull for life, as corn, &c. Exod. 22.

2. All good things tending to the comfort of life, as children, servants, catel, &c. Yea the very hearts of friends and relations, Deut. 24. 7.

3. Such good as concern's the souls of neighbours, which the Prophet notes as matter that may be stolen, which is the word of God, Jer. 23. 30.

2. The act forbidden which is stealing, i. e. an injurious or wrongful taking away that good which is our neighbours, which may be considered both in the acts and adjuncts.

1. This act of stealing may be done, 1. By secret theiving, as those that privately take away, as opportunity serveth, Jer. 49. 9.

2. By fraudulent dealing, in overreaching, or cheating neighbours, denying them their due, 1 Thess. 4. 6.

3. By violent taking and spoiling, Isai. 1. 2. 3.

2. The adjuncts to this act from the instruments acting may be these,

1. Heart-stealing, when in mind it is purposed, Mat. 15. 19.

2. Tongue-stealing when men speake to take away the right of neighbours, Luk. 19. 8.

3. Hand-theft, by actual taking away mans livelyhood as by violence, fraud, usury, oppression, and the like, Ex. 22. 3. Levit. 19. 13. All this is forbidden, not to do evil to any of our neighbours, superiours, equals, or inferiours.

Quest. 2. What is carried in the affirmative precept?

Answer. That we seek our neighbours good, and preserve him in state, and livelyhood.

1. All our thoughts and inward affections are to be employed in this.

2. All our words and speeches should tend to do them good.

3. All our actions should be, to the same same purpose to procure their good, both to superiours by giving them dues, and to equals by dealing them right, and to inferiours, and needy to supply their wants. No lesse is here commanded,

Ver. 15.

711

Quest. 3. What is the rule by which men must steere in abtaining from the evill and doing good to these neighbours?

Answer. Mans self, so is the general law, love thy neighbour as thy self, and the exposition of Christ, as ye would that men should do unto you, so do ye to them; &c. Math. 7. 12. Onely, we must understand self regularly, not left to its own lawles lusts; and then we may gather the rule of acting to our neighbours welfare as with respect to the negative law thus.

1. No man ought to get any outward estate for himself injuriously, Pro. 21. 6.

2. No man may lawfully keep that which is gotten unjustly, as Ahabs case to Naboth, 1 Kings. 21. 19.

3. No man may waste his own outward estate wickedly, Luk. 15. 13.

None of these things also must be done to our neighbour.

As to the affirmative this also must be noted,

1. That mens inward thoughts, desires, and resolutions for seeking their own good together with their indeavours, be moderate according to Gods will, Mat. 6. Ver. 32.

2. That mens labours in getting good, be just and upright Levit. 21. 14. 15.

3. That men use diligence, and industry in all honest means, 2 Thess. 3. 12. Pro. 10. 4.

Now according as thus God would have men seek their own outward livelihood; so he would have them to seek their neighbours; onely observing,

1. Order, to do right to self first; that is the rule.

2. Measure, not so much is required to neighbours, as to thyself.

3. Manner, with the same sincerity must we mind our neighbours good, as our own, to suffer, and rejoice with them.

Quest. 4. What is the principle of doing this?

Answer. Love to God, and conscience of his law, together with love to men according to Gods will, which alone fulfilleth Gods will;

These duties here.

D. 1. No man by the law of God must either get or keep outward good to himself, by false wayes.

D. 2. No man by the law of God must spend and waste his estate wickedly.

D. 3. Every man by Gods law must lawfully get, and keep his estate for himself and family.

D. 4. Next for mans life and body God provides for mens estates to live.

D. 5. No man by Gods law must spoil his neighbour, or hurt his estate no more than his own.

D. 6. Every man by Gods law is bound to prosper his neighbour in his estate, as themselves.

D. 7. Love to God and neighbour can onely in truth fulfil this law, Ver. 15.

5. Now followeth Gods law which provideth for the good name of our neighbour, and is the 9th in the general number. It is given in these terms with ours, Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour. — Thou shalt not answer, Ver. 16.

Heb. — Thou shalt not falsely testify a false witness, &c. Sept. About this law also we have the matter, rule, and principle of obedience to consider,

1. The matter of this law is a double command.

1. Negative prohibiting hurt to our neighbours name.

2. Affirmative commanding to preserve it.

Quest. 1. What meaneth the negative law?

Answer. The understanding of the object and the act will clear it up.

1. The object, here concerned generally considered, is a mans neighbour, as in all the rest of the second table, but more especially the formal object of this law, is the name, fame or credit of our neighbour.

2. The act of evil against this forbidden is, as we read bearing false witness, or answering a testimony of falshood about him. Now this act is external, and properly in the letter it concern's the tongue the instrument of speech; but being a spiritual law it must certainly reach the inner man. In this all evil-speaking to, or of our neighbour, is expressly forbidden, with the very first causes, occasions, or adjuncts of it. Now according to the various consideration of the subject to whom this law is given, these evils may be diversified, as,

1. Man being considered in a common station, as we are in our privat stations one to another, and so he may be guilty in thought, word, and deed,

1. There may be heart-hurting of the neighbours name, by evil thoughts, or inventions tions of hurt by causeless jealousies, by finfull desires of the neighbours fall, that there might be just occasion to reproach; and delight in it, 2 Sam. 19. 25. Pl. 52.

2. The evill of the tongue is here forbidden against neighbours credit,

1. By speaking false things to reproach.

2. By upbraiding infirmities.

3. By scorning them by word.

4. By whispering.

5. By backbiting.

6. By cursing.

3. Evil against the neighbours name indeed is committed by other members: there is ear-falshewnes in hearing reproaches, and eye-falshewnes in seeing abuses of neighbours, and conniving, and hand-falshewnes by writing defamation, and foot-reproach by spurning, & countenance-defaming by yeering, &c.

2. Man considered in special orders transgresseth this law, as,

1. Judges in doing evil to neighbours by partial hearing, corrupt inclining to respect persons, and giving wrong sentence to mans hurt in his name.

2. Plaintiffs sin, by false accusation malicious suborning others to attest evil, contentious prosecutions of neighbours to reproach.

3. Defendants sin in this case, by denying truth and evading justice by unlawful means to the detriment of the neighbours credit.

4. Witnesses sin by denying to witness truth, and by bearing false witness in any kind or way, to the hurt of their neighbour. In all these wayes the law of God forbids hurting the neighbours name, and no lesse in lawyers, and jurors so we have a brief view of the negative law.

Quest. 2. What meaneth the affirmative law?

Answer. The contrary duty of seeking and preserving our neighbours credit, by thought, word, and deed is the summe of this Psal. 15. 3. Thinking truth, speaking truth, and doing truth to and about our neighbours name or credit, is the summe of this precept; at no time must we hurt his name, and at all times when we are called thereunto must we by truth preserve it. And this concerneth all the several sorts of persons in the negative part.

Quest. 3. What is the rule of doing all this?

Answer. Mans self, and his own name or credit; this he must not hurt but preserve as a precious oymment by truth, and no lesse must be careful to do, as to his neighbours credit.

Quest. 4. What must be the principle of obeying this?

Answer. Love out of a pure heart, a good conscience, and faith unfeigned, this fulfils the law.

This informeth us.

D. 1. Mans good name and credit is dear to God, whose law is given to preserve it.

D. 2. No man by falshood or wickednes must reproach his own credit.

D. 3. Every man must preserve his own good name by doing truth.

D. 4. No man must hurt his neighbours name by falshood, any more than his own.

D. 5. Every man in all ranks is bound in thought, word, and deed by truth to preserve his neighbours credit, as his own.

D. 6. Love onely out of a pure heart can enable souls to keep this law. Ver. 16.

6. In the last place followeth the last precept in the second Table, which is also the last of the ten words mentioned, Ex. 34. 28. Deut. 4. 13. and the 10. 4. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbours house, &c. thou shalt not desire thy neighbours wife, neither covet thy neighbours house, &c. Deut. 5. 21. His field added. Readings agree in the matter. To the opening of this the three former heads must be opened. The contents, rule, and principle of obedience to this law,

1. The contents of this law are in a double command,

1. Negative, as expressed, Thou shalt not, &c.

2. Affirmative as implied, Thou shalt, &c.

Quest. 1. What is the meaning of the negative precept

Answer. The understanding of object and act forbidden will clear this.

1. As to the object, it is considerable,

1. In the expresse materiality of it, and so all particulars mentioned, are things proper to our neighbour, house, wife, man, maid, ox, ass, and all that properly is our neighbours.

2. In the formality of it, and so it is all that which God in his will prohibits, either toward God or man. for therefore our neighbours good must not be coveted because God forbid's it, and upon the same account nothing which God forbid's, must be lusted for. It is therefore put indefinitely without any object determining the act by the Apostle, Thou shalt not covet. Rom. 7. 7.

2. As חכח

2. As to the act which is one word doubled here, Exod. 20. 17. but Moses useth two words, Deut. 5. 21. both note a vehement desire, but that is not all in this place; here it expresseth an irregular desire, contrary to Gods will, which in scripture properly is called lust. Note,

1. That here expressly the first act of lust is forbidden, as such an irregular motion of the soul against God.

2. That natural desire in itself is not forbidden, for it is Gods creature.

3. That lust forbidden is not limited to sensitive faculties, but to all intellectual.

4. That all motions inward from first to last are comprehended under this is lust, imaginations, reasonings, determinations to evil forbidden, all the secret effects of original corruption, which consist in the depravation of our nature.

Quest. 2. What meaneth the affirmative law?

Answer. The law plainly is from the inward man to will, what God willeth in all things tending to our neighbours good, in all which God offereth to be desired of us; which indeed is the pure acting of will and affections, and all inward motions of soul to prosecute the will of God; pure nature, pure thoughts, pure resolutions, &c. both to our neighbours, & in the procuring of all good to them, and theirs, and to our God in all things concerning his glory.

Quest. 3. Was not all this forbidden and commanded in the foregoing lawes?

Answer. 1. The whole law is spiritual and doth reach hearts. 2. Distinction of commands is made by the will of God and not by the act of men God knowing best to order and number his lawes. 3. In other commands secret motions to sin were but forbidden reductivè here simpliciter. 4. God hath given this ex abundantia, to make plain his will to man. 5. This giveth the perfection of the law of God whereof himself is witness, and judge, and not men.

Quest. 4. What is the rule of obedience herein?

Answer. Mans self-love rightly stated; that as he desireth to enjoy his own lawfully, so he should desire his neighbours enjoyment of all his own, & not covet any thing from him.

Quest. 5. What is the principle of acting this?

Answer. Love also, such as God requireth to himself, and commandeth to our neighbour, which must be spiritual and sincere.

This teacheth us.

D. 1. The law of God reacheth and discerns the secret, inward parts, the thoughts of men.

D. 2. Gods law requirerth heart-duty to our neighbour as to himself.

D. 3. The perfection of Gods law is to prohibit lust, and command mans heart to be with God.

D. 4. Gods law expressly forbids the first motion of lust after the neighbours good from best to worst.

D. 5. Gods law strictly commands to desire our neighbours good with our hearts; in all his propriety.

D. 6. House and wife, servants and cattel are Gods distinct care to preserve to men from covetousnes.

D. 7. Gods law binds men from coveting neighbours good, and to desire their enjoyments as their own.

D. 8. All that lust is prohibited, which desireth any thing that God forbids.

D. 9. True love to God and man alone can perform obedience to this law.

D. 10. It is Gods peculiar, as to be lawgiver so to be witness and judge alone of the secret actions of mens souls either lusting against his will or longing for it, Ver. 17.

3. The last general head of this Chapter contains the consequences of this law-giving from Ver. 18. to the end, which are these two generally.

1. The peoples resentment of this terrible giving of the law, Ver. 18. 21.

2. The Lords adding some appendices to this moral law, Ver. 22. 26.

In the first of these we have to note also,

1. The peoples demeanour related, Ver. 18. 19.

2. The carriage of Moses unto them, Ver. 20.

3. The issue of both, Ver. 21.

1. As to the peoples carriage, it consists in these actions as they are recorded,

1. Their perception or observation of Gods appearance and discovery to them, And all the people saw the voices, and the lamps, and the voice of the trumpet and the mountain smoking Syr. Sep. Onk. Vulg. same. -- Heard the thunders and saw the lamps, -- Apprehended the voice and the flame, &c. Ar.

1. The subject affected here set out in the universality of it, All the people, that is the whole congregation of Israel, from the the greatest to the least, according to their capacities.

2. The affection of resentment upon them, they saw, which Moses in the repetition of this, Deut. 5. 23. expresseth ye heard the voice, some render it generally by perceiving, others apply particular senses to their objects, they heard the thunder and voice of trumpet and saw the lights, under this term of seeing then must be understood, a clear and deep impression of this terrible law-giving upon their minds, and senses, their reason was affected in their apprehensions and all their inward and outward senses with their objects respectively, by the terribleness of voices, &c.

3. The objects affecting them thus are here expressed,

1. Voices which were thunders.

2. Lamps or lights which were the lightnings.

3. The voice or terrible sound of the trumpet.

4. The mountain smoking, All dreadful things which might overwhelm sense.

Quest. Did they hear or see nothing else?

Answer. Yea doubtles the voice of words, or the law itself given, which they could not bear as the Apostle noteth, Hebr. 12. 18. 19. But these here are expressed, as noting the terrible manner of delivering those ten words or lawes to Israel.

Quest. How could they hear those words for the voices of thunders, &c?

Answer. Easily, for doubtles the voices were not altogether but successively, so that they did not trouble nor confound one another, but distinctly delivered, that the people did hear and see all these terrible discoveries as they were acted: and as to the voice of words, it is probable that it was no lesse terrible than the other, upon which account they could not bear them.

2. The next carriage of the people is expressed in their motion, upon the former impression made, And the people saw and removed away and they stood afarre of, Readings are to the same sense but various renderings. -- And all the people being afraid stood afarre of, Sept. Vulg. Saw and trembled, &c. Onk. -- The people feared and removed, &c. Sam. -- They were affrighted and stood afarre of, Ar. Syr. Herein are noted,

1. Their sense, they saw and perceived all foregoing.

2. Their motion. They removed back from the place where Moses had set them, the terrible sight approaching.

3. Their station, they stood afarre of from the bottom of the mount, this was their own posture, being terrified with the sight and hearing the voices, Ver. 18.

3. Their last demeanour was in their speech to Moses, And they said to Moses, Ver. 19. speak thou with us, and we will hear, and let not God speak with us, lest we dye, Readings are to the same sense. The Samaritan takes in that which is repeated, [Deut. 5. Herein we have to note,

1. Their address to Moses their mediator in this time of terror, they said to Moses, he was approachable and not God.

2. Their petition, Speak thou with us, where they desire suitable means of making known Gods mind to them by man, Gods minister.

3. Their promise hereupon, We will hear, that is, we will believe, love, and do all that thou shalt reveal to us of Gods mind, Deut. 5. 24.

4. Their deprecation, but let not God speak with us, that is in this terrible manner, and immediately from himself.

5. The reason of this deprecation, lest we dye. These voices from God himself will kill us, therefore let us hear them no more.

Quest. How could all the people speak to Moses?

Answer. He himself cleareth it that it was by the heads of the tribes and elders, Deut. 5. 23.

Quest. Did they mean what they said, we will hear?

Answer. 1. Out of present consternation they might really intend what they said, 2. They promise only in their own strength. 3. God knew notwithstanding that their hearts were not right, and so he hinteth to Moses, Deut. 5. 28. 29.

Quest. Why would they rather have Moses speak than God? Doth not God speak better?

Answer. 1. Not to preferre Moses before God. 2. It was because Gods voice was too high for them, but the voice of Moses was suited to them. 3. This is carried in it, because it is best hearing God, in and by a mediator. 4. Without this the law speaketh nothing but death.

Quest. Why should they fear to dye, whilst all this while they heard, and lived, Deut. 5. 24?

Answer. 1. It is true that they did admire their preservation under all those terrible voices. 2. Yet sense made them afraid, though the first voice spared them, the second might kill them. 3. Ignorance of Gods mind, and unbelief did set home such thoughts upon their hearts. Ver. 19.

2. The next head is, the return of Moses to Israel under these distracted expressions, And Moses said to the people fear not, for God is come for to tempt you, and that his fear may be before your faces, that ye may not sin, Sam. same. Readings tend to the same sense, -- Be of courage for God, &c.

Y y y y y 3 Sept.

Septuag. — The glory of God is revealed, Onkel. — The Angel of the Lord appeared to you that his fear might be in your hearts. Ar. Here note,

1. The mediators dignation to reply, And Moses, &c.

2. The matter of his reply, encouragement, fear not, The 70 read be bold confident, or of good cheer; their distracting fear and perturbation he labours to remove which fell upon them by the voices of God, this indisposed them to hear the law.

3. The reason of this reply, why he thus comforts them, it was the consideration of a threefold end of this Gods terrible appearance to them.

1. That God came to prove them, i. e. to put their faith, & love, and hope in God upon triall, not that God did not know them, but that they might better know themselves.

2. That Gods fear might be before their faces, i. e. always with them in practice, having seen the terrors of the Lord, this is filial fear and reverence to God, and his commands: by some it is read, That his fear might be in their hearts, for that is the proper subject of it.

3. That they might not sin against God therefore did the Lord bind them by his lawes, and astonish them with thunder and lightning, to rule them in his way and drive them from transgressing.

Quest. Can the terrors of the Lord keep men in his fear or take them off from sin?

Answer. 1. Not causally, for so Gods Spirit worketh onely, i. e. as the principal cause. 2. As means yet they may work upon sense, and under Gods gracious respect keep men from turning aside to evil, so are Gods lawes; and penalties intended, Ver. 20.

3. The issue of all is a double event mentioned.

Ver. 22. 1. On the peoples side. And the people stood a farre off; Readings agree.

2. On the part of Moses, And Moses drew near to the thick darkness where God was, Readings to the same sense. — Where the glory of God was, Onkel. — To the cloud wherein the light of God was, Arab.

Quest. Was the peoples station the same as mentioned Ver. 18. before Moses spake?

Answer. It seemeth not, for the first motion was from their own fear, but the second was upon the reply of Moses when God by him sends them back to their tents, Deut. 5. 20. So farre now they went, the conceit of Rabbi B. Uzziel, that they removed 12 miles is a fable, God herein yeelds to their infirmity.

Quest. Where was this thick darkness wherunto Moses did approach?

Answer. It was toward the lower part of the mount, whether God had descended in darkness and tempest as it is read, Heb. 12. 18. The most terrifying apparition of God daunts not the Mediator. It is his work to stand before the Lord.

Quest. How is God said to be in that darkness?

Answer. 1. It can onely be said signally, for God is not comprehended any where. 2. This appearance was suitable to this legal dispensation, as he is said to dwell in light under the Gospel-discovery, Ver. 21.

Observe we hence.

D. 1. Terrible is the discovery of the law to make it awful upon mens hearts.

D. 2. Duties to neighbours as well as God are enjoined with the same terror.

D. 3. The terribleness of the law in its tradition should be perceived by men.

D. 4. The real sense of the lawes terribleness will make soules fly from it and God, and keep distance. Ver. 13.

D. 5. In the sense of Gods terribleness a Mediator will be desirable.

D. 6. Sinners desire the Mediators voice to speak to them, when under terrors.

D. 7. Sinful creatures are forward to promise audience, and obedience to God under terrors.

D. 8. Sinners cannot indure the voice of God speaking in his law.

D. 9. Nothing but death appears unto sinners when God preaches his law on them, Ver. 19.

D. 10. The Mediators voice is all encouraging to poor sinners against the terrors of the law. Fear not.

D. 11. Gods terrible discovery of the law is primarily to try mens faith and love to him.

D. 12. The lawes tradition in terribleness is but to teach men Gods fear.

D. 13.

D. 13. The law was given so dreadfully to keep men from sin, Ver. 20.

D. 14. Soules though comforted by the Mediator, yet keep an appointed distance from God.

D. 15. The Mediator approacheth the darkest and most terrible discoveries of God.

D. 16. God is and stayeth where the Mediator commeth; they meet together, Ver. 21.

2. The next general consequent upon the giving of the law as here reported, is the addition of some special rules tending to the fuller explication of the second precept. These are two,

1. Concerning means of worshipping by images here again forbidden, V. 22. 23.

2. Concerning the Altar on which sacrifice was to be offered unto God, as the positive worship commanded, Ver. 24. 25. 26.

In the former we have these particulars to note,

1. Gods condescension to the people to speak to them by Moses as they desired, And Jehovah said unto Moses, thus shalt thou say unto the sons of Israel, Readings are to the same sense. — Say to the house of Jacob, declare to the sons of Israel. Sept. — These things thou shalt say, Onkel. — The family of Israel, Syr. Herein note,

1. The power speaking, is Jehovah.

2. The Mediator by whom he speaketh, is Moses.

3. The subject to whom he speaketh, the children of Israel.

All this is as they desired, Ver. 19.

2. The message which he now sends to them by Moses, which containeth these two heads,

1. A reminding them of his voice to them which they could not bear, Ye have seen that I have spoken with you from the heavens, Readings the same. — Ye have seen with your eyes. Ar. Herein note,

1. Gods citing them as eie-witnesses, that when he delivered his law to them, they saw no similitude of God, therefore none to be imagined or invented, Deut. 4. 12. The cause of the interdiction following.

2. That they perceived onely a voice from God, wherein he mind's them,

1. That he himself spake to them, not another.

2. That he spake from the heavens, Deut. 4. 36. Neh. 7. 13. Where his throne is.

3. That he spake with them, and to them, wherewith they seemed to be affected.

Quest. How can this that the law was spoken now here from heaven consist with that of the Apostle, that it was spoken from earth, and that the Gospel onely was spoken from heaven, Heb. 12. 25.

Answer. 1. The distinction made by the Apostle is not between the law & the Gospel, but between Mediator and Mediatour, Moses and Christ. 2. That therefore the meaning is, Moses spake on earth, not God. 3. The law being the same will of God, as in the Gospel, both must be from heaven, because both from God, Ver. 22.

2. Gods prohibiting of them, more expressly from image-worship, Ye shall not make with me Gods of silver, and Gods of gold, ye shall not make unto yourselves, Most readings to the same sense, — Before me, Onkel. — Sept. Vulg. Ar. Leave out (with me). — Things to be worshipped, Ar. Here observe,

1. The subjects under prohibition, ye to whom my law is given, not onely sons of Israel but sons of men.

2. The prohibition itself, about which we may note,

1. The object of prohibition, two wayes considerable.

1. Formally, under the notion of Gods.

2. Materially under the terms of silver and gold.

2. The act prohibited, Ye shall not make, neither by invention, or imagination, or by hand-working, either of yourselves, or others.

3. The modification of this act, Ye shall not make such Gods,

1. With me.

2. Not for yourselves thereby to come unto me.

Quest. What is meant by Gods here?

Answer. 1. Not that which is truly God, for he is but one. 2. God speaks but in the language of idolatrous men, who call such things Gods, & have such repute of them; but he loaths them as dunghill things. 3. The phrase is used to their understanding, who were apt to conceive such things Gods; that the most high notwithstanding did suppress them.

Quest. Why doth he onely mention Silver and Gold?

Answer. 1. Not excluding wood, and stone, for of such materials many did make use to this purpose. 2. It might be because these metalls are most usual with men to be desired, and admired, of which they are inclined to make Gods, Isai. 31. ver. 24. 3. The argument is stronger from the better metall to the worse, if no Gods of Gold, then none of wood or stone, &c.

Quest.

Quest. What is the act here forbidden?
 Answ. 1. The making of such materials to become Gods, which is,

1. In such apprehension or esteem of them in their minds he makes them such who think of them to be such.

2. In framing such materials in any forms to such use, either by themselves or others whom they hire, goldsmiths, &c. Isa. 40. &c.

Quest. Why is this prohibition here repeated?

Answ. 1. For explanation of image-worship forbidden in the second commandment. 2. For deeper impression upon the spirits of men who are too prone unto image and imagination-worship.

Quest. What is meant by this specification of the act, with me?

Answ. 1. Plurality of Gods is expressly forbidden; With me or before me, as Onkel. 2. The making of these, and God together to be worshipped. 3. The making of these as means of worship, to meet with God by them. The Vulg. Latine leaveth this (With me) quite out of the text most corruptly. Ye shall not make them for yourselves as means whereby to worship me. No such helps you need.

Which gives us to observe.

D. 1. Jehovah doth yeeld to the desire of fearful sinners to speake to them by a mediatour.

D. 2. The mediatour is injoined to tell Gods Israel all his mind to them in his own words.

D. 3. Jehovah cites his Israel to be eye-witnesses of his appearance, and speaking to them.

D. 4. It is Jehovah will that Israel should know his law to be from heaven, Ver. 22.

D. 5. Among all lawes God presseth once and again the law of worship on his people.

D. 6. Gods worship must by no means be divided between him and others.

D. 7. Material Gods of silver and gold are forbidden as an abomination.

D. 8. Even images of best materials made, as a means to have communion with God, are expres- sely forbidden. None with God. All are false Gods, Ver. 23.

2. The next additional advise for worship is about Gods positive means injoined, as the Altar for sacrifice. Wherein also we have to note,

1. An expresse command for Altar-worship, Ver. 24.

2. A regulation as to the matter of it, Ver. 25.

3. A prohibition as to the form of it, Ver. 26.

In the former we may observe.

1. The command itself.

2. The promise encouraging to obey it.

1. The command is thus expressed;

An Altar of earth shalt thou make unto me, and thou shalt sacrifice thereon, thy burnt offerings, and thy peace offerings, thy sheep and thy oxen, Readings are to the same sense. Arab. reads imperatively and plurally, make ye, &c. Wherein note,

1. The work commanded, Thou shalt make for me an Altar of earth;

1. The subject commanded is the Church, and such therein, whom this concerned.

2. The object terminating it, Jehovah, unto me.

3. The work itself, is an external means of worship, whereof,

1. The form, is an Altar, an instrument for sacrificing.

2. The matter of it, is earth, Gen. 8. 20.

3. The singularity of it, one onely is here injoined, one in number.

2. The use of it prescribed, Thou shalt sacrifice thereon thy burnt offerings, &c. Whereof,

1. As to the kind of sacrifice, it was twofold,

1. Some expiatory, as burnt offerings that ascended in the fire.

2. Some gratulatory, as peace-offerings, both were offered before, and hereafter are settled in the law, with special rules, Levit. 1. and 3.

2. As to the matter they were either of sheep or oxen. These are inclusive to other things required.

2. The promise followeth, In every place where I shall make my name a memorial I will come unto thee, and I will bless thee, Sept. Sam. Vulg. To the same sense.

Where I shall make my glory dwell there I will send my blessing, &c. Onkel.

In every place remember my name, and I will hear thee, &c. Ar. Where thou shalt remember my name, I will come, &c. Syr. Herein we have,

1. The duty supposed, which is making Gods name a memorial, which carrieth in it,

1. Gods act of sovereignty in appointing ing his name to be had in remembrance, and made a memorial.

2. Mans act of obedience, in remembering God, and making his name a memorial for praise.

2. The place expressed, which is indefinite or universal, every place, where God shall set his name, and souls by sacrificing after his will shall make a memorial of it.

3. The promise itself twofold,

1. I will come unto thee. Where he ingageth access and gracious meeting with such souls to revive them.

2. I will bless thee, where he promisseth the confluence of all good spiritual, and temporal, and eternal; for this life and that which is to come.

Quest. Why is Altar and sacrifice-worship here commanded?

Answ. 1. Gods wisdom after mans sin found out this way to reconcile men to himself, Gen. 4. 2. These were not commanded for themselves, but in order to typify the Son of God, by whom God can be worshipped onely in truth. His God-head was the Altar, his manhood the sacrifice, himself God-man the Priest. So that when these were carnally used without Christ, God rejected them all.

Quest. Why would God have the Altar of earth?

Answ. 1. In opposition to silver and gold, before mentioned, God loveth simplicity. 2. It was Gods will for present, afterward God commanded other materials. 3. The Church was moving, and therefore earth might soon be demolished. For one Altar onely was to be at one time to typify Christ the onely altar, Ver. 24.

Ver. 25. 2. A further regulation of the matter followeth, And if thou wilt make unto mee an altar of stones, thou shalt not build them with cutting or hewing, for if thou lift up thy tool, sword or axe upon it, thou hast polluted it, Readings to the same scope and sense.

Hewen stones. Sept. Onkel. Vulg. Some read pollute them for it, that is, the stones, for the Altar made of them. Where we may note,

1. A supposition of a work upon other matter, If thou wilt make unto me, an altar of stones.

2. A prohibition thereupon, Thou shalt not build them with hewing or stones of hewing, or hewen stones.

3. A reason of this prohibition, for so they should pollute Gods altar, and make it an abomination.

Quest. How should this pollution come by polishing?

Answ. 1. Pollution is in worship, whatsoever is not Gods will. 2. God need's not mans art to better his worship.

3. This is all at Gods pleasure, for afterward God gave men gifts to frame with instruments the works of his tabernacle and temple. This then was but temporary; while God should reveale himself otherwise to his Church, Ver. 25.

3. In the last place about this altar God add's a law as to the form of placing or setting it, where we have also to note,

1. The law itself which is by prohibition also, And thou shalt not go up by steps upon mine altar, Readings are to the same.

2. The reason of it, That thy nakednes be not discovered thereon, Readings to the same, Thy filthines or shame, many read.

Quest. Was it a constant law to stand that no steps should be to the Altar?

Answ. No. But for this time where it is said, their garments being loose and short might accidentally upon ascent be turned aside, and not cover their nakednes, but afterward God made a law for the Priests robes, and breeches? Exod. 18. 42. 43.

Quest. What was this law and reason aimed at?

Answ. 1. To exclude all bodily indecency in the worship of God. 2. To teach all spiritual uncomeliness especially to be avoided in our appearing before God, that no provocation be given to his jealousy.

Whence we conclude.

D. 1. Altar and sacrifice-worship God requirereth from his sinfull creatures.

D. 2. Altar and sacrifice must carry Christ in them, if sinners by them be accepted.

D. 3. Gods altar-worship is plain and simple, not consistent with the pomp, and glory of the world.

D. 4. By this worship God makes his name to be a memorial with men in every place.

D. 5. It is mans duty to make the name of God to be remembered every where by this worship.

D. 6. Where ever men do thus make Gods name a memorial, there God will come to them and bless them, Ver. 24.

D. 7. Gods law strikly order's all the means of worship to be simple after his mind.

D. 8. Mans art in Gods worship otherwise than as he allowes, doth pollute and defile it in his account. V. 25.

Zzzzz

D. 9.

D. 9. All things are expressly prohibited, that may discover mens shame in Gods worship.

D. 10. Gods great care is to make man comely in body and spirit for worship that he may blesse him, Ver. 26.

Here ends the 17th section of the law according to the Hebrews.

CHAP. XXI.

P. P. P.

The 18th Section.

Mishpatim.

IN this Chapter we are to consider the second sort of lawes which God gave to Moses for Israel while he staid at the neither part of the mount which are judicial, and of these he treat's from the beginning of this Chapter to the 9th verse of the 23th Chapter, about which we may observe,

1. The title of the whole bulk of lawes, Ver. 1.

2. The particular enumeration of them, from Ver. 2 and onward, which are various, and as appendices unto several commands of the moral law; of which in this Chapter we have lawes relating unto three commands of the second table,

1. To the law of relations in the 5th precept, Ver. 2. 11.

2. To the law for mans life in the 6th Ver. 12. 32.

3. To the eighth precept about mans goods, Ver. 33. 36.

I shall note no more here but in the next Chapter follow it.

Ver. 1. As to the title of the whole it is thus, And these are the judgments which thou shalt set before them. Readings agree, Sept. herein,

1. The term of connection and, now as ours, which annexeth this to the former additions which God spake, not with his own voice as the moral law, but by Moses unto Israel.

2. The matter connected, and herein we have,

1. A proposition of the title, These are the judgments, or righteous ordinances, that is, rules and penalties for the better observing Gods law.

2. A proposition of the use of them, These thou shalt set before them or to their faces,

1. The Minister enjoined is Moses from Jehovah.

2. The work enjoined is the proposal or declaration of these judgments by setting them in sight.

3. The object, before them, which notes first their heads and rulers, and then the people by them, so that the whole congregation of Israel were here concerned in these judgments.

Quest. 1. What are these judgments propounded?

Ans. 1. In general they are the righteous words of God, and so include the lawes unto which they are annexed. 2. Yet more strictly here, the term signifyeth, the righteous rule for regulating duties to these lawes, and sentence for executing penalties upon transgression of the same. 3. They are external onely.

Quest. 2. Why are such judgments added?

Ans. 1. It is the will of the law-giver. 2. They are as a sense to the law, to keep it from violation. 3. The perverse nature of man required these, who otherwise is apt to break Gods bounds, and needeth by these to be restrained.

Quest. 3. Are these judgments now in force?

Ans. 1. As they are any of them grounded upon special time and place they are not, so some things here given about servants. 2. All such as are grounded upon everlasting reason, and universal equity are in force; they coming from the justest judge of proportions, God himself, and acknowledged righteous by the light of nature.

Quest. 4. How was Moses here to propound them?

Ans. 1. By word of mouth at present to make Israel know them. 2. By writing, unto which afterward God commanded him, to leave them as a standing record to Israel.

We learn from it.

D. 1. Additional rules Gods pleased to give for opening and informing the brief of the moral law.

D. 2. A rule of law for penalties external God seeth needful to keep men unto obedience to his commands.

D. 3. Such lawes for penalties are deserved by God, These are, &c.

D. 4. Penalties so well as lawes God would have made known to his people.

D. 5. Such judgments God loveth to be declared by a mediator, he speaks speakes not these as his law before.

D. 6. It concern's all the Israel of God to know all his judgments as his lawes delivered to them. Both that Israel then, and that now, Ver. 1.

2. After the title God proceeds to the judgments themselves and the first here in order concerneth the law of relation in the fifth precept, some reduce it to the eighth precept, which upon some account may be, but eminently judgments about relations do appertain to the fifth command; so I take it here, now the judgments here discovered concern two sorts of servants.

1. Men servants, Ver. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

2. Maid servants, Ver. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11.

Ver. 2. To the first. In the judgement concerning men servants notes,

1. An act supposed, If thou buy an Hebrew servant, Someread when, &c. Readings to the same sense, Sept. Sept. — A servant a son of Israel, Onkel. — A servant a Jew, Syr.

2. A judgment thereupon from God twofold,

Ver. 2. 1. Concerning the time of service, Six years shall he serve, serve thee, diverse. Readings the same, and no difficulty in the terms,

1. His work is, servants labour in all lawful things.

2. The duration, it must be for 6 years, all this is in terms.

Ver. 2. 2. Concerning his freedom, And in the seventh year he shall go out free for nothing, Readings agree, — Out of thy house, Syr. Herein are expresse,

1. The time stated, in the seventh year from his purchase.

2. The liberty enjoined, he shall go out free.

3. The condition specified, without price, gratis or for nothing, Ver. 2.

3. Concerning several cases, about this are several judgments, here also expressed, as,

Ver. 3. 1. In case he was bought and became a servant alone, or by himself, this is Gods judgment; If he came in with his body, he shall go out with his body, Sam. — So if he came in alone, Sept. Onk. Syr. — Caelebs, Ar. — With what garment he came in, with such let him go out, Vulg. inconclume et aliene prorsus, all others render the same sense; for by body here is meant himself, where we have expressed.

1. The case, his single buying and entrance into bondage.

2. The judgment, his single going out at the time appointed.

Ver. 3. 2. In case he was married when he was bought then the case runs thus, If he were the husband of a wife, his wife also shall go out with him, Readings are all to the same sense. — If a wife came in with him, Sept. — If he had a wife, Vulg. and Ar. Here also occur to observance.

1. A case supposed, he and his wife were bought.

2. The judgment, they sh all both go out free from bondage together, Ver. 3.

3. In case he came in single and his Master had given him a wife, the judgment is thus, If his Master have given him a wife, and she have born him sons or daughters, the wife and her children shall be her Masters, and he shall go out with his body, Readings are all to the same sense, onely the Vulg. falsely — He shall go out with his cloathing, wherein the words are plain,

1. The case supposeth that the Master hath given him a wife, and shee in the time of service hath brought forth children to her husband.

2. The judgment hereupon, which stands in two parts,

1. The wife and children are sentenced to be the Lords, who gave her to wife.

2. The man is sentenced to go out free with his own body, if he so shall choose, Ver. 4.

4. In case the man servant should not desire to leave his condition, with wife and children, the judgment is, And if that servant saying shall say, I love my Master, my wife, and my sons, I will not go out free, Readings are to the same sense, Herein,

1. The case onely supposed in two things,

1. In the love of the servant to his Master, wife, &c.

2. In refusal of liberty, I will not, &c. Ver. 5.

2. The judgment followeth, Then his Master or Lord shall make him come to the Gods or judges, he shall also bring him to the door or to the door-post, and his Master shall bore his ear thorough with an awl, and he shall serve him for ever. All readings to the same sense onely one reads Gods, other judges, others the judgement-seat of God, which here is with judges. In this we have these 4 clauses making the sentence,

1. That the Master must bring this servant to the judges, or public Magistrates, none might do this upon his own private arbitrement.

2. That after judgement given by the Gods concerning this matter, the Lord of that servant should bring him to the door or door-post, as is expressed.

3. That he should bore thorough that servants ear an awl, as the sentence determines.

4. That after this he should be a servant unto that Master for ever. Thus have we the judgement of this servant in all these cases, Ver. 6. Several queries must be answered to clear the sense and scope of this judgement in the whole.

Quest.

Quest. 1. How came in servitude among men, which is the subject occasioning these judgments?

Answer. 1. In the state of innocence doubtless, order was in some relations and must have bin in others, had man increased in that state, but then had no curse nor pain, nor evil bin in it. 2. Sin being entered into the world, became the first trouble of order, i. e. to make superiority burdensome, and inferiority a burden in all relations. 3. Such disturbance of order being made by sin, God was pleased to write that law of nature in all mens hearts, & preserve it, that order of superiority and inferiority was necessary to the very life of the universe, and so Masters and Servants. 4. In this constitution of God sin prevailing with men superiours did oppress, and inferiours groan under their subjection, whereupon God saw that it was needful to interpose by his judgments, and upon this account have we several rules for the right demeanour between Masters and Servants given both in the law, & Gospel.

Quest. 2. Why doth God give special lawes to the Hebrews about servants?

Answer. 1. Upon a special choice which he had made of them to be his visible people. 2. Because of the eminent hardness of heart which was among the rulers. 3. Because the servants were Gods, so well as their Lords, Levit. 25. 42. 4. God added to his special lawes, special blessings, Deut. 15. 18. Therefore he gave these judgments to them.

Quest. 3. Upon what account did they become servants among these Hebrews?

Answer. 1. By Covenant, when any were poor and not able to subsist of themselves, and did so bind and engage themselves to serve others, Deut. 15. 12. 2. By sentence of the Magistrate for theft, Ex. 22. 3. And in this case do some Rabbins understand the present judgment. But by the law it appears it was ordered upon both accounts. Afterward it grew a custom to sell them for debt, but this was the increase of sin and contempt of Gods law, 2. Kings. 4. 1.

Quest. 4. How is the number of these 6 years to be numbred? And how terminated?

Answer. 1. From the day of sale must the account begin to the end of 6 years. 2. It is conceived by some that always they were not bound to serve the whole fixe, because the seventh year of release might interpose and cut off the remainder, but that more than 6.

they should not serve. 3. Others conceive that none but the year of jubilee could shorten the time, Levit. 25. 40. 4. But ordinarily the term was so long to continue as in the letter is expressed.

Quest. 5. Is this judgment for 6 years service only, now binding as to Christian servants?

Answer. 1. Surely no; as to the letter, but the term may be either more or lesse. 2. Yet as to the equity and reason of the law, something is of moral consideration; that no time of service be extended beyond such a space as may tend to the good of the servant. 3. We have none usually in the Church, but Covenant-servants, and they were and are at liberty, if they thinke fit, to bind themselves for longer time.

Quest. 6. What was the state of this freedom?

Answer. 1. Immunity from the relation of servants, and all the burdens attending thereupon. 2. Liberty to be for a mans self, and look to his own, to build his family, and provide for such as God should give him to take care over. 3. Indowment with goods, and sometimes land, Deut. 15.

Quest. 7. May Christians hereupon buy and sell servants, either of their own, or other nations?

Answer. 1. The partition-wall being broken down, all nations who will receive the Gospel are become now alike in relation unto God. 2. Violence, to take reasonable creatures like beasts, and make them serve like beasts, is as wicked for Christians to do to others, as it is for Pagans to do with them. 3. Yet by agreement to take servants upon price and make them in all lawful things to serve; and that with respect to bring them unto Christ, may be, and is just, but not otherwise.

Quest. 8. What kind of wife is it that verse the third is supposed to come into service with him?

Answer. 1. A wife of the same nation. 2. One in lawful marriage, whose condition might be such as to be sold with him; and therefore was shee to be freed with him.

Quest. 9. What wife did the Master give to him, and how was she given?

Answer. 1. She must be abond, woman of another nation, yet not a Canaanit, for the law for Hebrew women was otherwise, ver. 7. Such were for the Master himself, or his son; but strangers were bond-women, Levit. 25. 44. 2. Neither did or could the Master force the servant, but with his his own consent. 3. Neither was this allowed by the law of God, but in case such things were done, God in these judgments provides against greater evils that might be consequent.

Quest. 10. Was it lawful thus for the Masters to separate man and wife in setting free the servant?

Answer. 1. It is to be supposed, that it was no true or lawful marriage, therefore the separation was the lesse. 2. Yet the Masters act in giving and separating is sinful; for this law alloweth him not to do so, but in case he do so, it takes care to prevent greater evils.

Quest. 11. Why was the servant brought before the judges?

Answer. 1. To discover that God left no privat man to be judge in his own matters. 2. It was for orderly execution of Gods judgments. 3. To put that humane sanction visible upon them to keep men in awe; for in such cases they feared men.

Quest. 12. Why was his ear boared at the dore?

Answer. 1. It was done as a signal of his deduction unto bondage. 2. It was a note of infamy upon one that made so little account of liberty. 3. This was to be done by the master himself, to mark him for his own, God herein brands slavish dispositions, who care not for his freedom.

Quest. 13. What was meant by this ever?

Answer. 1. Sometime it notes duration unto the term of life, between relations, Rom. 7. 1. 2. Sometimes the term unto the year of jubilee; this especially is conceived to be the extent of this ever, Levit. 25. 40.

Quest. 14. Unto what scope was this especially intended?

Answer. 1. To keep spirits within moral bounds. 2. To represent something of the state of spiritual bondage and liberty; that we may know the evil and refuse it, and the good to choose it, to abhorre spiritual bondage, and make out to the glorious liberty of Gods children in Christ,

Which further informeth us,

D. 1. Notwithstanding all the general lawes given to men, God hath reserved some special judgments for his church.

D. 2. Among the judgments given to the Church, God hath provided much concerning servants.

D. 3. Servants in the Church must do faithful service for their time.

D. 4. In all things the judgments of God about servants are not the same to the Jewish and Christian Church.

D. 5. There is a time stinted for service to these in the Church by the judgments of God.

D. 6. Liberty is a more ingenuous condition, when God calleth thereunto. Ver. 6.

D. 7. Freedom should carry proportion unto the state of service; single to single, double to double. Ver. 3.

D. 8. Mens irregular pressures of others to servitude, hath occasioned judgments to ardar them. Ver. 4.

D. 9. He that loveth servitude is adjudged thereunto by God with sign of infamy. Ver. 5.

D. 10. In perpetuating servitude upon any God leaveth not privat men to their wills.

D. 11. God in judgment delivers men to an ever of servitude when they choose it.

D. 12. Gods judgments about corporal bondage and freedom should mind us about our spiritual; to hate slavery and love freedom; Ver. 6.

2. The judgment of God about maid-servants now followeth, Ver. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. Wherein several cases and judgments are also proposed,

1. About selling maids, into service, Ver. 7. And when or if a man sell his daughter for a maid-servant, she shall not go out according to the going out of menservants, Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. to the same sense, — As other bondmaids run away Sept. — Filiam parvulam. Ben. Uz. — As bondmaids are wont to go out, Vulg.

1. The case is this if any man of the sons of Israel shall sell his daughter for an handmaid, herein is supposed,

1. A seller, the Father.
2. A buyer, the master.
3. The matter of sale, a daughter.
4. The use unto which she is sold, to be a maid-servant, the letter is plain.

2. The

the weaker sexe, before men.
Ver. 7.

D. 5. Masters as wel as parents are apt to dislike, and deal hardly with the children of the Church under them

D. 6. In case of such distaste and hard dealing, God provides for the freedom of weaker ones.

D. 7. God will not have any to make merchandize of the children of the Church.

D. 8. Mans deceitfulness occasions Gods faithfulness to provide for his oppressed children. Ver. 8.

D. 9. Gods judgment determines all relations justly to be used, servants as servants, children as children. V. 9.

D. 10. In case of mans rejecting a due wife, Gods judgment requires him to make due provision for her.

D. 11. Under the hardest pressures of the daughters of Israel God would have them free and ingenuous.

D. 12. Gods justice appears in legal freedom, & his goodness eminently in the Gospel-liberty under Christ our head, Ver. 11.

Now follow those judgments annexed to the 6th moral precept which concerneth the life of our neighbour, from Ver. 12. to Ver. 32. Wherein is provided.

1. Against hurting the life of man by man, Ver. 12. 27.

2. Against the annoying mans life by beasts, Ver. 28. 32.

In the former judgments which secure the life of man from being endangered by man, we have,

1. The judicial law general in this matter, Ver. 12. He that smiteth a man and he dye or be dead, dying he shall dye, Readings to the same sense, ——— Shall strike willing to kill him, Vulg. ——— With killing let him be killed, Onk. ——— Let him be slain; Ar. ——— He shall utterly be killed, Syr. Sept. and Sam. as Hebr. ——— A son or a daughter of Israel, shall be certainly slain with the sword, B. Uz. Herein note,

1. The subject guilty here supposed, He that smiteth a man so that he dieth, that is, he that killeth, or smiteth the life of a man, Levit. 24. 17.

2. The judgment or penalty inflicted, dying he shall dye; He shall surely be killed, but this do in a just and regular way.

1. By a just indictment before the judges, Deut. 19. 17.

2. By due attestation of witnesses, Num. 35. 30.

3. By sentence pronounced by the judge according to the law, Deut. 17. 9. Ver. 12.

2. Several cases & judgments in special follow about the life of man, as may be seen in order,

1. In case of unwilling slaughter or chance-medly, And if he hath not lien in wait, but God hath made him occasionally come into his hand, then I will set a place for thee whether he shall slie. Readings are to the same sense, ——— Make for thee a place, &c. Syr. ——— He who hath not laid wait, &c. most read. Herein,

1. The case is supposed and that two wayes,

1. If a man lye not in wait, or hunt not for the life of his neighbour, as hunters for game,

2. If God deliver him, or make him occasionally fall into his hand, which case, we have notably stated in a special instance, Deut. 19. 4. 5.

2. The judgment hereupon, I will appoint thee a place whether he shall slie, that is, either the altar in the Tabernacle while they were in the wilderness, or els the cities of refuge, which afterward were to be built, Deut. 19. 1, 2, 3. Num. 35. 6. The exposition of which judgment is more fully given, Num. 35. 21, 24. &c. ver. 13.

2. In case of wilful murder, But if he proudly deal against his fellow or neighbour to kill him with guile from mine altar shalt thou take him to dye, Readings are all to the same sense, ——— Of industry and by treachery, Vulg. ——— Lay hold upon his neighbour to kill him and slay, &c. Sept. ——— Though he be a Priest and Minister at mine altar, &c. Ben. Uz. ——— The great Priest, Targ. Hieruf. Herein also note,

1. The case supposed, wilful murder in two characters,

1. If he deal proudly, violently, presumptuously.

2. If he kill him with guile, and lying in wait.

2. The judgement, though he should slie unto the place of refuge, city or altar, yet that must not shelter him, but dye he must, as Deut. 19. 11. 13.

Quest. 1. How many sorts of murder do these judgments suppose?

Answer. But two onely. 1. Wilful murder, when any by fraud or force set upon their neighbours to destroy them. 2. Unwitting and unwilling slaughter, when providentially a man falleth by the hand of his neighbour, he having no thought of hurt unto him,

Ver. 13.

Ver. 14.

him, which we call chance-medly, other kinds are not supposed here.

Quest. 2. Doth this judgement about wilful murder stand now in force?

Answer. Yea; for 1. The reason is the same now as ever, which is the price of blood in Gods account. 2. It was a law grounded in nature, long before the giving of the judgements to Israel. 3. God is the same judge now as then who doth require it. 4. It defileth lands now as then.

Quest. 3. Are there such places of refuge for unwilling murderers to fly to, under the Gospel?

Answer. 1. Places now need not to be set apart, they were peculiar to the Jews. 2. It is unwarrantable to make churches, &c. shelters to murderers, as with Papists, taking pattern from gentile idolaters. 3. Yet is there an equity in this, that the man which intended no harm, and yet God delivered his neighbour into his hand, should be by the Magistrats delivered from death.

Quest. 4. Is not murder in thought punishable?

Answer. 1. Not by this law, which was to be executed by men, and they are no judges of thoughts. 2. It is punishable, and shall be severely required by God, in his judgment, as the Lord Christ sheweth, Matt. 5. ver. 22.

Learn hence.

D. 1. The life of man is very dear to God to preserve it, man is Gods image, Gen. 9.

D. 2. The wilful murderer of his neighbour, by Gods law must dye without mercy. Ver. 2.

D. 3. Pride, presumption, and treachery, make men truly murderers.

D. 4. Gods altar or holy place must be no shelter unto bloody sinners from justice, Ver. 12.

D. 5. God may kill a man by his neighbours hand, and yet he be guiltless.

D. 6. In such cases God secures an innocent manslayer from death, Ver. 14.

3. In case of endangering the life of parents by children, of which we have a double instance,

1. Of smiting parents, Ver. 15.

2. Of cursing them, ver. 17.

Which because they concern the same relations, we shall join them here together, and therein we have to consider,

1. This respects the 5th command, as to the object.

2. The 6th precept, as to smiting,

1. The case, which is a twofold sin endangering the life of parents,

1. The smiting of them, v. 15. And he that smiteth his father or his mother, Readings are to the same sense, ——— He that beateth, Syr. ——— He that shall hurt father, &c. B. Uz. Wherein,

1. The offender, the child, son or daughter, generally here spoken of, and not restrained unto Israel.

2. The offended, the own father and mother of the child, His father, &c.

3. The offence itself, and that is smiting, striking with an instrument, or fist, cudgel, sword, hand, or otherwise by kicking, &c.

2. The reviling of them, And he that curseth his father and his mother Readings are to the same sense, onely the 70 read this for the 16th verse, ——— He that speaketh evil, &c. ——— Wrongeth, Ar.

Reproacheth, Syr.

1. The sinner, the same as before.

2. The object immediat, the same father and mother.

3. The sin itself, cursing, reviling and reproaching them. Levit. 20. 9.

2. The judgment upon this double case, is one and the same; dying he shall dye, or he shall be put to dyethe death, or he shall be surely put to death, by strangling for smiting, and by stoning for cursing, as Jon. Ben. Uz. giveth his gloss upon it, but certainly dye he must by this law. This respects the 5th and 9th precept.

Quest. 1. What kind of smiting is this which desereth such a judgment?

Answer. 1. Wilful smiting it must be.

2. Smiting unto death, it may be so was the smiting before. Ver. 12.

3. Smiting unto danger of loosing life, though death follow not; is generally here conceived to be the case; which may be strengthened by the judgment following upon the words. Onely this must carry its due aggravation with it.

Quest. 2. What kind of cursing is this so judged unto death?

Answer. 1. It must be wilful and malicious. 2. It must be stubborn and obstinate. 3. It must be persistent, & persevering against all privat means of reclaiming, Deut. 21. 18. Not unawares, &c.

Quest. 3. Why should these sins against parents deserve such death?

Answer. 1. It was the judgment of God, who is the onely judge of proportion between sin and penalty. 2. Parents are more sovereign persons unto

A a a a a chil-

Ver. 15.

Ver. 17.

Ver. 12.

children, than other common neighbours, foras much as these have life from them; nature therefore aggravates such sin to judgment. 3. These smitings and curfings are against the life of parents, though they may not actually in present take them away.

Quest. 4. Are these judgments in force now, or were they only for the Hebrews?

Ans. 1. They are not in the letter terminated upon the Hebrews as other judgments are, Ver. 2. 2. Piety to parents is a duty natural and concerneth all men, no lesse doth the sin in denying it. 3. Thereason of the penalty is the same now as ever. 4. Other nations have executed the like to cast them into the water in a bag, with a cocke, an ape, a viper and a dog, so the Romans, Egyptians first beat them, and then burnt them with thorns, &c. 5. God nowhere hath reversed these judgments; therefore when such impieties against parents grow so high, God hath determined thus upon the incorrigible, Levit. 20. 9.

Quest. 5. Had Fathers power in their own hands thus to exact from disobedient children?

Ans. Surely no, not by Gods ordering, though it were permitted by some nations; but the law bound them so bring them to the judges, who were to try and judge, Deut. 21. 18.

This teacheth us.

D. 1. Due honour to parents, and piety in children, God enjoins by special judgments.

D. 2. It is horrid wickednes for children presumptuously to smite or curse their own parents.

D. 3. The just God hath inflicted no lesse penalty than death upon such malicious sinners against parents, Ver. 15. 17.

Ver. 16. 4. In case of endangering mans life by stealing of him, &c. And he that stealeth a man and selleth him, or he be found in his hand, dying he shall dye, Ver. 16. Readings are to the same sense. Any of the sons of Israel, and overpowering sell him, and he be found with him, &c. Sept. A soul of the sons of Israel, &c. Onk. Herein we have,

1. The case supposed in three particulars,

1. If one steal a man or a soul, that is, by fraud or violence.

2. If he sell him and make traffick of him.

3. Or if he be found in his hand or possession to keep him. This is against the eighth precept as to stealing, but against the sixth also as endangering life by stealing and selling.

2. The judgment, He shall surely be put to death. This is the due penalty from God on men-stealers.

Quest. 1. Is stealing meritorious of death?

Ans. 1. Stealing souls is so, for it is stealing life and betraying it for gain.

2. God knoweth the proportion due, and he hath appointed it.

Quest. 2. Who was to execute this judgment?

Ans. Doubtles the Magistrates and Judges who were to try this capital crime as others, and then to give sentence.

Quest. 3. Is this judgment in force?

Ans. 1. The reason is in force. 2. The Gospel doth confirm the law in force. 1. Tim. 1. 10.

Learn we.

D. 1. Men-stealing to sell and spoile them is a most horrid sin against mans life.

D. 2. Death temporal and without repentance death eternal, is judged by God to such sinners, Ver. 16.

5. In case one man smite another unto danger though not unto death, Ver. 18. 19. Wherein we have.

1. The case supposed in these words, And, when or if men strive and a man smite his neighbour with a stone, or with a fist, and he dye not, but fallerth on a bed, Ver. 18. if he rise again and walk upon his staffe or crutch. Thus farre the case. Readings to the same sense, some expressions various, But lye upon a bed, Vulg. If two men revile, &c. But lye upon a bed. Sept. Fall upon the bed and be idle, Onk. With a stone or breaking instrument, &c. If he walk by himself, &c. Ar. He dyeth not but fall into a discase, &c. Syr. In these words the whole case carrieth these suppositions to be considered,

1. It supposeth the occasion a sudden quarrel, if men strive, or brawle, or contend.

2. It supposeth the act of violence, if a man smite his fellow with a stone or fist, which act by such instruments notes a dangerous wound, threatening the losse of life.

3. It supposeth the issue in several events,

1. If he dye not,

2. If yet he fall upon his bed, and be sick.

3. If

Ver. 19.

3. If he recover, and rise again.

4. If he walk abroad with his staffe.

2. The judgment upon this case, Then the smiter shall be innocent, only he shall give his ceasing and healing he shall heal (him,) readings are to the same sense; but other terms,

That he restore him his labours and cost upon Physicians. Vulg. Only he shall recompense for his cessation, and his medicines. Sept. He shall restore that when he was idle from his work, and shall pay the physicians reward, Onk. But he shall restore the dammage of his ceasing from work, and take care that he be healed, Sam. He shall give a mulst for his idleness, and for medicines wherewith he is healed. Only he shall give him for ceasing from his labour & a reward for the Physician. Syr. The judgment then consists of these 3 sentences.

1. The smiter shall be guiltles of murder, not of violence and injury.

2. The smiter shall pay for the losse of all his labour and time, wherein he should provide for himself and family.

3. The smiter must take care for his thorough healing, and pay for that also, Ver. 19.

Quest. 1. What kind of strife is here meant?

Ans. Any sudden falling out by words, or provoking carriages not premeditated.

Quest. 2. What kind of smiting is here intended?

Ans. Twofold, as hinted by the instrument.

1. Smiting at a distance by throwing stones, or any hurtful things, darts, &c. at their neighbours.

2. Closer striking by fist, sword, &c. whereby hurt was done.

Quest. 3. What kind of men are intended here?

Ans. 1. All sexes male and female.

2. All conditions bond and free. 3. All estates rich and poor, all were bound to the judgment given in this case; and if servants were not able to make recompense, they were to be sold, and made to serve as in case of theft.

Quest. 4. What if the man did dye who was smitten?

Ans. Surely the smiter was to dye as by the general law of murder, ver. 12. if the smitten died he was guilty of blood, sudden passion could not excuse his wilful smiting.

Quest. 5. What if the man died after his walking?

Ans. 1. It is supposed that his walking abroad did denote his perfect cure, and therefore if afterward by his own fault he relapsed, and died not truly of the wound, the smiter was not guilty.

Quest. 6. Were no more charges to be born but for losse of time and healing?

Answer. 1. This judgment supposeth no other hurt, but losse of time and sickness. 2. Upon other evils inflicted by smiting other judgments were given.

1. In case of any blemish made on him the same was to be returned on the smiter, Levit. 24. 19.

2. In case of other pain or shame hereby inflicted, further penalties were exacted, Deut. 22. 19, &c. Deut. 25. 11. 12.

Quest. Is this law now in force?

Answer. 1. The reason of it continueth. 2. The equity of it by the light of nature is confirmed.

It instructs us, that.

D. 1. Passions and contentions breed many sad events among neighbours.

D. 2. Smitings, and wounds, and sickness, and death are usual effects of sudden passions.

D. 3. In case it proceed not to death, God will not suffer injuries unpunished by men.

D. 4. Gods judgment quits smiters from guilt of murder, where death followeth not.

D. 5. Not only the death, but the hurts of men, are in Gods heart to prevent, Ver. 18.

D. 6. It is just with God that he who wounds must look to thorough healing of his neighbour.

D. 7. Mans losse of time as well as health God will have recompensed by the injurious.

D. 8. Security and prosperity of creatures is the end of Gods judgments against violent men, Ver. 18. 19.

6. In case of a mans smiting his servants unto death we have the judgment of God discovered, ver. 20. 21.

1. The case is here supposed twofold,

1. And if or when a man shall smite his manservant or his maid servant with a rod, Ver. 20. and he dye under his hand, Readings are to the same sense under various terms. And they shall dye, &c. Vulg. Sam. Others read as the Hebr. In the singular, where note.

1. The smiter supposed, any under the relation of a Master in Israel.

A22222 2

2. The

2. The smitten, either man or woman servant.

3. The act, with the instrument, and issue smiting with a rod, or staff, fit for correction, not any other instrument to kill unto death, yet that hereby either he or she dye upon such smiting.

Ver. 20.

2. The judgment upon this case. In avenging he shall be avenged, i. e. Punished certainly, according to the demerit of the fact. Readings are here various. — He shall be guilty of the crime, i. e. murder, Vulg. — With judgment or judging he shall be judged, Onk. and Syr. — Let him dye the death, Sam. let him suffer punishment, Ar.

If a man smite a man or woman servant, a Canaanite with scourges, and he dye that day, &c. he shall in judging be judged to death by the sword, Jon. Ben. Uz. In all which the judgment is the same that such a master is to dye by the sentence of the judges, according to the law for wilful murder. Ver. 20.

Ver. 21.

2. The next case hereabout is thus expressed, Nevertheless or but if he stand up one day or two days, Readings to the same sense. — If he shall survive, &c. Vulg. Sept. Onk. Ar. Syr. — If they shall stand up, &c. Sam. Where note,

1. It is supposed that the servant is not dead;

Ver. 21.

2. It is supposed that he liveth after his beatiſſing one day or two. The judgment hereupon, He shall not be avenged, for he is his money, — He shall not lye under punishment, for he is his Lord. Ar. — Sept. Onk. and Syr. are as Hebr. Where we have to note,

1. The sentence, he shall not be put to death, which is the meaning of the phrase.

2. The reason of it, because the servant is his money, that is, bought or purchased with his money, so that he is the lawful Lord and possessor of him. These were Canaanites or bondmen bought of other nations.

Quest. 1. What kind of servants were these?

Ans. 1. None of the seed of Israel, for they could not be absolutely sold, but upon condition, Levit. 25. 39. 40.

2. They were therefore either Canaanites, or of some other strange nation, whom they might buy to be their servants for ever.

Quest. 2. What kind of rod was this used?

Ans. It is supposed to be an instrument fit for due correction. No weapon as sword or staff which are instruments of death, and wherewith men used to slaughter, this onely is for chastening, that threatens wounds and death.

Quest. 3. Was it lawful for them to smite their servants?

Ans. 1. It was as to due correction for their faults. 2. It was not as to the destruction of life, this supposition therefore favours not their act.

Quest. What is meant by standing up one day or two?

Ans. 1. The natural day must needs here be understood. 2. The servants standing up one day or two, noteth his standing to work, so that by beating he was not disabled from labour, much lesse in danger of death, Servum per diem unum, vel duos dies stare, tantundem valet ac vigere omnibus integris membris. Quod si infirmum esset vulnus, aut appareret ulla mutilatio, cadis reus esset perversor, Calv. in loc.

Quest. 4. What is the true force of that reason, For he is his money?

Ans. 1. It doth not intend that the person in his body, and soul, or life is the price of his money, for then the reason would be good to acquit the smiter, if the servant had presently dyed in beating, if that were the sense. 2. The meaning is that the person as to his labour, and travel is his money; and as his Lord, he may justly exact it by commands, and due correction, but he is not the Lord of the life of his servant, neither is that the price of his money; life cannot be bought and sold.

Quest. 5. Is this law now in force?

Answer. Yea, for 1. The reason of it is the same. 2. The equity of it is evident to the light of nature, no man to be Lord of the life of his servants. 3. Though Israel were Gods peculiar people, yet would not he suffer them to destroy the lives of strangers; for all men bear the image of God equally in their souls, therefore are their lives precious to him.

Observe from it.

D. 1. It is supposed that Masters in the Church of God may be cruel in correcting servants, but it is sin.

D. 2. It is possible that death may follow upon such cruel smiting.

D. 3. In such case the life of the vilest slaves is precious with God, and he requireth it with death, Ver. 20.

D. 4. Correction due unto servants which endanger's not life, is supposed lawful.

D. 5. No governor is guilty by Gods law upon such due chastening.

D. 6. Servants are the due purchase of their Lords for their labours not for their lives.

D. 7. The lives and comforts of poorest slaves are dear to God and secured by him, Ver. 21.

1. In case of hurt done to a woman with child, which may endanger the life of mother or child. We have the judgment laid down, Ver. 22. 23. 24. 25. Herein the case and the judgment are twofold,

1. The case supposeth hurt to such a woman and no mischief consequent in these words; And if or when men strive and strike a woman with child, and her birth go away and there be no mischief or destruction or death.

And make an abortive, but she live. Vulg. — And the child not formed pass away, Sept. — And her fruit depart and death shall not be. Onk. — And the infant depart and death follow not, Sam. — And shall cast her fruit and the chance of death intervene not. Syr. — Her fruit of womb depart, and death happen not, Ar. Here note,

1. The occasion supposed, If men strive or two men, as Syr.

2. The offence supposed, if they strike, or hurt a woman with child in their contending.

3. The issue of this hurt or striking, twofold,

1. That the fruit of her womb come from her, whether one child, or more.

2. That no death happen thereupon, neither upon mother, or child.

2. The judgment upon this case is, Punishing he shall be punished, even as the womans husband shall put upon him, and he shall give by the judges, v. 22. — Dabit penas percussor, Vatab. — He shall lye under damage as much as the womans husband shall desire, and the judge shall judge, Vulg. — He shall pay damage as the womans husband shall lay upon him, and he shall give it by authority, Sept. — With condemnation he shall be condemned, Onk. — He shall be punished with a mulct, &c. By the sentence of the judges, Sam. He shall be bound to damage, &c. And as the judge shall decree, Syr. — The smiter shall owe what the husband shall bind him unto, and let him give it to the utmost or rigour, Ar. Wherein note,

1. The penalty, is a pecuniary mulct for the hurt.

2. The rule of this mulct, which is twofold,

1. Subordinat, so much as the womans husband shall exact or lay upon him.

2. Supremat, and that is the decree of

Ver. 22.

לריוה

Ver. 22.

the judges, who must moderate in this case, Ver. 22.

In the next head we have also to consider, 1. The case supposed, But if mischief or death shall be. — If her death shall follow, Vulg. — If the child be formed, Sept. — If she shall dye, Onk. — If death follow, Sam. Ar. and Syr. Herein is supposed,

1. Mischief or death following, indefinitely expressed in the Hebrew, though some restrain it to the woman.

2. Mischief or death is here supposed, either unto mother or child, for on either it might be.

2. The judgment hereupon delivered, which determin's retaliation in punishment according to the hurt in these instances,

1. Then thou shalt give soul for soul, i. e. life for life, — Dabis penas, Vat. Syr. — He shall give, Vulg. Sept. Onk. Sam. that is, the judge.

2. Eye for eye, All readings are the same.

3. Tooth for tooth.

4. Hand for hand.

5. Foot for foot, Ver. 24.

6. Burning for burning.

7. Wound for wound.

8. Stripe for stripe, Ver. 25.

Readings the same, — If death be not upon her he shall be mulct for the fruit of the womb, &c. Jon. B. Uz, Ver. 22. — But if death be upon her, ye shall judge the life of the man-slayer for the life of the woman, the price of an eye for an eye, &c. Jon. B. Uz.

Quest. 1. How is this striking of the woman to be conceived voluntary, or involuntary?

Answer. 1. It is plain it cannot be meant of a pure involuntary hurt, for in that case it was judged before, the smiter was quit from all penalty. 2. Voluntary therefore this must be because it makes obnoxious to penalty, yet not foreintended, but when occasionally such a woman should come to part them, or rescue either party; in such a case, although the man intended not at first to hurt the woman, yet his mind was wicked in striking, and he had no regard to a woman of her condition in his rage; here he intended to the man with whom he strove, however it fell upon the woman.

Quest. 2. What is the mischief spoken of supposed not to follow upon the stroke and upon whom?

Answer. 1. The mischief must be death.

2. The subject upon whom it happeneth not, mother or child, 3. Other hurt was supposed to follow in abortion, or upon members.

Quest. 3. How and why is this retaliation granted to the husband?

Answer. 1. He is the head of his wife A a a a a 3 2. He

2. He is the father to the child; therefore the hurt properly is his; and his right therefore is to demand recompense; yet not according to his will, for the judges or civil Magistrats were to interpose that the judgment might be equal.

Quest. 4. Whose mischief or death is here supposed to follow?

Answer. 1. The mothers death, if she should dye of it, but not onely hers; however some think so. Oslander. 2. The childes death also is here intended, after which God looketh, that it should be preserved in the womb, as a mans life to be secured in his house; but this fruit of the womb must be supposed actually to have life, as the judgement supposeth, which gives life for life.

Quest. 5. What is the burden of the judgement hereupon?

Answer. The sentence of retaliation, life for life, if mother or child dye, the smiter must dye also; onely by a just proceeding in judgment, and legal tryal and proof according to the law, and that before lawful judges, not common arbitrators.

Quest. 2. Was this retaliation binding in all cases of hurt done?

Answer. No; for 1. There is a mist of money that is adjudged in case of abortion without death. 2. Equity was the main thing to be eyed in this law of retaliation, not rigour to the letter. 3. Justice being observed, God hath made this a binding law, and his lawgiving is just; however men cannot bear it.

Quest. 7. Hath not Christ repealed this law, Matth. 5. 39?

Answer. 1. He hath forbidden the corrupt abuse of it by the Pharisees to private revenge. 2. He hath not repealed the equity of it to be executed by the judges.

This teacheth us.

D. 1. Breeding-bearing women are upon Gods heart to provide for their safety in his law.

D. 2. The life of infants in the womb is dear to God, and secured by his judgments, Ver. 22.

D. 3. If life from either be wilfully taken away, God requireth it by life, Ver. 23.

D. 4. God will suffer no man privately to be their own carvers in judgment.

D. 5. Retaliation of evils as stated by God is a just recompense to injurious persons.

D. 6. Private revenge may be and must be denied, where publick judgement is according to Gods law, Ver. 22. 23. 24. 25.

2. The last case here propounded about indangering mans life by man, is with its judgement given us, Ver. 26. 27. Wherein we have,

1. A case proposed in both verses fully, And if a man smite the eye of his servant, or the eye of his handmaid, and shall perish it: and if he shall strike out the tooth of his manservant, or the tooth of his maid servant, Readings all to the same sense, onely some various expressions, as — If he make them blind, Vulg. Sept. Sam. — If he make the tooth to fall out, Onk. Wherein we have supposed,

1. The Masters smiting the eye or tooth of any of his servants, man or maid.
2. The effect of this striking or smiting, the perishing of the eye, and falling out of the tooth.

2. The judgment hereupon determined, He shall send him away free for his eye, and again, He shall send him away free for his tooth, Readings the same. — Send them away free, Sept and Vulg. Wherein note,

1. Immunity from servitude is here commanded.

2. Indowment with the privileges of liberty, to be and live as free men, and free women.

Quest. 1. What kind of Masters and servants are here meant?

Answer. 1. The Master is supposed to be an Hebrew or a proselyt joined to Israel, who was under the same law. 2. The servants were sons and daughters of Aliens bought for bond-servants for money, but not of the Hebrews.

Quest. What kind of smiting is this intended?

Answer. 1. Not involuntary as might happen in several cases from the Masters hand. 2. But it was a voluntary, cruel striking without pity or compassion to the members of servants.

Quest. 3. What is meant by the event of smiting?

Answer. 1. A total perishing of the eye; as to the losse of sight. 2. A total losse of a tooth, sound and serviceable, which could not be beaten out, but with a very great blow; and this is by a Synecdoche, put for any of the other members.

Quest. 4. What is carried in the penalty? Answer. These two things, 1. Losse of Lordship Lordship and dominion to the Master, because he abused it cruelly over his servant. 2. Liberty to the servant as a punishment to the Master, which men account to be a grievous burden.

Quest. 5. Why should not the Master loose eye for eye and tooth for tooth, as before required?

Answer. 1. The judge of proportion thought it not so meet. 2. The quality of persons may aggravate sin and penalties, or lessen them; as smiting, or reviling parents, so servants delinquencies to Lords. It is not so to be measured from parents to children, nor from Masters to servants; God hath set a disproportion between them. 3. The law of retaliation holds among Peers, men and women of like condition; and that too must be understood with many limitations.

Quest. 6. Is this law for penalty still in force?

Answer. 1. The reason is still abiding. 2. The equity of the law is great. 3. Christ reverseth it not.

Observe we from it.

D. 1. God supposeth the cruel smittings of Masters, but alloweth them not.

D. 2. God foreseeth the sufferings of poor slaves, and provides in his law against it.

D. 3. The very eyes and teeth and members of poor servants are dear to God even as their lives are.

D. 4. The perishing of the least member of servants, even of a tooth God will require of supertours, Ver. 26.

D. 5. God by his law depriveth those men of Lordship, who abuse their power cruelly over servants.

D. 6. Bond and free are equally considered by God in his law without respect of persons. He maketh the oppressed free, Ver. 26. 27.

2. Having thus farre considered the judgments against indangering or hurting the law of man by man, the next provision is to secure the life of man against beasts, which God doth by some special judgments also. Hereabout have we several cases with their judgments; as,

1. And if an ox push with his horns a man or a woman, and he dye, by stoning the ox shall be stoned, and his flesh shall not be eaten, but the owner of the ox shall be innocent, Readings agree in sense, onely some read plural, and they die, vulg. — An ox or any tame beast, Sam. Herein note,

Ver. 23.

1. The case is supposed, and that in two things.

1. If an ox with his horns push or gore man or woman.

2. If upon this goring, the man or woman dye; their lives be taken from them.

2. The judgment hereupon concerning a double subject.

1. About the ox, two things are determined,

1. Stoning he shall be stoned unto death.

2. Being dead his flesh shall not be eaten, but cast out for carrion,

2. About his owner he shall be innocent.

Quest. 1. Why is the ox or bull here onely mentioned?

Answer. 1. Not to exclude any other kind by which mans life may be taken away. 2. It by a synecdoche takes in all other beasts, that are under mans command, & are for mans labour-use, such is the ox, horse, asse, &c.

Quest. 2. Why doth God make lawes concerning beasts which cannot know them?

Answer. 1. It is no law to them but to man about them. 2. It was long before given by God, Your blood of your lives will I require at the hand of every beast, Gen. 9. 5. 3. It is to constrain men unto the exercise of just authority over the beasts, and restrain them from evil.

Quest. 3. Why should the beast suffer seeing it knoweth no law?

Answer. 1. This judgment of God is done in greater wisdom than Atheists who fear it, can pretend unto, Gen. 9. 5. 2. And this is not against the beast as a sinner, but as instrumental unto sinners, and not ordered by them, as they ought. 3. This was also to teach the dreadfulnes of murder, and preciousnes of mans life, unto men. 4. Stoning might be more easy to be done.

Quest. 4. Why was not the flesh to be eaten?

Answer. 1. It might be because it was not wholesome, such creatures might be mad or diseased. 2. More probably it was that such creatures were accursed, and therefore not to be touched or tasted. 3. It was hereby also to punish the owner, who might not sell the flesh.

Quest. 5. In what sense is it that the owner is here pronounced innocent?

Answer. 1. It is to be understood in case case of the ignorance of the beasts qualities. 2. He was herein only guiltless in point of murder, not to suffer himself. Ver. 28.

We learn here.

- D. 1. Providence may order beasts, as to the taking away mans life, but not allow them.
 D. 2. The life of man is so precious to God, that his law binds men to keep beasts from destroying it.
 D. 3. Gods wisdom and justice punisheth and curseth instruments of killing men, though unreasonable.
 D. 4. Owners of hurtful beasts, though innocent thorough ignorance, yet are not wholly unpunished, V. 28.

Ver. 29. 2. The next case about indangering mans life by beasts followeth thus, And if the ox were a pusher from yesterday, the day before, and it hath bin testified to his owner, and he hath not kept him in, but he hath killed a man or a woman, the ox shall be stoned, and also the owner shall dye, Readings all agree, and here in we have to consider,

1. The case laid down under these conditions.
 1. If the ox had bin wont to push in times past.
 2. If this quality of the ox were notified to the owner.
 3. If the owner did not keep it from hurting.
 4. If the ox then kill a man or woman. This is the case.
 2. The judgment on the case consisting in two heads,
 1. The penalty on the beast. The ox shall be stoned.
 2. The penalty on the man. The owner shall be killed. — And before witness his owner had bin warned three times, &c. — He shall be killed with a death that shall be sent unto him from heaven, Targ. Ben. Uz.

Quest. What meaneth that phrase Yesterday? &c.

Ans. 1. It noteth time past indefinite, though it signify yesterday, and the third day. 2. It noteth the iteration of the oxes pushing, not only done one day, or at one time, but several times or dayes, that he had bin wont to push.

Quest. 2. How was this to be testified to the owner?

Ans. 1. The word testifying, noteth a discovery of this by competent witnesses. 2. It is added by some, three times. 3. It is said by others that it was done before the judges. 4. It is certain that sure notification was to be made to the owner, and sufficient to convince him of the hurtfulness of the beast.

Quest. 3. What is imported in his not keeping in the ox?

Ans. 1. The owners carelesnes in restraining him, from doing mischief and wilful neglect. 2. His willingness therein to let him loose to do hurt, so that the ox becomes his instrument of killing any one, while he lets him loose.

Quest. 4. What man or woman is supposed to be killed?

Ans. 1. Not only free men and women as some thinke. 2. All sorts of mankind, male and female, young and old, bond and free; for the servants life was as precious to God as the life of the free, neither doth the law following about them impede it.

Quest. 5. What is carried in the penalty?

Ans. 1. The same sentence upon the beast as before, although only stoning be exprest; killed it must be by stoning, yea and the flesh of it accursed and not be eaten. 2. The sentence on the man also is death, his life must go also for the life of the man, or woman which the ox had killed, only with these provisos.

1. That this sentence be executed by the judges.
 2. That it be upon evidence that the owner had full information and knowledge of the beasts hurtfull qualities.
 3. That it appear he was wilfully careless of keeping his beast from doing mischief, which if they did not appear, the owner was not to dye but to be fined; as afterward.

It teacheth us.

- D. 1. Useful beasts do sometimes become hurtful to men upon mans sin.
 D. 2. Owners of such, Gods law injoyneth to keep them, so much as they can, from doing hurt.
 D. 3. Such as do wilfully neglect the restraining of them, make them their instruments of doing evill.
 D. 4. In such case made evident, Gods law is that such a man must dye by the hand of justice, Ver. 29.

3. The

3. The next case is about commutation of penalty of life for a fine, Ver. 30, 31, 32. Wherein we have to note these heads,

Ver. 30. 1. The judgment upon the case in general, If a ransom be laid upon him, then he shall give the price of redemption of his soul, according to all which shall be laid upon him, Readings are to the same sense. Some read — Lay money, &c. Onk. Syr. Ar. — So much as they shall aske of him, Vulg. Syr. Herein,

1. The case is commutation. If a price of a redemption for his life be laid upon him, that is a summe of money to save his life.

2. The judgment hereupon, He shall give the price of redeeming his life fully, as it is laid upon him.

Quest. 1. Was it at liberty at all times to require either life or money?

Answer. Surely no, for 1. If by proof it did appear before the judges, that the owner did fully let loose the beast, there was no commutation. 2. But if by evidence it did appear not wilful, but out of ignorance, or incogitancy, ransom was granted.

Quest. 2. By whom was this ransom money to be charged?

Answer. Surely by the judges, such as were appointed by God in other cases, synedri Israelit. B. Uz. as these did value the slain, more or lesse was the price of redemption made by them. Ver. 30.

Ver. 31. 2. The judgment upon the case of son or daughter is thus, If he have pushed a son, or if he have pushed a daughter according to this judgment shall it be done unto him. Readings are to the same sense. — He shall lye under the like sentence, Vulg. — A son of Israel, & Vulg. — A boy or a girl. Ar.

1. The case here concerneth relations, if he push or gore a son or a daughter, i. e. unto death.

2. The judgment. It shall be done unto him according to this judgment.

Quest. 1. What son or daughter were these?

Ans. 1. Of the seed of Israel it cannot be questioned. 2. Not only these but all who were under these lawes.

Quest. 2. What judgement is this unto which it is referred?

Answer. 1. Doubles that which the judges should determine. 2. The price of the life of sons & daughters was to be levied by them; some might be of more, and some of lesser value with them; but yet they were to be at an higher rate than servants.

Ver. 32. 3. The judgment upon the case of servants followeth, If the ox have pushed a manservant or a womanservant, he shall give unto his Master 30 shekels of silver, and the ox shall be stoned, Readings are all to the same sense, jumentum is rendered for bois by Sam. Herein,

1. The case is if the ox or any other beast push or strike a man or woman, servant unto death.

2. The judgment hereupon given by the Lord.

1. Upon the owner. That he shall give to the servants Master, 30 shekels of silver.

2. Upon the beast, that it shall be stoned and dealt withall as before mentioned. Ver. 28.

Quest. 1. What kind of servants are meant here?

Answer. 1. Not Hebrewes, which might not be sold for bondmen. 2. Sons and daughters of strangers. read a Canaan-servant, &c. J. Ben. Uz. for these were as to their service their Masters money.

Quest. 2. Why was a stinted sum set down in this case?

Ans. 1. The will of the supreme judge is the first cause. 2. The state of all bondservants was one and the same, but the state of free men various, of divers degrees, which leaveth their rate arbitrary.

Quest. 3. Why was this to be given to the Master?

Ans. 1. The servant was his Masters money. 2. The losse of his life was the losse of his service: And God himself ordereth this as just.

Quest. 4. Was this mule to be for the servants life whether the owner did know it or no?

Answer. 1. The judgment upon the wilful neglect of the owner is the same for the bond as free. 2. This was in the same case of unwilling hazzard by the owner, as it was for any free person.

Quest. 5. Are these judgments still in force?

Answer. 1. The reason of them is the same and lasting. 2. The equity of them stands in force now, although in all points the execution be not the same.

It instructs us.

- D. 1. Divine justice permits commutation for life for owners, where from their weakness they destroy the life of any.
 D. 2. The price for redemption of life must be paid by the convicted delinquent, Ver. 30.
 D. 3. Lives of sons and daughters are valued by God, when taken away violently by beasts.
 D. 4. According to various states
 B b b b b b the the estimat is to be made variously by powers. Ver. 31.

D. 5. The lives of slaves God will require from beasts and men.

D. 6. Justice orders double penalties to double losses, For life of servant and losse of service to the Master, the beast must dye, and the owner pay.

D. 7. Providence hath strongly provided to secure mans life against men and beasts.

D. 8. What the law commands of universal right, the Gospel confirms unto the good of men. V. 32.

D. 9. Thus farre of judgments pertaining to the sixth moral law. Now follow others.

3. We now proceed to consider a third sort of judgments which referre to the 8th precept, and tend to secure our neighbours goods, about which we have several cases and judgments propounded, from ver. 33. of this Chapter unto the end of the 4th verse of the 22th Chapter, which consists of these two parts,

1. Of casualties from ver. 33. 36.

2. Of wilful wrongs, Chap. 22. 1.

The first case we have in the 33 and 34 verses. Wherein also we have to consider,

Ver. 33. 1. The case itself thus exprest, And if or when a man shall open a pit, & not cover it, & an ox or an asse fall there, Readings are all to the same sense, onely some read pit, ditch, or well, others adde, — Oxe, asse, or any other beast. Where the case supposeth these events,

1. If a man shall open a pit formerly digged,

2. If a man shall digge a pit where none was.

3. If he shall not cover it when it is made.

If ox or asse or any beast fall into it.

Ver. 33. 2. The judgment followeth, The Master of the pit shall pay money, he shall restore to the owner of it, and the dead beast shall be his. Readings are to the same sense. — The price of the beasts. — Vulg. Ar. The judgment consists,

1. In the mulet laid upon the maker of a pit, where note,

1. The subject solvent, the owner of such a pit, he that made it or caused it to be made.

2. The subject to be satisfied or paid, the Master or owner of the beast that fell into the pit.

3. The price to be paid, in the text, it is noted onely by silver; the act is double, he shall repay, he shall return, and that was doubtles the full price, or worth of the beast that perished.

2. In consideration of the owner of the pit, the judgment is, that the dead beast shall be his after he hath paid the price of it. Ver. 34.

Quest. 1. What kind of pit was this?

Answer. 1. Not any small ditch or pit-fold, which could not indanger the beast. 2. But a deep pit or well wherein it might perish.

Quest. 2. What place is supposed for this pit?

Answer. 1. Not the wild places or mountains, where it is supposed such catel came not. 2. The usual places of fodder and pasture, where these beasts go up and down.

Quest. 3. Who is counted the owner of the pit?

Answer. 1. Not every owner of the ground. 2. Not the servant who digs it at his masters command. 3. The maker of it, or whoever causeth it to be made and be left uncovered. This is the owner of the pit liable to this sentence.

Quest. 4. What if a man should fall in and perish?

Answer. 1. This case is not expressly here answered. 2. Yet if God take care for beasts, doubtles he doth for men. 3. Men have understanding to preserve themselves, and avoid such pits. 4. Yet if it appear that any purposely and wilfully leaveth open such a pit to mischief his neighbour, the judgment is the same as to him that restrained not his ox from killing a man.

Learn we here.

D. 1. God would have casual dangers for beasts and men in his judgments to be prevented.

D. 2. Carelesnes and wilfulness of men in indangering their neighbours catel God doth animadvert. Ver. 33.

D. 3. Just recompence doth God allow for the losse of any beast, by neighbours carelesnes.

D. 4. Casualty doth not excuse mens carelesnes in exposing neighbours goods to danger.

D. 5. Just and equal dealings Gods judgments determines between neighbours.

neighbours, and in casualties to preserve love.

D. 6. Owners of pits and owners of beasts are determined by Gods judgments to case of offence to each others goods. Ver. 34.

2. The next case about neighbours goods followeth in ver. 35. 36. wherein also we have to note a double case, and judgement thereupon.

Ver. 35. 1. The former case is thus, And if the ox of any man shall strike his neighbours ox and it dye. Readings agree, onely one reads, — Oxe or any other beast that shall smite anothers ox to death. Here two things are observable,

1. If one mans ox shall strike his neighbours ox.

2. If the ox smitten by the other do dye.

Ver. 35. 2. The judgment hereupon given, Then they shall sell the living ox, and divide the money of it, and the dead also they shall divide, Readings agree, — The money of the dead shall they divide, Onk. Syr. In this casualty the judgment consists in two heads.

1. They shall sell the living ox, and equally divide the price.

2. They shall divide the dead ox also between them, or the price of the same, as some read, Ver. 35.

Ver. 36. 2. The next case of casualty is this, Or if it were known that the ox were a pusher yesterday, the third day, and his owner hath not kept him in, Readings agree. Herein we have,

1. The case proposed under these conditions.

1. If it were known to the owner, that the ox were wont formerly to push.

2. If then the owner hath not restrained him, or kept him in from hurting. This is the case.

Ver. 36. 2. The judgment hereupon, Paying he shall pay ox for ox, and the dead shall be his own, Readings here agree. The whole judgment is,

1. That the owner of the pushing ox or bull shall give that for the ox that is slain.

2. That the dead ox shall be his own, in stead of the living, no dividing here, Ver. 36.

Quest. 1. What if the oxen were not of equal value?

Answer. 1. Both were to be sold, and then the price equally to be divided.

2. The judgment supposeth both of equal worth. 3. Therefore no division here.

Quest. 2. How was the hurtfulness of this beast to be known?

Answer. 1. As formerly opened about killing men, it must be testified sufficiently to the owner. 2. So it must be, that the owner may certainly know it, and not plead ignorance.

We conclude.

D. 1. There may be casual evils by one neighbours beast to anothers underprovidence.

D. 2. In such cases of providence God will have neighbours bear equal losses. Ver. 35.

D. 3. Mens carelesnes and wilful neglect of preventing known dangers may be under providence.

D. 4. In such cases providence doth not excuse mans ofittancy or negligence.

D. 5. Greater penalties Gods judgment allows unto such as labour not against known casualties of evil.

D. 6. Gods design is in all judgments that justice and equity should preserve neighbours from mutual wrong. The moral justice in all this is permanent.

CHAP. XXII.

In this Chapter God proceed's to give his judgments & expositions annexed to his moral law, for keeping man at least unto external obedience by visible penalties. The judgments herein delivered concern several precepts in Gods Tables, as

1. Concerning the eighth precept, Ver. 15.

2. Concerning the seventh command, Ver. 16. 17.

3. Concerning the sixth precept, V. 18.

4. Concerning the seventh is a special case, Ver. 19.

5. Concerning the second precept and first, Ver. 20.

6. Concerning the eighth and other laws in special cases, Ver. 21. 27.

7. Concerning the fifth precept, V. 28.

8. Concerning the second in special things, Ver. 29. 30. 31.

The first head of judgments here considerable concerns the eighth command more generally as some other mentioned in the 4 last verses of the former Chapter, in them were discovered judgments upon casual wrongs which is the first head.

Now followeth the discovery of judgments

ments upon wrongs about neighbours goods, done with knowledge, & of purpose, wherein mens wills do mainly concur unto the injury, and the acting of this is several wayes discovered, and judged,

1. As done by theft, Ver. 1. 2. 3. 4.
2. As done by trespass, Ver. 5.
3. As done by failing of trust, V. 7. 13.
4. As done by lenc and borrowing, Ver. 14. 15.

1. The injuries done to our neighbour by theft are here animadverted and adjudged, Ver. 1. 2. 3. 4. Wherein we have 4 cases, and so many judgments proposed.

In laying downe of which the first and the fourth verse are best joined together; the second and third are by a parenthesis to be read, for their clearer understanding. Yet this being observed I shall follow in expounding the order of the words as set down by Moses,

Ver. 1. 1. In a case supposed. If or when a man shall steal an ox, or sheep or goat, and shall kill it or sell it. All readings agree herein. Where is supposed.

1. If a man shall steal an ox or sheep or goat, such little cattel, i. e. If any under this law, shall deceitfully and wickedly take these away from his neighbour.

2. If after he hath stolen it he shall kill it.

3. If he shall sell it, killed or not killed.

Ver. 1. 2. In the judgment declared, He shall pay five oxen for an ox, and four sheep for a sheep. Readings do all agree herein also, so that the judgment of penalty here is restitution, twofold,

1. For one ox he must return five oxen.

2. For one sheep stolen killed or sold 4 sheep.

Quest. 1. What kind of theft or stealing is this?

Ans. 1. It was theft knowingly and willingly committed. 2. It was theft acted with destroying circumstances, to kill, and sell, although to the neighbours undoing. 3. It was a theft not recoverable in the same kind, for the stolen goods were either killed or sold.

Quest. 2. Why is the restitution here fivefold and fourfold whereas it is but twofold, Ver. 4?

Ans. 1. That verse in reading should be joined unto this and so comparing them, the reason of difference would appear. 2. The account is soon given, for in the first verse are more aggravations to the sin of stealing, by killing, and selling, which are not here. 3. The beasts stolen here are supposed in the thieves hand to be found in good state, and being, and to lesse wrong if due lesse restitution, in the judgment of God, who is the only wife and just one.

Quest. 3. Why should 5 oxen be restored for one and but 4 sheep for one? Ans. To wave many frivolous conjectures.

1. The will of the judge, is the prime cause.

2. The daringnes of the fact, to fall upon great spoil is an heavier sin.

3. The dammage was greater in an ox than a sheep, therefore God may make the restitution greater, Ver. 1.

2. In the second and third verses we have cases and judgments about the time of stealing to be considered.

In the second verse we have a case and judgment about night-robbers and such as commit burglary.

1. The case is thus expressed, If a thief be found in digging thorough, and be smitten and dye, no blood (shall be shed) for him. Ver. 2.

No slaughter for him, Sept. The smiter shall not be guilty of blood, Onk. vulg. Sam. He shall not have an action of life, Syr. His blood shall be unpunished, Ar. Herein we have,

1. The case under these suppositions,

1. If a thief be found in digging thorough, that is thorough an house to come in and steal, which was the usual way of thieves, Mar 24. 43.

2. If he be smitten in the fact by any of the house, or such as were to guard it.

3. If upon such smiting, he dye in the action.

2. The judgment hereupon, no bloods shall be upon him that smiteth, that is, he shall not be reputed guilty of murder for killing the thief, neither shall be obnoxious to death, Numb. 6. 35. 27.

Quest. 1. What time doth this case suppose?

Ans. Surely the night-season which thieves do choose for such designs to break thorough and steal, for it is in contradistinction unto the day-theft.

Quest. 2. Was it lawful for a private man to smite or kill?

Ans. 1. Not upon personal revenge.

2. In self- and house-defense God maketh him a publick person, and so giveth power to smite. 3. Yet if by other means he can take the thief, and bring him to justice it is rather intended than the death of the thief, but in case by smiting, the thief dye, God hath laid his blood upon his own head Ver. 2.

3. The next case is concerning day-theft.

1. The case is thus, If the sun be risen upon him. Sept. Sam. Ar. same. Ver. 3.

If he shall do it when the sun is risen, Vulg. If when the sun is risen upon him he shall be smitten, Syr. If the eye of the witness be upon him, Onk.

Quest. What is meant by the sun-rising on him?

Ans. 1. If it be day when the thief comcommeth. 2. If it be evident, that he commeth not to slay. Some referre the sun-rising to the smiter, If he kill the thief in the day, which is to the same purpose. 3. The Caldee referre it to witnesses and evidence of fact, that the smiter had no cause to kill the thief.

Ver. 3. 1. The judgment is thus, Bloods shall be upon him, paying he should pay, if he have not, then he should be sold for his theft. Sam. as Hebr. He shall be guilty, he shall dye for him, Sept. Vulg. He shall not be smitten back, let him restore what he stole, &c. Ar. He shall be capitally impleaded, &c. Syr. Herein,

1. The judgment upon the smiter, he shall be guilty of blood and dye as rendered by the 70.

2. The reason of this sentence, because another law was passed upon a meer thief.

1. That he was to make full restitution according to law, therefore not to dye for his theft by the hand of justice, much lesse by a private hand.

2. That in case he had nothing to restore he was to be sold, & work it out to satisfy for his theft, therefore God would not have the thief thus killed.

Quest. 1. Doth this law simply forbid the killing of a thief in the fact on the day time; as in breaking houses or robbing on the high way?

Ans. No, for the circumstances of this law must be considered, which are,

1. That the thief intended no violence to persons in prosecution of his theft.

2. That the sun-rising supposeth the time of discovery for help and rescue.

3. But if the thief come with bloody purposes and other help faileth, upon self-defense, this law hinders not, but that in the day time a man may kill the thief, and be guiltles.

Quest. 2. How was the thief to be sold?

Ans. 1. If an Hebrew not above 6 years, yet as the dammage by theft was, respect was to be had for time to make restitution. 2. If the thief were a stranger, and the theft great, he might be sold for life; but fully so long as to make restitution, and this of the principal thing stolen and the double of it, Ver. 3.

4. The last case in judgment about theft is this,

1. The case, If the thief by finding be found in his hand, from the ox to the ass to the sheep alive. Readings agree in sense, Here is,

1. Supposed things stolen, ox, ass, sheep or beast.

2. Supposed the sure finding in the thieves hand.

3. Supposed there to be found in his possession alive.

2. The judgment followeth, He shall return two, or twofold. Readings do agree, Two for one, Ar. This verse should be read next the first to clear the case of five fold and twofold restitution.

Quest. 1. What is the force of that expression of finding the stolen goods alive, doth it onely concern living things?

Ans. 1. Not the particular beasts onely named, but all usefull to man are intended. 2. These are spoken here as found alive, as being in their proper condition, to do their owner service. 3. The finding of living things alive importeth the finding of other lives things stolen in the same condition without detriment.

Quest. 2. Why but twofold restitution here when it is 5 fold & 4 fold in the case before?

Ans. 1. The law-givers proportion is just. 2. The dammage was greater in stealing, killing, and selling than in simple stealing of it, ver. 4.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Theft or stealing of our neighbours goods is an odious sin to God, and punishable here.

D. 2. Stealing may have its aggravations by selling and killing of stolen creatures.

D. 3. Theft so aggravated must be satisfied with a five- or fourfold restitution as God appoints.

Ver. 1.

D. 4. Night-robbery by digging or breaking up houses is aggravated sin.

D. 5. Death inflicted upon such a one in the fact by the defendants hands is justified by God. Ver. 2.

D. 6. Day-theft if it may be discovered and prevented, excuseth not the killing of the thief.

D. 7. Day-robbery resisted by the defendant doth justify the killing of a violent robber.

D. 8. Due restitution to Gods just judgment upon thieves taken.

D. 9. Where restitution cannot be made, God exposeth the thieves to sale. Ver. 3.

D. 10. Theft not prejudicing the Bbbbbb 3 thing

thing stolen is sufficiently answered by a double restitution.

D. 11. Search to find out things stolen is a duty supposed to be done.

D. 12. Such finding of the goods in safety doth mitigate the heinousness of the theft, Ver. 4.

Ver. 5. 2. Injury to our neighbours goods by trespass now followeth to be weighed in these words, If or when a man shall cause a field or vineyard to be fed upon, and shall send in his beast, and he feed in another's field, the goodness of his own field, and the goodness of his own vineyard shall be repaid, Readings all to the same sense. — If he eat up all the field, &c. Sept. and Sam.

1. The case of trespass is under these suppositions.

1. If a man make his neighbours field or vineyard to be eaten, i. e. destroy the pasture.

2. If he send his beast, this expounds the former phrase which some read, si iumentaverit, i. e. si immiserit iumentum.

3. If the beast eat and the field be eaten.

2. The judgment upon this trespass, He shall repay the goodness of his own field and vineyard, i. e. the best of it, as ours, Sept. Vulg. Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr. do read it.

Quest. 1. What kind of trespass is this? Answer. These things concur to it.

1. It must be a neighbours field or vineyard.

2. It is supposed as inclosed and bounded for propriety.

3. It is supposed eating or spoiling pasture.

4. It is a wilful act of putting a mans beast into it.

Quest. How is that part of restitution understood?

Answer. 1. Of good in the same kind. 2. Of good in the same measure equal to damage. 3. Of that which is truly good in field and vineyard.

Quest. What if he have none to satisfy for the trespass?

Answer. 1. The law is silent here, upon that case. 2. Yet it may rationally be gathered, that such poor trespasses are in equity to be dealt withall, as poor thieves in the former law, V. 5.

Learn we from it,

D. 1. Gods justice provides against trespassing upon neighbours goods, as well as stealing.

D. 2. Trespass may men do by beasts unto neighbours pastures and fruites, which God hates.

D. 3. Gods righteous judgment binds men to pay for their beasts trespass, willingly allowed.

D. 4. Equal restitution for goods wronged by trespass, God injoineth, Ver. 5.

3. The next injurie about our neighbours goods provided against, is that which may be done by fire thus, If or when a fire shall go forth, and find thorns and an heap or stake of corn, or the standing corn or field be consumed. He that kindled the fire shall pay, Readings are to the same sense. — He shall repay that which was burnt, unto the owner of it.

Quest. 1. What kind of kindling fire is here meant?

Answer. 1. It is a witting and a willing act. 2. It supposeth such a place, as may be dangerous, and therefore needs circumspection, that it break not out.

3. It notes in the event a consuming of all combustible matter either stocks of corn, or corn housed, or standing corn, or corn lying in the field, under which, hay or instruments may be understood, now if by carelesnes and wilful negligence such damage happen, who ever kindled it, or caused it to be kindled, is the offender here judged by God.

Quest. 2. What is the import of this judgment?

Answer. 1. Either satisfaction must be made in kind. 2. Or els satisfaction must be made, to the worth of all that is consumed, in money or otherwise.

Quest. 3. What if a man were hurt?

Answer. 1. The law expresseth it not. 2. But yet reason sheweth that when such events fall out by the wilful carelesnes of men, it is no lesse punishable than in the wilful letting loose ox or bull, which was wont to push and kill.

Observe we.

D. 1. Gods wisdom and justice provides against the hurting of neighbours goods by inanimate things.

D. 2. The hurt of fire under Gods providence doth not excuse that evil of him that made it.

D. 3. Consuming corn in stalks or standing, &c. is a very great evil unto neighbours.

D. 4. Restitution by Gods law must be be made by men to losers upon such default, Ver. 6.

4. The next wrong provided against is prejudice to neighbours goods by failing trust, and this we have instanced in, upon a double sort of goods.

1. Goods of neighbours inanimate, Ver. 7. 8. 9.

2. Goods living intrusted to any, Ver. 10. 11. 12. 13.

1. About the former we have a double case supposed, and the respective judgment annexed.

Ver. 7. 1. This is the case expressed, If a man give to his neighbour silver or vessels to keep, and it be stolen out of the mans house, if the thief be found, Readings agree.

Ver. 7. 2. The judgment upon this case followeth, he, i. e. the thief shall pay double, Readings same.

Quest. 1. What is the state of this case?

Answer. It consists in three suppositions.

1. If any man have trusted his neighbours to keep for him any money, dead stuff, vessels or goods of such kind.

2. If these goods thus committed, unto trust to keep, be stolen out of the house of the trustee.

3. If the thief be discovered and found, all this supposed makes the case.

Quest. What if the thief cannot pay double?

Answer. Doubtles he is by the judges to be sold, as was formerly decreed, Ver. 3.

Ver. 8. The next case is thus expressed, If the thief be not found, then the Master of the house shall be brought to the Gods or Judges, If he have not put his hand to his neighbours goods or substance, Readings all tend to the same sense, but in some variety of words, which do expaine others. — If the thief lurk, the Master, &c. — And shall swear that he hath not put his hand to his neighbours goods, Vulg. Shall come before God and swear that he hath not bin wicked in the whole trust of his neighbour, Sept. Sam.

1. The case is in short, if the thief be not found, and so not brought to make satisfaction.

2. The judgment, the Master of the house shall come near to the judges, that is, either voluntarily, or upon suspicion, or els brought by warrant to clear himself, and there by oath to purge himself from having any hand in falsifying his trust, Ver. 8.

3. The reason of this judgment is from a general constitution, For every matter of trespass, for ox, for ass, for sheep, for paiment, for every loss which he shall say, that this is it, the matter of them both shall come unto the Gods, whom the Gods shall condemn, he shall pay double unto his neighbour, Readings are all to the same sense under various words, — Upon committing fraud, Vulg. — The

Ver. 9. judgement of both shall come before God, and he that is taken by God, &c. Sept. Sam. — Every thing lost of which he shall say this is mine, &c. Ar.

1. The general case is here proposed, Where,

1. The variety of matter of trust, ox, ass, &c.

2. The condition expressed, If it be lost.

3. The condition implied, if the matter be cleared by oath before the judges.

2. The judgment is this, whom the judges upon evidence of oath shall condemn, he shall pay double to his neighbour, Ver. 9.

2. About living goods intrusted we have a trebble case propounded and judged.

1. If a man shall give unto his neighbour, ass, or ox, or sheep, or any beast to keep, and it dye or be broken, or driven away none seeing it. Readings to the same sense, — Taken by enemies, Vulg. αἰχμαλωτὶς γίνεται, Sept. — Taken as prey, Onkel. Ar. Syr. ver. 10.

2. The judgment, An oath of Jehovah shall be between them both, if he have not put forth his hand unto his neighbours goods, and the owner of it shall accept it, and he shall not repay. Readings are to the same, Ver. 11.

Quest. 1. What is the state of the case?

Answer. It takes in these suppositions.

1. The taking of some living stuffe to trust.

2. The death of it.

3. The hurt of it.

4. The loss of it by prey.

5. The want of evidence about it.

Quest. 2. What is the import of the judgment?

Answer. 1. That an oath of God, shall be taken by the trustee that he had no hand in wronging his neighbours goods. 2. The owner of the goods shall accept of it. 3. The trustee shall not repay.

2. The next provision about living stuffe is, And if it be stolen by stealth from him, he shall repay to the owner thereof. Readings agree.

1. The case is, If the living stuffe be stolen by theft from the trustee.

2. The judgment, the trustee must make it good and restore it to the owner, Ver. 12.

3. The last provision of the law about living stuffe intrusted is, If by tearing it hath bin torn, he shall bring it for witness, he shall not repay that which was torn. Readings to the same sense. — If it be eaten by a beast, &c. Vulg. — Taken by a beast, &c. Sept. — Bring to the gate, &c. Sept.

1. The case is, If the living trust were torn in peeces, that must be by some beast, that devour some parts as signes.

2. The

931 judgement of both shall come before God, and he that is taken by God, &c. Sept. Sam. — Every thing lost of which he shall say this is mine, &c. Ar.

1. The general case is here proposed, Where,

1. The variety of matter of trust, ox, ass, &c.

2. The condition expressed, If it be lost.

3. The condition implied, if the matter be cleared by oath before the judges.

2. The judgment is this, whom the judges upon evidence of oath shall condemn, he shall pay double to his neighbour, Ver. 9.

2. About living goods intrusted we have a trebble case propounded and judged.

1. If a man shall give unto his neighbour, ass, or ox, or sheep, or any beast to keep, and it dye or be broken, or driven away none seeing it. Readings to the same sense, — Taken by enemies, Vulg. αἰχμαλωτὶς γίνεται, Sept. — Taken as prey, Onkel. Ar. Syr. ver. 10.

2. The judgment, An oath of Jehovah shall be between them both, if he have not put forth his hand unto his neighbours goods, and the owner of it shall accept it, and he shall not repay. Readings are to the same, Ver. 11.

Quest. 1. What is the state of the case?

Answer. It takes in these suppositions.

1. The taking of some living stuffe to trust.

2. The death of it.

3. The hurt of it.

4. The loss of it by prey.

5. The want of evidence about it.

Quest. 2. What is the import of the judgment?

Answer. 1. That an oath of God, shall be taken by the trustee that he had no hand in wronging his neighbours goods. 2. The owner of the goods shall accept of it. 3. The trustee shall not repay.

2. The next provision about living stuffe is, And if it be stolen by stealth from him, he shall repay to the owner thereof. Readings agree.

1. The case is, If the living stuffe be stolen by theft from the trustee.

2. The judgment, the trustee must make it good and restore it to the owner, Ver. 12.

3. The last provision of the law about living stuffe intrusted is, If by tearing it hath bin torn, he shall bring it for witness, he shall not repay that which was torn. Readings to the same sense. — If it be eaten by a beast, &c. Vulg. — Taken by a beast, &c. Sept. — Bring to the gate, &c. Sept.

1. The case is, If the living trust were torn in peeces, that must be by some beast, that devour some parts as signes.

2. The judgment, the trustee,
1. Must bring some part of the torn to testify.

2. Hereupon he shall not make it good to the owner, but he must suffer the loss. Ver. 13.

Quest. 1. Why is an oath imposed to make an end of such a suspicion?

Answer. 1. It is the law-givers will. 2. No witness being, this is the clearest evidence. 3. The danger of a mans forswearing himself supposeth a great assurance of mens speaking truth, this is Gods law still.

Quest. 2. Why should the trustee repay it indeed if it be stolen from him? Seeing an oath did determine, ver. 8.

Answer. Many conjectures are about this, but the most probable reply is; that the trustee here took the living things to keep them safe, and upon considerable terms to be paid for keeping of them, therefore was it just that they should be made good what they are paid for the keeping.

Quest. 3. What if the wild beast had eaten or carried away all the living creature that no peace could be found?

Answer. 1. This might be cleared by witnesses who might see the wild beast there. 2. In case no evidence did appear, his oath as in former cases was to clear him.

Mark we here.

D. 1. Gods law provide's strictly to keep men faithful to their trusts by men.

D. 2. Theft may abuse and frustrate the trust of the most faithful men.

D. 3. Such theft discovered is punished with double restitution by God.

D. 4. In theft undiscovered and upon suspicion, trustees are bound to clear themselves by oath.

D. 5. A right oath as it terminats upon God, so ought in some cases to be taken before Magistrates, V. 8.

D. 6. In doubtful cases about trust, civil powers are enabled to try men, and judge by oath.

D. 7. The falsifier of trust convicted must restore double, Ver. 9.

D. 8. Living stuffe trusted to any and dying, none knowing how, the trustees oath must clear him. Ver. 10, 11.

D. 9. Living goods trusted to keeping, upon consideration if stolen, must be made good by the keeper, V. 12.

D. 10. No law binds men to restore what providence takes away from men by wild beasts, Ver. 13.

5. The last wrong provided against about our neighbours goods, is in point of borrowing. Here is a treble case and judgment.

1. And if a man shall borrow of his neighbour, and it be broken and dye, the owner thereof being not with it, repaying he shall repay, Readings are to the same sense. Any of these beasts, Vulg. — Aske or borrow of his neighbour a beast, Syr.

1. The case supposeth,

1. The borrowing of a beast.
2. Some hurt or death accruing.
3. The absence of the owner.

2. The judgment, the borrower must make it good and repay it, and that without fail, Ver. 14.

2. If the owner thereof be with it he shall not repay, Readings agree,

1. The case supposeth the owners presence; that he saw the beast had no wrong by the borrower.

2. The judgment in the case. He shall not repay to the lender.

3. If it be an hired thing it came for its hire, Readings are alike, Ver. 15.

1. The case is here distinct from the rest, if he had borrowed any of these beasts upon hire for many; the former was upon free loan.

2. The judgment is that the hire is a sufficient recompense for the loss.

Quest. 1. What is meant by the owners presence?

Answer. 1. It may literally be understood. 2. The sum of it is that the Master is certain of injury done to the beast, or uncertain, as when a man is present or absent. In case of certainty that the beast had no wrong, the borrower was free; but if uncertain and suspected of hurt done, restitution was to be made.

Quest. Why is the law so strict upon borrowers?

Answer. 1. The will of Jehovah is reason enough. 2. The borrowers usual carelessness. 3. The preventing of such wrong. Do jointly shew the reasonableness of it.

Quest. Was there no more but hire to go in all cases of hired things?

Answer. 1. This must be understood, where the hired beast had no wrong. 2. In case of wilful wrong done it by the hire, it is repayable as much as by the borrower, which wilfully wrongs what he had borrowed.

It

It inform's us.

D. 1. God in his law provideth against hurting our neighbours goods by borrowing.

D. 2. Hurt and death may come to things borrowed without the sin of the borrower.

D. 3. In case of the borrowers faultlesnes in hurt, no restitution doth God award.

D. 4. In case of wilful hurt and spoil the borrower by Gods law must make it good.

D. 5. Things wilfully hurt which are borrowed by hire must be satisfied by Gods law.

D. 6. Perishing of such in a lawful use of them, Gods law accounts satisfied by their hire, Ver. 14, 15.

2. The next judgment here given is with respect unto the seventh precept, and that in two kinds of sin against that law of chastity.

1. Fornication in a special kind, Ver. 16, 17.

2. BeRiality, Ver. 19. Between which there is a judgment inferred more properly belonging to the sixth precept, Ver. 18. I shall proceed in the order of the text.

1. About the case of uncleannes called fornication, which is among single persons, we have a double case and the respective judgment. In 16th and 17th verses.

1. The case is thus proposed, And if a man shall intice a maid that is not betrothed and lye with her, Readings are to the same sense, onely various words. — If he sleep Vulg. Sept. Others — Lye with her. Where the case supposeth,

1. That the man hath deceived or enticed a maid not betrothed.

2. That this man lye with her, or defile her.

Ver. 16. 2. The judgment hereupon, Indowing he shall indow her unto himself to wife, Readings to the same sense. — He shall espouse her, &c. Onk. — He shall marry her, Syr. He shall indow, and have her for a wife.

1. The judgment noteth the certainty of his indowing of her, in doubling the phrase.

2. The speed of it, as the word signifieth to make haste, let him haste to do it.

3. The end, to enjoy her as his wife, she shall certainly be his wife.

Ver. 17. 2. The next case is, If her father refusing shall refuse to give her unto him.

1. Where is supposed,
1. That her Father was ignorant of such a fact.

2. That he doth peremptorily deny his assent unto it, that he shall have his daughter to wife.

2. The judgment upon this case supposed is, He shall weigh the money according to the dowry of virgins, that is, he that inticed and defiled her.

Quest. Was this supposed act of inticing, &c. lawful?

Answer. 1. Surely no, but it is supposed as a sin; and a spiritual evil against God; however here the outward act be onely mentioned toward a neighbour. 2. It was no toleration of it.

Quest. 2. Was this judgment then full and adequate?

Answer. 1. As to satisfaction unto man, it was so much as God thought fit, with content of all parties. 2. But this answered not God for the offense, nor any thing less than eternal death; in his recompense of sin.

Quest. 3. Why is there no judgment upon the woman?

Answer. 1. As to guilt toward God in yielding to such inticings it is no less than the mans sin, and is under the same eternal condemnation. 2. But as to her respect to man she was abused, and punished in being deceived, either by promise of marriage or the like; God thought it meet therefore to acquit her in this case, and provide for future chastity. 3. The case of the Priests daughter seemeth to be of higher wickednes and noteth her as basely to prostitute herself, as well as dishonour her fathers house, Levit. 12. Ver. 9.

Quest. 4. What was the kind and worth of this dowry?

Answer. 1. It was a mulct upon the man before he took her to wife probably as much as her father was able to give with her, and this beside the marriage gift or joynture. 2. The price was not certain as was that mulct for fornicating a maid, Deut. 22, 29. But varied at the discretion of the judges according to the quality of the persons.

Quest. 5. What if the man were not able to pay?

Answer. In general, the same course seemeth rational here, as in matters of debt and theft that the magistrates should make him serve to satisfy.

Quest. 6. What if he would not have her who enticed her?

Answer. The law is the same as in case of force, that he is to be enjoined it by the judges, and he shall not put her away.

Quest. 7. Is this law universal and binding christians?

C c c c c

Answer.

Answer. 1. It could not be universally necessary among the Hebrewes, for many cases might fall out, when by other laws the man could not be suffered to marry; as if of an other tribe, or if an idolater, &c. 2. This law in the equity generally binds all to satisfy man offended, and to do right though not in particulars instanced of dowry.

Quest. 8. Why is the fathers consent required, or what power given to deny?

Answer. 1. This is Gods special ordinance to give this parental power to man, as an image of his own. 2. This is granted to keep a daughter from being destroyed, if she had bin led aside. 3. Such power is reasonable and in case of difficulty to be determined by the judges, who are fathers to this father.

We are instructed by it.

D. 1. Providence may suffer men through strength of lust to intice and defile virgins.

D. 2. Such inticing and polluting is grievous sin against God and man abhorred of the Lord.

D. 3. In case of such sin God hath judged recompense to men, as he executeth vengeance for himself.

D. 4. It is just with God that men should intow virgins to their wives, whom they have inticed and abused, Ver. 16.

D. 5. God hath left liberty unto fathers to interrupt such marriage, if it may be hurtfull.

D. 6. Such denial and hindrance must be reasonable for fathers to act.

D. 7. Upon reasonable denial of marriage the inticer is bound to make satisfaction to the polluted virgin according to equity. Ver. 17.

Ver. 18.

3. The next judgment may respect the seventh precept and no lesse the 6th and second which is this that followes, Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live. Readings concur in sense, — Let not a witch live, — The 70 read in the plural Witches, quequunds. The followers of these are judged, Levit. 20. 6.

Quest. 1. Who or what are these witches?

Answer. 1. The word noteth a deluding of the sight by changing of shapes, as it were calling a mill before mens eyes, but it signifyeth a doing of mischief to God in his wayes injoynted unto men by secret compacts with the Devil, the several kinds whereof are numbered, Deut. 8. 10. 11. 2. The word here used is a feminine participle, noting a woman-witch, (as some conceive, because it is a sin incident to that sexe) but in Deut. 18. mens witches are expressly mentioned; therefore such of all sexes are intended.

Quest. 2. Who are here injoynted not to let them live?

Answer. Doubtles the judges set apart by God to take cognizance of all these vile wickednesses against God and man; but this is not left to any private hand rashly to do.

Quest. 3. But is witchcraft so evil to deserve death?

Answer. 1. However some conceive there are none, or that they do no hurt, yet the Spirit of God saith otherwise, whom we must beleve, and experience may convince them that will see. 2. God hath proportioned this judgment, therefore it is just. 3. The mischief done against the worship of God by it, and against souls and bodies of men even to kill, defile, destroy goods, &c. can deserve no lesse.

Quest. 4. Why is this mentioned here under fornication?

Answer. 1. Though the method of Gods Spirit be arbitrary and he may drop his judgments as he pleaseth, yet it seemeth in this place being subjoynted to mans inticing of a maid, that this witchcraft hath some power over corrupt passions to draw men and women to lustful affections as histories may give some proof. 2. Yet this doth not confine this sin unto this work only; but as we may read, it is perniciously operative unto idolatry, &c. as may be gathered from Deut. 18. 10.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Witchcraft is a sin of Gods own discovery and arraignment.

D. 2. Witchcraft is pernicious to the chastity of mens bodies, as well as lives, &c.

D. 3. The judgment of this sin by God is death temporal and eternal. Ver. 18.

4. The

Ver. 19.

4. The next judgment is upon bestiality, a special sin against the seventh precept, Whoever lieth with a beast dying he shall dye. Readings the same in sense. Πάν πορνείαν ποιεῖς κτήνους θανάτῳ αὐτῶν. Sept.

1. The sin cited is bestiality, or mans mingling himself with beasts in unnatural lust.

2. The judgment thereupon. Such by dying must dye, that is, certainly be put to death.

Quest. 1. How is this sin stated as connected to this judgment?

Answer. 1. It must be actual sin committed in this kind. 2. It must be testified or made evident upon the person, before he be condemned.

Quest. 2. Who are to look after this sin?

Answer. 1. Every one to discover it, least it do defile the land and place where it is. 2. The judges only to examine, convince, and condemn such an odious transgressor.

Quest. 3. What if the sin be but in thought?

Answer. 1. It is a transgression of Gods law, and leaveth men guilty and obnoxious unto eternal death, and in the inward man it admits degrees of studying and resolution, though it be not acted. 2. Yet all this commeth not under the cognizance of man.

Quest. 4. Is none to suffer but the man?

Answer. Yea the beast also, least the fruits of such sin should more appear by it, Levit. 20. 15.

Mark here.

D. 1. Bestial uncleannes is a most horrid abomination in thought, word, and deed.

D. 2. Bestiality acted is judged by God to death without mercy, Ver. 19.

Ver. 20.

5. The next judgment is upon idolatry a sin against the second command thus expressed to the letter, He that sacrificeth to the Gods shall be utterly destroyed, except unto Jehovah to him only. Readings to the same sense, — To the idols, &c. Onk.

1. The sin is specified two wayes, 1. Positively, by sacrificing unto other Gods, whatever idols of the gentiles. 2. Exceptively, save to Jehovah him self alone.

2. The judgment, shall be utterly destroyed or perish with a curse.

Quest. 1. What is the sin judged here?

Answer. 1. It is idolatry, either by worshipping idols, false Gods, Symbols of Devils; or the true God in such false wayes, Numb. 15. 27. 30. 2. It is visibly acted, which commeth under mens knowledge for judgment. 3. Doubting Gods, that is sacrificing to them, and the true God together.

Quest. 2. How was this judgment to be executed?

Answer. 1. Upon examination. 2. Upon evidence. 3. After means used to rectify, and yet men abide stubborn. 4. All must be transacted by Gods judges.

Quest. 3. Is this law now binding?

Answer. 1. Christ hath not repealed it. 2. The reason enforcing it is the same now, as then. 3. All circumstances concurring, its obligation abides.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Jehovah onely is to be sacrificed unto and worshipped by all.

D. 2. It is abominable sin against the being and will of God, to sacrifice to false Gods. Idolatry.

D. 3. God hath adjudged such sinners in his Church to destruction by judges, as well as to eternal wrath, Ver. 20.

6. Now followeth an appendix without any judgement annexed, declaring something by way of exposition and direction, with respect to the lawes of the second table, expressing one kind of neighbour, which otherwise men might mistake which is the stranger, this respects the eighth precept with ours. Here note provision is made 1. Against afflicting strangers, V. 21.

Ver. 21.

And a stranger thou shalt not vex neither shalt thou oppress him, for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt, Readings to the same. — It was a long while that ye were strangers, &c. Ar. Herein we have to consider two things,

1. A prohibition or law negative, under a double expression.

1. Thou shalt not vex or afflict a stranger.

2. Thou shalt not oppress him.

2. A reason of this negative law, from their own formerly experienced condition, being themselves strangers in the land of Egypt, and seeing how God had judged Egypt for the oppression of them.

Quest. 1. What are these strangers and why here mentioned in this law?

Answer. 1. Such as were no way near to them, neither by consanguinity, nor affinity, or nativity in the same place; persons altogether unknown unto them. 2. Such as were in low and mean condition subject unto wrongs. 3. Innocent harmles strangers, Heb. 13. 2. 4. These were named that is.

CCCCC 2

rael might know such were to be looked on as neighbours, which stood in need of them, as Christ interprets the meaning of it, by the Samaritans dealing with him that fell among thieves, Luc. 10. 30. 36.

Quest. 2. What is meant by the vexing and oppressing of them?

Ans. 1. All those acts of injuries or evils forbidden to be done unto our neighbour in the sixth, seventh, 8th and 9th commands. 2. The aggravation of these acts by violence superadded. 3. There are included also the positive acts of duty, whereby they should labour to ease and comfort them, and do them good, Deut. 10. 18. 19.

Quest. 3. What is the import of the reason?

Ans. 1. It is urged to them, to mind them of the sad condition of oppressed strangers, such as they once were, and to move their bowels unto them, Exod. 23. 9. 2. Or if this did not take, to mind them of the judgments which God inflicted on the Egyptians for oppressing strangers, and to make them fear, lest God should so express his indignation against them also, if they afflict strangers.

Quest. 4. Why is no judgment added upon oppressing?

Ans. 1. Judgments are of two sorts. 1. Immediately divine from Gods hands, that is here insinuated, and expressed after by the widow and the fatherless.

2. Mediately Gods, executed by the hand of man, which also, in capital, and criminal things expressed; before, must be executed in the strangers case, upon complaint.

3. Yet such vexing and afflicting may be, which may not come under the cognisance of men, and so cannot be vindicated, yet God alloweth no careless neglect of strangers, but that all right should be unto them; otherwise he taketh their case into his own hand. He is the God of strangers, Levit. 19. 33. 34.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. Gods law interprets strangers to be as neighbours to us.

D. 2. Strangers are under the protection of Gods law that they may not be injured, a double charge.

D. 3. It is an Egyptian sin, calling for Egyptian plagues, to vex strangers.

D. 4. Experience of misery of strangers is a just ground to keep from hurting them, Ver. 21.

2. The next law annexed points at another special sort of neighbours, which are the widow and the fatherless, ver. 22. 23.

24. Wherein we have,

1. The law expressed, Ye shall not afflict any widow or fatherless child. Readings are to the same purpose. Here we are to note.

1. The neighbour specified, Widow and fatherless, such as are supposed to be in a weak, friendless, and helpless condition, and therefore exposed to wrongs.

2. The evil prohibited concerning them, Thou shalt not afflict them. The subject is every person in power to afflict, the act prohibited is affliction, thou shalt not grieve them, nor injure them in any kind; neither private person, nor powers more publick. Ver. 22.

2. The sin supposed, If afflicting thou shalt afflict him, surely in crying he shall cry unto me. Readings are to the same sense. — If ye hurt them and they pray before me, Syr. Where note,

1. The causal evil supposed, thou shalt by any way of afflicting afflict him, or them.

2. The effect supposed, if he surely crying shall cry unto me, that is out of his or their affliction, make their complaint unto God.

3. The return of judgment threatened in these steps,

1. Gods audience, Hearing I will, Ver. 24. hear his cry. Readings agree in sense. —

I will hear their prayer, Syr. — I will hear him for his cry, Ar. Ver. 23.

1. The observer is God himself, the almighty God, the righteous Judge.

2. The observation of this fact with the certainty of it, hearing he will surely hear, and that to effect and purpose as followeth.

2. Gods wrath, And my anger shall waxe hot, Readings are to the same purpose. — My nose shall be angry, — My fury shall waxe strong, Syr. Ar. This is the first effect of Gods hearing, the inflaming of his wrath.

3. Gods vengeance, And I will kill you with the sword. Readings agree. This imports certain death and ruin upon the afflictors of the widow.

4. The sad issue upon their families, And your wives shall be widows, and your sons fatherless. Readings are the same. This is Gods retaliation to the oppressor of the widows and fatherless.

1. Their wives shall be made widows by the death of them who were oppressors.

That their children should be made fatherless, and both exposed to all these injuries, which have been offered by them to others.

Quest. 1. What kind of widows and fatherless are here intended?

Ans.

Ans. 1. Under the protection of this law, all such who are left destitute and are oppressed by men, though otherwise not so conformed unto God, are included; for no other qualification is here added. 2. Yet such as are godly widows & fatherless are more especially under Gods gracious care.

Quest. What are these cries spoken of?

Ans. 1. Expressions of these griefs by complaining. 2. It may carry also crying to God in prayer. 3. It implieth also the voice of their sufferings, though they be silent, their injuries cry aloud to God for them, as Abels blood, Gen. 4.

Quest. What kind of judgment is this annexed?

Answer. 1. A judgment immediate from the hand of God. 2. A judgment full of indignation. 3. A judgment certain which shall not fail. 4. It is indeterminate for time, and as to subjects by Gods pleasure. 5. Yet this example is not from judgments by man, where the widow and fatherless may be heard, Zach. 7. 10.

Observe we.

D. 1. Widows and fatherless are Gods special care.

D. 2. Gods law protects these from injurious afflictions, Ver. 22.

D. 3. Men are yet apt to afflict such helpless ones.

D. 4. Such afflictions cry in the ears of God.

D. 5. God doth certainly hear such cries of the afflicted, Ver. 23.

D. 6. Gods wrath kindleth upon such hearing of them.

D. 7. Gods vengeance will follow such oppressors to death.

D. 8. By death God retaliates the oppression of widows and fatherless to the oppressors, Ver. 24.

3. The next appendix is with respect to the 8th precept, an expresse prohibition against oppressing any of the former, or the poor by usury, Ver. 25. If thou lend money to my people, a poor man, which thou shalt not be to him as a usurer (or exacting creditor) ye shall not lay upon him biting usury. Readings are to the same sense, but different in terms. — Doubling for usury, Sam. &c.

1. The case is proposed, If thou lend money to my people to the poor with thee, where are supposed,

1. The subject lending, which must be the richer and the abler sort, a man of the Hebrews.

2. The act of loan, which is to lay out to any with an expectation of receiving it again.

3. The subject of this loan to whom it was given, set forth under a double title,

1. My people.

2. The poor people, which are by you. 2. The determining of the case suitable to Gods law of loving neighbours, as ourselves in two parts,

1. Thou shalt not be an exacting creditor to oppress him for his loan.

2. Ye shall not lay upon him biting usury, the word notes biting or griping increase.

Quest. 1. What is the usury here intended?

Answer. These concurrents are in it.

1. Exactness of something from the borrower about the loan, be it of money or any matters of barter, Deut. 23. 19.

2. It is exactness unto the oppression and griping of the poor to make him cry; which may be in the least degree upon them.

Quest. 2. What is meant by the act prohibited?

Answer. 1. Negatively, here is prohibited exactness of loan to afflict or oppress the poor. 2. Affirmatively it implieth the duty of lending freely to the poor, and expecting nothing from him in his straits, yea to supply his necessities, Deut. 15. 7. 8.

Luke. 6. 35.

Quest. 3. Doth this injunction onely concern the poor?

Answer. 1. In this place they are expressly named, and so Levit. 25. 35. 36. 37. 2. But in other places, all oppressing usury is forbidden to be used to any, Deut. 23. 19. 3. There was yet a dispensation that they might lay it upon strangers to their nation which God ordered as a punishment to them; the prohibition of it was a balance of government to the Jewes, for otherwise they might have eaten out one anothers estates by it.

Quest. 4. Is all increase of money usury in this sense?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 5. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 6. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 7. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 8. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 9. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 10. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 11. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Quest. 12. Is the law against usury in force?

Ans. Surely no; for 1. There may be such just converse and trading about it unto mutual good and comfort, wherein equity may be maintained, and no party oppressed, which is not so here stiled. 2. Such onely which binds men to oppressing terms, however Gods providence may deal with men to impoverish them, is the usury biting & forbidden here, and this may be upon the loan of other things, as well as money.

Ans. 1. Not in the political consideration of the Jewes which was special to them, as to use it toward strangers; and as a balance of government to themselves. 2. As to the common and general equity of this which forbids the hurt of our neighbours it is confirmed by Christ.

Learn we from it.

D. 1. The poor among a people or in the Church are Gods special care. Such as are orderly.

D. 2. Loan of necessities to the poor for their support is a duty of the rich neighbour.

D. 3. It is great wickednes to require biting increase for such loan, which God forbids doubly.

D. 4. Gods special will is that his poor should be freely comforted and provided for, Ver. 25.

4. The last provision made against oppressing the poor is about pawns, Ver. 26. 27. Whereabout we have,

Ver. 26. 1. The case, If in taking pledge thou shalt take to pledge the raiment of thy neighbour, Readings agree in sense, Herein note these terms.

1. The object receiving the pledge, the rich neighbour, one of ability.
2. The act of taking to pledge, in a double expression, In pledging thou shalt take to pledge or pawn.

3. The object, Thy neighbours raiment supposed poor, and forced to put it to pledge for livelihood.

Ver. 26. 2. The determination by law, Thou shalt return it unto him to the going down of the sun or before, &c. Readings agree in sense, Wherein,

1. The injunction, thou shalt return it to him.

2. The time or season; at or before the going down of the sun, Ver. 26.

Ver. 27. 3. The reason of this return determined, For it is his covering, onely that, it is his raiment for his skin; wherein shall he sleep, Readings agree in sense; onely some terms.

Discovering of his shame, 70. It is that wherein he should sleep, Vulg. Sam. Three things are urged here,

1. It is his onely covering, therefore necessary.

2. It is the raiment of his skin to cover nakednes.

3. It is a covering for his sleep, without which he could not rest, Deut. 24. 13.

4. The judgment threatened in case of refusal, And it shall be when he crieth unto me, then I will hear, for I am gracious, Readings agree, ——— If he pray before me, &c. Syr. In it

1. A cry of oppression is supposed, If or when, &c.

2. Audience from God with the consequences is promised, I will hear.

3. The reason of Gods audience, For I am gracious.

Quest. What is to be understood by the garment of this neighbour?

Ans. 1. In the letter it appears to be the onely covering wherein he should sleep, and therefore a night-garment; and any thing is thereby intended necessary for rest. 2. In proportion it includes necessarily, the onely day-garment, which covereth the skin or nakednes, and so any utensil necessary for life, or lively hood, as the upper or nether millstone, Deut. 24. 6. So the instruments which a man needs, to work for his life. These were not to be taken to pledge.

Quest. 2. What is meant by the going down of the sun?

Ans. 1. In the letter it is read the coming of the sun, which some understand either of coming to the east in rising, or to the west in setting, and so referre it unto day-as well as night-garment. 2. Here expressly it must note sun-setting, for it was his sleeping garment. 3. Yet more generally it noteth a short time; that speedily it must be returned.

Quest. 3. What is meant by Gods hearing, &c?

Ans. 1. Gods observance of the oppression. 2. Gods respect to the oppressed. 3. Gods anger against the oppressor, and vengeance following, upon which account he saith I am gracious i. e. freely good to the poor crying, but withall truly just to the wicked oppressing them.

Quest. 4. Is this law binding under the Gospel?

Ans. 1. As to the restrictive conditions to the Hebrewes with respect to other nations it is not; 2. As to the general reason and equity of the law it is confirmed by the Son of God, who establisheth all the righteous lawes of his Father.

It instruct's us.

D. 1. Taking of pawn or pledge to oppress the poor, as to night-rest, or day-comfort, is wicked.

D. 2. The disposition of corrupt men is to do so wickedly against the poor.

D. 3.

D. 3. Gods law provide's for a speedy return of such pledges to relieve the poor, Ver. 26.

D. 4. Nature teacheth that the onely raiment of the skin, and covering for the poor mans sleep, must not be kept.

D. 5. Such hard dealings make poor oppressed cry mightily to God.

D. 6. Such cries God will hear and be gracious to his poor, and righteous to judge the oppressors, Ver. 27.

Ver. 28. 7. The next appendix concern's the fifth precept in a special case of charity to rulers and civil Magistrats, which followeth thus, Thou shalt not revile the Gods, and the ruler of thy people thou shalt not curse, Readings are to the same sense, ——— The Prince of the people; &c. Sept. Judges for Gods Onk. ——— The judge and the noble, singular both Ar. and Syr. This double prohibition both clearly belong to the law of order, which requireth honour to the fathers civil and ecclesiastical as to the natural. Two negatives here are expressed,

1. Thou shalt not revile the Gods,

1. The subject of this prohibition are inferiours in Church or State.

2. The object, Gods, Judges, Fathers in power, Princes.

3. The act prohibited, reviling, making vile, either in thought or word.

2. Thou shalt not curse the Prince of thy people, that is, the chief who is set above all. The same terms are here. Cursing seems to be blaspheming or execrating in word.

Quest. 1. Who are stiled Gods and upon what account?

Answer. 1. Powers onely in the church, Ps. 82. 6. Or state. 2. These are from God, and hereby ordered to God, to do worthy of that name.

Quest. 2. What is imported in the act prohibited?

Ans. 1. Negatively all evill thoughts, words, and carriages against them, publick or privat, Luk. 10. ver. 20. 2. Affirmatively all honour, & due respect is commanded by God for them.

Quest. 3. Why is no penalty of judgment annexed?

Answer. 1. This is arbitrary to God to expresse that, where he will. 2. In giving sentence upon dishonour to other parents, God gave it concerning these.

Quest. 4. Did not Paul transgresse against this, Acts. 23. 3. ver. 9.

Answer. No, for 1. He justly acknowledged not the power, he not being regularly high-Priest. 2. He prophetically pronounced his doom, as other Prophets did against evill rulers in their respective times.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. God giveth his own name unto those powers, which besets up in his Church.

D. 2. Such powers God shelters under his wing, no reviling must be of them, Ver. 28.

8. The last thing noted in this chapter are things appendent unto the first & second precepts which respect God and his dues required from them unto his Ministers. In these 3 verses, 29. 30. 31. are these 4 lawes.

2. Concerning the fruits due to God, Thy fulnes and thy tear thou shalt not delay, Ver. 29.

The first fruits of the floor and the wine-press, Sept. Of the first fruits and liquors, most understand it in reading, Onk. Sam. Ar. Syr.

Quest. 1. What is meant by fulnes?

Answer. All the dues of the dry ripe fruit of the ground as all sorts of corn.

Quest. What is the delay prohibited here?

Answer. It is a needles deferring of what God calls for in.

Quest. What is meant by the tear?

Answer. All liquid fruits, wine, and oyl, such as were required, these were oblations for the Priests.

2. Concerning their children, The first born of thy sons thou shalt give to me, Readings agree, Ver. 29.

Quest. How were these first born to be given?

Answer. 1. As in way of sacrifice and so to be redeemed, Chap. 13. 2. As for the work of ministry which was required, untill the tribe of Levi was separated, Ex. 24. 5. V. 29.

3. Concerning their cattel, So shalt thou do to shine ox and to thy sheep, seven dayes it shall be with its dam, on the 8th day thou shalt give it unto me, Readings are to the same sense, ——— It shall be with its people or kind, Sam.

Quest. 1. What is meant by doing so with them? &c.

Answer. The sense is, that they were to give the first born of their cattel unto God, as the first born of man.

Quest. Why was it to be kept to the 8th day?

Answer. In short, that it might be in some state of strength and fines, which God

God required; that too much haste might not be in this, Ver. 30.

4. Concerning themselves, And ye shall be men of holiness unto me, and flesh torn in the field ye shall not eat, to the degge ye shall cast it. Readings are to the same purpose. In this passage we have to consider

1. The injunction itself, expressing the scope of the first and second precepts, which is, that they should be holy men; the men of holiness to God; and that really in themselves, and ways.

2. An injunction of a symbol to note our former holiness, Ye shall not eat, &c.

Quest. 1. Was this any holiness to abstain from such flesh so torn?

Ans. 1. Not in itself, but as it was an expression of obedience unto the will of God. 2. All these things it pleased God to join that people for the time appointed.

Quest. 2. Are these laws now in force?

Ans. Not for the materiality of them, they are all expired; but the spirituality intended by them, that we should be the people of God's holiness indeed, is now as much incumbent on us, and that by greater engagements. Ver. 31.

We conclude from it.

D. 1. Mans substance is at Gods command, as he requireth it.

D. 2. Delays in giving it to God are forbidden as sinful.

D. 3. Children are to be devoted unto God, as he requireth them. Ver. 29.

D. 4. Perfect sacrifice of beasts did God require in the law; now fulfilled in Christ. Ver. 30.

D. 5. The great scope of Gods law is to make men truly holy, men of holiness.

D. 6. Obedience to all Gods commands in the least things is a good test of holiness in men. Ver. 31.

CHAP. XXIII.

In this Chapter is continued the history of Gods giving the law to Moses while he was at the neither part of the mount, and herein we have to note, these heads in general.

1. Some more judicial laws added by way of exposition to the moral. ver. 1. 9.

2. Some ceremonial laws mixt with moral. ver. 10. 19.

3. Some motives for obedience unto all. ver. 20. 33. So farre reacheth the history of Gods law giving unto Moses while he was at the lower part of the mount, standing between God and Israel.

In the first which concern's these judicials we have to observe these three sorts,

1. Some respect the 9th moral law.

ver. 1. 2. 3.

2. Some concern the 8th precept. ver.

4. 5.

3. Some belong to the 6th. ver. 6.

7. 8. 9.

1. In the first of these the three former verses are taken up, which are onely by way of exposition of the 9th precept.

1. Thou shalt not take up a vain or false report or the hearing of a lye. Vocem mendacii, Vulg. Rumorem vanum falsum, Sam. Syr. ne confirmes, acceptes famam falsam, Ar. all to the same sense. Herein the terms of this prohibition note,

1. The subject Israel, and every man in this case.

2. The object of prohibition, any report of falsehood, any pain or false rumours of our neighbours.

3. The act prohibited, Thou shalt not take up, which is rendered variously.

1. A taking of it up at first hand by inventing it, or at the second by conveying it after hearing, the former is more proper here, because the latter falls fully in the second prohibition.

Quest. In what case is this prohibited?

Ans. 1. Generally in all cases of converse with men. 2. Specially in matters of judgment publick, concerning persons, states and names.

2. The next prohibition is, Thou shalt not put thy hand with the wicked to be a witness of iniquity. Consent not with the unjust, &c. Sept. Onk. Sam. to the same with Hebr. Deal not at all with the unjust to be for him a witness, &c. Ar.

Stretch not out thy hand with a creditour, &c. Here is expressly forbidden consent with others to carry on a false report, or witness against any.

1. The subject is the same.

2. The work prohibited is to join hands with the wicked, and consent with them.

3. The end of this act, to be a witness of unrighteousness, All this is in the prohibition.

Quest. What is meant by putting to the hand?

Ans. 1. In conspiracy with others.

2. In assistance of others either publicly or privately to defame their neighbours. Some Rabbinis understand it of swearing, the signal whereof ofis putting the hand upon the book of the law; but this is after their vain dreams, Ver. 1.

3. The next prohibition is this, Thou shalt not be after many or mighty ones for evils, and thou shalt not answer in a controversy to decline after many or great ones to pervert. Sam. to the same sense. To decline with many so as to exclude judgment, Sept.

Cease not to teach that which seemes to thee in judgment, do judgment after the sentence of the most, Onk. But turn after many, Ar.

To decline, Syr. Neither after the judgment of many shalt thou acquiesce in a sentence to decline from the truth, Vulg. Two prohibitions are here included about the same matter, of which is conceived.

1. That the former concerns mens general conversations, not to join with multitudes and mighty ones as to defame our neighbours.

2. That the latter concern's more specially causes in judgment, both wayes are men forbidden to join with many or mighty to pervert, or turn our neighbours from their right.

In the former,

1. The subject is the same.

2. The act prohibited, to be after or follow after many.

3. The end, to do evil to our neighbour by defaming.

In the latter,

1. The same subject.

2. The act forbidden, to answer or speak with many or mighty ones against our neighbour.

3. The case which is any matter of strife or controversy publick or privat.

4. The end, to pervert or turn them away from their right and due, Ver. 7.

Quest. What is the proper sense of Rab-

bim here? רבים

Ans. 1. It is generally translated many, and so truly. 2. Yet with respect to what followeth about the poor man, Ver. 3.

This seems more properly to denote the power and mightines of these, which might persuade weak ones the sooner to join with them in doing evil by lyes to their neighbours.

4. The last prohibition is this, And a poor man thou shalt not honour in his controversy. Readings are to the same sense. Thou shalt not pity in judgment, Sept. Onk. Vulg. Not take part with him in controversy, Ar. Not help him. Syr. Wherein note,

1. The subject is the same.

2. The object, the poor man.

3. The act, honour and respect more than is due.

4. The case, in his controversy, and cause managed with others.

Quest. What is the import of this prohibition?

His poverty is here looked on as an outward respect, which men must not look on, with reference to any, in judgment. 3. His cause or controversy seemeth here not to be right or good, and therefore his poverty must not cover it, Ver. 3.

Quest. Is there no judgment annexed to this?

Ans. Yea retaliation, Deut. 19. 16. 19.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Taking lying reports, or inventing them against neighbours, is a sin forbidden in the ninth precept.

D. 2. Putting hand unto, and helping the wicked in a testimony of unrighteousness, is a sin prohibited, Ver. 1.

D. 3. Neither number, nor power of men, must be followed, to do evil unto neighbours.

D. 4. It is sin forbidden to plead the cause of many or mighty ones for perverting truth, Ver. 2.

D. 5. Poverty is no shelter with God to defend a bad cause.

D. 6. No honour must be done unto such, with respect to outward conditions, in matters of judgment. Ver. 3.

2. The next sort of laws belong to the eighth precept, which follow, Ver. 4. 5: Herein is a double case,

1. Suppose I have an enemy whom I hate, am I bound by the eighth precept to seek his good?

2. Suppose mine adversary hate me, must I yet look after his good?

These two are here copied in the two verses following.

1. If or when thou shalt meet the ox of thine enemy or his ass straying, returning thou shalt return it unto him, Readings agree in sense, If thou fall upon them, &c. or happen on the ox, &c.

1. The case carrieth in it,

1. The subject, one that is angry and offended with his neighbour, as an enemy, and so apprehend's him.

2. The event supposed, happening to meet with his neighbours ox or ass straying, or any other beast of his, as the Samar. read's.

2. The determination of this case, returning thou shalt return it to him, This is Gods law upon souls for preserving neighbours goods, and it imports,

1. Diligence in doing it

2. Certainty of doing it. Thou shalt surely bring the stray backe to him though he be thine enemy, Ver. 4.

Ver. 5.

2. If or when thou shalt see the asse of him that hateth thee lying under his burden and shalt abstain from leaving for him, by leaving thou shalt leave (to help) with him. Readings concur to the same sense. — Thou shalt not passe by, but shalt lift it with him, Sept. — Thou shalt lay aside the hatred which was in thy heart against him, and shalt lift up with him. — Take heed you do not forsake him, helping thou shalt help him, Sam. — Abstain from leaving him in that state, but it becomes you to unload him, Arab. — Lifting thou shalt lift up with him, Syr. Herein also occur.

1. The case, which supposeth,

1. That the asse or beast of one that hates a man is fallen under his burden, and there in distresse.

2. That the man hated by him seeth this.

3. That there is in the man an unwillingnes upon that account, to help his neighbours asse or beast.

2. The determination is, that though such a one were at his own labour, yet he should leave all his own busines, to help up the asse with him. So the words must be construed here. Expressed, Deut. 22. Ver. 4.

Quest. 1. Why are these cases made about oxen? &c.

Answer. 1. Not for the sakes of these creatures in themselves, Gods lawes are not aimed to them. 2. Mainly, it is Gods will to teach men, that they must love their neighbours, though they be enemies; and expresse it towards their very beasts, though they have bin hating and hated one by another.

Quest. 2. Did not the law say, love thy neighbour and hate thine enemy, how then doth this agree?

Ans. 1. The law of God saith no where hate thine enemy, but the contrary, Levit. 19. 18. It was one of the wicked traditions of the Jewish Rabbins. Of old they were wont to say so, which Christ condemneth, Matth. 5. 43.

It informeth us.

D. 1. Enemies and haters are neighbours, although hating and hated one of another.

D. 2. Private grudges are not allowed.

wed, though supposed, in them that are under the law of God.

D. 3. By Gods injunction such pretended enmity must not exempt from duty to our neighbours beasts.

D. 4. Men are apt to let their neighbours beasts stray and perish when they are enemies.

D. 5. Gods law is mainly aimed to root out enmity of mens hearts.

D. 6. Law and Gospel agree in this to bind men unto the love of their enemies. Ver. 4. 5.

3. The next sort of judicials here seem to respect the life of our neighbour, and sh are reducible to the 6th precept, yet may no lesse in some particulars respect other commands, these are given, ver. 6. 7. 8. 9. which we may consider under a threefold specification of the neighbours whom they concern,

1. The poor neighbour is provided for by God. Ver. 6.

2. The innocent neighbour is guarded. Ver. 7. 8.

3. The stranger who is yet our neighbour. Ver. 9.

To the first it is thus written, Thou shalt not wrest the judgment of the poor in his controversy. Readings are all to the same scope, — Thou shalt not pervert the judgment of the poor in his judging, Sept. This prohibition may serve to explicate the 6th 8th and 9th precepts in all cases, that may befall the poor.

1. The subject to whom this is given is every man,

1. More especially such as sit in judgment.

2. Generally all such as undertake to judge their neighbours or censure them.

2. The act prohibited, the wresting or perverting of judgment, the hindrance or taking away of right.

3. The object terminating it which is the poor neighbour in his right when he is drawn either to publick or privat barres of mens censures; yea it is added thy poor which usually are so poor to begge. Vat. This law serveth to interpret that which was given V. 3. Not to accept the person of the poor so as to do wrong to others for him, yet must not the poor or poorest beggar be slighted in case his cause be right, but rather supported and maintained.

Quest. What is carried in the prohibition?

Answer. 1. Negatively no hurt or wrong must be done unto the poorest in their causes, publick or privat, by any man of any rank. 2. Positively vely all right is to be performed to them; yea and they sustained; they are eminently called thy poor, which God hath given to our care.

We observe.

D. 1. It is incident unto corrupt men to oppress their neighbours under poverty in all causes.

D. 2. Gods law strictly forbids such injurious wresting of the poor's cause, Deut. 27. 19.

D. 3. God hath made the poor to be our property, that we might take the protection of them, Ver. 6.

Ver. 7.

2. The innocent neighbour is next considered, of whom God thus speaketh in the following law, From the word of lye thou shalt be farre, and the innocent and the righteous slay not, for I will not justify the wicked. Readings are mostly to the same sense, — Thou shalt not justify the ungodly for gifts, Sept. — Him that is justified and goeth forth just from judgment, Onk. — I am against the wicked, Ver. 7.

Ver. 8.

And a gift thou shalt not receive, for a gift will blind the open-eyed, and will pervert the words of the righteous ones. Readings are to the same sense, but various wayes. — Gifts blind the wise and subvert the words of the just ones, Vulg. — Blind the eyes of seeing men, and pervert just words, Sept. — Words of innocent, Syr. — Right matters, ver. 8. In all this we have,

1. A preparative injunction against hurting our innocent neighbours life, — Be farre from words of falsehood, thou shalt fly from a lye, Vulg. This leadeth to destroy the innocent.

Remotenes of lies is here enjoined,

1. From invention.

2. From affection.

3. From expression.

2. A prohibition against hurting the life of the innocent with a reason of it.

1. The prohibition runs thus, And the innocent and the just thou shalt not slay.

1. The act forbidden, is killing.

2. The object, is the innocent and righteous soul whom God justifieth.

2. The reason added, For I will not justify the wicked. i. e. God will certainly review such judgments, and condemn such wicked, bloody men, who destroy innocent souls, Ver. 7.

3. A prohibition of the means, whereby innocents are destroyed, with a reason thereunto added,

1. The prohibition itself. A gift shalt thou not receive.

1. The act forbidden is to take.

2. The object is a gift by way of bribe.

2. The reason of this prohibition, twofold given,

1. The one respects the judge, it blindeth the eyes of them who otherwise would see; of the wife and prudent as some; it make's fools.

2. The other respects the parties judged, as well as judging, it perverts the words of the righteous ones, it will make men even so to pervert the words and the matters of them who are judged, and then give perverse judgment themselves, Ver. 8.

Quest. 1. It is innocency in truth or appearance here intended?

Answer. 1. Doubtles Gods law provides for these, who are innocent indeed. 2. Yet this must be apparent also in case of acquitting and justifying such in judgment. 3. Greatest care is to be taken by judges to find out, and clear the innocency of men against lying witnesses.

Quest. 2. May no gift be taken?

Ans. The law is absolute and general, no gifts neither to pervert judgment wickedly, nor give righteous judgment in mens causes, Job. 15. 34.

Learn we hence.

D. 1. Gods law of truth keeps farre from lying.

D. 2. Gods law protect's the innocent and just from death.

D. 3. God is resolved to condemn those wicked ones that slay the righteous, Ver. 7.

D. 4. God forbids all gifts to be received about judgment.

D. 5. Judges and judged are abused by gifts of bribes.

D. 6. God hath shut out such evils by his law, Ver. 8.

3. The stranger which is our neighbour is here provided for, against oppression in judgment or otherwise, wherein his life may be endangered.

And a stranger thou shalt not oppress, for ye were strangers in the land of Egypt. Readings agree, Ver. 9.

1. A prohibition is here given by additional interpretation of the sixth precept, not to oppress the life of a stranger, who is our neighbour.

2. A reason added, from the experience which they had of a strangers condition in Egypt, by which they might know, what strangers souls do suffer, and what pity they deserve. This seem's to adde something more to the former charge given, Chap. 22. 21.

Which

Which more specially concern's the stranger in judgment, and as being accused by others, for the main I shall referre you to that place foregoing, and Deut. 10. 19.

Yet here we may note.

D. 1. Gods law secureth strangers from oppression in judgment.

D. 2. Experience of strangers condition, and their souls burden, should keep off from oppressing them, Ver. 9.

2. Now follow some ceremonial lawes mixt with moral, belonging to the first table, Ver. 10. 19. These may be ranked into two heads,

1. Some have respect unto the fourth precept, which concern holy time, and they are of three sorts,

1. Such as concern a seventh years Sabbath, Ver. 10. 11.

2. Such as concern a seventh dayes Sabbath, Ver. 12. 13.

3. Such as concern several festivals falling out in a year, Ver. 14. 15. 16. 17.

2. Some respect the second command about sacrifice or means or worship, Ver. 18. 19.

1. That which in the first place is proposed is about the seventh years sabbath, with respect unto the land, whereabout we have here delivered,

Ver. 10. 1. A law about the 6 years work, Ver. 10. 11. And sixe years thou shalt sow thy land, and thou shalt gather the provencie or increase thereof, Readings agree. — Fruits. Sam. Here two things are enjoined,

1. That sixe years they must sow the land.

2. That in that time they shall gather in the fruit which shall grow upon their labours all the provencie of their land. The terms are not difficult, some queries about the matter will follow to be answered,

Ver. 11. 1. A law about the seventh years rest, Ver. 11. But the seventh thou shalt intermit and let it alone, and the poor of thy people shall eat, and the residue of them, shall the beast of the field eat, so shalt thou do to thy vineyard, to thine oliveyard, Readings mostly are the same, — In the seventh year thou shalt plow and leave it, &c. Sept. contrary to the Hebr. and scope of this law. Herein note,

1. The law enjoined that in the seventh year the land was to rest from being turned up manured, &c. Under a double expression,

2. The reason of this law twofold.

1. With respect to the poor of their people, that they might eat.

2. With respect to the beasts, that they might have a portion of that seventh years mercy.

3. An addition to this law about the vineyard and oliveyard, to give the like rest to them, not to prune or dresse them.

Quest. 1. Was this law in present use with the Jewes?

Ans. 1. No, not in the wilderness, nor in any other strangeland. 2. This law was delivered at Sinai, but not in force until they came into the land of promise; and it did concern them onely, with respect to that land, Levit. 25. 1.

Quest. 2. What kind of Sabbath was this of the seventh year?

Ans. 1. It was ceremonial and peculiar to the Church-state of that time: 2. It was typical also and did figure out the true rest of the Church under Christ, Isai. 61. 2. Col. 2. 16.

Quest. 3. Was there no other end of this Sabbath, but the refreshing of the poor and beasts?

Ans. 1. Yea divers others, as 1. To glorify Gods providence in giving such abundance in the sixth year, Levit. 25. 20. 21. 22. 2. To try their faith, Levit. 25. 4. 5. 3. The release of servants, 4. The reading of the law more fully, Deut. 31. 10. 11. 12.

Quest. 4. Was it not natural to give land rest?

Ans. 1. Yea, as to the general state of it, with other lands. 2. But here this rest was specially providential, that Gods glory might appear in the sixth and seventh years ordering of this land of promise.

It instructs us.

D. 1. God positively hath commanded a Sabbath for land, as for men.

D. 2. Labour and rest for lands and plants, are at Gods disposal.

D. 3. Special ends of good did God appoint for special Sabbaths.

D. 4. All ceremoniall Sabbaths to the Jewes are perfected in the Churches rest by Christ. Ver. 10. 11.

2. Next followeth an additional law about the sabbath of dayes, or a brief recital of that delivered, Exod. 20. 8. Wherein occur,

1. A short repetition of the law, Slav Ver. 12. dayes thou shalt do thy works, and on the seventh day thou shalt rest, or keep Sabbath, Readings agree,

2. The liberty indulged and duty enjoined for 6 dayes labour, six dayes are designed for mans work.

3. The

2. The weekly Sabbath-rest commanded & on the seventh day thou shalt cease or keep Sabbath.

Ver. 12.

2. A recital of the reason, That thine ox may rest, and thine asse, and the son of thine handmaid may breath, and the stranger. Readings to the same sense, — Stranger in the cities, Sept. The reason consists in a threefold refreshing,

1. Of cattel.

2. Of servants.

3. Of strangers, Ver. 12.

3. A corroboration of this command by a double item,

Ver. 13.

1. Affirmatively, And in all things which I have said unto you ye shall observe circumspically, — Readings agree, — Cause servabitis, Syr. Wherein there is,

1. A charge to look to Gods word in this case.

2. An obligation to all Gods word about it.

3. An injunction of strict watch to observe this command about the Sabbath. Cald.

Ver. 13.

2. Negatively, And the name of other Gods, ye shall not remember or mention, it shall not be heard upon thy month, Readings to the same sense, — The name of the idols of people, &c. Onk.

The name of strange things to be worshipped, &c. Ar. — Let them not come upon your heart. Syr. — Ye shall not swear by the name of other Gods, Vulg. Out of thy mouth, Sept. All this is appondent upon the Sabbath of dayes, and forbids,

1. Any worship unto the name of any other Gods, but onely the Lord of Sabbath; which is meant by remembering or mentioning.

2. Not the least report or expression of Idols to be heard from any mouth, Ver. 13.

Quest. 1. Is this seventh dayes Sabbath ceremonial as the former?

Answer. No, however it be placed among such lawes, but it is a moral law concerning men as men, so the Sabbath was at first made by God for man as hath bin discovered, Ex. 20. 8.

Quest. Why is the rest of beasts and servants, &c. here mentioned?

Answer. 1. The sake of cessation of these is not onely mentioned. 2. The first and main work is to keep the Sabbath, the word note it, and that word for beasts, noteth onely rest suitable to them. 3. All other special duties which God commanded in the Sabbath are here also strictly enjoined.

Quest. Why are the names of other Gods here forbidden to be mentioned?

Answer. 1. It may be upon a general account to keep men from falling against the true God in respect of all the commands of the first table. 2. It is here more specially added to the 4th precept, to single out the Lord of Sabbath.

It teacheth us.

D. 1. Gods law is very strict in often pressing the keeping of his weekly Sabbath.

D. 2. Though bodily rest of some creatures be therein provided for, yet spiritual rest is mans duty. Ver. 12.

D. 3. Strict and circumspect observation of all commands, God enjoyneth, but especially of his Sabbath.

D. 4. No Gods are to be mentioned or worshipped with the Lord of the Sabbath. Ver. 13.

3. The next law concern's some other times of festival, Ver. 14. 15. 16. 17. Which are proposed,

1. In general, Three times shalt thou keep a feast to me in the year. Readings agree in sense, — Three times ye shall celebrate feasts, Vulg. Syr. Ar.

Three seasons of the year feast ye to me, Sept. — Three times in a year, Onk. — Three feasts thou shalt celebrate to me every year, Sam. This is but the general law which is afterward explained in particulars.

1. The work is feasting.

2. The subject Israel.

3. The frequency, three times in a year. All this to them, Ver. 14.

2. In special these three feasts or holy times, are named,

1. The feast of unleavened bread thou shalt keep, seven dayes shalt thou eat unleavened bread, as I commanded thee, at the time of the month Abib, because in it thou camest out of Egypt, and my faces shall not be seen empty, or thou shalt not be seen before me empty. Ver. 15. — In the month of new fruits, Vulg. Sept. Onk. Sam. — In the month of flowers, Syr. — In the month when corn turns yellow, &c. Ar. — They shall not see my face empty, Sam. Here note,

1. The feast commanded, that is of unleavened bread joyned with the Passover.

2. The time of it, in the month Abib, as Exod. 12.

3. The reason of that time, in it they came out of Egypt, Ex. 13. 3, &c.

4. The direction how they should come, none must see the face of God empty.

Ver. 16.

2. And the feast of harvest of the first fruits of thy labours which thou shalt sow in the field. Readings agree. This was the feast of sevens or of weeks being 7 weeks after the Paschever, Exod. 34. 22. called also Pentecost, Levit. 23. 15. 16. Deut. 16. 9. 10. Act. 2. 1. This feast was but of one day, the 50th after the Paschever, Levit. 23. 16. But some conceive it to be seven dayes.

Ver. 19.

3. And the feast of in-gathering in the going out of the year when thou gatherest in thy labours of the field. Readings agree. This was that feast of Tabernacles kept in the seventh month, which is our September, Ex. 34. 22. Levit. 23. 34. Deut. 16. 13. 16. This was to mind them of their 40 years dwelling intents in the wilderness, and to blesse God for his protection, Ver. 16.

Ver. 17.

3. The special law for these subjects that must appear at these three times, Three times in a year shall every male of thee be seen before the face of the Lord Jehovah. Every male thing before the Lord thy God Vulg. Sept. — All thy males before the Lord the ruler of the world, — Before the Ark of the Lord, Sam. — Shalt set all thy males in the sanctuary of the Lord God, Ar. — Let all thy memory appear before the Lord thy God, Syr. Zecor is the Hebrew word given to males because they continue the memory of families.

1. The subject injoynd are the males only.

2. The work, their appearance before God in the place of worship, which he should choose.

3. The frequency, three times in the year as was expressed before, v 17. Deut. 16. 16.

Quest. 1. Were there no other times of holy fasts?

Answer. 1. Yea there were others, but not so solemn as these. 2. None but these were such, wherein all the males appeared before the Lord.

Quest. 2. What was the use of these feasts?

Answer. 1. Commemorative of mercies past, as the Paschever of Israels deliverance out of Egypt, the Pentecost a memorial of the law given at mount Sinai, the 50th day after the first Paschever. And the feast of Tabernacles a remembrance of their dwelling in booths in their wilderness-condition. 2. Typically figurative; so the Paschever typed Christ the immaculat Lamb saving us by his blood of sprinkling. (2) Pentecost typed the giving of the Gospel - doctrine more fully by the Spirit, 3) the feast of Tabernacles, as is conceived by some, Christs incarnation or tabernacling in our flesh; Joh. 1. 14.

Quest. 3. What were these males, and why they only injoynd to appear before God?

Answer. 1. Not all males simply, but, as conceived from 20 years old to 50. such as were ablest, yet others might be able under & above these ages. 2. Women were not forbidden, but indulged because of tediousness of the way, &c. Yet we read of some that came, who might with conveniency. 3. This God required.

1. To give them experience of his providence in guarding their houses, while they were absent.

2. To spread religion and the fear of God more among them, Ex. 34. 23. 24. This is meant by their appearing before God.

Quest. 4. What was the place whereunto they must come?

Ans. It is expressly said, the place which the Lord should choose, Deut. 16. 16.

1. It was at Shiloh. 2. at Jerusalem. God himself owned them both in their times; and while his law was observed there, 1 Sam. 2. Psal. 132.

Quest. 5. What is meant by that, None must appear empty?

Answer. 1. Doubtles God requireth herein all the sacrifices due for his service at these seasons. 2. All free-will offerings, that any should bring according to that portion wherewith God had blessed any of them.

Quest. 6. Have these lawes any respect to the Church of God under the Gospel?

Answer. 1. As to the ceremonial or typical nature none at all; for all were abolished by Christs being come.

2. Yet analogically and by way of proportion, something doth concern us,

1. That place be for publick assemblies.

2. The congregations meet all before the Lord to acquaint themselves with him.

3. That souls be free to maintain Gods service, even as the Lord inableth them.

Learn we further.

D. 1. God hath and may by his word and works point out holy time to men beside his Sabbath. But none save God, and by his order. Ver. 14.

D. 2. Gods mind hath bin and is, that his Church should serve him faithfully, so 1 Cor. 5. 8. D. 3.

D. 3. Assemblies and congregations are requisite to appear before God.

D. 4. God loveth free spirits full of good works, and will reward them.

D. 5. Stinted times were more under the law, and more enlarged under the Gospel, one in Christ. Ver. 15. 16.

D. 6. It is good to keep memorials of Gods mercies spiritually.

D. 7. Though male and female be one in Christ as to life, yet more work may lye upon men, than women.

D. 8. It is mans great concernment in Church-assemblies to consider, that they appear before Jehovah their Lord. Ver. 17.

2. The last additional lawes here mentioned of the ceremonial, relate unto the second moral precept, which concerns sacrifice and other outward means of worship, and they are two,

1. A law concerning the Paschever Ver. 18.

2. A law concerning the first fruits. Ver. 20.

1. About the Paschever two things are prohibited,

1. Eating it with leaven, Thou shalt not sacrifice the blood of my sacrifice with leavened bread, Vulg. Sam. Syr. are the same, — Of my Paschever, Onk. — When I cast out the nations before thee, and enlarge thy borders, thou shalt not sacrifice the blood of my incense with leaven, Sept. — Thou shalt not offer my Paschever, &c. Ar. Wherein note,

1. The subject prohibited, Israel even all of them.

2. The object concerned, Gods sacrifice, even the Paschever noted under that name.

3. The act prohibited with its modification, Thou shalt not sacrifice it with leavened bread.

Quest. 1. How doth this sacrifice here appear to be the Paschever?

Answer. 1. This had the law of unleavened bread annexed to it. 2. It is expressly so called, Ex. 34. 25.

Quest. 2. How is it said, thou shalt not sacrifice it with unleavened bread, where as it is said only yeshall not eat it with unleavened bread, Exod. 12. 8?

Ans. 1. Two things are considerable in the Paschever. 1. A sacrifice to God. 2. A feast for man.

Ans. 2. This one act of sacrificing includes that of eating, they being so neerly joynd together.

2. The next thing about the Paschever prohibited here is, Neither shalt the fat of my feast remain until the morning. Readings are to the same, — Of the sacrifice of the feast, Onk. — It shall not rest a night or lodge with you, Hebr. — It shall not sleep to the morning, Sept. Here note,

1. The matter of the prohibition, it is the fat of the sacrifice of the Paschever, which must be burnt presently, as that of other sacrifices; yet some take it figuratively for the whole lamb, which was to be eaten before the morning.

2. The thing prohibited about it, that it shall not lodge with them one night unoffered unto the Lord.

Quest. Why was not the fat to abide unburnt one night?

Answer. 1. It was Gods will expressly given out, Levit. 16. 2 Chon. 35. Ver. 14. 2. It was to keep it from corruption.

Mark we here.

D. 1. The Paschever was a sacrifice for sin as well as a feast to God. So Christ. 1 Cor. 5. 7. 8.

D. 2. Leaven and corruption God hath separated from his sacrifice. Sin from Christ.

D. 3. Gods service must be done within Gods time. Before morning.

D. 4. God will have his due done in sacrifice as man hath his good or feast by it. Ver. 18.

2. The next law concern's the first fruits in two parts,

1. Positive, The first of the first fruits of thy land thou shalt bring to the house of Jehovah thy God, Readings agree in sense, Here note,

1. The subject of this injunction, the same Israel.

2. The object concerned, The first of first fruits of thy land; Canaan which God gave them.

3. The work injoynd, to bring them into the house of the Lord their God.

Quest. 1. What were these first fruits?

Answer. 1. It is conceived by some the first fruits of all that the land produced. 2. Others, all the first fruits of children, and beasts also, which God should give them in their land; and the largest seemeth best.

Quest.

Quest. 2. What was the house of the Lord, and how were they to bring them?

Answer. 1. The house must intend the place which God at any time did choose, as Tabernacle, and Temple. 2. They brought all according to the several rules concerning the first fruits of man, beast, and ground. 3. The rites and manner of bringing are described, Deut. 26. 1, 11.

Ver. 20. Thou shalt not seeth a kid in his mothers milk. Vulg. Sept. Sam. Ar. and Syr. the same. — Alamb, Sept. — Thou shalt not eat flesh with the milk, Onk.

1. The subject of this prohibition is the same Israel.

2. The evil prohibited, Seething a kid in its dams milk, The letter is plain, and truly so rendered.

Quest. What is the meaning of this law?

Answer. 1. Some conceive it to be a law of nature, and made against cruelty. 2. Others think it to be a positive law against delicacy in diet tending to gluttony. 3. Others conceive it to have bin the custom of some idolaters to have done so, and this to be a law forbidding Gods people to symbolize with them. 4. But to let these passe, it is to be considered, that this is three times given by Moses to Israel and always among the ceremonial laws; twice it is joyined with the law of first fruits, both here in this place, and Ex. 34. 26. And again with that law of eating flesh that dyeth of itself, to note that they were an holy people.

The most proper meaning of this then seemeth to be, that they were not to bring their firstlings of goats or other beasts to offer unto God while it was yet milky, not yet drained from the dams milk untill the 8th day which God appointed; and as to the term of seething, the same word used for roasting, as in the Paschal lamb, Deut. 16. 7. And so it states the time of bringing these first fruits, Ex. 22. 30. Levit. 22. 27. Others taking it to be a ceremonial law, do conceive that it doth forbid cruelty in Gods sacrifice, so well as in common meat. Calv. Deut. 14. 21.

Quest. What is this law to us?

Answer. 1. Nothing as to the letter of it being finished in Christ. 2. Yet in proportion it teacheth us timely going up of ourselves to God, and a gracious attendance on him according to his will, without unnatural worship.

Further it instructs us.

D. 1. The prime of our choicest being, faculties, and enjoyments. are fittest for the Lord.

D. 2. Freenes becometh us in our attendance on Jehovah our God. Bring all to him.

D. 3. Timely must be all ours offerings to God, not unripe, not unnatural, V. 19.

3. The last general of the Chapter followeth which containeth several motives unto obedience;

1. The promise of a guide and convoy unto the land which God promised them, ver. 20. 23.

2. The promise of all outward prosperity upon condition of their continued obedience, ver. 24. 25. 26.

3. The promise of extirpating their enemies utterly, Ver. 27. 28. 29. 30.

4. The promise of extending the line of their inheritance in case of their obedience, ver. 31. 33.

In the first of these motives we have to observe,

1. The promise of a guide. ver. 20.

2. An item against displeasing him. ver. 21.

3. An encouragement upon obedience to him. Ver. 22. 23.

1. The promise is given thus, ver. 20. Behold I send an Angel before thee to keep thee in the way, and bring thee into the place which I have prepared. Readings agree in sense, — Who may go before thee, &c. Vulg. — Into the land, &c. Syr. Herein we have to note,

1. The term of demonstration, or attention behold, which calleth in their minds to consider Gods overtures.

2. The promise itself offered, I am sending, or I will send, or now I send an Angel before thee.

1. The Author of the promise, God the Lawgiver.

2. The good promised, sending an Angel.

3. The subject to whom, even Israel, in their journey. Before thee do I send him.

3. The end of this promise is twofold,

1. To keep them in their wilderness way.

2. To bring them into that place or land which God had promised and prepared for them.

Quest. 1. Who was this Angel?

Answer. 1. No created Angel, as a ministering Spirit. 2. No man under the name of an Angel, as sometimes. 3. But that Angel who is truly called Jehovah, Gods name was in him, as it followeth in the next verse, and he did those works for Israel which none none but God could do; as to levell the wall of Jerico, &c. That this Angel must do to bring them into their promised possession.

Quest. What is carried in these acts of God and this Angel their guide?

Answer. 1. An act of God the Father initial, and principal which was his preparing of the land for them; by election, choosing this inheritance for them, Ps. 47. 7. And so appointing them to be possessors of it. 2. An act of the Angel consequent, which was to keep them in their way, unto the prepared place, and noteth all acts of providence defensive for them, and offensive to their enemies in the way, forgiving them their safe convoy, Ps. 105. 14. 15. 3. An act efficient, which was actual induction into the place prepared, and giving them possession of the same, Ps. 105. 44. Ver. 20.

Ver. 21. Now followeth Gods item unto Israel about this Angel, Beware or keep thyself from his face or by reason of him, and hear his voice, provoke him not, for he will not pardon your transgression, for my name is in him in the midst of him, Readings mostly to the same sense. — Because my name is his word, Onk. Herein note,

1. The form of this charge or item, keep thyself. — Take heed to thyself, Sep. Especially wary or careful, how you demean yourself to this Angel.

2. The matter of this item, or care imposed is twofold,

1. Positive, hear or obey his voice, this Angel is your Lawgiver, while you hear him, you please me.

2. Negative, Provoke him not, do not rebel or sin against him or embitter his Spirit by transgressing, look carefully to all this, which respects your guide.

3. The reason of this strict item, Because he will not pardon thy transgression, or take away your transgression, for my name is in him or in the midst of him. In which words the reason is twofold,

1. His act of justice on offenders among them.

1. Expressed, he will not pardon or justify such sinners.

2. Implied, he will condemn them and take proportionable vengeance on them.

2. His sovereignty or power to do this, my name is in him, that is, my being, & Godhead, to whom alone it belongs to forgive sins, or to require them by just vengeance, as if he had said, he is Jehovah.

Quest. Why will he not pardon sin, is it not proper to God?

Answer. 1. This is not to be understood absolutely, for his great work is to forgive. 2. This is meant of sins against his mediation, striving with the Priest by whom pardon cometh. 3. This also admits repentance, if not they dye.

3. The encouragement now followeth upon this item, But if hearing thou shalt hear, or, obeying thou shalt obey his voice, and do all that I shall speak, then I will be an enemy to thy enemies, & I will distresse thy distressers, or, afflict them that afflict thee, V. 22. All readings are to the same sense, the 70 interpose another passage in Ex. 19. Ye shall be my peculiar people, &c. But here it is not in the Hebrew, For my Angel shall go before thee, and shall bring thee into the Amorite, and the Chetite, and the Pherezite, and the Canaanite, and the Chetite, and the Jebusite, and I will cut him off, Readings are to the same sense. I will destroy, root out, grind to peeces, and blot them out. So it is variously expressed, in all which we have to note,

1. Obedience supposed. But if hearing thou shalt hear, &c.

2. The encouragement promised, which is a league offensive and defensive, to be an enemy to all enemies, &c.

3. The demonstration of this encouragement, by the work of him who will perform it,

1. Executed by the Angel.

1. In his precedency, my Angel shall go before thee.

2. In his prevalency. He shall bring thee in, &c.

2. Acted by himself, I will cut them off, that is extinguish these nations, so that God the Father and the Son by the Spirit are engaged here to obedient Israel.

Quest. How are God and his Angel distinguished here?

Answer. 1. Not as Creator, and creature, both are uncreated here. 2. As distinct in relation, so are the Father and the Son, and yet one God. 3. As distinct in order of acting, the Father first, in the Son and by the Spirit doth all this, Ex. 33. 2. Ver. 23.

We observe.

D. 1. As God imposeth lawes on his people, so he holds forth encouragements to obedience.

D. 2. A place of inheritance and rest God hath provided for his Israel.

D. 3. Dangers may be in the way to keep Gods Israel out of their appointed place of rest.

D. 4. The Angel of Gods Covenant Christ Jesus, is sent of God to secure them in the way and bring them in, Ver. 20.

E e e e e D. 5.

D. 5. This great Angel of the Covenant is Lawgiver, and speaks to his purchased people.

D. 6. It is Israel's great concernment to hear and obey this Angel, and not provoke him.

D. 7. Sins or provocations against this mediating Angel may prove unpardonable.

D. 8. God is the mediator who can both justify and condemn.
Ver. 21.

D. 9. Obedience to God in Christ, his great Angel sent, engages God in the mediator unto souls.

D. 10. God in Christ are obeyed or disobeyed together.

D. 11. Souls obedient unto Christ have God engaged to them by league offensive and defensive.

D. 12. God is an enemy to his Churches enemies, and will oppress their oppressors. Ver. 22.

D. 13. Confederacy of nations cannot resist God and his Angel, in bringing of his Church to rest.

D. 14. God and his Angel are resolved to abolish and destroy all conspiring enemies against his Israel. Ver. 23.

2. The next motive is the promise of outward prosperity to Israel being brought in to their place, Ver. 24. 25. 26. Whereabout we have to note,

1. The condition required for the performance of the promise which is here twofold expressed,

1. Something is required with respect unto the false Gods and Idols of these nations which were to be cast out before them, and that double,

Ver. 14.

1. Negatively, Thou shalt not bow thyself down to their Gods, nor serve them nor do according to their works. Readings are to the same sense, Where are three prohibitions,

1. Thou shalt not bow thyself down to their Gods. This was a symbol of worship to bow their bodies before their images or idols,

2. Thou shalt not serve them. To be subject to the laws of their worship, as in sacrifices, &c.

3. Thou shalt not do according to their works. These nations were to be no example for them to follow in religion or conversation.

Quest. 1. Had these nations any Gods or what were they?

Answer. 1. They had no true God at all. 2. They falsified the true God by their images and idols, which they made representations of him, and thought him to be even such a one; these were diversified in several nations and that by divers names and titles, these were with men called Gods, against which Jehovah maketh these laws.

Quest. 2. What is meant by bowing serving and doing?

Answer. 1. All means of worship exercised unto God under these titles, and by such actions of bowing, &c. 2. All walking, or practise of life conformed to those idolatrous nations, which were very vile, Levit. 18. 3.

2. Affirmatively, But destroying Ver. 24. thou shalt destroy them, and breaking thou shalt break their images. Readings are to the same sense, the 70 read it singular. Break down altars, Ar. Pillars. Answer. Here,

1. The object concerned, is, the images and monuments of idolatry of all sorts, Deut. 12. 1. 2.

2. The act commanded is utter destruction of them by two words, and them doubled,

1. Destroying thou shalt destroy.
2. Breaking thou shalt break. which 4fold inculcation must needs imply,

1. The great importance of the duty.

2. The thoroughness of the work to be done unto the uttermost, to break to pieces that there be no memory left of them.

Quest. When and where was this to be done?

Answer. 1. At that time when God should bring them into their inheritance. 2. In that land of their possession and within their own territories; such as were without, God layeth not under this injunction, ver. 24.

2. In this condition something is commanded with respect to Jehovah their God, And ye shall serve Jehovah your God. Readings to the same purpose, the 70 read singularly to every person, where note,

1. The object concerned is set out by a double name,

1. Of the being of the true God, Jehovah. He that was, and is, and is to come.

2. Of his relation, your God. He that is known by the name of the God of Abraham, &c. And this in contradistinction to all other nations.

2. The act enjoined is serving him, which comprehends three acts prohibited toward the false Gods, ver. 24. even the whole whole duty in truth due to God, both for worship and walking.

2. The promise now followeth, which in general is outward prosperity, but carrieth in it these branches,

Ver. 25. 1. A promise of blessing their provision, And he will bless thy bread and thy waters. Readings the same in sense, That I may bless, vulg. And I will bless thy bread, thy wine, and thy water, Septuag. Thy meat and drink, Onk. Herein,

1. The object of this blessing is bread and water; which may note all kind of provisions, or in special the courtest provision, which should be blessed unto them.

2. The act promised is blessing, which here,

1. Supposeth the giving of them bread, 2. The blessing of God upon it, which indeed maketh it bread, &c. that is, such sweet and comfortable provision unto them; even the courtest fare.

2. A promise of preventing sickness, which is an additional mercy, not only to bless bread, but also to give a stomach, And I will remove sickness from the midst of thee. Readings agree in sense, I will take away evil diseases, &c. He will turn away his scourges from your houses, Syr. Wherein note,

1. A good privative, a removal of all kinds of sickness, which would make meat uncomfortable, Exod. 15. ver. 26. Deut. 17. ver. 15.

2. A good positive implied, which is, the giving in of health and strength to use comfortably the promised blessing of provision. Ver. 25.

3. A promise of making them fruitful, There shall not be any casting thy yong or barren in thy land. Readings to the same sense, Deprived of Children or barrenness, Onk. Ar. Here also,

1. A privative good is expressly named, a denial of barrenness to man and beast.

2. A positive good implied, which is fruitfulness in all; that they should not want a seed to inherit.

Ver. 26. 4. A promise of longevity, The number of thy days I will fulfil. Readings the same. Herein occur,

1. The object concerned, the number of the days of life, that is, the due and comfortable time of living here below to enjoy all these good things.

2. The act of Gods accomplishment or perfection of such a time of life. His proper work it is to number mans days and end them at his pleasure, Job. 42. v. 17. In all these promises the acts of God are some of them in the time past; which did assure the certainty of that to come upon obedience. Ver. 26.

Quest. 1. Did the Israelites fulfil their days thus?

Answer. 1. Some did under the goodness of his promise. 2. Others were cut short for disobedience, Pl. 96. Quest. 2. Why doth God hold out none but temporal promises?

Answer. 1. Here are mentioned none, but temporal, as to the matter. 2. Elsewhere God gave them spiritual. 3. The blessing of these is spiritual good. 4. It was not to make them rest upon carnal good things, but to instruct them that Godlines had the promise of this life now being and that which is to come.

It teacheth us:

D. 1. Gods promises for outward good suppose conditions.

D. 2. Idolatry is forbidden by God as the bane to promises.

D. 3. Every falsifying of God in worship is idolatry.

D. 4. All false worship is excluded, as to obtaining the promise.

D. 5. God accounts it not enough for his to avoid idolatry, but requireth them to destroy the means of it. Ver. 24.

D. 6. Jehovah the true God alone must be served truly to obtain his promise.

D. 7. Gods true service is not fruitless; but hath all promises annexed to it.

D. 8. Gods true servants have the promise of blessed bread and water.

D. 9. Gods true servants have the promise of health to them. Ver. 25.

D. 10. Fruitfulness of man and beast is promised to godlines.

D. 11. Fulness of days is the promise only to Gods true servants. V. 26.

3. The next motive to obedience here given is a promise for extirpation of those enemies into whose land God had engaged by his Angel to bring them, Ver. 27. 30. In which promise we have these things to consider,

1. The matter of it, which is ruine of enemies, Ver. 27.

2. The means of doing it, by horns, ver. 28.

3. The manner of doing it, two ways expressed,

1. Negatively, I will not do it in one year, &c. ver. 29.

2. Affirmatively, by little and little I will, &c. ver. 30.

1. As to the first matter of this promise

Eccccc 2 mise

Ver. 27.

mise it is thus expressed, My terror I will send before thee, and I will dash in pieces all people among whom thou shalt come, and I will give all thine enemies to thee, even the neck. Or the neck of thine enemies will I give unto thee, Hebr. Sam. Others read the last phrase, I will make thine enemies turn the necke or their back unto thee, I will stupify or make them mad. Sept. Ar. Herein note,

1. The cause is promised which is Gods terror going before, and falling upon the enemy.

1. Gods dread and formidable vengeance upon the spirits of enemies is promised, which none can resist.

2. The preventing of this, for as much as it shall go before Israel, and terrify the hearts of the enemies before they come in to them.

3. The mission and commission of it, God will send it, and it shall not return empty, but do the work for which he sent it, which was to affright, dismay, and terrify the enemies, and take away their hearts.

2. The effect issuing hereupon, which is twofold,

1. The dashing or the breaking of the enemies, so it is variously expressed, I will amaze, dismay, stupify, break and kill all the people among whom thou shalt come, i. e. the nations forenamed.

2. The subjugation or routing of their enemies, either by bringing their necks under, or by making them turn their necks or backs unto Israel, and fly away; in the last sense most do take it. Now observe. Sept. Pl. 18. 41.

Observe we hence.

D. 1. Gods terror is engaged for his obedient Israel, against all their enemies.

D. 2. Gods terror hath its mission and commission to prevent his Church in terrifying their enemies.

D. 3. God by his terror makes a way for his people whosoever he calleth them.

D. 4. Astonishment, destruction, subjugation, and dissipation of enemies are the effects of Gods terrors on them, Ver. 27.

Ver. 28.

2. As to the means, whereby God will work it, thus we have it described, And I will send the hornet before thee, and it shall drive out the Chivite, the Canaanite and the Hittite from before thee, Sato. Readings are to the same sense in various terms,

Which shall make them fly before thou enter, &c. Vulg. I will send wasps, &c. And thou shalt cast out, &c. Sept. All 7 nations are named in the Samar. reading. I will send a plague, and thou shalt cast out, &c. Ar. I will send the waspe before, and I will destroy, &c. Syr. Individuum pro specie, 1. The means is promised, I will send the hornet.

1. The instrument is a small, but a hurtful creature, when God arms it against sinners: so in the letter.

2. The mission and commission of it is from God, which it shall most surely effect, Deut. 7. 20.

3. The order of its mission, it must go before Israel to do the work before they come.

2. The effect brought about by this means, is the expulsion of those nations, whose land Israel was to inherit. This is surely promised to the obedient people, and so was performed.

Quest. What were these hornets?

*Answer. 1. It is conceived by some that they were not such kind of creatures at all, because it is presumed that we read not of them in the execution; and therefore conclude by these hornets to be meant the terrors of God forementioned, which like these stinging creatures, did vex men and make them fly away. This may be as Aug. Junius, and others opine. 2. Yet seeing God hath had his armies of lice, palmer-worms, &c. to destroy enemies, it seems probable, that there also God did send such creatures to annoy enemies; forasmuch as Josiah also reports that the Kings of the Amorites were driven out by them; where no necessity is to allegorize them, for at some times these creatures might be armed, though not every where; yet no danger is to understand it as before, *Jos. 24. 12.

Note we here.

D. 1. Gods terrors are terrible wasps and hornets to drive away the Churches enemies.

D. 2. God can send and commissionat his army of hornets and wasps to drive before them his enemies.

D. 3. The greatness and multitude of nations cannot stand before Gods hornets.

D. 4. Gods hornets shall certainly do their work assigned and expel Gods adversaries, Ver. 28.

3. The

3. The manner of rooting out these adversaries is in the next place discovered two ways,

Ver. 29.

1. Negatively, I will not cast him out from before thee in one year lest the land be desolate, and the beast of the field multiply against thee. Readings all agree. Herein note,

1. The manner of expelling the enemies denied, I will not drive him, i. e. the enemy, or them, i. e. the nations, out in one year, that is hastily, and in so short a time, one year doth not signify a time determinat.

2. The reason of not doing it so, it was to prevent,

1. Desolation in the Land.

2. Annoyance of them by wild beasts, that were like to increase upon them, if all the inhabitants had been presently destroyed. Ver. 29.

Ver. 30.

2. Affirmatively the manner is expressed thus, By little, by little will I cast him out from before thee until thou shalt smite him and inherit the land, Readings agree. — until thou shalt grow strong and take the land, Syr. Here note,

1. The manner of driving out the enemies asserted, By little and little I will cast him out from before thee, that is, by degrees God was resolved to do it, and to take his own time.

2. The reason of this, it was in order to make a better provision for Israel.

1. That they might increase.

2. That they might inherit the land; it was upon account of Israels good, that God delayed the destruction of these nations.

Quest. Why would not God cast them out all at once?

Answer. 1. It may be too bold for man to inquire much into this. 2. The reason given by God is sufficient, which was his good providence to Israel. 3. But that it was so long ere they were cast out, near 400 years, this was caused by Israels disobedience and rebellion against God, who made this promise to their obedience. 4. It was to prove Israel by such a delay.

Learn hence.

D. 1. Gods promise of vanquishing his Churches enemies is not alwayes in present, or in haste.

D. 2. Gods delays in rooting out enemies is for the advantage of the Church.

D. 3. The enemies of God are often spared upon his Churches account.

D. 4. Enemies are sometimes helpful to the Church against other evils, Ver. 29.

D. 5. Gradually and timely ordered is the destruction of the Churches enemies by God.

D. 6. The timely and gradual ruthe of the Churches adversaries is aimed to increase the Churches seed, and give them assured their inheritance, Ver. 30.

4. The last motive to obedience is the extent of the bounds of inheritance unto Israel which God promiseth upon their obedience, Wherein note,

1. The promise itself in these words, And I will set thy bounds from the red sea unto the sea of the Philistines, and from the wilderness unto the river, Readings to the same sense. — To the great river Euphrates, Sept. and Ar. Note here,

1. The boundmaker, Jehovah the great God, the earth is his, and the fulness of it, and he sets the bounds to all nations, Pl. 24. 1. Act. 17. 26.

2. The setting of these bounds, God promiseth to put them, and none then can remove them.

3. The bounds themselves which are four.

1. The red sea the east bound.

2. The sea of the Philistines is on the west bound.

3. The desert or wilderness of Shur toward Egypt was on the south,

4. The river Euphrates was the bound upon the north, Deut. 11. 24.

Quest. When was this made good?

Answer. 1. Not fully until the time of David and Solomon. 2. Israels disobedience was the cause of this delay.

2. The assurance given of this, is by delivering this land unto Israel, and their possession of it, in these words, For I will give into your hand the inhabitants of the land, and thou shalt drive them out from before thee, I will cast them out, Sept. and others. — Ye shall destroy them, Syr. Herein note the,

1. A principal of God, I will give into your, &c.

2. A consequential of Israel, Thou shalt drive, &c. No difficulty in the words, but by this they should know, that God would perform his promise in their bounds, Ver. 31.

3. The condition required consequent thereupon, which is twofold,

1. Of not covenanting with those nations in these words, Thou shalt not strike a Covenant with them, or with their Gods. Readings the same in sense. — Idols, Onk. Wherein observe,

1. The parties prohibited, Eccccc 3

1. If

Ver. 31.

Ver. 31.

Ver. 32.

1. Israel on Gods part.
2. Those nations and their idols on the Devils part. These are inconsistent.
2. The act forbidden, which is making Covenant, either general, between the bodies of these nations, or personal between man and man; either of amity or of marriage, &c. Ver. 32.

Ver. 33. 2. The next condition is, that no cohabitation must be with them, after God hath delivered them up, in these words, They shall not dwell in thy land lest they make thee sin against me, if thou shalt serve their Gods, it shall be a snare to thee. Readings are to the same sense, — A scandal, Vulg.

— Stumbling block, Sept. — They will make thee sin by serving their Idols, Sam. Ar. Here note,

1. The conditions, none of these nations must dwell in the land with Israel after God had driven them out, the prohibition is peremptory.

2. The reason is twofold,
1. Fear of infection by sin, lest they make thee sin against me by their idolatry, enticing thee thereunto.
2. Fear of danger, lest the snare come upon thee, and thou be taken and kept to destruction, Ps. 106. 34. Deut. 12. 30. Pro. 12. 13. Eccl. 8. 15.

We conclude hence.

D. 1. God is the sovereign bound-maker to all nations on the earth.

D. 2. Among all, God hath promised to set the bounds of his Church on earth.

D. 3. Early bounds may at Gods pleasure terminate the habitation of his Church on earth.

D. 4. Gods suppression of his adversaries is a token of his setting his Churches habitation, Ver. 31.

D. 5. No covenant with idolatrous adversaries must be made by the Church against Gods will.

D. 6. No Covenant can be made with Idolaters, but it will be with their Idols, Viz, Devils, Ver. 32.

D. 7. Cohabitation of the Church with idolaters is in some case forbidden.

D. 8. Converse with idolaters is very dangerous to make men such sinners against God.

D. 9. Such sinning with idolaters is a snare, which will keep souls to destruction.

D. 10. All such sins must be avoided, that Gods promise of good may be obtained, Ver. 33.
